BEACON THEATRE, BOSTON.

There is special distinction to the bill of two first-run photoplays that are to be shown at the Beacon theatre, Boston, throughout the entire coming week. Pauline Frederick, the beautiful emotional star, and Boston's real star of stage and screen, will be seen in the screen version of what is acknowledged to be Count Leo Tolstoy's masterpiece, "Resurrection." The companion photoplay will be Mabel Normand in her new inspirational comedy, "Joan of Plattsburg." In this she is pictured as a little asylum girl who imagines that she is a modern Joan of Arc, and sets about to be to her country what the great Joan was to France.

SOCIETY NOTES

THE E. PALMER GAVITS, of "Wyndston," Manchester, have been enroute the past week from Santa Barbara, Calif., where they have an extensive winter place. They will spend May in their Albany home, Thurlow terrace, before coming on to "Wyndston," the estate on Smith's Point which they purchased last season. The Albany home has a wonderful Italian garden, and, no doubt, many pretty features are already planned for the North Shore home, so incomparably situated on the rocky point, looking out onto the broad Atlantic.

At the John R. McGinley home on the tip end of Smith's Point, Manchester, a retaining wall has been built across the rocks at the rear of the house and considerable ground has been made ready among the rocks for a vegetable garden. The avenue approaching the house has been made wider by removing shrubbery and taking from the lawn space and now presents a great sweep from the main road in a circular form to the main entrance and thus back again around by the water to the main road. The large circle of lawn which the driveway goes around presents a restful and attractive feature of the place. The shrubbery removed has been set in other places and some new varieties have been added. The greenhouse is showing many pretty spring blossoms, among which the snapdragons are prominent.

At "Cragside," the home of George Nixon Black, on Smith's Point, Manchester, is one of the most attractive greenhouses around. This has been run all winter with very little expense. Vegetables have also been raised in it and the gardener says that with skillful management of the heating plant in regard to holding heat many things can be accomplished with a small amount of fuel. The fern room and the green vegetables are interesting, while the particular interesting feature of the place is still, as it has been all winter, a climbing rose, "Beauty of Waltham," which has been a mass of brilliant bloom, shedding a rare fragrance throughout the house. These roses are somewhat unusual, even upon the North Shore.

While walking over Smith's Point and admiring the few greenhouses to be seen, a peep was taken of the one at "Clipston," the Boylston A. Beal home. This is a small one adjoining the garage and is heated by the plant that heats the rooms of the caretaker. A few bright blossoms were seen getting ready for a later welcome for the new occupants of the place, the Richard D. Sears family, of Boston.

"The Cliffs," the home of Mrs. George Dudley Howe, on Smith's Point, Manchester, has one of the sad reminders of the cold winter,—the fine box hedge and large tree of many years' growth were frozen and will have to be removed. Box has been frozen as far south as Virginia, say the gardeners, who are now discovering that many roses and fine shrubs are also dead.

Nelson S. Bartlett and household are settled at their summer home on Smith's Point, for the season. Mr. Bartlett's youngest son, George, who has been in Arizona all winter, has just arrived home for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Rand Thomas and family are at their new home in Ipswich for the season, moving down last Friday.

SOCIETY NOTES

AT "WILLOWBROOK" cottage, Beverly Cove, where Chas. H. Tyler and his mother, Mrs. Joseph H. Tyler, have been settled for the past month, many signs of spring activity significant of the season are seen. Among the chickens, all show birds, are 275 tiny chicks already able to peep lustily in their snug quarters. The thirty or more dogs which Mr. Tyler had with him at his hunting lodge in North Carolina this winter have now been domiciled in their kennels for the summer. These kennels, new and attractively built, are among the most up-to-date arrangements for the comfort of dogdom to be found anywhere on the Shore. The barn on the estate has a very patriotic appearance with the great bronze eagle and shield ornament which was placed over the main door some time ago. The handsome lawns with the brown earth turned up for gardens on all sides make this an unusually pretty place to see these days. Just opposite the Tyler home is "Evergreen," the beautiful estate of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Beal, who also recently arrived, making these the only places opened so far in the Cove.

Dr. Elisha Flagg and Mrs. Flagg, of 199 Commonwealth ave., Boston, who had the Ellis Dresel cottage at Mingo Beach last season, will spend the summer in Beverly Farms, having leased this week the Fenno cottage, so-called, where the John Harvey Wrights were last year. The lease was made through the office of T. Dennie Boardman, Reginald and R. deB. Boardman, of Boston and West Manchester. This office has also made three other rentals, which we are privileged to print this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Auchincloss, of New York City, will again occupy the Proctor cottage, on Mingo Beach hill, Pride's Crossing.

Mrs. W. H. S. Lothrop of Boston will be among the newcomers to Manchester this season. She has leased the Smith Farm house off Proctor st.

"Ledge Leaf," the pretty little bungalow on the Harris estate, Smith's Point, Manchester, which has been occupied for several seasons by Louis Strauss and family, will this year be occupied by L. Bamberger and family, of New York. They are taking occupancy this week.

Frederick R. Sears and household of 122 Beacon st., Boston, will spend the summer as usual at their place on Storrow hill, Beverly Farms. They will remove to the Shore the last of this month. Miss Eleanora Sears, who has taken the N. S. Simpkins cottage, in Beverly Farms, will entertain there during the season, although she will reside with her father, as usual. Miss Sears went to New York for the horse show last week, at the Riding and Driving club, where her horse won a blue ribbon. She was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Thomas J. Newbold.

That delightful rendezvous for North Shore people, Y^e Rogers Manse at Ipswich, is now open for the season and bids the early comer to the Shore resorts welcome. As usual the famous lobster, chicken and steak dinners are being offered and there are a limited number of rooms for those who would stay for a while at this attractive place for a week-end or longer. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Woods, and son, Joseph, spent the last week-end there. Ex-Mayor Benson of Salem and party of seven dropped in for dinner last Sunday.

Prompt Delivery in Beverly, North Beverly,

THE NORTH SHORE GIRLS who are gardening this spring on the four acres on the Dudley Pickman estate at Beverly Cove have recently chosen their officers. Miss Pauline Fenno of Rowley is president; Miss Eleanor Abbott of West Manchester, vice-president; Miss Katharine Lane of Manchester, secretary and treasurer; Miss Katherine Crosby of West Manchester, assistant secretary. The work will continue until about Oct. 1, and it has been planned that the 40 or more girls registered for work will do sufficient to equal that of eight men. They will work in shifts each day and the minimum amount of labor each farmerette may put in is nine hours a week. Some enthusiastic ones are volunteering for much more time. The girls come from a radius of 25 miles, including Nahant, the inland resorts and along the Shore.

Miss Edna Cutter will be the expert consulting gardener and Miss Anna Thorndike, sister of Miss Martha Thorndike, who had charge of the Red Cross lunch room in Boston the past winter, will be present each day to direct the general work. Miss Thorndike is now in Radcliffe college and will assume her duties as soon as the college year is completed.

The girls plan to produce vegetables for the Beverly hospital. If enthusiasm counts for anything the bins and cellars will be overflowing at that worthy institution another winter. The ground has already been plowed and the girls in their simple little garden suits are busily engaged this week in raking and other preliminaries. Some of the girls enlisted are still in school and cannot help with the planting.

The girls recently entertained at an informal tea at the Puritan Tea House, Montserrat. Twenty-five of the youthful farmerettes were present, coming in their khaki garden suits, some made with trousers and others with short skirts. The tea was given after the close of a day's work and the night was spent in the cottage on the Gordon Abbott estate in West Manchester, with Mrs. Abbott as chaperon. So far, the girls who come out from Boston bring their own luncheon and have their dinners served in the Abbott cottage, after which they return to Boston in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hooper Stevenson, Jr., of 118 Marlboro st., Boston, will again occupy the cottage at Nahant, which they had last season. Mrs. Stevenson returned last week from a short visit to her father, Douglas H. Thomas, in Baltimore. Mr. Thomas will also spend the summer at Nahant, and will have with him his four attractive young granddaughters, children of the late Mr. and Mrs. Douglas H. Thomas, Jr.

Y^e Rogers Manse, Ipswich, now open. Famous Lobster, Chicken and Steak Dinners; also a la carte service. Delightful rooms with and without bath. adv.

THE GREENHOUSES and vegetable gardens at "Dawson Hall," Beverly Cove, are now a delightful place to wander through. Young plants are being set out and the cold frames are open mostly, showing many rare treasures within. The large room where many of the box trees and other tub-shrubs have been kept under shelter is open to the air and sunshine, and the whole place has a spring-time atmosphere.

Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Rae Peabody, of 621 Fifth ave., New York, will again occupy "Parramatta," at Montserrat. Mr. Peabody is a son of the late Henry W. Peabody.

Mrs. Henry W. Peabody has opened "Ledgewood," her year-round home at Montserrat. She spent the past winter in the cottage of her sister, Miss Margaret S. McGill. Her mother, Mrs. McGill, of New York, is now with her, but will later spend the season with Miss McGill at the little cottage on Brinley ave., close to the Peabody home. Mrs. Peabody has been attending meetings in New Haven, Conn., and will go to New York next week to a series of meetings connected with temperance war work. The Peabody home is looking unusually attractive with its masses of early spring flowers blooming gayly in every ledge around the house.

Col. and Mrs. Cranmore N. Wallace are closing their Commonwealth avenue home, Boston, and will be at their summer home on Neptune boulevard, Beverly Cove, on and after Saturday of this week.

Robert Hale Bancroft, of 249 Beacon st., Boston, and Hale st., Beverly, a member of the Harvard class of '63, died last Saturday in Boston at the age of 75 years. He was the son of Thomas Poynton and Hannah (Putnam) Bancroft. For many years he had been retired from business. He belonged to one of the oldest Beverly families, his ancestor, John Hale, having been first owner of the Hale estate, extending from Hale street to the waterfront. The property is still in the family, and Mr. Bancroft had spent his summers at the family home there. He attended St. Peter's Episcopal church in Beverly. He leaves a wife and two daughters, Mrs. Alexander Winsor and Miss Eleanor Terrill Bancroft.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bohlen, of Philadelphia, who have been spending most of the winter at Aiken, S. C., have arrived at their country home on the County road, Ipswich, for the season. With them are their family of two young sons, fifteen and thirteen years, respectively, and their young daughter of twelve. Mrs. Bohlen was Miss Celestine Eustis before her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Bohlen and family spent a week at Y^e Rogers Manse, Ipswich, before moving into their own residence.

A Business Should be as Big as Its Job

If bigness is of benefit to the public it should be commended.

The size of a business depends upon the needs which that business is called upon to serve. A business should be as big as its job. You do not drive tacks with a pile-driver—or piles with a tack-hammer.

Swift & Company's growth has been the natural and inevitable result of national and international needs.

Large-scale production and distribution are necessary to convert the live stock of the West into meat and by-products, and to distribute them over long distances to the consuming centers of the East and abroad.

Only an organization like that of Swift & Company, with its many packing plants, hundreds of distributing houses, and thousands of refrigerator cars, would have been able to handle the varying seasonal supplies of live stock and meet the present war emergency by supplying, without interruption.

First—The U. S. soldiers and the Allies in Europe by shipping as much as 800 carloads of meat products in a single week!

Second—The cantonments in the United States.

Third—The retailers upon whom the American public depends for its daily supply of meat.

But many people ask—Do producers and consumers pay too much for the complex service rendered?

Everyone, we believe, concedes the efficiency of the Swift & Company organization—in performing a big job in a big way at a minimum of expense.

Swift & Company's total profit in 1917 was less than 4 cents on each dollar of sales of meat and by-products. Elimination of this profit would have had practically no effect on live stock and meat prices.

Do you believe that this service can be rendered for less by any other conceivable method of organization or operation?

These questions and others are answered fully and frankly in the Swift & Company 1918 Year Book sent free on request.

Address Swift & Company, U. S. Yards, Chicago.

SWIFT & COMPANY, U. S. A.

SIR JOHN AND LADY HARRINGTON (Amy McMillan) have returned to Washington after spending a week or more in Manchester overseeing the packing of household effects belonging to the latter's mother, the late Mrs. James McMillan, of "Eaglehead," Manchester, and Washington. While here they were guests, at "Highwood," of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Walker.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard D. Ahl have closed their cottage at Palm Beach and are on their way north, after a very busy season, devoting much of their time to Red Cross work and kindred interests. They will spend the summer at Hamilton, as usual, and are just about arriving there this week or next.

Alanson L. Daniels and family have closed their town residence, 1 Fairfield street, Boston, and are at Old Farm, their delightful summer home in Wenham for the season. They come early and always remain late in this attractive section of the North Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Ames of Boston have moved to their country estate in North Easton, where they usually spend the spring and autumn. They will come to their attractive summer home in Pride's Crossing for the season about the middle of June to remain until the middle of September.

Mrs. C. Howard Clark, Jr., who has been missed among the North Shore colony the last two or three seasons, owing to the family circle being broken up, will not return again this season as a cottager, though she may make a short visit here during the season. She has decided not to keep her beautiful country estate at Devon, Pa., open this summer, even, as her son, Clarence is at Camp Meade, Maryland, where he is captain in the artillery, and her daughter is with her husband, Capt. John P. Hollingsworth, at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas. Captain Hollingsworth is in the cavalry. Mrs. Clark is at her town residence, 4200 Spruce st., Philadelphia.

55 WASHINGTON ST., SALEM, MASS.

BEVERLEY RANTOUL, the son of Hon. Robert S. Rantoul, of Salem and Beverly Farms, is leaving right away for service in France with the Red Cross, in casualty work, which consists in identifying the dead, bringing in the wounded and getting all information possible for the dear ones at home, as well as checking up the lists of casualties. This is strenuous work at best, and no one knows it better than Mr. Rantoul, for this will be his second trip to the war zone.

In February, 1916, he enlisted in the service of the American ambulance and for six months worked near the front lines, serving at Dead Man's hill, Hill 304, at Verdun, through the thickest of the bombardment. He was twice cited for "sang froid," showing as he did great coolness when shells hit near at hand. At Grosvouvres and at Xivray he was specially mentioned and received the Croix de Guerre as a token from the French that they appreciated his services.

In one of the citations it related how when proceeding to the front line for wounded, his car was struck by flying pieces of metal, his mechanic wounded, and the car damaged. He administered first-aid to the man, repaired the car, although shells were coming into that section, and proceeded on his way without mentioning the fact of the accident. The mechanic spread the news, however, when the headquarters was again in sight. The second time, a shell fell right in the square where Mr. Rantoul was putting his car in order, but instead of retiring he continued his work, for night was coming on, and one of the bloodiest of days was nearing a close and there was much work to be done, by all those assigned to that sector.

Mr. Rantoul was a personal friend of the late Norman Prince, and they met often when both were on leave. Their last meeting at the front came when Mr. Prince gave a complimentary dinner to Mr. Rantoul upon the occasion of receiving the medal of honor.

Since his return to this country, Mr. Rantoul has been active in the American ambulance work until that organization was taken over by the government, and he is an active member and officer of the metropolitan chapter of the Red Cross.

Dr. and Mrs. John H. Mason have opened their cottage at Montserrat Highlands after a winter spent in Boston. Mrs. Mason's sister, Miss Atwater, of Rochester, N. Y., is with them for the season.

The late Norman Prince, upon his last visit to Boston, presented Frank W. Benson, the well-known artist, with a souvenir dagger of more than passing interest, and it is now on display at the Peabody Museum, Salem. The dagger was made at the front by Norman Prince's mechanic, and was made from cartridges, buttons and an airplane dart, and is an unusual relic of the war.

Those of the North Shore colony who have already moved down for the summer season, as well as the many who make their year-round home here, will be privileged to look upon the smiling countenance of Portia Smiley tomorrow, Saturday, May 4, when she will make some of her southern dishes and more especially her famous waffles, at the Wenham Tea House. A Liberty Food sale will be on at the teahouse on that day between two and six, and waffles and coffee will be served between three and six. Mrs. Henry Pratt McKean, Jr., is one of those actively interested in the affair.

Mrs. John A. Burnham and daughters will close their Boston residence at 57 Commonwealth avenue next week, and will move to their delightful country home near Wenham lake, South Hamilton.

Dr. and Mrs. John Henry Lancashire of New York will open their estate, "Graftonwood," in Manchester, this month. They have returned to New York after a stay at the Greenbrier, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. While there they presented an Italian flag to be hung beside those of France, Britain and the United States, above the porte cochere of the Greenbrier. Dr. and Mrs. Lancashire, as do many other lovers of Italy, think that the brilliant flag should be more often seen, and they feel an especial interest at this time when their Italian son-in-law has been taken a prisoner of war. Their daughter, with her baby, is waiting in Rome until he is released. Dr. Lancashire gave one dollar's worth of stamps to every waiter in the hotel before his departure, with which to start a card in the war savings stamp campaign which opened there on Tuesday of last week.

The Misses Corder of 50 Chestnut street, Boston, who were residents of the North Shore for so many seasons, and who always plan to spend a portion of the season here, have gone to Pomfret, Conn., this week. They are registered at The Ben-Grosvenor Inn at Pomfret Centre.

Mr. and Mrs. Addis M. Whitney, who keep their place in Swampscott open most of the year, left last Sunday for Washington, where Mr. Whitney takes control of the public utilities of the country under the commercial economy board, a sub-division of the Council of National Defence. Mr. Whitney has also in view the position of fiscal supervisor (treasurer) of the industrial housing and transportation bureau, for the purpose of which the House recently appropriated $60,000,000. The Whitneys will take a house on Nineteenth street, near Massachusetts ave., for next winter. Mrs. Whitney will open their country place, "Cedarwold," in Swampscott, and remain there during the summer, and Mr. Whitney will be home for week-ends as often as his duties will permit.

MAJ. HENRY L. HIGGINSON, of Boston and West Manchester, who founded the Boston Symphony Orchestra 38 years ago, will sever his connection with the organization at the end of this season. The orchestra will be continued by a board of trustees. A statement in regard to the change, issued last Saturday, says:

"Plans for the continuance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have within the past week taken a definite form, which may now be made public. As the end of the 37th season drew near, it became apparent to Maj. Henry L. Higginson, who founded the orchestra in 1881 and has sustained it ever since, that he must no longer bear the burden of the undertaking. Reluctant to see it come to an end, he has consented to have it continued under the direction of certain citizens and friends associated for this purpose.

"Application has accordingly been filed for the incorporation of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc., with the following trustees: Frederick P. Cabot, Ernest B. Dane, M. A. DeWolfe Howe, John E. Lodge, Frederick E. Lowell, Arthur Lyman, Henry B. Sawyer, Galen P. Stone and Bentley W. Warren.

"The trustees believe the undertaking to be justified by guarantees already secured towards placing it upon a sound financial basis. They enter upon their duties with a full realization of the significance of the orchestra to the life of their city and country.

"With regard to the selection of a conductor for next year, no final announcement may yet be made, but negotiations are now in progress which have for their purpose the engagement of a conductor who will be welcomed by the public and will maintain the commanding musical position of the orchestra."

Charles B. Tayler and family have concluded their winter's residence in Boston and are at their summer home in Manchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Kennedy Morse of Boston, will not go to their country place in Boxford for the entire summer. After a winter spent at the Puritan, Boston, they are moving this week to their newly purchased residence, 20 Charles River embankment, near West Hill place, to remain until July. They will go to Boxford for their week-ends, and they plan to spend the autumn there. In August and September they will take an extended automobile trip, if nothing interferes with their plans, with their son and daughter, Arthur W. Morse and Miss Anna Hooker Morse. Mrs. Morse is active in the work of the Civic Federation in Boston.

NOT YET OVER THE TOP

MANCHESTER'S QUOTA NOT YET REACHED IN LIBERTY LOAN DRIVE.

When those in charge of allotting the quotas for the various towns to raise as a minimum amount in the third Liberty Loan jotted Manchester down with $383,600, they put a most severe task upon the shoulders of the committee. Thus far (Thursday) the subscription is $140,900 short of the amount required, and only Friday and Saturday remains. The chances of Manchester ever getting an honor flag for going over the top are rather slim.

Manchester has a year-round population of less than 3000. Yet its standing as a summer resort was responsible for the unthought of figure being placed against her. As a matter of fact, if it were summer, and the summer residents were all here, it is more than likely the town could have been among the first in the country to "go over." As it is, however, the townspeople have subscribed $80,000, and from outside residents have come to Manchester's credit $162,700 more—making a total of $242,700.

Now—just one thing must happen today and Saturday—some of Manchester's wealthy residents must see to it that enough is subscribed to send the quota flying "over the top" and thus help maintain the high standard which the town prides itself upon having in matters of this sort. There is need of $140,000 subscriptions on Friday and Saturday.

A woman's Liberty Loan committee has been organized this last week with Mrs. Wm. H. Coolidge as chairman, and a thorough canvass of the townspeople is being made. Too bad such a committee couldn't have been organized earlier in the campaign. All hail to their efforts, and may they meet with success!

COMPANY I NOTES

Alarm signal to be sounded on fire whistle in emergency: "1-2-5" repeated

The regular drill will be held next Monday evening, at 7.30, at the playgrounds.

Three recruits have been added to the local company—Charles Hooper, Ernest Lucas and Lester Peabody. Others are on the waiting list.

The local company made a fine showing in the big Liberty Loan parade in Beverly last Saturday afternoon. Two full platoons of three squads each were in attendance, a total of more than 55 men. Co. I was second in line, the Beverly company being in front and about half of the Hamilton company behind.

Co. M of Rockport finished their indoor regimental shoot Monday evening, with a total score of 1843—or an average of 92.15 per man. This is exactly the same as Manchester scored last week. The Salem company holds the highest score that has come to our attention, their total being 1875, or 93.75 per man average.

The members of the company are hustling now to dispose of tickets for the movie show to be given at Horticultural hall on Thursday evening,

May 16. Each member, officers and all, is undertaking to sell 10 tickets. As there are 68 members and as the hall holds only 425 or so, it is needless to say that those who select their reserved seat first are the ones that will see the show.

PICTURE SHOW FOR BENEFIT OF STATE GUARD COMPANY.

"The Re-making of a Nation"—the 6-reel U. S. government film, recently shown at Symphony hall, Boston, at 50c, 75c and $1 prices, is the attraction to be offered at the special moving picture show in Horticultural hall, Thursday evening, May 16, for the benefit of Co. I, M. S. G. The admission price here will be 25c, and tickets are already being sold. Such tickets, with 10c additional, may be exchanged at Allen's drug store, for reserved seats. And, from the interest being taken in this performance and the size of the crowd that will attend, it may well be suggested that a reserved seat will be the proper thing for that night. The hall will be crowded, not only because of the unusually good picture, but because everybody is anxious to do their little bit to show their appreciation of the local State Guard company. The object of the benefit is to raise nearly $100 to pay for expenses in connection with the shooting range—for expense of fitting it up and maintaining it, electric lights, heating, etc. How many tickets, please?

Reserved seats will go on sale at Allen's drug store, Monday morning.

TOMORROW NIGHT THE LIBERTY LOAN drive of the third class will have become history. For a month the men and women of America have had an opportunity of doing their share for their country. Every dollar that an American owns is available for this war when the government needs it, but a democracy thrives by good will and unity of action. The Liberty Loans express the will of the people to help. It is a free people uniting in a common cause for a great end. It is a mobilization of dollars to make possible the mobilization of ships, munitions, medical supplies and men. A man of the draft gives his time in service for his country. He makes the supreme sacrifice if he is killed. The Liberty Loan is not a drafting of time and life in active war service,—it is a drafting of dollars, the representatives of time, values and service. Every dollar a man owns or can earn is of draft age. Age, sex, bodily infirmities may keep many from the active fields of service, but every man who has or can save can give his money. The Liberty Loan drive affords every man and every woman who has the funds, to send ships, supplies or men to the front. If one wishes to visualize one's service, remember that a three hundred-dollar bond will fit out a man, and supply him for one whole year. A fifty-dollar bond will equip a soldier with one-half of his required needs. Loyal Americans everywhere are doing their duty with a will. Tomorrow is the last day. Manchester has not yet been able to "go over the top." The banks will aid you by note accommodation or by the authorized installment plans. Consult your banker tomorrow; do not let this opportunity for patriotic service pass!

EMERGENCY DISTRICT DEMONSTRATION AGENT, Elliott C Rogers, has asked us to give publicity to the following: "The products of the home garden should be used exclusively for home consumption, either by immediate use, canning, drying or storing. None of these products should be allowed to reach the regular market channels and thereby injure the farmer and market gardener, who is regularly engaged in the production of vegetables as a business. The stability of the vegetable market, as to both price and quantity, will be assisted if this is done."

THE SECRET SERVICE DEPARTMENT is not publishing all the findings of their work. From time to time, however, word comes out that the Federal agents have caught two Austrians near the Mexican boundary with incriminating evidence, or instances of such a character. When the war is over we shall know, and perhaps not then, how efficiently the work has been done and is being done by the secret service department.

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT is serving the nation well in his influential leadership as a former President of the United States. The people are hearing him for his pronounced Americansim, his loyalty to the principles of democracy and for his loyalty to the administration. The nation may well heed his warning to prepare against a long war with the exercise of all our energies.

THE REV. ALBERT GARDNER WARNER, the minister of the Baptist church in Manchester, has tendered his resignation to his church. His talents have been recognized and he has been called to the service of a large church in Lowell, as associate pastor. The call came unsought and was a recognition of his efficient service as a religious and community leader. The resignation came as a great surprise to the parishioners of his church and those associated with him in the good work which he was doing. The ministrations of the pulpit are important in these times and a strong, optimistic note, has always been evident in the pulpit of the First Baptist church during his pastorate. Mr. Warner has given generously and with boundless energy of his time for the service of his church and to those extra parishional duties which are recognized so much more in these days than in the past. The work of his church has prospered. The young people's work has always flourished under his direction. The Men's Brotherhood has been a strong influence in the town. Many a mother and father are grateful to him for the service rendered in the Boy Scouts' work. He has been patient and painstaking and intelligent in his help of every philanthropic interest that has engrossed the attention of the community, and his personal service in many homes has won for him a place that cannot be filled. In every demand made upon him for public service he has responded willingly whether in the service of a sane Fourth of July celebration or in the important position of chairman of the Committee of Public Safety in war times. Last summer his leadership in a large measure contributed to the success of the profitable Chatauqua enterprise. Manchester can ill afford to lose this man, but his call to so large a field of service is a recognition of his success here.

ONE MAY HELP TO WIN THE WAR by writing cheerful letters to the boys in service at the front. Theodore Roosevelt, that leader of men, has said that "every day every man, woman and child should do something before night to help win the war." You can help win the war in no better way than by writing a good letter to some lad at the front. The government has recognized the value of cheerful letters and has begun investigations of the causes of delays in delivering letters and are determined that the boys shall have their mail. Now an official appeal has gone out through the Official Bulletin of the nation calling upon the people to write carefully, encouragingly and with great care concerning the affairs at home. This appeal has been made necessary by the experience which the army authorities have had with boys who have been discouraged by letters from home written in an uncheerful vein and many times boys have been lured away from the camp and "taken French leave" only to find that their letters have exaggerated conditions at home and that they have been obliged to face the punishment that goes with "absence without leave." The morale of the army is dependent upon the morale of the individual members of the service. You can influence the good spirit of one young man by a good, wholesome and encouraging letter that will make him cheerful. His good cheer will be contagious. It is time for everyone to join the League of the Golden Pen, which has no dues, no charter—only a kindly good will and an optimistic spirit. Every member of the organization will write once a week a wholesome, encouraging and inspiring letter to some soldier lad at the front. Knit stockings, fold surgical dressings, buy bonds, but do not forget the cheerful home letter!

CLEAN-UP DAYS have returned again. Paint up and clean up!

THIS WAR HAS DEMONSTRATED the fact beyond the peradventure of a doubt that there are heroes in this strife. Every engagement demonstrates the initiative and bravery of army corps and of individual men. The war correspondents, however, are not always able "to pass" news of personal bravery, when it is known and many a worthy act of heroism is unknown to the authorities and consequently is not given publicity. Occasional deeds of striking worth are done and the heroism of our men becomes known. On board the good ship Remlik, a converted yacht, a depth bomb broke loose from its fastenings at the stern and was rolling unrestrained upon the deck before the wash and roll of a heavy sea. A catastrophe was imminent. The safety pin fell out and everything was ready for the tragedy that appeared certain. But John MacKenzie, of Massachusetts, a chief boatswain's mate in the Naval Reserve, demonstrated his Yankee grit and indomitable courage, dashed down the deck to grapple with it. Three times the hero from Massachusetts had the bomb under his control and three times it eluded him upon the water washed, slippery decks, but he finally held the death-dealing bomb. The safety pin was placed and after a battle with death the depth bomb was securely fastened. MacKenzie had saved the ship, his own life and the lives of the men. The Navy Department has done well in awarding him a medal of honor and in giving with it the money gratuity. Such narratives of personal heroism thrill. The recognition of his heroism is but a formal expression that the men of 1917 have the same spirit as the men of '76 and '61. With this spirit the war will be won.

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY is the authority for the statement that people of the country districts are passing the people of the cities in their subscriptions to the Liberty Bond issues. "The people of the big cities, excellent as their efforts for the loan have been, will have to intensify their work to rival the results being achieved in the smaller towns and country districts. During the remaining days of the campaign I earnestly hope that the men, women and children of the nation will throw themselves into this battle for liberty with the whole-hearted enthusiasm and self-sacrifice displayed by our noble soldiers and sailors. Efforts must be redoubled all along the line." Here is a significant challenge! In these war times the people of the countryside have the money and are giving it. Does it mean that the people of the city lack the spirit or the funds? Perhaps it means that the spirit is there, but the expenses of city life have limited the saving and giving power of the people and that the thrifty countryside folk have the reserve funds and the spirit to give. The appeal is significant and students of social conditions may well ponder the words.

THE MASSACHUSETTS PRISON ASSOCIATION is advocating the payment of a small sum of money, for service rendered, to inmates of our prisons. The temptations presented to a criminal without friends, who has been turned loose to make his way without funds, is not intelligent. The opportunity to earn a little in prison will present the prisoners when released a real and new opportunity and provide a sum of money to help him until he has gained employment. The bill is being thoroughly scrutinized and the principle must prevail.

THE WAR MUST BE WON, but social students are alarmed by the laissez faire spirit that has arisen in regard to hard won social reforms. Joseph Lee has lifted up his voice and with an emphasis that is worthy. There is need of such a warning. The war must be won and all of the reforms urged and won by hard efforts must be conserved.

PRESIDENT WILSON HAS BEEN OUTSPOKEN in his convictions of the frightfulness of this war and the deceit of the German autocracy. In speaking he has expressed the mind of the people of the United States. This war involves many serious problems and the President has been clear headed, determined and just in his decisions. Nothing shows the magnanimity of the President nor the sincerity of the American people better than his Liberty Loan letter to the Hudson County (N. Y.) Germans. "You may be sure that I sympathize with you and shall coöperate in every effort to see to it that the loyal residents of the United States of German birth or descent are given genuine proof of the sincerity of our institutions. It distresses me beyond measure that suspicion should be attached to those who do not deserve it and that acts of injustice and even violence should be based upon suspicion." President Wilson is trying to show the world the true spirit of American democracy. To punish innocent and loyal citizens of the United States is unfair, unjust and un-American. There are Germans who are loyal to the United States and who through trial of mind and travail of soul have broken with the fatherland because of its unworthy policies and who are now loyal to the American institutions of liberty and honor and justice. American honor demands that the liberty and freedom which the world seeks in a world-war may not be denied to them. The alien enemy deserves the fate which awaits him, but the loyal German now an American, should be spared the pain of unjust suspicion.

THE UNIFORM OF AN AMERICAN SOLDIER carries with it an honor that is justly recognized. It is a sign that the man has been selected by his government for a great work. The bogus soldier has appeared wearing the signs of honor without right because it has been made so honorable by the good will and recognition of the people. This has given the military authorities a great deal of anxiety, for the "bogus" soldier does not wear the uniform for the honor alone, but usually for some mean purpose. Hotels have been swindled and acts unworthy of the uniform have been committed by men wearing the uniform without authority. The military police in the Boston district have tried a clever plan of apprehending such recalcitrants, with good effect. By a prearranged plan, every soldier passing established points were challenged and their credentials examined. Those who could not satisfactorily answer the challenge made were taken into custody. The plan has succeeded and will be continued, and it will effectually rid the city and the service of a great nuisance.

HENRY B. ENDICOTT, of Boston and the North Shore, has issued a telling statement that should be carefully read: "To the poor man, or the man of moderate means, this suggestion (of working) hardly applies, as his very circumstances would in themselves be sufficient incentives for him to work . . . to those I would say, if you don't have to work for the maintenance of yourself or your family, your duty is to work, nevertheless, for the maintenance of your liberty, that this, your form of government, the best in the world, shall endure." Noble sentiment and well and authoritatively spoken! The fortunate and blessed thing, is that thousands of men and women of leisure are investing their time, talents and money in helping to win the war. The spirit that prompted Mr. Endicott's observations is at work among the wealthy folk of leisure and they are discovering the joy and pleasure of aiding a great and good cause.

BOSTON HAS A MAYOR for the hour. He has attacked the severe problem which he has before him with courage and efficiency.

The Food Administration is sending out Miss Arnold's "Grace at Table" in printed form. Those of us who heard her say it here in Manchester some months ago were impressed by its significance and appeal.

Grace at Table.

Here we gather, dear All-Father,
Round Thy table to be fed.
'Tis Thy gift,—our daily bread.

As we gather to be fed
Nations plead for daily bread,—
Fighting son and anguished mother,
Orphaned children,—all together
Pray to Thee for daily bread.
At Thy common table, Father
Ask we all for daily bread.

God, All-Father, hear our prayer!
Move our hearts and minds to share
With Thy children at Thy table
This Thy gift of daily bread,—
Sacred gift of daily bread!

Lest they perish, swift and eager
Share we now our daily bread.
Give through us, O great All-Father
To Thy children, daily bread!

MANCHESTER RED CROSS

ANNUAL MEETING, REPORTS AND ELECTION. MOVING PICTURES DEPICT WORK BEING DONE.

Moving pictures depicting the Red Cross work in France on the battle-front, and two speakers from the Boston Red Cross division were the features that drew an enthusiastic crowd to the Manchester Horticultural hall, Monday night, for the annual meeting of the Manchester branch of the Red Cross society.

Co. I, M. S. G., came to the hall in a body, following a short drill which had to be postponed on account of rain, and were among the 300-odd persons present.

The Orpheus club, under the management of Miss Porter, gave appropriate selections and the audience sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." The business meeting and the reading of the annual reports followed the showing of the two reels.

The first speaker, Mr. Hobbs, told of the work of a "good stay-at-home soldier" of the Red Cross. He told of some of the difficulties encountered with the amateur volunteer workers in this army of 23 millions of members—volunteers being harder to manage in a business than paid workers.

The civilian relief work he emphasized as the most vital work of the society, although not much is heard of this side. He said that no distinguishing clothes are worn by these workers, yet they are the connecting link between the boys and their families, keeping up the morale by taking care of them abroad and of the families at home. He told of the excellent work abroad for the boys in hospitals and camps, where a man representing the Red Cross is kept to write for the sick and to keep the home folk generally informed. The need of surgical dressings was urged. He closed by saying: "Give our money till we can give no longer, as the brave soldier fights till he can fight no longer. Give till it hurts, give till it thrills! They who buy a Liberty Bond are not giving, but only investing."

The second speaker, Mr. Philpot, played a glowing tribute to the Red Cross society, formerly signifying a sentiment to many people, but now recognized as one of the greatest organizations in the world showing Christianity in its finest form. He said the Red Cross had proved that humanity is not brutal at heart and declared that our 23 millions of members are the true Americans, who really feel the purpose of the war and know what the army and navy mean to us.

He said that the Red Cross does just the right thing, as the government would have it, but cannot very well do itself, and that the Red Cross ably represents the crystallization of the sentiment of the American people.

He graphically told of the deceit and plans of Germany during the past 40 years, in which he compared Prussianism to a great, fat spider in its web, ready to eat everything up. He showed that a spider is sometimes "stung" by a wasp and just so has Germany been "stung" at times by civilization. The figure was so well and aptly put that the audience gave a long and significant applause to his plea for fighters for the long, hard fight ahead to "kill the beast."

The work of the Red Cross in Serbia and Italy was told. He told how the western front had been made uninhabitable—just the thing Germany would do to us. He spoke of the need of the coming Red Cross drive, and forcefully put it that "if it had not been for the British navy and the French army we would be gone."

The pictures shown were strikingly realistic and emphasized as nothing else could the work of the Red Cross abroad.

The Business Meeting.

Mrs. William H. Coolidge of Manchester, the chairman of the work-room, read a most interesting report of the work of the Manchester Red Cross. Space forbids that we give all of this report, so completely told by Mrs. Coolidge. In part she said: "Our branch should feel happy to know that in our first year (organized Apr. 13, 1917), there has never been a piece of work returned, or a criticism sent in of poor sewing. Mrs. E. L. Rogers, director of sewing, has been our most conscientious and successful chief, and has always managed to get to headquarters all the finished articles possible, but has held to the highest standards in workmanship."

Mrs. Coolidge told of the work accomplished; the comfort kits made for Manchester boys; the Xmas boxes; and of the last special work done—the making of 30 complete layettes for the new babies in northern France and Belgium. These were made largely in the homes and each contained 38 articles. The supply station has sent a letter of thanks saying that these were perfect in every detail and absolutely complete.

In speaking of the vast amount of knitting, she said: "We have been most fortunate in having funds enough to purchase wool to give to our workers. Manchester has had everything to do with." Sewed articles have numbered 1836; knitted articles, 2128; surgical dressings, 2853; layette articles, 1110; total, 7927 articles. The faithful Arbella girls of Manchester have also made 26,570 gauze bandages, which were sent in to Beverly.

Mrs. Coolidge explained that a Red Cross equipment, of which Manchester's allotment was nine, contained the following articles:

Ten sheets, 4 pillow cases, 3 suits pajamas, 4 hospital bed shirts, 1 convalescent robe, 4 pairs socks, 2 pairs bed socks, 2 bath towels, 4 face towels, 3 wash colths, 1 pair slippers, 1 hot water bag cover, 1 ice bag cover, 6 handkerchiefs.

She closed her report by reading a list of finished articles that have gone from the Manchester workroom during the last year, as follows:

Surgical dressings: 600 rolled muslin bandages, 96 rolled flannel bandages, 244 rolled crinoline bandages, 100 four-tailed bandages, 1437 slings, 476 T bandages.

H. W. Purington, treasurer, reported that $8,040.95 had been given to the work, and that the balance in the treasury is $2,972.35. PATRIOTIC SPEECH

HON. HENRY V. CUNNINGHAM OF BOSTON MADE STIRRING ADDRESS ON "CIVILIZATION OF THE WORLD."

HON. HENRY V. CUNNINGHAM of Boston made a stirring address on the "Civilization of the World" at the patriotic exercises in Manchester two weeks ago today—Patriots' Day—in connection with the hanging out of a service flag at the Sacred Heart church. He said in part:

"This ceremony is to commemorate the service of the men of this parish in the great war to preserve the civilization of the world.

"No nation loves peace as we do, but no people ever responded as we did to her call to arms. Her sons sprang to arms and her treasure has been poured out unstintingly. There is no one who has not offered his best service to the country's need.

"The flag and roll of honor of this church perpetuates the glory of your youth who have answered the highest call of patriotism. Their name, their deeds and their sacrifice shall endure so long as the sacrifice is offered on yonder altar and their remembrance shall be wafted to heaven with the prayers sent up for their cause and safety.

"From our shores for three years we beheld the struggle for the supremacy of military force. The obligations of nations were ruthlessly set aside—neutral lands were invaded and small nations overcome and their people brought under the iron rule of the despot. Barbaric cruelty was inflicted on men who valiantly fought for their own beloved countries. Women and children were made the victims of the merciless invader and all Europe became a shambles.

"Not a treaty remained in force and not a vestige of the law of nations was recognized by the Prussian force that wrecked and destroyed every monument which the arts of nineteen centuries of civilization had raised, and devastated the land which had received the care and culture of centuries by an industrious and devoted people.

"We looked on with sorrow that a nation which had prided itself on her own material advancement should show to the world her disregard for the rights of men beyond her own borders and seek to impose her rule by a warfare that exceeded in cruelty all the wars of history.

"Germany has enslaved whole peoples and deported inhabitants of the land she has invaded.

Rev. and Mrs. A. G. Warner were the guests of Allen Relief corps at their regular meeting last evening. A social program was carried out incident to the presentation of a purse of gold to Rev. and Mrs. Warner, who are leaving Manchester soon for Lowell. The presentation was made by Mrs. William Follett, president of the corps, who expressed her appreciation of the services of Mr. Warner in the community and the special courtesies he had shown to Allen Relief corps, to which Mr. Warner fittingly responded. Mrs. Follett then introduced Department Com. E. P. Stanley, who in behalf of Post 67, G. A. OUR BOYS "OVER THERE" ENJOY TOASTED CIGARETTES.

Through the patriotism of the citizens of this country thousands of smoke kits are being distributed to American soldiers in France. Authorities agree that men in the trenches need cigarettes almost as much as food and munitions.

Doctors, nurses, and commanding officers all join in the demand which has awakened in this country a great movement to keep our boys supplied with smokes.

Millions of the famous LUCKY STRIKE Cigarettes are "going over" all the time. There's something about the idea of the toasted cigarette that appeals to the men who spend their time in cold, wet trenches and billets.

Then, too, the real Kentucky Burley tobacco of the LUCKY STRIKE cigarette gives them the solid satisfaction of a pipe, with a lot less trouble.

Scouts for their loyalty and cooperation during the time he had been with them, called their attention to the principles of success upon which the development of their character was based and traced the significance of the Boy Scout oath and the Boy Scout law in this matter, and urged them to uphold the honor of the troop and respect the privileges of the Scout House.

He then introduced Mr. Matthews as the next Scoutmaster. Mr. Matthews received warm applause and assured the boys that he would do all in his power to cooperate with them and assist them in their work.

MAGNOLIA

The vandal who cut the bark on those maple trees on Magnolia ave., should be severely punished, if known.

The pastor will preach in the Village church next Sunday at 10.45 a. m., to be followed by the Communion. At 7.30 p. m. the people will meet to work for the Red Cross.

The villagers here are getting their gardens ready for planting, and despite the cold weather, some seeds have already been put in the ground in the hopes that warmer days may soon come.

The "Upton Club" of Boy Scouts are doing their "bit" this week as "gleaners" selling the third Liberty Loan Bonds, and in this connection it is a matter of civic pride that already the people of this little hamlet have purchased $2600 worth of these bonds, which were solicited by Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Lycett, Mrs. Willard R. Boyd, and others.

At a meeting of the directors of the Women's Clubhouse association of Magnolia, held at the home of Mrs. Abbie Story, Apr. 27, at 7.30 p. m., John J. Burke was elected a member of the directors to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Henry W. Brown. Mrs. Alice M. Peart of Wollaston, was engaged as matron for the coming season. Mrs. Peart served the club in the same capacity last summer, giving entire satisfaction to all concerned. She is a woman of pleasing personality, good judgment and the club is most fortunate in securing her services for another season.

UNIQUE SERVICE AT VILLAGE CHURCH LAST SUNDAY EVENING.

A service of unusual interest and unique to this community was held in the Village church last Sunday evening. The program was as follows: Organ voluntary, hymn, "America," silent prayer for the soldiers and navy boys, collection, and then work for the Red Cross making surgical dressings, knitting, etc.

There was a large attendance and all seemed greatly pleased with this innovation. Master Abbott Howe (a musical genius) rendered several selections on the piano to the great delight of those present and after which some gathered about the piano and sang hymns and gospel songs, being led by Miss Edna Symonds, the church organist. A service of this nature will be held in the Village church every Sunday evening until further notice and a cordial invitation

PATRIOTIC SPEECH

"Out of Belgium we see one grand and noble figure—undaunted and unconquered—Cardinal Mercier, who has defied the tyrant, sustained his people, led his flock—and, seeking no glory, has won the admiration of the world. He wears no armor, but his priestly stole and no weapon but the figure of the crucified Saviour. May the God who Mercier adores be with our soldiers and hear the prayers which the church here unites with him for a speedy victory to vindicate the arms which we send to Belgium as the first victim of this monstrous aggressor!

"As a nation we could but look on while this slaughter threatened the civilization of Europe. Nation after nation was drawn into the vortex. The life of Pius X was sacrificed when he saw his own children in arms against each other. All attempts by him and his successor to restore peace to the world have been without avail. America alone of the great nations remained outside the combat and with patience and forbearance met trial and difficulty,—yes insult and injury—in the hope that she at least might serve to bring the struggle to an end.

"The wide ocean was between us and those at war. The sea is and must forever be free to neutral nations.

Their citizens have the right to sail their ships on the high seas without attack from belligerent nations. We stood enchroachments on this principle by Germany to the point of exasperation. Finally when she attempted to exclude us from a definite part of the high seas and sought to enforce her demand by the submarine and torpedo, did we accept her challenge and proclaim that if she wanted war this nation said a just cause had been forced upon us and we joined our force and fortune with those nations which had borne the toll and hardship of a war waged for three years and threatened to end the civilization which Christianity had given to Europe.

"Our nation, by her entry into the war has declared that under the folds of our flag her citizens shall have her protection whether within her own borders or on a ship sailing any sea in any clime; that from this time forth no nation with despotic greed shall impose her rule on other nations so as to endanger the peace of the world.

"What we have borne in patience is but an assurance to ourselves that we shall pursue our determination to the end until an ending peace shall result to end for all time the aspiration to military glory and the rule of the sword."

Austrian allegations awfully arrayed are advancing, attacking, artfully, arrogantly; arrows of asseveration fill the air. France stands, mail-clad against them all. — Brooklyn Eagle.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin R. Buxton of Reading, Pa., have spent the past week at Beverly Farms, visiting friends.

M. Silverberg moved his family from Boston to Beverly Farms on Wednesday, and has opened his tailoring establishment on West st.

Mrs. William P. Day, of Hart st., has been a patient the past week at the Railroad ave. hospital, Beverly. She is reported to be improving.

Beverly Farms call men of the fire department were made quite happy Wednesday by receiving from the city a check of $125, being their pay for the past year's services.

A public whist party for the benefit of the club will be given at the parish rooms on Thursday evening next, May 9th, by the Men's club of the St. John's Episcopal church.

Harold Varney, who dropped his studies at the Beverly High school a few weeks ago, and has become one of the clerks at the Varney drug store, has passed examinations successfully and will enter the Phillips Exeter academy next fall.

Work on the improvement of the highway between Beverly Farms station and the Manchester line has commenced. While the distance between those two points is to have a new surface of Bermudoz oil mixture, the work at present is at "Malt Hill," where the road is being widened and where a new sidewalk is to be constructed.

The young lady operators of the Beverly Farms exchange have received many words of praise over the handsome float which they put into the Liberty Loan parade last Saturday. It represented a telephone exchange, and from the keyboard ran 16 lines to young ladies who represented the different camps and cantonments in the U. S.

Last evening the Men's club of St. John's church had another of those pleasant evenings of which they have had so many since last fall. Lieut. Wm. Drohan, just returned from the trenches, a friend of Capt. N. S. Simpkins and some other of our Beverly Farms boys, told a most interesting story of what he saw and went through "over there." It certainly was a most instructive talk and gave a clear idea of present conditions. The affair was held at the parish rooms, and the members brought their friends, which made up a large attendance.

Mrs. George F. Keenan and son, George, Jr., who have spent the time since last fall at Macon, Ga., are now visiting Mrs. Keenan's parents, Alderman and Mrs. Thomas D. Connolly, Oak st. Reginald Hull and Francis Lawlor, two Beverly Farms boys who on Monday went to Camp Devens to join the national army, were given a send-off party last Saturday evening by a number of their young friends. Hull was presented with a military money belt and Lawlor a wrist watch. Music and refreshments helped to make the evening a most pleasant one.

Preston W. R. Corps made a fine showing last Saturday at Beverly in the great Liberty Loan parade. The ladies were dressed in caps and capes, made for the occasion, and carried spread out a large American flag which made a handsome appearance and they received applause along the whole line of march. Quite a lot of silver money was thrown on the flag as it passed along by people on the sidewalks, which will go into their war work fund.

"A Fighting Chance," is the name of a most interesting and pleasing war drama presented to the public on Wednesday evening in the new Public Library assembly hall, for the benefit of the Red Cross. The affair drew a large audience. It was under the direction of Miss Susie Bennett, assisted by a number of Beverly Farms young ladies, all of whom acted out there parts in a most creditable manner. 25TH ANNIVERSARY

CONOMO TRIBE OF RED MEN CELEBRATE IN MANCHESTER TOWN HALL.

Conomo tribe, No. 113, Independent Order of Red Men, celebrated its silver anniversary Wednesday evening, with an entertainment in Manchester Town hall, followed by dancing. Some 250 people were present, and all had a most enjoyable evening. The members of the tribe, including a dozen or more of the charter members, were sprinkled throughout the audience, wearing their regalia. The entertainment was at 8 o'clock.

Sachem Charles E. Bell stepped upon the stage after an introductory number by the orchestra and welcomed the gathering, stating that it was 25 years ago that some 48 Manchester men got together on the second floor of the Engine House and organized Conomo tribe. Today the membership is 87 and the tribe is in a flourishing condition financially, second to none. At present there is a fund of $3100 in the treasury, including $1000 invested in Liberty Bonds.

In the 25 years, there had been paid out in death and sick benefits $2800. The tribe has sent five of its members to war. He paid a compliment to the treasurer of the tribe, Leonard Andrews, saying that he more than any other single member was responsible for the excellent condition of the tribe today.

Following the remarks, the program of the evening was turned over to the entertainers,—Mrs. Marjorie Warren Leadbetter, soprano soloist, who is soloist with the Meistersingers this season, and who has been heard in Manchester the past winter in the Arbella concert series; Miss Kathleen Piper of Lynn, 'cellist; Miss Evelyn Thurston Fulton of Marblehead, violinist; Mrs. Gladys Norton Thorndike of Marblehead, pianist, and last but by no means least, the little wonder of entertainers, Miss Marjorie Shepard of Lynn, reader. This little girl is only nine years old, but it is not stretching it a mite to say her part of the evening's program was as much enjoyed as the other numbers on the program.

The program was as follows:

Following the entertainment the gathering adjourned to the upper floor, where refreshments of ice cream and crackers were served, following which the balance of the evening was given over to dancing.

MANCHESTER CHURCHES

The King's Daughters will meet with Mrs. Charles Lovegreen on Monday evening, May 6.

A memorial mass was held at the Sacred Heart church, Monday morning for Corporal Frank B. Amaral, who died of wounds in France on Apr. 15.

The Baptist church celebrated May Day with an apron sale and New England supper which was largely attended. Mrs. Edward Ayers was chairman of the apron committee and Mrs. Nellie Smith of the supper committee. It was given under the auspices of the Friendship Circle.

A ladies quartet will furnish special music at the Sunday morning service at the Cong'l church. It will be Communion Sunday and thirteen new members will be admitted, four by confession of faith and nine by letter. Rev. F. W. Manning will preach on the text, Jude 1:21—"Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life." The subject of his sermon in the evening, 8 o'clock, will be "In the Service."

May Day was the occasion for an apron and fancy-work sale in the Cong'l chapel by the Ladies' Social Circle, of which Mrs. S. Albert Sinnicks, was chairman. The apron table was in charge of Mrs. David Bennett and Mrs. Chas. Williams. Miss Goldsmith and Mrs. Harlan Morgan sold the fancy articles and Mrs. Sinnicks had the May basket table. Ice cream and cake were served by Mrs. Frank Andrews, Mrs. Oscar Wing and Mrs. Robert Porter. The dainty little May baskets were good sellers and were especially made to please the many children who came in at the close of school.

The long cold winter of 1917-18, in many sections of our snow belt the most severe in 40 years, has passed; snow banks which guarded front doors and cross streets have melted away, and with them has gone the resolve to make those few simple repairs to houses and factories, which will keep out cold and save fuel.

The fuel administration is said to have in mind an order which will cut fuel users down to at least 90 percent of normal requirements. Such a saving would amount to 60,000,000 tons, or more, of coal. If the next winter should prove to be a mild one, the 90 percent would work little hardship; if a repetition of the one just gone—well, that's a different story.

The time to mend a leaky roof is now; to rebuild a broken fence, at once. The obvious, sensible action in regard to windows that leak cold air, and other parts of a building that are good ventilators but poor heat retainers, is to repair them at once. It will cost no more to make a few storm windows now, than later when it may not be possible to obtain them. The same is true in regard to faulty or insufficient heating apparatus; have them put in shape the minute the winter fires are out.

And if you expect to burn coal next winter, lose no time in putting in your supply. It may not be a cheerful subject to contemplate with the advent of the first warm days, or even popular, but isn't it worth doing? Then do it now.—H. H. WINDSOR, in the May Popular Mechanics Magazine.

theatre last Monday evening. Though the comedy has been running in London continuously for two years and in New York for the past twelve weeks, there was little known here concerning it. But with the first appearance the Boston press and public rose to its charms and appeal, and since then there has been a succession of crowded houses. The press was most enthusiastic in showering praise upon star and play. Lady Chetwynd charmed by her gifted playing of the American girl married to a German officer in this story of home life in Germany before the war. The humor of the comedy is contained in the contemplation of the life lived by subjects of the most royal of hypocrites, and even the natives of the Prussias allow that there is no distortion of truth in the play.

COPLEY THEATRE, BOSTON.

"Arms and the Girl," a play entirely new to Boston audiences, will be given by the Henry Jewett Players at the Copley theatre next week. Its production in New York some months ago attracted no little attention, and it has been hailed as one of the strongest and most entertaining of dramas dealing with the present war. Its authors are Robert Baker and Grant Stewart, and they have made an especial appeal to theatre-goers by placing its action in Belgium in the early days of the German invasion.

The plot, the characters, the scenes, and the dialogue of "Arms and the Girl" are picturesque in the extreme. Its incidents deal with the unpremeditated marriage of two young Americans who were total strangers to each other up to the time of their meeting in an inn in the Belgian town of Beaupre in the days when the Germans were overrunning the city, and both comedy and drama mingle throughout the entire course of the play.

GLOBE THEATRE, BOSTON.

An announcement sure to create extraordinary interest is contained in the word that there is to begin an engagement at the Globe theatre, Boston, on next Monday, May 6, of the photo-spectacle picturing Sergt. Arthur Guy Empey in the screen version of his sensational book, "Over the Top."

Sergt. Empey, probably the best known soldier of all the millions who have fought in the trenches of France to stem the tide of German barbarism appears as the star of "Over the Top," and he is said to enact vividly the stirring experiences met by the French and British who held the lines against the Boche in the first mad months of the war.

The showings will be continuous from 10.30 a. m. until 10.30 p. m., and seats will be popularly priced.

CAT NEEDED TUNING.

The landlady bustled up to her new lodger as he came down to breakfast the first morning.

"Good morning, sir," she wheezed.

"Good morning," said the lodger.

"I hope you've had a good night's rest," said the landlady.

"No," said the mild-mannered little man. "Your cat kept me awake."

"Oh," said the landlady, tossing her head. "I suppose you're going to ask me to have the poor thing killed."

"No, not exactly," said the gentle lodger. "But would you very much mind having it tuned?"—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

SOCIETY NOTES

MRS. VICTOR L. CRABBE, of 5200 Ellsworth ave., Pittsburg, who had the Ahl cottage at Pride's Crossing last season, will return to the North Shore this year, but will occupy the William Endicott, Jr. cottage on Neptune street, Beverly. The lease was made through the office of T. Dennie Boardman, Reginald and R. deB. Boardman, of Boston and West Manchester.

Samuel D. Mandell, of Boston, who has spent his summers in Beverly Cove for years, has leased a cottage in Hamilton for this season, in the vicinity of his son's estate—the George S. Mandells. He will have "Lone Tree Farm," owned by Reginald Robbins and occupied of late by the Isaac Rand Thomases.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lee and Miss Florence Lee intend to remain at the Copley-Plaza, Boston, during May. They will come to "Villa al Mare," their Beverly Farms estate the first week in June. Mrs. Lee is making splendid progress since leaving the hospital four weeks ago, and is able to go for an occasional short drive in her car.

Mrs. William H. Sturgis Lothrop, of Beacon st., Boston, who has leased the Smith Farm house, off Proctor st., Manchester, for the summer, owns a beautiful place on the South Shore, which she has rented to Dr. John T. Bowen, of Boston. It is located at Mattapoissett.

Herbert M. Sears, who returned during the past week from France, and is now at his home in Pride's Crossing with his daughters and their families, has been in American Red Cross service, doing canteen work at the front in Flanders. During the cold winter months he made most of his distributions in the front-line trenches at Neuport among the French poilus, where he was awarded the Croix de Guerre, also the medal of the Reconnaissance Française.

Miss Agnes Means, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Means, of Boston and Manchester, has returned from Philadelphia, where she was sponsor for the U. S. torpedo-boat destroyer "Dorsey," named after a relative, a young naval hero of 1801.

Miss Elizabeth D. Boardman, of Boston, came to "Hill Top," her West Manchester home, last Friday. Miss Boardman is taking up her usual study of the birds and is eagerly watching for their arrival. A new bird-bath is being planned and the little houses are ready for the feathered tenants. Perhaps in no home along the Shore are the birds studied in a more appreciative and scientific manner than in this sanctuary on the hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Frothingham, of Boston, have opened their Beverly Farms summer home, "Rose Ledge." They spent the past winter at the Copley-Plaza.

The pretty little clubhouse at the Montserrat tennis grounds is being opened ready for the young folk.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Aspinwall, of Chestnut Hill, who were summer residents of Coolidge's Point, Manchester, for many years, are naturally very proud of their second son, Augustus Aspinwall, who has lately been certified to receive his commission as second lieutenant. He is stationed at Camp Upton.

SOCIETY NOTES

THE beautiful hedge in front of the Alexander Steinert home at Beverly Cove shows the ravages of the winter, and it is thought doubtful if it will even show a leaf. Other foliage has suffered badly in this section. Quite noticeable is that at "Dawson Hall," where in the Italian garden much of the evergreen shrubbery wears a singed appearance, the gardeners being uncertain whether it is all dead or just partially injured. Box in the formal garden on the Dudley L. Pickman estate also suffered much.

The big flag flying from the staff on the grounds of "The Birches," the Beverly Cove home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Ratchesky, of Boston, was the first sign of occupancy noticed the other day. Their next door neighbors, the Abraham Koshlands, of Boston, are arriving about the middle of May.

Mrs. John R. McGinley motored from New York to her estate in Manchester this week for a few days' stay. The family will not come here for the summer until the last of this month or early June. Miss Lois McGinley is very actively interested in the work of the Navy League, in New York, as she was on the North Shore last season, and as she will be this coming summer, undoubtedly.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wigglesworth (Isabella Councilman) are now settled in their cottage on Old Neck, Manchester, close to "Eaglehead," and the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Wigglesworth. They will remain the entire season, while Mr. Wigglesworth attends to his duties as instructor in the naval aviation school at the Mass. Institute of Technology.

It is understood that Mr. and Mrs. Gerald L. Hoyt, of New York, who have occupied the Endicott cottage on Neptune street, Beverly Cove, for a number of seasons, will return to Ipswich this season. The cottage they long occupied in Ipswich is on "Appleton Farms." Their daughter's family, the Samuel A. Welldons, of New York, always spend the season with them.

The A. A. Lawrence cottage on Hospital Point, Beverly Cove, is being made ready for its tenants, the John Barry Ryans, of New York.

Mrs. N. W. Rice and daughter, Miss Annie Rice, of 341 Commonwealth ave., Boston, will come to their Beverly Cove home about May 18. This is one of the most attractive places on Burgess Point, with its fine rolling lawn and charming little garden plot.

Miss H. M. Magee arrived last Thursday at her home on Ober street, Beverly Cove. Miss Magee has been in Washington and other points this winter. Her brother's family, the Frank A. Magees, usually spend their summers with her in place of opening their Wenham home.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus P. Loring arrived last Sunday from Boston at their home known as "Off Lots," on Thissell street, Pride's Crossing. The A. P. Loring, Jr., have their year-round home nearby on Thissell street, also.

Mrs. William G. Wendell, of the Ipswich colony, who has been in France, returned last week and went to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis R. Appleton, in New York, for a short stay. Mr. Wendell is still abroad.

MRS. HENRY PRATT MCKEAN, of Beverly Farms, set the social ball rolling in Wenham and practically on the North Shore last Saturday, when she arranged for a luncheon and demonstration by Portia Smiley, followed by a Liberty Food Sale at the Wenham Tea House. The luncheon cooked by Portia Smiley, who works under the auspices of the National Civic Federation, of Boston, consisted of a soup, Maryland chicken and squash pie.

The pretty little tea room in its white, green and tan colors was brightened up with showy pink potted geraniums in the windows and on the tables. The big fireplace, with the attractive white wood mantel on which stood brass candlesticks, made an interesting background for one of the big tables laden with Liberty food. The luncheon was served on the small green tables in the inner room, and those who enjoyed it were Mmes. McKean, Francis L. Burnett, J. B. Pickett, Wm. H. Hoyt, Timothy Craig, J. P. Brown, W. F. Trowt, B. Hammond Tracy, O. Woodbury, Alanson L. Daniels, J. S. Curtis, Chas. A. Read, Samuel Vaughan, F. M. Batchelder and friend, and the Misses Ruth Prince, Mabel Welch and H. M. Magee and Miss Hawley.

In the afternoon the demonstration consisted of corn crisp, waffles, spoon bread, pound cake, fruit cake, foamy molasses sauce and coffee.

From the food sale about $50 was cleared. This was given by the Wenham Improvement society. Whist parties and rummage sales have also been given, the proceeds going towards the up-keep of the house, which was run as a community centre this winter. All of the town's activities have been held in it; such as,—Red Cross sewing and the surgical dressings work, committee meetings, classes in home nursing and sewing, Scout meetings for both boys and girls, entertainments, church meetings, etc. Prayer meetings were held in it also, to conserve coal in the churches.

Mrs. M. A. Leach and Miss Wilkins lived in the house and took general charge of the work. Miss Mabel Welch came to the house before Christmas and has been one of the active workers in the Girl Scout movement, now having about fifty in the two troops. She will remain through the summer and will have charge of the exchange department as last year, coming to the tea house work then, after a season spent the previous year in the Magnolia shop of Amos A. Lawrence, of Boston and Beverly. Miss Welch spent the early part of the winter with her niece, Mrs. Alvin F. Sortwell (Elise Pollard), in Hamilton. Her Girl Scouts meet each Tuesday, one troop in the afternoon and one in the evening. They also receive an hour and a half of drill in the Town hall in their uniforms, by Captain Houston A. Thomas, of Hamilton, who drills the State Guard company of the town.

John Cannon is scoutmaster for the boys, who meet

Wednesday nights at the tea house.

More of the Girl Scout movement in Wenham will be given later. This is one of the best kinds of war work for the young girls to be engaged in and much interest is being taken in the movement throughout the country.

The tea house will open for the summer on June 1, under the management of Mrs. Philip Downes, as usual, who is now in charge of the Economy Food Shop of Hovey's store in Boston. Old and new friends of the tea house will find a most cordial welcome at the little place this summer. This was one of the first tea houses on the Shore to start a Hoover day last fall.

Samuel Johnson, who took a course in agriculture at the Essex Agricultural college last year, has been staying in Wenham at the tea house lately, while overseeing the spring work on "Fairfield," the Hamilton home, opened this week by his mother, Mrs. Wolcott Howe Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter, who are to remain at their Washington home until the middle of June, when they will come to Beverly Farms for the summer, have placed their country home, which is just across the Potomac river in Virginia, at the disposal of the government as a rest and recreation camp for soldiers. The 100 acres surrounding the house will have shacks and tents to accommodate 1000 persons, while the house, with certain reservations, will be used as an administration building.

Society is anticipating the Chestnut Hill Horse show, a feature for many years on Memorial Day. It is to take place, as usual, on May 30, but the proceeds will be given to the Red Cross.

Rough seas prevailed the past winter, doing much damage all along the Shore. At "Dawson Hall," Beverly Cove, it has taken several hundred dollars to pay for the repair work just completed. At "Swiftmoor," the Pride's Crossing home of Mr. and Mrs. Aksel Wichfeld, considerable damage was also done.

Miss Anna Thorndike, who is going to spend the summer in Montserrat as general director of the North Shore girls' garden work on the Dudley Pickman estate, was the only attendant at the wedding of her sister, Miss Martha Thorndike, and Joseph Rochemont Hamlen, the ceremony being performed last Saturday in Boston. Miss Thorndike's parents are Dr. and Mrs. Paul Thorndike.

The Harold J. Coolidges left Boston last week for "Tuckerhoe," their between-season home near Richmond, Va. This is a beautiful southern place with many historic connections, some dating back to the time of Washington. They will come to "Oberland," their Pride's Crossing estate, about June 1.

THE NORTH SHORE has the usual types of people and business represented,—the rich, the merchants, bankers, editors, teachers, doctors, ministers, lawyers, business women, mechanics, servants, etc., but there is one type of worker in which it is peculiarly blessed, and that is in its faithful gardeners. Nowhere can a finer lot of men be found than the ones who have supervised the North Shore gardens—some of them for many years.

The writer visits many gardens and greenhouses each season and is always welcomed by the most courteous and conscientious men imaginable. It is always a pleasure to take the visitor through and expound to her uninitiated eyes and ears the mysteries of his wares with their long, hard names.

The gardener is educated for his work; he can do the physical labor required; and he is all the time growing in the science and theory of his work. One has never yet been visited who was doing it merely for the time, or as a stepping-stone to something higher. They are high already. Not so with the usual business world, where the higher positions are always in view.

The gardeners in Manchester are fortunate in having the Horticultural society, with its many advantages, chief of which has been the fine lecture course this year. Many gardeners in the Beverly Cove section have said they should like to belong, but it was too far down to Manchester, and the mode of conveyance and travel too hard for winter, when the lectures were on.

A writer in a garden magazine has this to say: "Our country, which should be one in its love of liberty, is divided by factions—factions of capital and labor, of open and closed shops, factions productive of misunderstandings which are swept away when we meet on the ground of a common cause. Ruskin said years ago: 'People who like the things that I like belong to the class of society that I belong to.' Well's Mr. Britling lived in one social stratum and the station-master at Matchings Easy lived in another. But it did not take a European war to bring these two together. They had already met—on the common ground of sweet peas! There are no class distinctions between those who meet in their common love of gardens, and the first meeting accomplished, may not the path open to a wider understanding of social problems?"

The Dudley L. Pickmans left Boston last week for Bedford, where they have a large place, used as a between-season home. They will come to the Beverly Cove home about July 1.

Amos A. Lawrence is on a southern trip, visiting various camps in the interests of war work. His greenhouse at Beaver Pond, the Beverly home, has been closed completely this winter.

THE octagonal greenhouse on the estate of Col. and Mrs.

Cranmore N. Wallace at Beverly Cove is a most unusual little creation adjoining the stable. It was built three years ago and this spring has been made more attractive by having a new vestibule arrangement built in the side. The structure is high, the glass walls and tops seeming to admit more light and sunshine than the ordinary hothouse. A rough boulder foundation supports the frame. Just now thrifty looking snapdragons, carnations, tulips, geraniums and some beautiful blue flowers are very noticeable in the center of the place and also towering up towards the roof and against the stable wall,—a fine back-ground for them. The young vegetable and flower seedlings in small boxes occupy the main space around the walls. Each box is neatly labeled, the whole showing with what care and system the skilled gardener goes about his work for both flowers and vegetables. The gardener has been on this estate about twelve years. Col. Wallace has a most inviting and artistically planned cottage for his gardener, making really an ornamental feature on the grounds. It is of cream stucco with a red shingled roof and green blinds at the prettily made little windows. Close by is the large house of the place. This is also of cream stucco with a red tiled roof and ornamental features in the stucco walks. When the season is on and the green lawns are bordered with the usual amount of flowers, there is no prettier or showier place on the Shore.

The Wallaces spend a long season at their cottage, coming early in May, from Boston, last Saturday being the date of their arrival this season. Col. Wallace has been in very good health this winter and has made a few trips to the North Shore to visit his greenhouse and to carry back some of the exquisite blossoms raised on it.

No one welcomes spring any more than the lighthouse keepers along the Shore. Levi B. Clark, the new keeper at Hospital Point, Beverly Cove, who took the place of A. Joseph Herrick last spring, after the latter had served forty-three years on the Point, has some interesting remembrances of the cold winter. His light is arranged so that extreme heat or cold will cause a warning bell to ring. One night was so cold this winter that he was called to the light twice, an unusual thing. The summer visitors can hardly realize the cold surf coming from the icy depths and splashing over the sea-walls around the light. But let us forget it—the little bay is calm and peaceful now, ready for the summer folk.

Alexander Henry Higginson, son of Major and Mrs. Henry L. Higginson, of West Manchester, has recently been commissioned for active service, appointed by the War Department from the Officers' Reserve Corps. He has a rank as captain in the Quartermasters' Corps.

SHEEP were placed upon some of the North Shore estates last spring by the Essex Agricultural college, with the desire that they might become numerous and much sought after through the county. Among some of those taking the sheep were John S. Lawrence, of Topsfield, and E. B. Cole, of Wenham. Sheep have long been raised on the Harold J. Coolidge place at Pride's Crossing. But the curse of sheep-raising, as one gardener says, is the dog—the mongrel, "nobody's dog," always at large. This gardener says that one evening he had just gone into Beverly, not very far from his place, when a telephone call came saying that the dogs were in his sheep lot, and when he arrived home five ewe lambs were gone. Rather discouraging business, with dogs to blame—only mongrels, at that.

Mr. and Mrs. William Stuart Spaulding, of Boston and Pride's Crossing, who have decided to remain in Santa Barbara, Calif., throughout the summer, as reported in these columns some weeks ago, are to be at an estate called "Greenwood," in an ideal situation, opposite Mirimar, which has lately been remodelled and is one of the most desirable places in its vicinity. The lease of their chateau, "La Paz," expires this month. Mrs. Spaulding's relatives, Mrs. Sidney Fairlee and Mrs. John Benham, who have been, since the holidays, at the Potter Hotel, Santa Barbara, left early in the week for Chicago.

Through the courtesy of Lady Chetwynd and Christine Hemmick the proceeds of the patriotic play, "Her Country," given last night at the Park Square theatre, Boston, were donated to the fund for the Woman's Oversea hospital in France. Mrs. Oakes Ames, Mrs. M. Graeme Haughton, Mrs. J. D. Barney and Mrs. Henry E. Russell were some of the North Shore women interested.

At "The Chimneys," the Manchester home of Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane, where the greenhouses were without fire from December to the middle of March, a beautiful climbing rose has grown over a large section of one of the houses and has been weighted down practically with its cluster of delicate cream blossoms—the Gloire de Dijon rose. The flowers came soon after the fires were started to prepare the seedlings and have been the source of much joy to the gardener, who has fears that many of his fine tea roses are frozen, frost and ice still being found on the past hot Monday in the rose terrace around the roots of plants covered deep with leaves.

Y^e Rogers Manse, Ipswich, now open. Famous Lobster, Chicken and Steak Dinners; also a la carte service. Delightful rooms with and without bath. adv.

NOW that spring has really arrived, the attractions of the country begin to assert their sway and gardening seems to be the subject uppermost in the minds of those having an abundance of ground capable of cultivation.

Not only is paterfamilias ordering more extensive gardens this season, but the girls are going in for agriculture and are talking crops instead of gowns and the latest mode in hats.

To be sure the attire to be worn when gardening is the subject of some discussion, and clever tailors are devising garments that will not detract from the grace of the workers; but all that is supposed to be a secondary consideration, for the purpose of the girls is to add to the world's store of food and thus do their part to help in the struggle. It is along the line of the many different activities in which society girls have been engaged all winter, only it is a change of locality and a different kind of work, but always with one end in view.—Boston Herald.

"THE BIRCHES," the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Ratchesky in Beverly Cove, has an interesting greenhouse. Quantities of geraniums are seen massed together in a great color scheme of red, pink and orange, without any thought, however, of the gorgeous effect. These will be used later on the lawns. Snapdragons are also in abundance, but the main thing now is the seedlings. Everything is giving way to the young things being produced in boxes inside the house and outside in the hot beds. The hot beds are heated by a hot pipe instead of being made the usual way. Plants thus started are a month in advance of those planted in the ground from seed.

Part of the Ratchesky greenhouse is rented to Ralph W. Ward, the florist of Beverly Cove, who has his main houses near the Beverly Cove school. Quite close to this greenhouse is that of Abraham Koshland, whose estate lies next to the Ratchesky home. The Koshland greenhouse has been painted inside and out this spring and is now showing, besides some flowers, grape vines, peaches, nectarines and strawberries. Berries have been picked the past month.

THE NATIONAL CHILD WELFARE BUREAU has started a national campaign of education in the interests of the children of the land. President Wilson has issued a timely proclamation calling upon all social workers and citizens to direct their attentions to the care of young children. It is planned to have every child weighed and its parents instructed in the best methods for its treatment if sick and its care if well. The movement is a distinct war movement; the deaths of the battlefield make it imperative for the nation to safeguard its young children. There will be an active campaign carried on along the North Shore under the auspices of the Anti-Tuberculosis society; preliminary plans have already been made. It is planned to have a child welfare mass meeting in the Larcom theatre, Beverly, on next Sunday at 5 p. m. The committee in charge of the matter are fortunate in having the service of Dr. Grenfell of Labrador, who will speak. It is also hoped that Mr. Sayre will be able to be present and give an address upon Y. M. C. A. work now being done abroad. Reels of health films will be thrown on the screen. A moving picture educational film will be shown also. Every minister, physician, social worker, teacher, and father and mother, should plan to hear what the speakers have to say. You can help win the war by safeguarding the life of children.

The North Shore in War Work

THE Manchester Red Cross sent 30 complete layettes to the Boston supply station recently. These were for the new babies in northern France and Belgium, who, we are told, are born and wrapped in hay in thousands of cases, for want of even a stitch of clothing. The layettes were made largely in the homes and each contained 38 articles. Mrs. Wm. H. Coolidge, chairman of the Manchester workroom says in her annual report: "Think what it must mean to a mother to open one of these outfits, all in pink or blue with everything ready for the baby."

Mrs. Coolidge received a letter of thanks from the headquarters saying that the layettes were most complete and perfect in every detail.

A layette contains the following articles: 2 outing flannel dresses, 1 crocheted hood and jacket, 3 cotton jackets, 3 muslin jackets, 3 flannel jackets, 1 heavy cloth hood, 2 pairs booties, 2 woolen blankets, 3 flannel binders, 3 undershirts, 12 napkins, and a bag containing old, fine linen, thread, needles, talc powder, soap, face cloth, etc.

The Manchester Red Cross society hopes to enlarge its surgical dressings work this coming year. With the coming of the summer people many new workers will be added to the usual attendance of about 40. The workers are now making the "front line" packets, these being the only dressings made and sterilized in this country and sent direct to the firing line, all others being sent to base hospitals, etc. They contain 1 pad, 2 bias bandages, 4 gauze compresses, 1 applicator and 2 tampons. The contents are wrapped in a special paper, inserted in a heavy cotton bag and enclosed in another paper and sealed, making a neat little packet 6 x 4 in., of which the quota for Manchester is 100. The inside wrapping paper is of French manufacture, made so as to become porous during sterilization and then to close its pores afterwards so as to admit no germs.

In the sewing line pajamas and helpless case shirts are being made.

The school auxiliary is sending in nicely made work each week from the pupils in the public schools, 3 sweaters, 2 helmets, 1 pair wristers and 3 pairs socks having been just received.

water in his pen always, but be sure that he cannot tip it over because dampness makes him odoriferous. Pigs should have a dry place in which to sleep and the pen should be situated so that there is plenty of sun.

The expenses to be considered when about to kill are approximately as follows:

killing and dressing	$3.00
barrel	1.25
smoking of hams @
2c lb., 50 lb.	1.00
2 bags meal	1.00
salt	1.50

Total $16.75

Adding this to your investment of twenty dollars gives you practically thirty-seven dollars. Your investment should yield you about forty percent, which means that your pig should be worth about fifty-two dollars when killed and dressed. This assumes that you purchased a sixteen weeks pig.

(The above paper was written by Mrs. Frank I. Lamasney, and read at the monthly meeting of the Beverly Farms branch of the Beverly Improvement society. At this time when so many persons are desirous of raising their own pork, the article ought to be of interest to the public.—Ed.)

WAR DRAMA FOR RED CROSS BENEFIT

TO BE GIVEN IN MANCHESTER TOWN HALL THE 22D.

A four-act drama of the present great war, which has recently been given two successful presentations at Rockport, will be staged at the Manchester Town hall, Wednesday evening, May 22, by the Sandy Bay Dramatic club. The entire proceeds are to be given by the club to the Manchester branch of the American Red Cross. The club is presenting the drama in various places in the interest of the Red Cross and war relief work, and after their show here they will play in several towns along the Shore.

The play, written by Lieut. Beals McCormack, deals with the great world war, and contains many inspiring patriotic situations. A pretty love story runs through the four acts and the comedy is of a refreshing variety. "Ignatz Schell, the honest Israelite," will keep the audience convulsed while he is on the stage. There are many intensely dramatic situations in which the German kommandant and the pretty daughter of the American consul in France, and a vivacious Miss, deeply in love with her country and the American major, figure prominently.

North Shore Kitchens in War Time

THE average householder, if he is to purchase a pig, should give the matter some thought before purchasing. The average house has practically nothing for a pig, but the garbage, and for this reason a pig should be purchased that can eat it. A pig about 16 weeks old can eat swill and should thrive on it. The cost of a porker of about this age is now about $20. If one keeps a cow or two a suckling pig of about five weeks could be purchased. This little fellow needs milk and meal, and as he grows older a little swill, so that he will learn to like it. A pig of this age costs from ten to fourteen dollars. If you do not keep a cow it is most profitable to purchase a sixteen weeks pig.

A sixteen weeks pig will eat garbage and should gain a pound a day on it up to the time it is fattened. If your porker does not gain it means either that he has not enough to eat or that he is not healthy. If you are certain that he has plenty to eat then make sure that he is healthy. A young pig's teeth should be watched because they are likely to have what is known as black tooth, which is a tooth out of line and interferes with the proper mastication of his food. It is just as essential that a pig's food be properly masticated as it is for us.

In order to make your investment profitable you cannot buy much grain for piggie. His diet should be garbage until you begin to fatten him and then give him a couple of bags of meal. Corn, bran, and meal are nearly five dollars a bag, and to feed many bags would mean a great increase in cost. If you do not use the water in which your vegetables have been cooked for soups give it to piggie because it contains nearly all of the vegetable mineral salts, which are so necessary for man and beast. These salts are highly soluble in water and therefore are lost unless the water is used. The salts lie close to the skin or outer covering of vegetables. Piggie must build bone rapidly and he needs these salts to do it. Be sure that there is plenty of water for your pig. He needs a large amount. Keep

MANCHESTER RAISES MORE THAN $400,000 IN THIRD LIBERTY LOAN.

Manchester maintained its splendid record last week when it went ahead by leaps and bounds the last few days of the campaign for the third Liberty Loan, and swelled the amount of subscriptions to more than $400,000. The minimum amount supposed to be raised as Manchester's quota was $383,600, and until the last day or two it looked like a big task to get anywhere near that amount, but in the final clean-up, with the timely aid of a Women's committee, of which Mrs. W. H. Coolidge was chairman, the day was saved and Manchester went flying across the line Saturday night as the campaign came to an end, with about $20,000 in excess of the allotted quota.

The exact amount and the number of people subscribing, cannot be stated at this time. As late as four o'clock yesterday afternoon, Treasurer Purington, of the Manchester Trust Co., was not able to say definitely what had been subscribed. He is awaiting verification of the figures from headquarters, and thus far only the larger cities had been announced.

WOMAN'S COMMITTEE CARRIED MANCHESTER "OVER THE TOP."

The Manchester Woman's committee for the third Liberty Loan, organized less than a week before the close of the campaign, brought Manchester over the top nobly. By personal work and the sending of letters the committee is credited with having raised $45,000 of the quota. Mrs. Wm. H. Coolidge, the efficient chairman, and her band of workers deserve much praise for their splendid work, done in such a short time. Mrs. Coolidge was assisted by Mrs. Geo. S. Sinnicks, Mrs. F. J. Merrill, Mrs. D. T. Beaton, Mrs. H. L. Roberts, Mrs. William Follett, Mrs. Edward S. Knight, Mrs. William Hawksworth, Mrs. Benj. L. Bullock, Mrs. Frank A. Rowe, Mrs. Wm. J. Johnson and Miss Anne Clarke.

In nearly all towns in the state such a committee existed, working in harmony with the Committee of National Defence. Manchester's committee was formed after a talk had been given on the subject in the Red Cross workroom by a speaker from Gloucester. Mrs. Barrett Wendell is chairman of the New England Woman's Liberty Loan committee and has been assisted by Mrs. Wendell, Jr., of Beverly Farms.

KILLED IN ACTION

THIRD MANCHESTER BOY TO LAY DOWN HIS LIFE IN THIS CONFLICT.

"We deeply regret to inform you that Private Michael J. Coughlin, engineer, is officially reported as killed in action, April 28."

This is the wording of the telegram received in Manchester, Tuesday, by the family of Michael J. Coughlin, the third Manchester young man to lay down his life in this world war.

Private Coughlin was the son of James Coughlin, of 15 Norwood ave., Manchester. He leaves besides a father, five sisters. He was born in Manchester on April 20, 1889. He had always lived here, until a year or so ago, when he went to the Pacific coast to work at his trade as carpenter, which trade he learned with Roberts & Hoare.

He enlisted as a private in Co. A, 1st Engineers, at Vallejo, Cal., being listed as a carpenter. He trained at Camp Lewis, Washington. He was transferred to New York for a short while before sailing last November. His five sisters visited him there prior to his departure.

Requiem mass will be celebrated at the Sacred Heart church, Saturday morning, with Rev. Fr. Mullin as celebrant, Fr. Downey, of Beverly Farms, as deacon, and Fr. Keenan, of Gloucester, as sub-deacon.

MISS SPRINGTIME BORROWED some weather from summer this week just to draw ye city dwellers out to the North Shore. If you could see the soft green creeping over the old brown trees, the rollicking robins on your velvety lawns, and hear them singing these bright spring mornings, you would hasten to draw down the blinds of those stuffy town houses and hie away to the North Shore. In Florida you drank at the "Fountains of Youth" this winter, but where can you get the elixir of life as in the air of the North Shore?

THE NEW ENGLAND DEAF MUTE INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL has just completed another year of service. Upon its board of directors are many well-known North Shore people. The school is conducted along industrial lines and aids deaf mutes to meet the demands of life. The school is famous all over the United States for its efficiency in meeting a very hard educational task. The expenditures of the school are modest considering the large amount of work that is accomplished. The list of contributors reads like a North Shore directory. The work deserves the success that it has attained and the funds placed at its disposal are being economically expended.

A NATION-WIDE CAMPAIGN has been started as an emergency war measure to save the lives of the children of America. The terrible waste of infant life in a year is appalling. Dr. Grenfel, of Labrador, stated at the North Shore meeting held last Sunday in the interest of this national campaign, that seated side by side, holding hands, children who died in one year in the United States would make a row from Beverly to Boston and back and then back again to Boston. That number of Germans in America would arouse us and yet germs are doing as much harm in America unchecked. One way to win the war is to educate the parents of young children and to make America a better place for children to live in. The national Child Welfare work has but just begun and every social agency will cooperate.

LABOR CONDITIONS along the North Shore have never been more embarrassing because of the war conditions. It is nearly impossible to engage enough men to care for all of the laboring work which must be done. In the past this work has been done in no small measure by Italian workmen and usually by men now of draft age. When Italy entered the war there was an exodus of Italians for their homeland to serve in the old country. Those who have remained have had opportunities never possible before and the prices demanded for service have been constantly increasing. Recently three men of draft age applied to an employer for work, ordinary labor, and were assured of work at $3.00 per day. The work was refused because the price was not $3.50 per day and hire by the week to eliminate the loss of time. The owners of estates, who are able to have their work completed this year at reasonable labor prices, will be fortunate.

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS SOCIETY now has the right of way with the giving public for the week beginning May 20 and ending May 27. This is the second drive which has been made for Red Cross funds. The Red Cross serves the American people in an unique way, and every penny of the $100,000,000 called for should be raised. The expenditures of the first fund have already proven the worth of the great work which must be done. Relief work has been carried on in France to the extent of $30,000,000; Belgium, $2,000,000; Russia, over $1,000,000; Roumania, $2,000,000; Italy, $3,500,000; Serbia, $800,000; Great Britain, nearly $2,000,000; and in other foreign countries, $3,500,000. Besides this, the Red Cross has paid the equipment and expenses of volunteer workers, and in the United States cared for the United States army base hospitals, navy base hospitals, medical and hospital work, sanitary service, camp service, etc. With all of these departments of work carefully and efficiently conducted the Red Cross is worthy of all the funds that the American people can place at its disposal. It is now time to plan your expenditures. Every village and city will organize for the campaign and every one will have an opportunity to do his part.

THE FUEL QUESTION LOOMS LARGE and there are indications that there will be a shortage of coal next winter. The Government is trying to avert serious conditions by careful planning now. A request has gone out that every one should conserve all the coal that can be saved by discontinuing fires in the heaters and in kitchen ranges where substitutes of wood or gas are available. Every one is urged to fill out a requisition blank for the number of tons needed for the year ending March 31, 1919, and the dealers are instructed to make deliveries of two-thirds of the amounts ordered except that orders of less than six tons may be filled in full. The fuel situation last year indicated the problems that will confront us during the coming year. While the war lasts it will be difficult to supply every one with coal. During the summer when the transportation of coal is easy, every one should cooperate with the authorities in ordering and receiving the delivery of the coal ordered. If every one will endeavor to meet the requests made the dangers of a coal shortage next winter will be lessened materially.

THE SECOND WAR YEAR will bring about a simplification of the graduation activities in our schools and universities this year. Most of the colleges are graduating their classes a month earlier in order to permit the young men to complete their courses and to begin their service for their country. One college, at least, will grant its degree of A. B., because of the war, to students whose records were complete up to the time of their entrance into the navy or army during their senior year. The high schools have responded to the appeals made for the simplification of the programs and the expenditures this year will be very much less than in other years. It is to be hoped that the enforced economies will teach lessons of thrift that will abide. There is no reason for enforced puritanism, but there is no question but what our expenditures in the past have been quite unworthy of the intelligence of a free people.

ANOTHER VERDUN IS BEING FOUGHT on the fields of Picardy. The Germans will pound away incessantly as they did before that famous city of France. The allies are meeting the attack despite the ground that has been given. The situation is very promising, although serious.

THE FUEL ADMINISTRATOR issued a notice that fires should be drawn in furnaces and heaters, but the sun's accommodation was more compelling.

MANY PLACES HAVE ENDEAVORED to economize the time of workers and to eliminate many demands for the war benevolences by establishing a community war chest fund from which a board of directors apportions the money, to the legitimate war benevolences, as the demands are made. The plan has many advantages and communities have sought to save the time of the workers and to systematize the giving of the people. But all things considered, however, the war chest plan will not yield the results expected and furthermore the giving public have no right to expect an immunity bath from giving by one subscription pledge. The exigencies of the war are such that no one can tell how great the demands of the year or month are to be. Furthermore the causes as they arise often call into service different workers with their aim, purposes and spheres of influence. There is much to be gained by raising funds for a special object and permitting the directors of that philanthropy to place the matter effectively before the people. The expense involved in advertising and publicity and management is of course unavoidable, but it is all accumulative. It stimulates giving and develops the habit of giving. The Red Cross should have the right of way next week. Later the Y. M. C. A. should have its opportunity and in turn every legitimate war benevolence. In fact the war chest, instead of being an immunity, means only another fund to give to, so that givers will act their own pleasure when the special appeals are made. The war chest idea is superficial and does not satisfy the demands of the time, however attractive its outward advantages appear.

THERE ARE REASONS why one should be exceedingly careful in these days concerning failures of our American enterprises in connection with the war. There have been errors of judgment, activity and planning, but honorable efforts are being made to carry on the war efficiently. The war must be won and America must win it. Meantime the American people cannot afford to subject themselves to the discouragements that subtle German propaganda can arouse. It is wise that the facts of our failures should be known and that they be remedied; but when the facts are presented in such a way as to cripple the morale of the people harm is being done. Public sentiment must be aroused to service, but there can be no sense in permitting the German propagandist to have a clear field and to have him aided and abetted by loyal American newspapers.

THE FARMERS ARE BEGINNING to plant and plans are being made to scare off the crow from the newly planted fields of corn. Now comes word from the Canadian entomologist, who claims that the farmer has been unwise in his condemnation of the crow; that while he may be a thief on newly ploughed ground he earns his way by a generous margin despite his depredations. A careful study has revealed that the crows have been great helpers, feeding upon hundreds of cut worms, wire worms, white grubs and other small destructive insects that are a care to the farmer. The wise farmer puts up a scarecrow to protect his newly planted ground, but leaves his gun in the barn that the crow may go on with his scavenger work that aids the farmer in his fight with the smaller insects.

THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT cannot contribute funds to the Red Cross society. The public gives all of the money. This is as it should be, for it affords every one an opportunity to help the war in a personal way. The Government can take by taxation all the funds it needs, but the American people may be depended upon to make its gifts voluntarily. The free spirit of great people can never fail.

THE THIRD LIBERTY LOAN is now a matter of history. The nation has not only won a financial victory, but has won a moral victory as well. The German people as well as the autocratic rulers will learn from the over subscription of the loan that the American people are back of this war with their men and their money. Every dollar which America has is available for this war, and the free will activities of the American people may be depended upon to subscribe liberally to every demand which is made upon them. It has been said and with truth that the Liberty loans are investments and not gifts. Yet large subscriptions, even to this investment loan, may mean sacrifice especially to business men who require funds to maintain their business. Many business men and firms have willingly subscribed and taken a sacrifice in actual dollars and cents, hiring money at a larger rate, and sacrificing the difference. So while the capital is conserved by the best security in the world many a subscription has been made which has entailed careful planning and in many cases dollar losses. But Americans know how to give and they are going to back the President, the Administration and the Army with their talents, men and money. America can have the last dollar, and willingly. The loan was a triumph because it demonstrated as will be demonstrated again and again that American patriotism does not end in patriotic demonstrations and flag raising, but expresses itself in giving time, money, service and life for the good of the nation and for the maintenance of its high ideals.

HARVARD HAS ALREADY SURPASSED its glorious record of the Civil War. The announcement has been made that the University has sent a larger percentage of its students into this war than was sent in the eventful years of the Civil War. The patriotic fact is that all of the universities are rallying to the colors with an equal loyalty. There can be no complaint during these hard days that the colleges have failed the nation in the hour of war. The educational institutions of the country have been the very bulwark of the nation's liberty, not alone in the figurative sense, but literally. The college men have rallied to the flag and have fearlessly given their lives for the defence of the country.

THE WARM WEATHER of this week has brought the leaves out on the trees amazingly along the Shore. According to official records made of the opening of the elm buds over a period of years, the season is fully two weeks ahead of last year. This is a sort of record that is being enjoyed after the terrific weather of the winter that is past.

PASTOR INSTALLED

SERVICES HELD AT CONG'L CHURCH, MANCHESTER, TUESDAY.

The installation of Rev. Frederic W. Manning as pastor of the Manchester Cong'l church, took place on Tuesday, the council meeting at four in the afternoon and the installation services occurring in the evening.

Rev. Albert A. Madsen, of Gloucester, scribe of the council, made the invocation; a report of the council was read; Rev. Richard H. Bennett, of Beverly, read the scriptures; Rev. Wm. R. Campbell, D. D., of Boston, preached the installation sermon, followed by Rev. John H. Quint, D. D., of Chelsea, in the installation prayer and the giving of the right hand of fellowship by Rev. Walter W. Campbell, of Rockport. The benediction was pronounced by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Manning.

The music was a special feature of the service. Mr. and Mrs. George Sargent rendered a duet and Mrs. Sargent a solo, while two anthems were rendered by the choir. The hymns chosen were "The Church's One Foundation" and "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord." The installation hymn was composed twenty years ago by Joseph A. Torrey, senior deacon of the church, who wrote it for an installation in Boston at that time. It was as follows:

We bid thee welcome here,
Come as He came,
To bind the broken heart,—
The lost reclaim;
Break thou the bread of life
To hungering souls,
And loose from error's chain
Whom sin controls.

Make thou this house of God
Heaven's gate to be,
And preach to rich and poor
Salvation free;
Bring to the darkened mind
Truth's healing ray;
Point us the path to heaven,
And lead the way.

We will stay up thy hands
And cheer thy heart;
Each in his lot and place
Will bear his part.
So may God's kingdom come,
His will be done,
On earth as in the heavens,
By every one.

The council transacted the usual routine business connected with installing a new pastor, an incident of which is the examination of the candidate on points of theology.

The giving of the right hand of fellowship by Rev. Mr. Campbell, of Rockport, the moderator of the council, was cleverly and impressively done. He and Rev. Mr. Manning were schoolmates at Andover and have kept in close touch ever since.

The installation sermon emphasized the importance of the church as an organization. Rev. Dr. Campbell spoke of the question, "What Will the Church Be After the War," which so many are asking, as foolish. He said something else better be done and thought of than that. He said churches would always have to maintain some form and some symbols to hold them together in an organization representing service, sacrifice and brotherhood. He spoke of the church as peculiar in taking in everybody, while lodges and orders took in members only when such members got to be good for something.

Illustrations explaining the need of organized Christianity were clearly shown by the maple tree, the trunk of which confines and leads the sap to usefulness; the water system in comparison to primitive methods of getting water; and the ocean liner to get across the water, suggestive of the "ocean liner" to heaven.

Great institutions of learning, hospitals and the like can be traced to churches, he said, where men have been interested. He showed that in the homes as well as in the churches some form and conventions were necessary, saying that when one cared not for the spiritual and moral life of the home, things went to smash.

Love, sacrifice and support for the church were urged by the preacher in view of the fact of its greatness in dealing with all kinds of life.

Hymn, "America"

Rev. Mr. Warner's talk was short and in it he made it plain how the people at home can best help the soldier at the front. As a rule the average soldier, he thinks, is ready for whatever is ahead of him. "To keep the home-fires burning" in the spiritual life by supporting and keeping alive all that is good and true in our country; to see that none of its ideals fade; and to search our own lives for any weaknesses that would hinder us from being truly patriotic, were the main points upon which he touched. Being true to our privileges, our institutions, our social and Christian ideals, are the best means of helping the man "over there," he explained; for, if they win "over there," and we are defeated in our national and spiritual life here, he made very plain that we might ask, if it mattered at all. He closed by saying: "Patriotism is the love of country, but if ideals fade, what is country."

WRITTEN 40 YEARS AGO

"WHO'S BEEN KICKING MY DOG AROUND," ASKS DEACON
J. A. TORREY.

In the "As-the-World-Wags" column of the Boston Herald a little while ago appeared the following:

MEARS' CLOCK.

Speaking of clocks, as everybody was recently, did you ever have a bit of versified jingle re-assert itself out of oblivion and go ringing and ringing in your head like Mark Twain's diabolical "Punch in the presence of the passenjare?" A four-line verse from a poem about a clock thus resurrected itself with me; I can't remember another word of the original; but the confounded four lines simply drove me to rebuild the thing. So I did this:

There lived a man named Matthew Mears;
An ancient clock he owned;
And every night, for forty years,
That clock he straightway wound.

And far or near, the daily trust
Most faithfully he kept;
Back home he came, at nightfall,
To wind it, ere he slept.

One day that ancient clock fell ill;
Its wheels refused to budge;
An ancient tinker was called in,
Who chanced that way to trudge.

He poked among its cords and gears,
To see what held its hands;
And then he questioned Matthew Mears,
Who answered his demands.

Then straight the tinker roared again,
And pounded on his thigh,
And choked, and gurgled in his throat,
And laughed as he would die!

"Why, strike me pink!" thus said the tink,
And blew his rosy beak;
"This here old clock's an 8-day clock—
You wind it once a week!"

And here this tragic tale must end,
For Matthew cussed and cussed,
To think of all that useless work—
It seemed as he would bust!

For when he learned that ancient clock
An 8-day clock to be,
A madder man than Matthew Mears
I would not wish to see!

And all his after life was dim
And dull and sad and drear,
Considering all those wasted "winds"—
Three hundred times a year!

Now, one of those verses is the original key-verse, the germ of the crime. Those who know the original will recognize it. What I want to know, as a psychological study, is whether I have caught the general tone faithfully, caught the—well, whatever of motifs or shadings or nuances or afflatus a psychological would consider, in determining the question of quality of the other eight verses. I don't care what Matthew would have done with the new daylight saving time, or with standard time; the only question is, have I told his story so the joints don't show too much? And what WAS the original of the thing anyway? And who was the perpetrator—the perpetrator to peace and quiet.

—W. C. T.

The Herald of Tuesday, Apr. 16, contained the following in reply:

"W. C. T." wrote not long ago that he was haunted by a verse about an eight-day clock. Not remembering the other verses he invented them and asked questions about the original poem and the author. We have received the following letter:

MEARS' CLOCK.

As the World Wags:
There was a man, he had a clock;
His name was Matthew Mears;
Which he wound it regular every night
For almost twenty years.

At length his favorite timepiece proved
An 8-day clock to be,
And a madder man than Mister Mears
You would not wish to see!
"Who's been kicking my dog
aroun'?"

In the Boston Herald and Journal of 6th inst., inquiry is made for the authorship of the above "pome." It was written by the undersigned nearly 40 years ago and has been in circulation ever since. It would appear to have a haunting quality when taken into one's system. "W. C. T." has resurrected it, extended it, and added wings for a new flight! Here is the problem: Did Mears really waste time in his nightly windings?

JOSEPH A. TORREY.

A Rational View.

Where'er one goes, one hears the question
What food to eat, and just how much,
And many an impotent suggestion
The vital problem fails to touch.

Don't think me all too vain, my brothers,
If I should venture to opine
That, after sampling many others,
No method's quite so good as mine.

This is my system—I'll repeat it
To guide your palate when in doubt:
When there is food to eat, I eat it,
And when there's none—I go without.

The Hose and Engine company of the fire department organized Monday evening with the choice of Ellery Rogers as captain, L. W. Carter as lieutenant, and G. E. Hildreth as clerk.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Merrill are going to Camp Upton, N. Y., today, for a brief visit with their son, Sayre Merrill, of the Engineers' Corps, who is to sail very soon for the other side.

Rev. A. G. Warner announced at the Brotherhood meeting last week, that there was reason to believe that the money raised in the war lecture at Horticultural hall, Dec. 28, under the auspices of the Brotherhood, was done under alleged false pretences. Certain charges have been preferred against a party under suspicion by responsible authorities in other places and seem to be sustained. The sum of $165.45 was realized from the lecture. This sum is still in the custody of the Brotherhood. When it is legally certain that this money can be re-appropriated, notice will be given and after due time it is proposed to turn this sum over to the American Red Cross unless there are objections from those who contributed to the sum. Any such objections should be made to William Hodgdon, treasurer of the Brotherhood.

TENDERED RECEPTION

MANCHESTER PEOPLE BID FAREWELL TO REV. A. G. WARNER AT BIG RECEPTION, WEDNESDAY EVENING.

At the Baptist church, Manchester, Wednesday evening, a farewell reception was tendered Rev. Albert G. Warner and Mrs. Warner, who are leaving Manchester next week, after six years' residence here, for Lowell, where Mr. Warner takes up his duties as assistant pastor in the Lowell Baptist church, of 1600 members.

People from all walks of life, and of all creeds, responded to the opportunity to gather at the church Wednesday evening to pay their respects to Mr. Warner and his wife.

From 7.45 to 9 o'clock a reception was held, after which a program was carried out, closing with the serving of refreshments about 10 o'clock.

In the receiving line, in front of the pulpit, were Rev. and Mrs. Warner, Mrs. Helen Willmonton and Deacon Wm. Fleming. Boy Scouts acted as ushers.

Special music was furnished by G. Allyn Brown, organist of Trinity church, Gloucester, and a quartet of young ladies, assisted by a violinist. Following a selection by the quartet, "In May," Mrs. Annie Heath, chairman of the committee having the reception in charge, gave an address of welcome to the people and thanked them for their response and coöperation in making the affair a success. She then introduced Rev. Frederic W. Manning, of the Congregational church, who brought felicitations and greetings and expressed his appreciation of his relations with Mr. Warner, and of the splendid fellowship existing between the two churches. He assured the people of the Baptist church that he was ready in any way he could to render assistance.

He ventured to say that Mr. Warner was not going to a better place than Manchester, for the only better place is heaven. He had lived in Manchester long enough to know that the transition from Manchester to heaven is so small one would hardly know the difference.

Then Rev. John Brainard Wilson, of East Gloucester, was called upon for remarks, followed by Rev. Clarence Strong Pond, of Beverly Farms, a classmate of Mr. Warner at Newton Theological school, and Rev. Dr. Eaton, of Magnolia.

Harry W. Purington, the last speaker of the evening, presented Mr. Warner in behalf of the church, various organizations and the community at large, with a substantial purse of gold. Mr. Warner responded feelingly, after which ice cream and cake were served.

Mr. Warner will preach his last sermon Sunday, before taking up his new work in Lowell.

ROBERT J. MILNE.

The sudden death of Robert J. Milne, at his home on Pine street, Manchester, last Saturday morning, after only a day's illness, was a sad blow to his family and a great many friends and acquaintances, who had seen him on the street as late as two days before his decease.

Mr. Milne was a native of County Cligo, Ireland. He came to this country six years ago, and practically all of the time since then he had been in Manchester. He is survived by a wife and six children—three by his own marriage and three by Mrs. Milne's previous marriage. The oldest of the children is 15 years, and the youngest three.

A little over a week previous to his death, Mr. Milne had been to the Eye & Ear Infirmary, Boston, for a slight operation alongside the nose to relieve the nasal passage. His death was so sudden, it was thought advisable to have an autopsy performed, and the result of this was the announcement that death resulted from a tumor on the brain.

Mr. Milne was president of Division 20, A. O. H., and vice-president of Fr. Shahan Court, M. C. O. F. He was sexton at the Sacred Heart church.

Besides his wife and six children, there is a brother, in Virginia, a doctor, who is in the service, with the rank of lieutenant.

LECTURE ON POTATOES

AT HORTICULTURAL HALL, MANCHESTER—SOME HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS.

"Potatoes and Their Treatment" was the subject of an interesting lecture last Friday night in the Man-ture last Friday night in Horticultural hall, Manchester, by Professor Earl Jones, department of agronomy, at the Mass. Agricultural college.

The next lecture of the North Shore Horticultural society will occur on May 17, when "Fungus—Edible and Poisonous Varieties" will be discussed. On June 7 will be a talk on "Spraying," and June 21, "Canning" will be given in the afternoon by Mr. Farley, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, as a fitting close to the fine course of lectures that has been enjoyed this winter. The public is always cordially invited to the lectures.

The speaker last Friday evening told a little of the history of the potato and of its growth as a food since the seventeenth century. He said that the cool countries rank first in the production of the potato, and in this country Maine leads all other states, practically, in the potato crop; although the south raises fine tubers, yet their seed is best when it comes from the northern states.

As to soil, he said, to avoid wet, poor soil and choose a light loam soil for potatoes.

For fertilizers, he said that the war had taught that the eight or ten percent of potash used before was unnecessary and that we would never go back to it, but rather use five or six percent. Well-rotted manure and wood ashes, he claimed to be excellent fertilizers, saying that 800 pounds of ashes could be used to the acre.

He illustrated the best mode of cutting the potato for planting (two eyes to a piece weighing about two ounces), and made suggestions as to the planting. If his idea that farmers plant too far apart is taken, they can get 13 to 15 bushels to an acre by planting the rows 30 to 32 inches apart and the hills nine to ten inches apart.

Sprouting and the treatment of the seed with a solution to kill any disease that may be on the peeling were explained, also the mode of cultivation—flat or in ridges—a great deal depending upon the climate and moisture in either case.

The rotation of crops he emphasized as necessary because potato diseases stay in the soil and are ready for the next crop planted. Other vital points to secure a good crop are the selection of good, clean seed, their treatment before planting and care of the vines afterwards to avoid the scab, blight and kindred diseases.

MAGNOLIA

Quite extensive improvements are being made on the "Grandma Foster" place on the Shore road.

The Men's and Women's clubs will be open this season as usual, though the restaurant at the Men's club will be discontinued.

The food problem these days is not an easy one to solve and thus it is not strange that people hesitate to take borders as in former seasons.

Mr. and Mrs. William Waddy, who have been living in Pittsburg, Pa., for some time, have recently returned to their home on Magnolia ave.

The closing of the public schools this week has given the children an opportunity to work in their gardens—a good way for them to be employed these days.

Among the ambitious young women of Magnolia, who are anxious to make the most of their time and opportunity, is Dorothea McGaughy, who is taking a course in telegraphy in Gloucester.

The "Little Army" (the little chaps of this village) recently collected $2.50 for the French relief. Thus even the children are catching the spirit of the times to give and to help those who are less fortunate than themselves.

"The Greatness of Man and the Goodness of God" will be the subject of the pastor's sermon in the Village church next Sunday at 10.45 a. m., and at 7.30 p. m. the people will meet as usual to work for the soldiers' relief.

On May 1st, the "Little Chapel Workers" sent to the American Fund for French Wounded a hamper containing the following articles: 24 surgical shirts, 10 bed jackets, 18 suits of pajamas, 22 pairs of slippers, 18 over dressing socks, 24 crash towels, 24 bath mitts, 2 comfortables, 1 bag, 19 tumbler covers, 5 sweaters, and 12 pairs of socks.

From all appearances it is safe to say that more land in Magnolia will be under cultivation this season than for many years before. Among those who are planning goodly sized gardens are Walter Scott, Oscar P. Story, Jonathan May, Albert West, Fred S. Lycett, Wm. and Edward Symonds, Henry W. Butler, Jr., and Dr. Eaton. Among the young boys who are especially interested in gardening are Masters Junior Burke and Myron Story. Herbert Hoover says: "The whole great problem of winning the war rests largely on the loyalty and sacrifice of the American people in the matter of food."

FIRST OF SUMMER ISSUES OF BREEZE ON MAY 24TH.

The first of the summer issues of the NORTH SHORE BREEZE and Reminder—which is the combined name of the BREEZE-Reminder since the two publications were merged in 1913—will make its appearance on May 24th—two weeks hence. An attractive new cover will greet our readers this year, and the usual array of interesting articles and illustrations will make the issue one to be looked forward to. There will be information as to summer plans, the names of many of those who have leased houses here this year, and a list of many who have engaged apartments at the leading hotels.

As many copies of this issue are to be mailed to prospective visitors to the North Shore as well as to the regular summer residents, the issue will be well worth the consideration of business men and merchants in placing themselves before these people thus early in the season. Our advertising forms will close a week from today—May 17.

The BREEZE is fourteen years old next week—it is an established institution on the North Shore. Have you ever used its columns to advance your own business? Try it this time!

THREE FIRES IN MANCHESTER THIS WEEK.

The fire department was called out Wednesday afternoon to help fight a bad woods fire started between Magnolia and Manchester by a spark from a passing railroad engine. The fire started in the vicinity of the Lucas property, and as a high wind was blowing at the time, it was only a matter of a few minutes before the flames were sweeping on at an amazing pace. Fire Warden Sheahan soon had a crowd of men at work, and Deputy Warden Allen S. Peabody came over from the Dexter farm with a large crowd of men. It was hours before the fire was under control.

On Thursday afternoon sparks from a passing engine set fire to the roof of the building at White's boat yard and in a brief space of time the whole roof was ablaze. The fire department was called and made quick work of extinguishing the fire.

No sooner had the apparatus returned to the station than an alarm was sounded for a fire at Old Neck. A brush fire at the George Wigglesworth estate got beyond control and was burning a fence and rapidly approaching the house. The chemical soon had this under control, too.

GLOBE THEATRE, BOSTON.

There have been plays and photoplays relating to the war that have been shown and have gone their way, but it is safe to say that in all the long list there is none that has such wealth of appeal, that contains so much informative value, that thrills the soul and convicts the mind with the truth revealed as does "Over the Top," the motion picture made from Arthur Guy Empey's book of like title with Mr. Empey pictured in his own role, which is being shown at the Globe theatre, Boston.

MODERN THEATRE, BOSTON.

Again comes one of the startling bills of photoplays that make for added fame to that most distinctive of photoplay houses in New England, the Modern theatre, Boston's photo theatre de luxe, when all through next week there will be shown the new Mary Pickford photoplay, a screening of her in the title role of "M'Liss," Bret Harte's immortal story of the early days in the west.

On the same bill throughout the week will be shown the Japanese actor, Sessue Hayakawa, in his latest photoplay, "The White Man's Law," a thrilling story with locale in West Africa.

LIBRARY NOTES MANCHESTER PUBLIC LIBRARY

"We call those poets who are first to mark
Through earth's dull mist the coming of the dawn,—
Who see in twilight's gloom the first pale spark,
While others only note that day is gone."

IN the New York Times Book Review, of April 14, 1918, there was a very informing and instructive editorial on "The Season's Books." This review called attention to some interesting facts about the spring publications. In recent years fiction has always headed the list in the number of books issued. This spring fiction had to step down to second place, giving way to books on the war. In the early years of the world conflagration a great many books on the war were published, but since the winter of 1916 there has been a decrease in war literature.

This has all been changed by the entrance of the United States into the war. In the beginning of the war, works having to do with the history of the countries engaged in the conflict were most in evidence, but now the personal element is largely in the ascendant, and such works as "Private Peat," "Over the Top," and "A Yankee in the Trenches," are in great demand. Three hundred and twenty-one books on the war have been published this spring and only 257 works of fiction.

The fact, however, that of the 321 war books 36 are fiction somewhat lessens the difference between the two classes of literature.

Another curious discovery made, was, that books of a religious nature came next to fiction on the list—there being some 110 books on religion. The writer of the editorial referred to above gives the war the credit for this increased interest in religious work and remarks that "it would be instructive indeed to analyze the season's 321 war books with a view to discovering how many of them have a strong religious bias." In looking over many books on the war I was much impressed by the religious sentiment running through them.

All those who wrote of their experience on the battlefield had nothing but the highest praise for the chaplains who did so much to help the boys in every way. Read "The Soul of a Soldier;" it will give you a new view of the fighting man.

Another peculiar effect of the war is the large increase of "business books." One publisher, who in 17 years published only 125 works having to do with business, has 40 books on this subject in this spring's catalog.

In going over the works of fiction published this spring, it was found that novels having to do with romance and adventure predominated largely over those having the emphasis on realism. There were a large number of mystery stories, while the psychological and problem novel—so popular a few years ago—had almost disappeared. There were many works on poetry and drama; more in poetry than in drama.

Some 30 years ago, while in college, I was much impressed by a statement made by our professor of Latin. He said, "you can never become a man unless you learn to like poetry." That was putting it strongly to say the least; however, I think it is no exaggeration to state that to go through life without a knowledge of poetry we would miss much that is best in literature. I wish to bring to your notice some works of poetry and verse that have recently been added to the Manchester library:

"Anthology of Magazine Verse for 1917," by William Stanley Braithwaite.

Mr. Braithwaite is a negro and is an honor to his race. Only this last week he was awarded the Spingarn Medal, which is offered to the negro accomplishing the most notable achievement of his race during the year. The author since 1913, has given in each year an anthology of magazine verse. Few of us realize how much poetry is published here in America. There are eight or ten magazines given up almost exclusively to poetry and its criticism. About 50 percent of the poetry written in this country is first seen in the magazines.

This year's anthology contains some 260 pages of poetry. The best poetry appearing in the magazines may be found here. At the back of the volume are a number of helpful indexes. A few hours spent with this book will do much to enlarge your poetical horizon.

"The Oxford Book of English Verse, 1250-1900," Chosen and Edited by Arthur Quiller Couch.

The Oxford University Press, a few years ago, begun to issue anthologies of verse. So far, they have them in French, German, Italian, Spanish and English. The author is a talented Englishman, who has written a number of novels under the non de plume of "Q." He is professor of English literature in Cambridge University, England. In this work the selections are arranged in chronological order. In looking over this work you will recognize many a poem that you have not read for a very long time and in some cases it will be like renewing acquaintance with an old friend. Take this book out and enjoy a few hours uplift by gleaning from this great treasury of English thought.

"Just Folks," by Edgar A. Guest.

I wonder how many who take the Boston Herald read the poem that may be found each morning under "Just Folks!" If you do not you are missing something worth while. The writer is on the editorial staff of a western paper. These verses are now to be seen in many papers throughout the country. They are not great poems and probably have no permanent value, but they have the human touch about them that makes them very helpful. They contain much homely philosophy. Here are a few lines from his poem, "Sacrifice," which are very appropriate to these times:

"Who gives but what he'll never miss Will never know what giving is."

He'll win few praises from his Lord
Who does but what he can afford.

The widow's mite to heaven went Because real sacrifice it meant."

"To Mother; An Anthology of Mother Verse," with an introduction by Kate Douglas Wiggin.

Much that is beautiful, has been written about mothers and motherhood, but these adoring tributes are scattered throughout our literature. In this beautiful little volume the best of these have been brought together. The reading of these poems cannot but inspire in us a greater love for the name of "mother."

The Collected Poems of Rupert Brooke.

Rupert Brooke was a young English poet of great promise, whose brilliant career was cut short by this cruel war. He joined the navy and was in the Dardanelles expedition. He died from blood poisoning on a French hospital ship. He was buried in the island of Scyros.

This collection of poems has an introduction by the American poet, Geo. Edward Woodbury, of Beverly.

"Rhymes of a Red Cross Man," by Robert W. Service.

The author is an American poet. He wrote "The Ballad of Cheekako," and "Rhymes of a Rolling Stone." The book is dedicated to his brother, who was in the Canadian infantry and was killed in action in 1916. He was at the front doing Red Cross work and some of the rhymes relate his personal experiences.

Every one is worth reading. Here you have humor and pathos and ever abundant faith as expressed in the last two lines of his book: "Have faith! Fight on! Amid the battle hell Love triumphs, Freedom beckons, all is well."

"Rookie Rhymes," by The Men of the 1st and 2d Provisional Training Regiments, Plattsburg, New York, May 15—August 15, 1917.

The humorous illustrations enhance the value of the rhymes. They were written by the men at Plattsburg and are a credit to the men. The amusing side of the soldier's life while in training is well portrayed, both in rhyme and cartoon.

"In the Day of Battle—Poems of the Great War," Selected by Carrie Ellen Holman.

Several anthologies of war poetry have been written the past three years. The poems in "The Day of Battle" were selected by Carrie Ellen Holman, of Summerside, Prince Edward Island, and have a foreword by Miss Susan Cameron, Royal Victoria College, McGill University. Some of the best of the war poetry may be found in this little book. Poems like "In Flanders Fields," "Pro Patria," "The Mouth Organ," "The Ballad of the Iron Cross," and "The Lad Out There," will well repay the time spent in reading them.

"The Melody of Earth; an Anthology of Garden and Nature Poems from Present-Day Poets;"
Selected by Mrs. Waldo Richards.

We have heard a good deal about Mother Earth lately, especially about its practical use. In "The Melody of Earth" the aesthetic side of the subject is treated. You will find much that will interest you, and lovers of nature and gardens will find in it a veritable treasure-house of beautiful thoughts, that will go far to prove that "gardens have in the poets their best interpreters."

And herein lies the reason. Because of its peculiar construction, both as to road bed and locomotives, the proper operation of this unusual railroad requires specially trained men. To handle business safely, and there has never been an accident to a passenger since the road was opened in 1869, at least 30 men are regularly employed during the summer season. Of the 30 required for operation but three are available. All the others have entered the service of their country or have sought some other form of employment during the winter season and cannot be located for the coming summer season.

Facing this situation the men who have the handling of the mountain railroad in charge have reluctantly concluded it is best not to try to open the road this season, and the situation will in all probability continue for the duration of the war. If one has ever ridden on the mountain the answer is not far to seek. The peculiar construction of the locomotives and the extraordinary grades on the line are factors that cannot be met by anything in the training of the locomotive engineer who runs the standard type of engine such as pulls our trains as we see them daily.

COPLEY THEATRE, BOSTON.

Multitudes have seen "Charley's Aunt," and these same multitudes want to see it again, as well as other multitudes who have heard all about its hilarious scenes and its genuine comic characters. Its record at the Copley theatre during the past two weeks has been one of crowded houses, and its third week will begin on Monday in answer to the imperative popular demand.

No other modern play has had the popularity of "Charley's Aunt," and as acted at the Copley by the Henry Jewett Players its great success is repeating itself. It has been acted all over the world, in many languages. Millions of people have laughed at its ingenious and mirth-provoking episodes, and millions have enjoyed its story of the three Oxford students who persuaded their chum to masquerade in the feminine garments of the aunt of one of them. There is not a dull moment in the play, nor a dull character. It was made for laughter, and it receives its full reward wherever and whenever it is acted.

Germany expects to collect two billion dollars from Roumania. This is the first time Roumania ever suspected she had that much money.—Washington Star.

STUDY OF THE GREAT WAR

LATEST PAMPHLET ISSUED BY THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC INFORMATION
GIVES QUOTATIONS.

"Before June 28, 1914, Germany willed, if not war, at least another trial of diplomatic strength in which the threat of war should enter as a decisive factor." Such is the conclusion to which Professor Samuel B. Harding, of Indiana University, comes in the third chapter of his ninety-six page pamphlet entitled "The Study of the Great War," just issued by the Committee on Public Information, and distributed free upon application to 10 Jackson Place, Washington, D. C.

The fact that in 1913, before the murder of the Archduke Franz Ferdinand on the fateful 28th of June, 1914, Austria notified Italy that she proposed then to attack Serbia, is one bit of evidence relied upon by Professor Harding. Also a secret military report of the German army which fell into the possession of the French government shows that Germany was making extraordinary preparation in 1913 for an immediate war. In an interview with King Albert of Belgium in November of the same year, the German Kaiser gave the impression that war with France was certain, and sought to win Belgium to Germany's side. Various practical measures looking to war were also taken before the Sarajevo murders. The military laws of 1911, 1912 and 1913 greatly increased the German army. The reconstruction of the Kiel canal was hurried to completion early in 1914. Steps were taken to stir up revolt in South Africa and in British India. Secret coaling orders dated June 14, 1914, two weeks before the assassinations, were issued to the German cruiser Eber at Cape Town, which contemplated an immediate outbreak of war.

There is much evidence, too, relating to accumulation of war materials, the transfer of bank balances, etc., and a circular dated June 9, 1914, is cited, ordering all owners of factories to open the mobilization envelopes in their possession.

Finally, the evidence is presented showing that a secret conference of German and Austrian generals and officials was held at Potsdam, near Berlin, on July 5, 1914, and that it was at this council that the actual steps leading up to the war were agreed upon.

THE DEMANDS OF THE WAR COMPEL
THE CLOSING OF MT. WASHINGTON RAILWAY.

A bit of silent testimony that will serve to remind the summer visitor to New England of the fact that we are at war will be the absence of trains up and down Mt. Washington. For the unique little railroad that has carried so many thousands of tourists safely to the highest point of land in New England finds itself unable to operate during the coming summer.

TO DISCONTINUE FOG BELL AT BAKER'S—NOT THE WHISTLE.

John A. Bagley, chairman of the Maritime Affairs committee of the Salem Chamber of Commerce, has been advised by the inspector of the United States bureau of lighthouses and other aids to safe navigation, that about May 15, the auxiliary fog bell at Baker's Island station will be discontinued.

Some time ago the Maritime Affairs committee of the Chamber, and Harbormaster Capt. William G. Peabody agreed, after consulting maritime interests, that the auxiliary fog bell might well be discontinued as the fog horn on Baker's Island installed a few years ago now gives mariners warning of approaching danger for a greater distance than the auxiliary fog bell.

Two out-state monument dealers chanced to meet on the rear platform of a street car and they were soon talking shop. After they had discussed designs and inscriptions for several blocks, one of the dealers happened to notice that a negro passenger was listening to the conversation with apparent interest.

Turning to the negro, the dealer asked:

"You seem to be interested in tombstones, what do you want on your grave?"

"Say, boss," replied the negro, "I don't want none of them stone-markers. When I die I want 'em to plant a watermelon vine on my grave and then let the glorious juice soak through."—Indianapolis News.

Some negroes were discussing the death of a small ducky.

The cause of the disaster was clear enough to one of the men.

"De po chile died frum eatin' too much watah-million," he explained.

One of the others looked his doubts.

"Huh," he grunted scornfully, "dar ain't no such thing as too much watah-million."

SOCIETY NOTES

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT S. BRADLEY, of Pride's Crossing and 411 Commonwealth ave., Boston, have announced the engagement of their youngest daughter, Frances, to Lieut. Talbot C. Chase, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Coggeshall Chase, of Milton. Miss Bradley is a member of the Vincent club and of the 1914-'15 Sewing circle, and has been identified with the war work of the Y. W. C. A. Her sisters are Mrs. Roger W. Cutler (Leslie Bradley) and Miss Rosamond Bradley. Among the débutantes of Miss Bradley's year were Mrs. Frank Wigglesworth (Isabella Councilman), Miss Jane Peters, Miss Louise Inches, Mrs. Cornelius C. Felton (Marie Agassiz), Mrs. Alexander Winsor (Hope Bancroft), Mrs. Junius Morgan (Louise Converse), Mrs. Jonathan Stone Raymond (Pauline Pollard), Miss Elizabeth McC. Bennett, Mrs. Joseph Rochemont Hamlen (Martha Peabody), Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr. (Phyllis Sears), Miss Ray Slater. Lieut. Chase was graduated from Harvard with the class of 1913, and is now with the Ammunition Train at Camp Devens. No date is set for the wedding.

Miss Bradley was one of the bridesmaids at the wedding of Mr. Chase's sister, Miss Mary Andrews Chase, and Lieut. Edward McKittrick, U. S. N., which took place in Mattapan, last Saturday. She has always been active in all of the philanthropic affairs in North Shore society in which she has taken a prominent part since her début. The Bradley home at Pride's is one of the most beautiful places on the Shore and in the past two years has been opened for many public war meetings of importance.

One of the North Shore young men in active service is Charles L. Ward, Harvard 1917, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Ward, of Brookline and Manchester. He has a commission as lieutenant, and was with the 301st Infantry at Camp Devens from last September until March, when he was detailed to the Military School of Aeronautics at Austin, Texas.

The North Shore is represented in the coming war fund drive in Boston's Back Bay district. On the executive committee with Mrs. George R. Fearing, Jr., is Miss Pauline Fenno, and among the team captains are Mrs. F. L. Higginson, Jr., Mrs. Wm. H. Dewart, Mrs. Alfred Codman and Mrs. Philip Stockton.

Miss Eleonora R. Sears, of the Beverly Farms colony, attended the annual indoor horse show in Philadelphia last week, when she was the week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Widener, coming from Washington, where she had been visiting Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick T. Jackson, of Boston, are spending a month at Old Point Comfort, Va., before coming to their Pride's Crossing home on Hale st.

Mrs. George S. Patten, Jr. (Beatrice Ayer) and two little daughters, will spend the summer with her sister, Mrs. William Madison Wood, at Pride's Crossing.

Preston Gibson, a former summer resident of the North Shore, has written a war book called "Battering the Boche," based largely, no doubt, on his personal experiences as an ambulance driver in France. He saw fierce fighting before San Quentin and along the Aisne. His notes convey the spirit of action.

S. V. R. CROSBY and his daughter, Miss Katherine, of Boston, will come to "Apple Trees," West Manchester, next Friday. It is uncertain when Mrs. Crosby will return from abroad, where she is engaged in war work; also the son, Henry Grew Crosby, who is an ambulance driver. Miss Crosby is the assistant secretary of the North Shore girls' garden club that is gardening on the Dudley Pickman estate at Beverly Cove. "Apple Trees" is going to have its war garden again out in the orchard, where the trees are now bursting into a rosy glow. Potatoes will again be planted and vegetables will take the place of flowers, although there will be a few to brighten up with. A walk through the beautiful grounds shows many interesting spring sights. One cannot help but think that families miss a great deal of the beauty of the Shore by not seeing the opening of their gardens and the budding of the trees. Near the little formal garden, fountain centered and surrounded by a low stone wall surmounted by a white picket fence, is a long border of spring flowers growing luxuriantly in the tall grass. The garden proper is filled with tulips, while dandelions—the largest and most brilliant gold—seem to be everywhere, especially in the orchard near the garden. The fruit gardens and hot beds, containing thriving vegetables all speak of the fascinating work of a gardener.

Charles W. Ward and family, of 67 Colchester st., Brookline, who have been leasing their summer cottage, "Pine Ledge," at Old Neck, Manchester, the last few years, have gone to their farm in Andover, where they will spend a long season again.

The Women's Municipal League, of Boston, has gratefully acknowledged the many checks sent in to Mrs. Robert S. Bradley to help out the $5000 fund for war work. Among North Shore contributors are Samuel Carr, Mrs. Godfrey L. Cabot, Mrs. R. S. Russell, Mrs. W. B. Thomas and Mrs. Bayard Warren.

Costello C. Converse and family have closed their Boston residence, 348 Beacon st., and are at their spring and fall home, 2 Main st., Malden. They will spend the summer, as usual, at their attractive seashore place on Magnolia Point, overlooking the bay.

Frequenters of Dana's beach (private), Manchester, say that the sand gives forth a musical sound when walked over the same as on Old Neck or Singing beach.

No good deed, no genuine sacrifice is ever wasted. If there be good in it God will use it for his own holy purposes, and whatever of ignorance or weakness or mistake was mingled with it will drop away as the withered sepals drop away when the full flower has blown.—FREDERIC W. FARRAR.

AT the William Lowell Putnam place on Smith's Point, Manchester, is a pond lying in a secluded spot by the roadside just opposite Lobster Cove. The beautiful shrubbery and the tall trees with their tangle of undergrowth make this one of the most delightful haunts for birds in Manchester. Last Saturday morning, between the hours of ten and twelve, one of Manchester's bird students saw the following birds: Robins, song-sparrow, chipping-sparrow, white-throated sparrow, purple finch, flicker, downy woodpecker, catbird, red-winged blackbird, grackles, cowbird, yellow warbler, black-throated green warbler, black and white warbler, Parula warbler, redstart, goldfinch, chebec, tree swallow, chickadee and spotted sandpiper.

A bulletin from Washington has this to say about birds and their nests:

"Birds may be gathered about us in all seasons of the year with ease and certainty merely by offering what they desire. In winter they are often pushed for food, and if we supply this need they will report daily at the lunch counter and help to relieve the tedium of our indoor life. In summer they care less for food provided by their human friends, and other means must be sought to attract them about the home. They appreciate fresh water for bathing and drinking. A shallow pool of varying depth, if only a foot across, becomes on hot days a center of attraction for all the birds in the vicinity, and it may be made with little effort and material; only a small amount of cement is required, or, if that be lacking, a pan with stones in it set in the ground will be equally serviceable. Trees, shrubs, and vines bearing fruit relished by birds are great attractions in their season.

"Birds are desirable about premises not only on account of their beauty and song, but because of their economic worth. They are especially useful as insect destroyers during the breeding period, when they have to work early and late to obtain sufficient food for their nestlings, and their movements at this time are more interesting than during any other season. There is, therefore, a double purpose in offering them special nesting facilities. If mud is available, swallows, robins, and phœbes will found and wall their nests with it. If we put out feathers, bits of wool, or twine, a dozen different kinds of birds will make use of them. If we furnish safe retreats in which they can rear their young comfortably, most of them will be occupied. In fact no attraction for summer birds is more effectual than a series of houses suited to the needs and habits of the various kinds of house birds."

But to him who nobly bears,
Is the victor's garland sure.*

MARBLEHEAD summer cottages and estates are as much in demand as ever, and the indications point to another busy summer in that section of the North Shore. The attractive new summer residence of Wm. T. Aldrich, of Boston, located on Peach's Point, is among the more important rentals of the past week. Mr. Aldrich is soon to go to France to do war-construction work. His estate has been leased for the summer and fall seasons to Henry F. Du Pont, of Wilmington, Del., a Harvard man, class of 1903. Mr. Du Pont married Miss Ruth Wales, of Hyde Park, N. Y. This summer, Mr. Aldrich's family will be with Mrs. Aldrich's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Davenport, of Boston, whose summer estate is next to the Aldrich place at Peach's Point. Mrs. Aldrich was, before her marriage, Miss Dorothea Davenport. Mr. Aldrich is a son of the late United States Senator Nelson W. Aldrich, of Rhode Island.

In the Clifton section of the Marblehead-Swampscott district, William N. Hartshorn, president of the Priscilla Publishing Co., has sold his summer estate to Frank W. Wyman, president of Chandler & Co., Boston. This estate is built on a cliff known as Dyke Rock, a place popular with geologists, and is not far from Gun Rock. The house overhangs the water, and so snugly does the structure fit its chosen location that it gives the appearance of having grown there. The house is one hundred feet long and forty feet wide, with an ell thirty feet in length. It is two and one-half stories high, with a slanting roof spread over a broad piazza. There are twenty rooms in the house, a large hall, spacious living and dining rooms and sun parlor. The property is in the immediate vicinity of the summer residences of Robert W. Williamson and Chas. L. Eaton.

A New York wedding of North Shore interest was the marriage last Saturday of Miss Rosemonde Wyman, daughter of the late Edward Frothingham Wyman, to Ensign Royal Winter Wetherald of the Flying Corps, United States Naval Reserve Force. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Wetherald, of Boston, whose home is at 2 Marlboro st., and who have an attractive summer residence at Beach Bluff, on the North Shore. The marriage took place late Saturday afternoon in the chantry of St. Thomas' church, Fifth ave., the rector of which, Rev. E. M. Stires, D. D., was the officiating clergyman.

A RACE WEEK at Marblehead is assured for the Yacht Racing Union of Massachusetts and the famous mid-summer series, dropped last year, is to be revived. At a special meeting of the union, W. L. Carlton, chairman of the regatta committee of the Corinthian Yacht club, announced a schedule which was adopted by the union, as follows: Aug. 7, Eastern Yacht club; Aug. 8, Boston Yacht club; Aug. 9, Eastern Yacht club; Aug. 10, Corinthian Yacht club, these organizations being desirous of helping along the sport by financing events on the above dates.

Medals and pennants will be awarded and the Corinthians may provide an entertainment the evening of August 10.

TOPSFIELD families who remained at their country homes all winter include Mrs. Ernest Pentacost, the Thomas W. Peirces and the James Duncan Phillipses.

At "Gravelly Brook Farm," the home of the John S. Lawrences in Topsfield, the green houses were completely closed this winter, all of the plants having been disposed of in the fall.

Mrs. Benjamin Hodges, of High st., Topsfield, returned from the south last week and has opened her year-round home.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ayer, Jr. (Hilda Rice), are still in Washington, and are uncertain about coming to their home in Topsfield this summer, Mr. Ayer being in government work. The house occupied since their marriage is the old red farm house on the Bradstreet farm, now a part of the T. Emerson Proctor estate. It is on this section that Mr. Proctor built his noted rockery and established an arboretum some time ago.

At "Witch Hill," the beautiful and sightly home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Pierce in Topsfield is one of the largest dairies on the Shore, run for private as well as commercial purposes.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Emery kept their Topsfield home, "White Commons," open for week-end trips from Boston this winter. This is one of the fine old places with gardens opening into the Commons, the center of the town.

IPSWICH.—The James Howe Proctor family came to the Ipswich home last Saturday. Mrs. Proctor has spent much of the winter in Texas, where Mr. Proctor was in Training. He and his son, Tom, are both in service abroad.

Y^e Rogers Manse, Ipswich, now open. Famous Lobster, Chicken and Steak Dinners; also a la carte service. Delightful rooms with and without bath. adv.

HAMILTON.—The Reginald Robbins family spent last week-end at "Lone Tree Farm," their Hamilton home, while Mr. Robbins was home on a furlough. The house is in readiness for Samuel D. Mandell, of Boston, who will occupy it this season. It lies near the home of the latter's son, George S. Mandell, whose family is now at their country home for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Brown, Jr., of Boston, have settled in "Red Top Farm," Hamilton, this week.

Miss Elizabeth Merrill, sister of Mrs. Francis P. Sears (Marie Merrill), will spend the summer with her parents in Seattle. The Searses have returned from the south and are in the Whitman-Hood cottage in Hamilton for another season.

Mrs. Alvin F. Sortwell, of Hamilton, has taken a cottage near Cedarhurst, L. I., for the summer. Mr. Sortwell is in naval service. The Hamilton cottage is rented to Mr. and Mrs. John Heard, of Boston.

Community gardens in Hamilton-Wenham will be on the town park land and on some of the land purchased last season by Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, of Pride's Crossing. Much enthusiasm is being shown by those taking plots, some doubling their apportionments of last season.

SCARCITY of labor is felt by all the Shore gardeners this season. At the estate of Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane, in Manchester, where about ten men were formerly employed, only three were available last week. Often it is hard to get help that is adapted to gardening and the gardeners are making up their minds to be philosophical about it and do just what they can without complaining.

Talk about the patience of Job! If the gardeners who have rock gardens to look after do not exercise quite as much patience with their frail Alpine plants as he did with his tribulations, then patience is not known these days. Mrs. Lane's gardener has a rare little primula that has taken four years to produce the bloom it has. These seeds often take two years to germinate. Rock gardens have a strong fascination for the gardeners as a rule, although they require so much painstaking labor. Many of the rock plants as well as nearly all the grass have been frozen at the Lane home this winter. Results were equally disastrous at the Richard H. Dana home adjoining, where the gardener has already seeded the pretty little formal garden with new grass seed.

Gardeners all along the Shore say that the loss in shrubbery, including roses and other plants, has been terrific this winter.

North Shore Kitchens in War Time

TWELVE happy little girls from the grammar school grades were busy last Wednesday at the Manchester Food Centre cooking a most delightful looking supper for themselves, when the writer wandered in. Here they meet with Miss Bradbury each week for instruction in cooking after school hours. Small tables were set with covers for four. Everything was in readiness for the spread except the muffins and fish at which the cooks took hasty peeps occasionally to see if all was well.

The menu consisted of baked cod fish, baked potatoes, lettuce salad, barley muffins made without any white flour, and cocoa-cornstarch pudding without eggs—all a la Hoover. The girls who make up this class, the youngest ones yet taught at the Centre, include Bernice Semons, Alice Carter, Alice Evans, Ruth Andrews, Alice Flaherty, Katherine Flaherty, Mary Ferriera, Helen Burgess, Dorothy Spry, Elizabeth Norris, Helen Mulvey and Oleda Wood.

The Food Centre began class instruction in cooking shortly before Christmas and will continue the work until the last of May, when all of the classes will be taught canning. Nearly eighty girls have been in the classes, all of which, among the older girls, are closed, the course having been completed. The older girls were taught the principles of cookery, following conservation lines, with the idea of keeping down the cost of living. The younger girls are taking a shorter course along the same lines.

During the winter ten of the Boy Scouts took cooking lessons, dealing mostly with outdoor cookery, such as they could prepare when out camping.

In the midst of all this cookery, surgical dressings were not forgotten and thousands have been made at the Centre on Tuesdays by the Arbella club girls of Manchester.

With the canning season coming on much preparation is being made for it and a new addition is going up on the outside drying and vegetable house.

Some day,—when the war is over—the story of Manchester's Centre will occupy an important place in the history of the town's war activities.

"The women of all the allies are one in this great struggle. Our hopes and our fears, our anxieties and our prayers, our visions and our desolations, are the same.

"Our work is the same task of supporting and sustaining the energies of our men in arms and of our nations at home. All the allied women know more of each other than they ever did before, and this is all to the good.

The task of women in this struggle and in the reconstruction to come after, are great tasks, and the world needs in every country, not only the wisdom and knowledge of its own women, but the strength in them that comes from being one of a great world-wide group and conscious of the unity of all women."

The North Shore in War Work

A RED CROSS mass meeting will be held in the Larcom theatre, Beverly, Sunday, May 19, at 8 p. m., free to all. Dr. Hugh Birkhead will be the speaker.

Dr. Birkhead was sent abroad by the National Red Cross as an inspector, with the idea of speaking for them on his return. He crossed the ocean on a troop ship, and on his arrival in London was asked by the American ambassador to give a month of his time under the direction of the foreign office, speaking in England, on America. He addressed audiences in many of the principal cities. As the guest of the English government he visited the British front and the British fleet and inspected dock yards, munition plants and shipbuilding industries, beside numberless hospitals and works of charity. He went to Buckingham Palace and was received by the King at the time of the presentation of Victoria Crosses and other decorations. While in London he witnessed six air raids.

In France, under the auspices of the Red Cross, he visited the devastated regions, the front line trenches, and went to see the American soldiers in the villages where they were billeted. He had interviews with Ambassador Sharp, General Pershing and President Poincare. He then went to Switzerland to study the national prison problem, and talked with many Germans in regard to their point of view, among them a councillor of the German empire.

"If you love me, weigh me"

THE PRESIDENT of the United States wants every child well and strong. Mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters, see that your little ones are up to the standard. Have your children under five weighed and measured. In Manchester, Mrs. D. T. Beaton is chairman of the committee in charge. Mrs. S. Burt Walbach, of Pride's Crossing, is chairman of the Child Welfare committee in Boston.

Why should we fuss about babies now? This is a question which women may well be asking, for they are busy with surgical dressings and knitting things essential to the comfort of the soldiers. But the peace of mind of the father who is soldiering in France depends on knowing that his helpless children at home are safe. And war conditions affect children in a hundred ways, although American children have escaped the more startling horrors which have darkened the lives of the children of war-ravaged France and Belgium.

The Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor has asked the men and women who are working to win the war not to forget the war-time needs of all of America's children, whether their fathers are fighting for their country in the trenches in France, or here behind the lines. It asks that the protection given all of America's children be increased now, when the foundations of the country's future strength and democracy are being laid, for, "The health of the child is the power of the nation." This war-time work for children is called Children's Year. Its goal is to save the lives of 100,000 children under five years of age during the second year of the war. This means the saving of one-third of the three thousand lives of children under five which are lost every year in the United States. Authorities agree that at least half of these deaths could be prevented if knowledge of the best modern methods of child care and facilities for following out the directions given by skilled specialists were accessible to all children instead of to comparatively few. If America can prevent even part of these deaths she will have demonstrated her ability to get for her children a better chance of life and health.

The great Red Cross drive will be on next week—May 20 to 27. Manchester's quota is $10,000. A committee composed of D. T. Beaton, Dr. R. T. Glendenning and G. A. Knoerr will engineer the work.

Mrs. Wm. H. Coolidge, chairman of the Manchester workroom, spent Wednesday in Boston taking her "exams" in the making of surgical dressings.

The BREEZE will soon begin giving notes on the various workrooms along the Shore, some of which have been running all winter.

LETTERS AND NEWS FROM OUR BOYS IN THE SERVICE

"GO GET 'EM! THEY GOT ME"

The first news direct from the front line trenches, telling of the death of Corporal Frank Amaral, of Manchester, who died from wounds received in action, on the 15th of April, came the last week in a letter written by Sergt. Walter N. Smith, of Manchester, Frank's pal. It was written on the 19th of April, a few days after the death of Corporal Amaral.

The letter was written to Mrs. Virginia Perry, of Manchester, with whom Frank made his home since a little boy. It follows:

*Somewhere in France,
April 19, 1918.*

Dear Mrs. Perry:

I hardly know how to start this letter to you; I know how you feel and you can imagine how I feel. It seems just a custom to say we're grieved. It is more than that: it seems so strange, the fact is I do not realize it. So many things have happened and so many things do happen that I just don't realize it.

The censor forbids us to speak of casualties. It seems as if they would overlook a case of this sort. Anyway I am taking the chance and trust this will reach you.

It is a sad reality; Frank has done all that any man can do and as many men have done. He fought the Huns and lost; but he stuck right there to

"THE AMERICAN FLAG"

DRAMA FOR MANCHESTER RED CROSS
NEXT WEDNESDAY EVENING.

The four-act drama, "The American Flag," a story of the present war, will be given in the Town hall, Manchester, next Wednesday evening. It is to be presented by the Sandy Bay Dramatic club, of Rockport, which has already played it three times to packed houses, for Red Cross benefit and war relief work. The entire net proceeds of next Wednesday's presentation will be given to the Manchester Red Cross.

The play is timely, is full of stirring patriotic situations, fine comedy lines, and has a great deal of dramatic strength. Coming here in Red Cross week makes the Manchester presentation of more interest. The helmet which will be worn by the German kommandant was brought from the front, having been taken from a dead German after the Canadians had captured Vimy Ridge. Seats are now on sale.

his post, true to his comrades and true to his country until wounded.

When I went to him he said: "Go get 'em Walt! They got me." I did not get any then, but you can just imagine a German crossing my path.

One consolation we can have is that Frank was game, he stuck, he showed courage and wonderful physical endurance. He was rushed to the hospital as soon as possible; I had all the hopes in the world that he would recover.

It strikes us hard, Mrs. Perry, but this is war. We must expect these things now. It is God's will, and His will must be done.

Another consolation, to me, at least,—in order to get a stretcher for Frank, I had to take it from under a wounded German. Perhaps he suffered, but he didn't hesitate to make us suffer. I think they fixed him up later.

From Frank's pal and your sympathetic friend,

WALTER N. SMITH,

Just now Germany is like the small boy with the buck-saw and the cord of wood. When asked why he was laboring in such mad haste he replied that he wished to get through before his saw got dull.—Chicago Daily News.

BUS LINE TO BE STARTED BETWEEN BEVERLY AND MANCHESTER

Beginning Saturday of this week the bus line operating between Beverly Farms and Beverly will extend its trips to Manchester. For the present it will be operated only during the afternoon and evening, with a scheduled run of 10 minutes between the Farms and Manchester, and 15 minutes between the Farms and Beverly,—or 25 minutes between Manchester and Beverly. During the afternoon the first bus will leave Manchester at 1.30, then at 2.30, 3.30, 4.30, 6.15, 7.15, 8.15, 10 and 11.

The public will be pleased to know of this innovation. It has seemed for a long time that such a line would pay, just as the line between Manchester and Gloucester has proved a paying proposition from the day it was started. Undoubtedly, if the demand is sufficiently large, the schedule will be arranged so as to make the service effective throughout the day, just as it is between Gloucester, Magnolia and Manchester.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE NOTES

All Massachusetts Suffragists and patriots will be interested in a great patriotic mass meeting to be held at the Boston Opera House on Saturday evening, May 25, under the auspices of the Mass. Woman Suffrage association, when Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, chairman of the Women's Committee of National Defence, will be the chief speaker. Dr. Shaw will speak on "The War Work of American Women," and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National Suffrage association, is also expected to speak on suffrage and war work. Patriotic music with a military band will be a feature of the occasion. The general public, both men and women, will be welcome to hear these two famous women, but suffragists should secure tickets of admission for themselves and their friends through the Mass. Woman Suffrage headquarters, at 585 Boylston st., Boston. (These tickets are not for sale.) This mass meeting will culminate the annual convention of the Mass. Suffrage association, and the business sessions will be held at 585 Boylston st., on Friday and Saturday, May 24 and 25, both morning and afternoon. It is hoped that many from the North Shore will attend.

The "Comfort Fund Flag," made by Mrs. Martha Pierce Chute and sold by shares for the benefit of the soldiers at Camp Devens, has been won by the Manchester Equal Suffrage League (share number 624) according to an announcement just received from Frank R. Spalding. The League, having no headquarters, will probably present the beautiful flag to the town of Manchester or to the Boy Scouts, after consulting with the proper persons. The Suffrage League took ten shares in the flag last autumn, and it seems very appropriate that the flag should come back to Manchester, where it was made. The result of the Comfort Fund will be announced by Mr. Spalding.

THE WAR IS BROUGHT QUITE CLOSE to the doors of Manchester people in the death of three of her boys, in France, during the last two or three months. The town, with a population of less than 3000, has sent about a hundred of her boys into the service and it must naturally be expected that all the horrors of such a vast conflict must be brought home to us here as to others. Every American that is killed on the battlefield brings to us more forcefully the fact that we must suffer losses such as we never dreamed of, before the Hun is driven back to his own country. We must steel ourselves to the thought that lives must be sacrificed before the end can be achieved. Were our losses to go unavenged, were we to become disheartened and give up helping, then would our lives not be worth the living. We must strike blow for blow, make loss for loss, destroy or be destroyed. What matters the cost in dollars? The only thing that counts is lives. If we be reduced to direct poverty it is a small thing compared to the loss of human lives. If every dollar we possess is taken from us, the cost will not be too great to avenge the lives that have already been taken.

BRANDING WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST as a man who is attempting to fool the people of this country by publishing articles that are perfectly agreeable to the Kaiser's government and traitorous pro-Germans that are in the country, a party of Grand Army veterans in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., made a protest against the manner in which Hearst's papers handled President Wilson's Memorial Day proclamation. They bought all the papers they could find and burned them in the public square, stating that it was done as a demonstration against the papers run by Hearst for printing the proclamation in such a manner that reference to peace was left in, but allusions to prayers for victory were deleted. "It is a dastardly, cowardly act," said the leader of the party, "and one that should receive the condemnation of every true American."

THE COUPONS ON YOUR second Liberty Loan bonds came due on Wednesday. Cut them off and send them to the Red Cross society. They will receive them for cash and credit them to your name. Lend money to Uncle Sam and then pay the interest for the Samaritan work of the nations.

THERE ARE ONE HUNDRED MILLION people in the United States and if everyone of them should give One Dollar each upon the very first day of the drive the $100,000,000 for the American Red Cross society work will be contributed.

INSTRUCT YOUR GARDENERS to cut every flower available for the Grand Army memorial services. The posts in every town along the Shore will appreciate the interest.

THE PEOPLE ARE FORTUNATE on the North Shore to be able to hear a French officer speak upon the work of the Red Cross society.

THE PRESIDENT HAS ISSUED a proclamation calling upon all of the nation, afield in service, on board ships at sea and at home, to observe Memorial Day this year with a full-hearted and sincere devotion. To the men of the Grand Army of the Republic the day has ever been held sacred in a living memory of the honored dead who have laid down their lives for their country or who have died since the war for the preservation of the national honor and the maintenance of its integrity. To the soldiers and sailors, Memorial Day has been dedicated and to them we are in debt for the maintenance of the solemn rites of the day. With the great war now on, the struggle for the supremacy of the principle of freedom, the war of 1861-65 takes on a new honor. For it is evident, as it has never been before, that the success of the northern arms in that struggle has made it possible for the United States, a free nation, united, to align its forces with the allies against the tyrant of 1918. Memorial Day will ever bear in sacred memory the cause of 1861. It was a fight that "government of the people, for the people and by the people should not perish from the earth." What America won for herself in 1861-65, America is now fighting to maintain and to share with the down-trodden nations of the world. Memorial Day has its roots in the Revolutionary War. It recalls the wars of 1812, 1861-65, 1898 and now, 1914. America will mourn the heroes who have died during this year. For nurses, workmen, peasant, air men, doctors, Red Cross workers, soldiers, sailors, ambulance men, ambassadors and statesmen who have been giving their lives that the government of the people and for the people may be assured for all peoples and that democracy may have its sway. Let those who recognize the responsibilities of this hour remember! Let all of the people unite with the Grand Army of the Republic in their faithful observances of the day. It is altogether fitting that the soldiers and sailors of the great Civil War should be the votaries of the patriotic feeling of the people. The observances in every village and town in the North Shore will have the right of way. Every one should reverently and conscientiously plan to honor the hero dead by a respectful and sympathetic attendance at the exercises. Flowers are needed for decorations. Cut flowers are expensive. Is it too much for the owners of green-houses to spare what they can of the skill of their gardeners? Memorial Day has a new meaning to all this year and it will mean more as the war goes on. America expects every man to do his duty. It is a small duty that all can pay in honoring the dead who have died for the freedom which we are fighting to maintain. Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori!

LIBERTY BONDS OF THE THIRD ISSUE are reaching the market at a substantial reduction, selling now as low as 97.80. It appears that the bonds are being entered in large blocks, not in small occasional lots. Someone is selling. Such selling is unpatriotic. The persons who have sold the bonds may, indeed, have bought the bonds and taken a loss, but the fact remains that the market has been harmed by the sales. It would have been a great deal more patriotic if the owners had held off from buying. New standards of patriotism are to be set. It is patriotic to buy the bonds and it is unpatriotic to sell the bonds of the nation at this time. There are emergencies which present themselves in every business and household which may force owners to place bonds upon the market, as such sales are legitimate, but the purchase of bonds to make a good appearance of patriotism, only to sell the bonds within two weeks, comes very close to being patriotic pharisaism. Liberty bonds bought should be held unless a household or business emergency arises.

THE OPPORTUNITY WHICH WE HAVE all been waiting for has come, that of making a direct contribution to the war work of the nation and of our allies. The Liberty Bond campaigns helped us all to help our country by floating her loan, but when all has been said and the bonds purchased, we have only just made a profitable investment which yields a comparatively high rate of interest and with the best collateral the world knows, a first mortgage upon the United States of America. It was necessary to give Uncle Sam the use of our money for the work of the war. Now comes an opportunity for every one to make a direct and sacrificial gift to his nation. The Red Cross is the only way that many may help. Some are sending their sons, some their daughters for nurse service, others are going themselves, but most every one can make a direct contribution to the Red Cross work in money. You cannot go yourself, but you can send someone to work for you. The Red Cross speaks:

*"I am your pennies and your pounds,
I am your bodies on their rounds
Of pain afar.
I am you, doing what you would
If you were only where you could—
Your avatar."*

Do not wait for someone to visit you and solicit your funds; prepare yourself, make your decision, make the gift a generous one. This hardly needs to be said these days for every one will give generously. Forward your gift to your banker or give to the treasurer of your church and he will forward it to the proper committee.

EVERY ONE HAS SPECULATED concerning the size of our American army. The guesses that have been made, however, have not been established upon any official figures. It would not be wise for a nation at war with such a nation as Germany to announce all plans to minute detail of the number of men in France and in camps, but Americans will think and desire to know, approximately, how many are going afieid for service. Over 1,300,000 men have been called to the draft, including that of May, and are either in America or in France. News advices from Washington say that a "progressive monthly mobilization" will continue during the summer and fall as the camps are enlarged. At this rate there may be, one may speculate, as many as 3,000,000 men called to the colors. There are those who think that the number will reach 5,000,000 men. Whatever the figures are it is not likely that the public will have all the facts. It is evident that the national authorities are giving their direct attention to the problem involved and that the work of recruiting men is being speeded up with all the powers of the republic. The last drive which the Germans made was an unfortunate move for them. It has caused them an enormous loss of men, lead the allies to understand more fully the powers and abilities of their enemy and awakened the American people to the necessity of speeding up their recruiting. More than that, it has acted as a stimulus upon the young men who are rallying with a great spirit to the call of the allies. America has not announced the number of fighting men in the field or to be in the field, but it is certain the work has been speeded up.

IT WILL BE SAID WITH PRIDE when a man's will is probated in the future that he had subscribed generously and had bonds in every issue of the Liberty loans of the nation and that he still held the original transferable low paying interest bonds.

THE SEASON HAS MADE PROGRESS rapidly during the last two weeks. The summer residents have arrived in numbers and new life has come upon the North Shore.

THE HOME FIRES must be kept burning! The war philanthropies must be maintained and are being maintained, but those of the homeland must not lag. A neglect of the home interests would be a colossal and irreparable blunder. No affliction of recent years has appealed to the public more than the suffering of children during the epidemic of infantile paralysis. The work has been followed up by an efficient committee, many of whom are well-known upon our Shore. A children's motor ambulance service is maintained for the little folk who have suffered from the disease. They are taken from their homes to the clinic for treatment and returned to their homes. This loving attention to the children of our cities is a worthy philanthropy that is paying dividends in gratitude from the little folk themselves and from the parents who have suffered mentally as the children have suffered physically. The modern movement to care for the children is based upon a fundamental and unescapable responsibility that the children should be given an opportunity. The appreciation which Mayor Peters has expressed of the work is the feeling of every loyal New Englander: "May I express my appreciation of the wonderful work which the Children's Ambulance Service is doing in Boston to help the little victims of infantile paralysis in our city and its neighboring towns. The work must appeal to every one and I sincerely trust that it will be continued and bring relief to thousands of little helpless ones in our midst." Well said!

THERE IS ONE DEPARTMENT of the work of Washington which ought to be abolished and that is the department of distribution of seed. For years seeds have been distributed as a gratuity and have caused the Congressmen of our country no end of trouble in meeting the demands of their constituency, and have ensued time and expense for the department in Washington. The crisis was reached in this department recently when a Congressman from one of the New England states advertised the seed available and received a large number of names from among his constituency and passed them over to the department with the ludicrous result that seed suited for the northern New England climate was sent south and seed suited for the south of Florida was sent north. The Congressman has been converted to the policy of "no government seed." The Congressmen are subjected to the demands of their constituency and cannot judge of the feeling of those whom they serve, but there is a growing feeling that the method does not contribute in any material way to the benefit of the agricultural interests of the nation and only adds a greater expense of administration. No one will welcome the abolishment of the system more than the Congressmen for the demands add a great deal to the management of the office.

THE AUSTRIAN NAVAL REVOLTS may not prove to be of great moment now, but it is evident that the first break in the enemy lines must come from one of her allies. May it not come through the Austrian navy? Meantime America is not to be deceived. It is not waiting for something to turn up that the war may be won. America is applying herself to the task with a will.

THE GERMAN PROPAGANDISTS have made another stupid blunder. They have written out the lessons of their "kultur" of frightfulness by enumerating their own villages in a circular distributed in Spain. The Germans are condemned out of their own mouths.

*He is a fool who thinks by force or skill
To turn the current of a woman's will.*

Fire Permits

Persons, to whom fire permits have been granted, must remember that such permit does not allow them to have a fire on Sunday. The law specifically says there shall be no brush fires on Sunday. It must also be remembered that a permit for grass fires can be obtained only from the Fire Warden; permits for brush fires do not cover grass fires.

The statutes relative to brush and grass fires are very specific, and people must obtain permits for such fires before starting them.

CHILD RIGHTS

SUBJECT OF ADDRESS BEFORE MANCHESTER PARENT-TEACHER ASS'N

Manchester's Parent-Teacher association met Wednesday night in the Price school hall for the annual election of officers, after which addresses were given by Rev. Clarence Strong Pond and Representative James B. Dow, both of Beverly Farms. A social hour followed.

Officers for the coming year are as follows: Pres., Mrs. Frank L. Floyd; vice-pres., Mrs. Arthur Olson; secretary, Miss Orla Woodbury; treasurer, Oscar Raymond.

Program committee: Supt. John Mackin, Frederic W. Manning, John C. Matthews, Mrs. Wm. Follett, Mrs. H. W. Purington, Miss Lila Goldsmith.

Child Welfare: Mrs. D. T. Beaton, Mrs. Frank A. Rowe, Mrs. Bertram Floyd, Miss Marion Spinney, Dr. R. T. Glendenning, Mrs. Lewis Hooper.

Visiting: Mrs. George Evans, Miss Ellen Long, Miss Nellie Leonard.

Social: Mrs. George Matheson, Mrs. Levi Harvey, Mrs. Edward Neary, Mrs. Dominick Flatley, Mrs. Albert Haraden, Mrs. Frank Ayers, Mrs. John Prest, Mrs. A. H. Reynolds, Mrs. Herbert Shaw, Mrs. Jas. Read, Mrs. Wm. Melvin, Mrs. John H. Baker, Miss Fannie Knight.

After the annual reports were read, Mrs. Beaton made a few remarks touching upon the plans for "baby week" in Manchester, the first week in June. She showed how it is the mother's patriotic duty, as well as for her own personal satisfaction, to take the baby to the stations that will be arranged for their weighing and measuring. Nurses in charge will be Miss Ellen Long, Miss Marion Spinney and Miss Lucy Carroll. If any mother cannot possibly take her baby, a nurse will be sent to the house if the mother will notify the committee. Mrs. Beaton is very enthusiastic over the work and expects that Manchester will show 100% babies, as the infant mortality is comparatively low here.

"Child Rights" was the subject of Rev. Mr. Pond's talk. He spoke of the many "rights" in the world, but declared that child rights were the very newest of all to receive consideration. He spoke as a social worker and a lover of children, saying that the child has been loved because we are human; but the war has brought a great awakening, and now all that has been done in various schools and institutions in an individual way will be organized so that the combined forces will conserve the child. "Baby power today, man power tomorrow."

He said the child's personality should be recognized, and that the child is the greatest thing in the world, evidenced by the fact that so many "human interest" stories are written of him. A proper inheritance, clean blood (not snobbishly proud of your ancestors), but a respect for the child's inalienable right to be well born, and good environment were some of the natural rights stated. He also spoke of the power of human will, in which one can lift himself out of his environment and even his inheritance.

He said parents should care for the child properly. The dull child in school is often the result of coffee and poor food and too much amusement (too many pictures, parties, etc.). While they should be educated as much as possible, keep their childhood free from cares which they cannot help, a happy childhood to be remembered, and have them disciplined so they will know the meaning of the word obey, as the soldiers are learning it now. He said this would make them free and good citizens—obeying in home, school and nation.

Representative James B. Dow spoke of the various changes needed and that have been suggested in the state school system. He paid tribute to Manchester Parent-Teacher association, saying that such gatherings are few around here, owing to conditions in various towns. In a rather humorous way he said that his suggestion regarding teachers was that they should have more life, more initiative, more personality as they used to have, all this having been killed by the "system," in which teachers are machine-like workers. He said that no matter how many changes come (the vocational and industrial side must be decided in this generation), all would be woven around the three R's. He spoke of the Junior High school and its advantages and said that the boy who goes to work early in life should have had a training and education along some particular bent.

Several musical selections were given by Miss Porter, Miss Norris and Robert MacEachern.

Many expressed themselves in regard to the pleasant and profitable year passed, in which speakers of note have brought lively and up-to-date messages to the association.

COMES TO MANCHESTER

FLAG MADE BY MANCHESTER WOMAN
WON BY MANCHESTER EQUAL SUFFRAGE ASSOCIATION

The flag made all by hand by Mrs. Martha Chute in Manchester last summer, and which was on display in Boston all winter, appearing on several occasions at the Copley-Plaza, and other places incident to patriotic gatherings, and on which chances were sold in an effort to raise a fund with which to provide music for the boys at Camp Devens, has at last been awarded to the lucky holder of the ticket drawn, and we are happy to say that the flag returns to Manchester.

In a letter to a friend in Manchester Mrs. Chute writes:

"The flag we are all so much interested in was drawn today by Miss Esther Abbott in the presence of F. R. Spaulding, C. R. Anderson and myself, with a photographer brought in by Mr. Anderson, who made a flash picture of the group just as Miss Abbott put her hand in the basket, which was done up very securely in paper covering every part. Each one shook the basket, which had all the tickets in it. Then Miss Abbott put her hand through the paper cover, breaking a place for herself, and brought out one ticket, which had on it, written in Louie R. Stanwood's hand, 'Manchester Equal Suffrage Association.' We all cheered.

"Mr. Spaulding is to notify the club, which is to get the flag. It is my earnest desire that our club will give the flag to the Boy Scouts of the town, where Mr. Whitehouse bought $10 worth of tickets for them. Please use all your influence to the end that our future soldiers may have the great incentive to look at the flag that gave our present soldiers so much joy.

"Long may it wave and stay in the town where it was 'born!'"

"Sincerely,

"PEREGRINE WHITE'S DESCENDANT."

FAREWELL SERMON

REV. A. G. WARNER LEAVES MANCHESTER FOR LARGE CHURCH IN LOWELL

Rev. Albert G. Warner, who left Manchester this week after a six-year pastorate at the Baptist church, for a large church in Lowell, as assistant pastor, preached his farewell sermon last Sunday morning. His text was: "All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full; unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again." (Eccles. 1:7.) He said in part:

"Through all the world a river runs. Its name is the river of time. Out from eternity it came and to eternity it returns again. Ceaselessly the river flows and on its flood are born the ships of life. Tiny ships at first when the conscience reveals them, yet wondrously strong to embark thereon; for there is no port the child may not hope to make, no stream that he may not safely hope to ride. For the child it is a highway to very great adventure, an adventure to achievement that will sure bring renown. But there are sirens singing on the bank of the river. Voyagers that have passed them by say that they sing of the lust of gold and the lure of pleasure, of selfish indulgence, and alliance, and delay. The child embarks in the ship of life as a trader, and has business all along the way. It is foolish to exchange hope for despair, and faith for unbelief, and it is the part of wisdom to expend lives only for treasures that endure.

"Emerson has said, 'I know no such ensign of a sovereign mind as that tenacity of purpose, which through all changes of companions or of fortune, changes never. Bates no jot of heart or hope, but wearies out of opposition and arrives at its port.' Any voyager of that tenacity of purpose arrives at port. The sternest sense of duty can always save the ship from wreck.

"Ulysses resolved to listen to the sirens sing. He has the ears of his rowers stopped with wax and himself was lashed to the mast and so he heard and passed in safety. Imitating him, many a person binds himself to the ship of life, saying, 'I'll dally with passing delights and listen to the voice of temptation, but my sense of duty and honor will suffice to save from shame.' Better far is the example of the Argonauts, who had Orpheus with them when they sailed past the land where the sirens sang. Better by far is that individual who has Jesus Christ aboard his vessel. Let the sirens sing ever so bewitchingly, their song is powerless to avert the lives of men whose souls are filled with the harmonies of heaven.

"But the joy of the river as it reaches the sea is not comparable with the joy of the soul as the last wave of the river is reached; provided that the soul has retained its youthful treasures of hope and faith. Surely does the power of an endless life keep the soul young. The Christian heroes and martyrs of the past seemingly meet with dire disaster on the river, but their souls left the deep willingly, trustful that the Lord of the river was Lord also of the sea and the realms beyond. Let us trust in Him for faith. In their true perspective not only do the great trials of life assume proper proportion, but the lesser ones fade into insignificance, and that is the greater triumph. If life is for all eternity, let us hasten to put each annoyance into its proper place. It is not for us to stay in some scheduled bend of the river and dote upon our sorrow and grief, but with a brave face toward the future, to sail steadily on to the sea of eternity. This will bring honor and glory in the land beyond.

"Launch your vessel, crowd your canvas, and ere it drops from the margin, follow after it, follow the gleam.' The goal from which the light shines is not a passing dream of poet and mystics and seers. It has become the business of science in our day to corroborate our faith in the unseen. Sir Oliver Lodge is no visionary, but speaking with all the authority of his scientific mind he says, 'Thus may we reach out into the unknown, sure that we shall encounter no clammy horror, but shall receive an assistance and sympathy which it is legitimate to symbolize as a clasp from the hand of Christ himself. Such a faith is the sign of a great soul, and a youthful soul. The fires of life's energy have not been put out by the waters of adversity, or burned out by forbidden pleasures, or covered by the ashes of sorrow. Here is evidence of life still lusty for large endeavor and vigorous with energy for life's deepest needs.'

"There is a great adventure that demands our utmost strength. To waste the hours in idle indulgence, is to prove faithless to our highest aims. To the one whose life has been faithless and whose heart is hopeless, this hour is freighted with destiny, for it is the hour of salvation. When the great ship went aground off Asbury Park some few years ago, having lost its way in the fog, many people went to see the sight. They saw a flotilla of tug boats, puffing and pulling and pushing at stern and bow, until with shrieks of delight from steam whistles and cheers from thronging crowds, the hopeless looking ship became again a thing of quivering life, afloat once more upon the sea. The ship was saved when it could proceed upon the business for which it had been designed.

"Our business is to glorify God and enjoy Him forever. There are many hands stretched out to help us, there are prayers whose influences tug at our heart like strands of steel. The ministry of all Christian activity is directed to help us keep our ship of life afloat upon the river of time, so that we may come in safety to the sea of eternity. Let it mean most of all to you that if you will take faith into your ship of life, you will find your soul revived and restored, and should it be given you to outnumber the years of Tennyson your hope will be as sure as his was when he said, 'Twilight and evening bell, and after that the dark, and may there be no sadness of farewell when I embark. For though from out our borne of time and place the flood may bear me far, I hope to see my pilot face to face, when I have crossed the bar.'

GAVE TALK ON CHILD WELFARE MOVEMENT

Dr. Richard Smith, of Boston and Ipswich, gave a talk on the child welfare movement throughout the world, on Tuesday night at the Manchester Food Centre. Over thirty mothers and the trained nurses in the town were present. Dr. R. T. Glendenning also made a few remarks at the close of the talk. Questions were asked Dr. Smith after the formal talks were given.

There is a movement on foot in Manchester to have the babies of the town weighed and measured in the next few weeks.

Dr. Smith spoke of the baby campaign in the United States, also of what is being done in European countries in regard to the population as affected by war.

The work in the state was explained. The value of saving the lives of babies was brought out and various practical helps given to mothers in regard to their feeding and care. That children do not necessarily have to have the long run of childish diseases was another point emphasized.

Regular drill was held Monday evening at the playgrounds. Part of the company drilled with the bayonet, under Lieut. Corley, while another part took up skirmishing, and still more did guard duty.

Last evening Horticultural hall was crowded for the special picture show to raise funds to help the local company defray the expenses of the shooting range the past winter. The 6-reel film "The Re-Making of a Nation," was the attraction, and being mostly of a military nature, it proved unusually interesting. The boys appeared in the audience in uniform.

A school for officers and non-commissioned officers of the Third Battalion, 15th Regiment, M. S. G., which comprises Companies L and K, of Gloucester, M, of Rockport, I, of Manchester and N, of Ipswich, was held at the state armory, Gloucester, last Sunday, under Major Edward J. Horton, commanding. Some 100 in all were present. The school opened at 9 o'clock in the morning and the officers and non-commissioned officers went to Stage Fort Park, where guard duty was exemplified. Shortly before 1 o'clock, all returned to the armory, where dinner was served under the direction of Mess Sergeant Sylvanus Smith, of Co. L, assisted by mess sergeants and cooks of the other companies. In the afternoon, instruction in the school of the battalion was held in the armory. The members named the gathering "Camp Horton," in honor of Major Horton, who has enlisted in the naval reserves and is about to sever his connection with the State Guard.

Major Edward J. Horton, probation and court officer of the Gloucester District Court and commander of the Third battalion of the State Guard, has enlisted in the Naval Reserve force. Major Horton enlisted at Boston a week ago, has been passed, accepted and sworn in and is now awaiting a call. He went in as a blacksmith and mechanic, a trade at which he was employed before the Spanish War. As captain of one of the State Guard companies in Gloucester last summer, he was promoted to major of the battalion when Major R. S. Lovering, of Manchester, resigned.

In the Service

Notes About Manchester
Boys at Home and Abroad

William Sheehan has been found physically deficient for army service by the medical advisory board.

H. C. Brunnelle and Austin Sargent have enlisted for service with the emergency fleet corporation.

Leon J. Bailey, of Allen ave., has been notified to appear for physical examination at Beverly this Friday afternoon.

Arthur Lodge, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Lodge, Pine street, has been promoted to corporal. He is in the Quartermaster's Dept., Taylor Aviation Field, Montgomery, Ala.

Word has been received the past week that William C. Francis, of Co. E, 101st Engineers, has been promoted to corporal, which Billie says, "means another step upward and a little more money."

The many friends of Archie Cool, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cool, of Allen ave., will be glad to hear of his promotion to the rank of battalion sergeant major. He is now at Doniphou, Okla., with the Headquarters Company of the Field Artillery.

Sergeant Harry Baker wrote from the village where they were billeted during their rest, that he was living in a shack with one of his men. They were doing their own cooking, he said, and working hard continuing the instruction taken in liaison school. They were to move to the front the next night.

Second Lieut. J. Irving Baker is at present with a French captain. They went early in April to the front, where, he writes, he was about as close to the other side as he could get, though in a comfortable place. After two weeks they moved back, very fortunately, as the next day the enemy raided the post next to their's and took all the men, leaving the place a complete wreck.

There are two Manchester men in the sixteen from the Beverly exemption board district, for the next quota. The men will go to Camp Upton, Yaphank, N. Y., probably on May 25. The Manchester men are William Scott, 14 Forest st., gardener (1479), and Peter A. Brown, 7 Morse court, fruit dealer (1490). Of the three alternates, one is Philip Diognardi, 10½ Forest st., laborer (1584).

He has been attending the radio school at the Beverly High school and made a fine record there, his application for service being accepted at once at Washington. He was in the office at the Essex County club last season.

Representatives from the Canadian war offices in Boston were in Manchester this week looking up men who are subject to draft under the Canadian or British regime, and Simeon Cool and John Chatman, both of whom are married and make their home here, are subject to service, we understand.

In "The Oaklander," a weekly paper printed in Pittsburg, Pa., we notice reference to George E. Killam, a Manchester boy, who was in Pittsburg at the time in connection with his training in the aviation section of the Signal Corps. He was one of the fifty specially invited soldiers to a dinner given to entertain and honor the boys attending the Pittsburg university aviation school. In the personal column we find the following item, again referring to Mr. Killam, and the affair the previous night: "There were so many nice things said and done at the Engine House last Tuesday night that we would love to devote columns to it could we spare the space. Rev. Wm. Howard distinguished himself as toastmaster of the occasion. Hon. John Lauler made a splendid patriotic address, and Master Engineer Jack Wiley, at home from the front because of wounds, aroused enthusiasm by his address. We had lengthy chats with Mr. and Mrs. W. Carl Mott, she being with him in Pittsburg while he is attending his studies here, and Mr. Geo. E.

The Red Cross

"R. T. G." Writes Interestingly of the Origin of This Great Institution of Mercy and the Glorious Work It Is Doing in This War

ANOTHER campaign to raise money for the American Red Cross will be carried on during the week of May 20-27. A short article on the origin of this great institution of mercy and the glorious work it is doing in this war may not be amiss at this time.

On June 24, 1859, there happened to be present at the battle of Solferino, M. Jean Henri Dunant, of Geneva, Switzerland. He was much impressed by the great amount of suffering caused by the inability of the regular surgical corps of the army to give the necessary attention to the wounded. Three years later he published a book—"Un Souvenir de Solferino," in which he gave a vivid description of the great and terrible suffering he had witnessed at the battle.

In this book he proposed that in every country, societies should be formed to train nurses and get together supplies so when the next war came much more could be done for the wounded soldiers.

The Society of Public Utility, of Geneva, Switzerland, acting on M. Dunant's suggestions started an agitation which resulted in an international conference in Geneva in October, 1863. Delegates from sixteen nations were present, and a preliminary program was made out.

In August, 1864, another conference was held and at this meeting what is known as the Geneva Convention, was drawn up and signed by fourteen nations. Now, over forty nations have given their assent to this Convention. It was suggested that each nation signing the Treaty "should have a committee or society which should alone have the right to authorize the sending of surgical corps to a war." The Red Cross did its first great work in the Franco-German War.

One name will be forever associated with the American Red Cross society as its founder and its president for so many years—Clara Barton.

Miss Barton was born in Oxford, Mass., and was a New England school teacher. In 1854 she went to Washington, where she held a government position.

When the Civil War broke out she became a nurse and for four long years on the battlefield and in the hospitals, she did much to relieve the suffering of the boys wearing the Blue and the Gray. It was during this time that her wonderful executive ability was developed. At the close of the war President Lincoln was overwhelmed by the numerous appeals for help to trace the missing soldiers and to find the burial place of the unknown dead.

President Lincoln sent for Miss Barton and asked her to take up the work. The President was killed shortly after the work was started and Miss Barton carried it on for four years at her own expense. During that time many a missing soldier was found and restored to his family and the body of many a fallen hero was given Christian burial. In 1869 her health gave out and she went to Europe for a rest.

Her reputation had gone before her and when the Franco-German War broke out her advice and assistance was sought by the Red Cross, and she was associated with the Duchess of Baden in establishing hospitals. She was given the Gold Cross of Baden and the Iron Cross of Germany. Now the Iron Cross of Germany is given to U-boat commanders for destroying helpless women and children. "How have the mighty fallen!" Miss Barton's experience in the Franco-German War made her an enthusiastic admirer of the Red Cross. She came home, and for ten years did everything in her power to persuade the American government to give its assent to the Geneva Convention and organize a Red Cross society. President Arthur signed the treaty in 1887, the United States being the thirty-second nation to accept the Red Cross.

At the Convention held in Geneva in 1882 the president of the Convention, in referring to the birth of the American Red Cross said: "Its whole history is associated with a name already made known to you—that of Miss Clara Barton. Without the energy and perseverance of this remarkable woman, we should not, for a long time, have had the pleasure of seeing the Red Cross received into the United States." Since its organization, the American Red Cross has done noble work in many a national disaster and during the Spanish-American War, it added new glory to its reputation. The Red Cross is absolutely necessary to the success of our army in France.

I am reminded of an incident in Old Testament history: Moses, who had charge of the children of Israel, was fighting against Amalek, at Rephidim. He told Joshua to take picked men and go out and fight with Amalek, while he—with the rod of God in his hand—would go up to the top of the hill with Aaron and Hur to watch the fight. "And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed; and when he let down his hand Amalek prevailed. But Moses' hands were heavy; and they took a stone, and put it under him, and he sat thereon; and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun. And Joshua discomfited Amalek with the edge of the sword."

Our boys are over in France fighting for us and we must hold up their hands by giving loyal support to the Red Cross. Every one who has been at the front, whether as soldiers or eyewitnesses have nothing but the highest praise for the work of the Red Cross.

Mary Roberts Rinehart, who was at the front in 1915, in "Kings, Queens and Pawns," says: "The Red Cross is the wounded soldier's last defence. . . . It is greater than cannon, greater than hate, greater than blood-lust, greater than vengeance. It triumphs over wrath as good triumphs over evil. Direct descendant of the Cross of the Christian faith, it carries on to every battlefield the words of the Man of Peace: 'Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy.'"

"The only leaven in this black picture of war as I have seen it, as it has touched me, has been the scarlet of the Red Cross. To a faith that the terrible scenes at the front had almost destroyed, came every now and then again the flash of the emblem of mercy. Hope then, was not dead. There were hands to soothe and labor, as well as hands to kill. There was still brotherly love in the world. There was a courage that was not of hate. There was a patience that was not a lying in wait. There was a flag that was not of one nation, but of all the world; a flag that needed no recruiting station, for the ranks it led were always full to overflowing; a flag that stood between the wounded soldier and death; that knew no defeat but surrender to the will of the God of Battles." Isaac F. Marcossou, whose "Personalities Along the Highway of War," in the May number of the Red Cross makes very interesting reading, has probably seen more of the war than any other American, having made five trips to Europe since 1914. His tribute to the Red Cross is well worth quoting. He says "The stay-at-home American cannot realize what the Red Cross means in this war. Just as it is the world's most colossal struggle, enlisting more millions and creating a wider havoc than any other war, so are the demands for mercy greater than ever before. Without the Red Cross this war could not be waged; certainly it cannot be won. I have been with six armies on half a dozen fronts. Wherever I have gone the Red Cross has been in the thick of battle—first to aid, last to rest. It needs every dollar that can be raised for it: every bit of loyalty that can be mustered. No money expended in the war reaps so rich a harvest of gratitude and service. The Red Cross is succor and sustenance. It is the Supreme Antidote."

I cannot do better than close with the words of Annie Fellows Johnston:

"Oh, who shall staunch such world-wide woe—

Such universe of pain?
And who has oil and wine enough?
And must they cry in vain?

Nay! On the road to Jericho
There be a million now,
Who bear Christ's pity in their hearts,
His sign upon their brow.

And millions more shall follow them
To bind and to restore,
Till all the highway is made safe
And war shall be no more.

Now God give grace to all who bear,
And may His love suffice
To blaze upon each heart today
The Cross of Sacrifice."

MAGNOLIA

"Beautiful Magnolia," exclaimed a recent visitor to this village, and in this we have great respect for her judgment.

Mrs. William Knowles, of Ipswich, spent the week-end at the Mallard House visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Charles Brown.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Lycett and little daughter, Elizabeth, spent last week in Hudson and West Acton, visiting relatives.

The Misses Lillian Smith and Catherine Ballou, of Boston, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Ballou, the first of the week.

Egnar Swanson, a wireless operator on the "Wyoming," made a hurried visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Swanson, last Sunday, returning for duty the next day.

The usual services will be held in the Village church Sunday at 10.45 a. m. and 7.30 p. m. At the morning service the pastor will give an address on the work of the Red Cross.

John Lycett has a position as clerk in our local postoffice and this appointment is most gratifying to those who know of his ability, pleasing and accommodating manner and fitness for the place.

The Misses Edna Symonds and Abbie May were the delegates from the Village church to the spring session of the Essex South association of Congregational churches that met Wednesday in the Congregational church, South Lynnfield.

The Sunday evening congregations at the Village church are working and contributing to the war relief work of the A. F. F. W. Last Sunday night the men alone folded 65 bandages and a little more practice will make them experts at the business.

William Malonson, who for eighteen years was employed by D. C. Ballou, our popular contractor, is now employed by the city of Gloucester to drive the horses at our local fire station. Mr. Malonson is a very reliable and faithful man and worthy of the confidence that has recently been placed in him. We have often observed with the passing years his kindness to horses and their seeming devotion to him and thus we are confident that those beautiful horses that are now entrusted to his care are in safe hands.

So far as we know every other young man here has offered his services to Uncle Sam and is ready at any hour to respond to his call. The spirit of the boys is seen in a remark that one made to us the other day. He said: "Before I come back I will kill some of those Huns and since you cannot go, I will kill some for you." We sincerely hope he may, and the more of them he can kill, the better for mankind.

HAD ENJOYABLE MEETING AT
MAGNOLIA

The May meeting of the Gilbert club, Gloucester, the last until next September, was held last Friday evening at the Magnolia engine house. Some 40 members and guests were present and a very enjoyable evening was spent, Assistant Engineer Lafayette F. Hunt, captains and members of the Magnolia companies entertaining the gathering in their usual hospitable manner.

A short business session was held, when several routine matters were transacted. Shortly after 9 o'clock all adjourned to the banquet hall, where one of the delicious lobster stews for which the Magnolia boys are famous was served. Needless to say it was heartily partaken of by all present.

Capt. Charles A. Marr acted as toastmaster and the speakers were George Ira Tarr, Aldermen Silva, Andrews and Hubbard, Fitz E. Oakes, Patrick H. Boyle and George C. Tuck. Mr. Tarr gave the club an interesting talk on his travels in South America, while Alderman Andrews spoke briefly on conditions at West Gloucester as regards fire protection. He stated that incidents of the past few days (woods fires) had demonstrated that something should be done to give that district some kind of fire equipment.

Mr. Tuck sang several old-time "shanties," which were greatly appreciated, while Mr. Boyle recited "The Flag." Mr. Boyle also gave the club another invitation to hold a summer meeting at Manchester and it was very gladly accepted. The date will be decided on later.

THEIR LACK OF CAUTION

"In these times folks have to be powerful crafty and sneaking if they expect to get along," observed Mr. Gap Johnson, of Rumpus Ridge, Ark. "Tuther day we sorter forgot ourselves and killed a chicken in broad daylight, and in less than half an hour yur comes the Presiding Elder to take dinner with us."—Country Gentleman.

The various wood roads in the vicinity of Beverly Farms, among which are Grapevine, Rubbly, Larch Row, Essex st., etc., which are under the personal supervision of Col. Wm. Sohler of the Highway Commission, are receiving attention this year as they have in former years. Besides scraping and repairing, some 3000 gallons of road oil is being put on, making them smooth, dust proof and otherwise pleasant for traffic.

That Beverly Farms people want gardens this year is clearly shown by the fact that about thirty have applied for a plot, and as only the Haven field is available so far, some dozen or more will have to be disappointed, unless other land can be secured. The community gardens at the Haven estate last year were a great success. This year the owners of the estate have kindly donated a larger space, yet this is far from being enough to furnish a garden for all who desire one.

the Red Cross, it is an ideal attraction for the purpose intended, the aiding in swelling the fund of the second Red Cross drive. So startling a performance is it that the company will only take a flying trip, stopping but a single day in the large cities along the route. So there will be only a single performance in Boston, to be given at the Boston Opera House on the evening of Tuesday, May 21, at 8 p. m.

Every part in the play will be acted by a star of the first magnitude, some of the parts being very small ones, but so fervored the zeal of the players, every one of whom is giving their entire services free even to the paying of their own railroad fares and hotel bills that they happily accepted their parts, however small, since the work is for the greatest of all modern benefits, the Red Cross. It will be by far the most notable event that the American theatre has known, this tour of such great stars.

The company will include George Arliss, George M. Cohan, Mrs. Fiske, Julia Arthur, James K. Hackett, Helen Ware, James T. Powers, Beryl Mercer, O. P. Heggie, George MacFarlane, Eleanora de Cisneros, Burr McIntosh, Laurette Taylor, H. B. Warner and Chauncey Olcott. Seats are on sale at Herrick's, Boston, and from Red Cross workers, there being no premiums or war tax.

If Swift & Company Made No Profit

The cattle raiser would receive only 1-8 cent a pound more for his cattle

So small is Swift & Company's profit on any single transaction that if it were turned over to the cattle raisers of the country, they would receive only 1-8 cent a pound more for cattle than they receive now.

Swift & Company pays for live cattle about 90% of the amount received for dressed meat and by-products. The remaining 10% pays for packing house expense, freight to market, operation of distributing houses and profit. Swift & Company's actual figures per head for 1917 on over two million cattle were as follows:

Receipts	Payments
From By-products $ 24.09 26%From Meat $68.97 74%Total $93.06	$8.61 9%$1.29 2.46 2.30 2.56Profit Selling Freight DressingPaid for Live Cattle $84.45 91%Total $93.06

And out of this small net profit dividends must be paid to shareholders

THE ECONOMY OF VICTORY

No matter what this war costs the government and the people of the United States in the way of money, it is going to be much cheaper to win this war than to lose it.

The commercial and financial losses that would follow a German victory are not to be calculated. All that we spent would be lost, indemnities beyond calculation would have to be paid, and along with these losses would come a continuing loss in foreign commerce that would spell disaster.

With these material losses we would lose our national liberty and independence, our power to secure our international rights, our right to live in a world ruled by the dictates of humanity and civilization.

WHEN PEACE COMES

Some day peace will come. Thousands—millions of men—will suddenly be thrown back again into civil life. Consider the vastness of the readjustment that will be necessary. Look back at the period of reconstruction after our own Civil War. Prepare for this new period of reconstruction. The day of reckoning is bound to come. Begin to save now. Thrift is the need of the present, the hope of the future.

Liberty Loan Bonds, War Savings, the safest securities in the world, are a wise provision for the day peace comes.

German "safe conduct" for Swiss grain-ships is not likely to lower the insurance risk much.

I've heard a half a dozen times
Folks call it Reims.
That isn't right though, so it seems,
Perhaps it's Reims.

Can it be Reims?—
That once was one of France's gems—
More likely Reims.
I'll get it right sometime, perchance;
I'm told it's Reims.

COPLEY THEATRE, BOSTON

"Charley's Aunt" seems to be a play of everlasting popularity. At the Copley theatre it is renewing its success and its hilarious scenes and genuinely comic characters are amusing large audiences. It has drawn large audiences during the past three weeks, and it will be continued by imperative popular demand through another and a fourth week, beginning Monday evening.

As acted by the Henry Jewett Players at the Copley theatre, "Charley's Aunt" is revealing both the comic possibilities of the play and the skill of the actors at interpreting its mirthful episodes. Its revival came at just the right moment, for it had not been given in Boston for several seasons, and many thousands of theatre-goers were longing to see it again, and many thousand others were awaiting the chance to see it for the first time. And it has never been better acted than it is by the Henry Jewett Players.

Whistler once undertook to get a fellow artist's work into the autumn salon. He succeeded, and the picture was hung. But the painter, going to see his masterpiece with Whistler on varnishing day, uttered an exclamation of dismay.

"Good Heavens!" he cried, "you're exhibiting my picture upside down."

"Hush!" said Whistler. "The committee refused it the other way."—Boston Transcript.

Will Keep the Home Fires Burning

War Relief Work and Rest Will Alternate as Never Before with North Shore Vacationists

LILLIAN McCANN

"Keep the home-fires burning
While your hearts are yearning;
Though your lads are far away
They dream of home;
There's a silver lining
Through the dark cloud shining;
Turn the dark cloud inside out,
Till the boys come home."

TO "keep the home-fires burning" will be the ambition of every vacationist on the North Shore this summer. War relief work and rest will alternate as never before. Here in this beautiful and secluded stretch of rocky shore, reaching from Boston to the New Hampshire line, will be some of the largest and most complete workrooms in the country.

Homes on private estates will open their doors; clubs and hotels will turn their ball rooms into surgical dressings workrooms; and the woman who has worked all winter in the home town can here get the benefit, not only of a vacation, but can continue her work in organizations having Boston for their center—Boston, old and historic, now with every nerve stretched to do its "bit" in these perilous times. Here the worker from the north, south and west is made welcome in the workrooms by her sisters of the east and all made to feel they are "kin," for a wonderful sisterhood of America has developed since the war opened.

Things to do on the North Shore.

WORK in the Red Cross workrooms.

(Work for men as well as women can be found.)

RECREATE at such noted clubs as the Essex County, Myopia Hunt, Tedesco Golf, the Corinthian and Eastern Yacht clubs, Montserrat Tennis club and many others.

WORK in the Red Cross workrooms.

RECREATE by motoring to the tea rooms scattered all along the Shore at convenient points, also the haunts of artists in East Gloucester.

WORK in the Red Cross workrooms.

RECREATE by visiting Salem historical museums; the antique rich in memories of Hawthorne in Salem; old Marblehead; Gloucester fisheries; the libraries, all filled with the Shore's traditions; Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe at Magnolia, immortalized by Longfellow in his "Wreck of the Hesperus;" and Dog Town Common at Rockport.

WORK in the Red Cross workrooms.

RECREATE for the winter's work at home by resting and "living" in the chosen abode, for as the poet says:

"It takes a heap o' livin' in a house t' make it home,
A heap o' sun an' shadder—"

What comprises the North Shore?

Nahant, stretching like a long knotty finger into the sea just below Boston, is the rocky ledge on which the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, U. S. Senator, has his summer home. There are scores of delightful estates on this promontory and splendid beaches and opportunity for golf and tennis and yachting.

Swampscott, with its attractive beaches and palatial hotels, chief of which is the New Ocean House, marks the beginning of the noted beaches along the Shore. At Swampscott is located the Tedesco club, one of the social centers of that section.

Marblehead, with its sub-divisions of Marblehead Neck, Devereux and Clifton, together with nearby Salem, form a cluster of the most interesting features of old and new imaginable. Marblehead and Salem, so old and so full of historical and literary memories, are retreats into which the vacationist may while away many pleasant hours; while for the new, he has only to see the beaches with their pretty cottages and attractive hotels; the great club houses, the Corinthian Yacht club and the Eastern Yacht club (here has long been the yachting center of the country); and, last, but not least, of the modern, are the two big aeroplane manufacturing plants.

By the way, pleasant and suggestive news came from

MAGNOLIA POINT AS VIEWED FROM COOLIDGE'S POINT

Boston recently in regard to the doings at the Eastern Yacht club,—last summer used as headquarters for the patrol fleet,—to the effect that yacht racing is to be encouraged this season. The words of Henry A. Morss, chairman of the Eastern's regatta committee are significant of the times:

"Many members of the club are working harder than ever before and need change and recreation from their work as much as or more than in times of peace. In view of the above consideration the committee recommends that it be authorized to hold during the coming season a number of races for boats not larger than those of Class 'P;' that members be urged to enter small boats which they have or can procure in club races, and that they encourage their sons or other boys to sail on the boats.

"Both the Secretary and the Assistant Secretary of the Navy have expressed themselves in favor of small boat racing, especially if it will encourage boys and very young men to become familiar with the ways of the sea."

Of course, it has been explained, owners and their friends will fit out and attend to the upkeep of the boats and it must be done in shipyards not suitably equipped for shipbuilding and whose men would not be available for work in shipyards.

Beverly, "The Garden City of the North Shore," is the North Shore to many a health seeker, who, when asked where he is going for the summer, answers Beverly or Gloucester. Beverly spells beauty and exclusiveness. Here is where America's families who have given their names to history and literature and the political life of the nation have seen fit to built palatial summer homes on wooded estates skirting the rocky shores. A few handsome cottages and occasionally the great houses of the owners of some of the larger places are for rent each season, and lucky is the sojourner who can secure one through the agencies. (A summer on the North Shore always makes one want to seek some sequestered nook for his own roof tree.)

This heart of the Shore includes North Beverly, Montserrat, Beverly Cove, Pride's Crossing and Beverly Farms.

The latter has the distinction of possessing a commodious and up-to-date bathing pavilion at West Beach. Bathing is considered the correct thing to do at the Farms and its attractive beach is sought by all Beverlyites as well as from the inland resorts.

Manchester and West Manchester are a continuation of this "heart of the North Shore." They are rich in large estates with beautiful homes and attractive smaller spots on which stand inviting cottages. A particularly beautiful part of Manchester is Smith's Point, a rather thickly settled long peninsular running out in the general direction of Beverly and Salem and which affords an unparalleled view of these shores as well as over Salem way.

Manchester has a harbor where pleasure craft of considerable size can find safe entrance. But Singing Beach, the one noted throughout the country for the peculiar sound made by the sand as one walks over it—this is the paradise sought by all Manchester folk—the bathers and the kiddies with their nurses.

The Essex County club is in Manchester and is the mecca for golfers, not only from the Shore, but from the whole country.

Gloucester is reached by boat or train (Gloucester branch of the Boston & Maine which runs through the North Shore section from Boston to Rockport, while the main line runs on through the Hamilton-Wenham and Ipswich sections).

Gloucester suggests fish the world over. A visit to the great fish industries along the main street of the town is eagerly sought by tourists each year. The town and its sub-divisions comprise much of Cape Ann and include West Gloucester, East Gloucester, Eastern Point, Annisquam, Fresh Water Cove (where the John Hays Hammonds have their summer home and where is located the radio laboratory of their son, John Hays Hammond, Jr., which was taken over by the U. S. government last season), and a sub-division not on the Cape, but lying between the town proper and Manchester.

This is Magnolia, world renowned as a village of summer homes built close to the ocean on rocky foundations, from the midst of which rises the Oceanside hotel with a queenly and hospitable air. The Oceanside has opened its portals for many, many summers to the North Shore young folk who followed the terpsichorean art and will do the same this season for those who can dance that are still left among us, while soldier boys who are fortunate enough to have danced there once must, methinks, stray there in their thoughts this summer while bearing other "arms" "somewhere in France," or dutifully drilling in their camps here at home.

Interesting to the feminine world and, in fact, too all lovers of the rare and artistic creations of commerce, are the shops which line Lexington avenue, making a "Fifth avenue of the North Shore" in our beautiful Magnolia. These are branches of great firms from the largest cities of the country. It is even easier for milady to shop in Magnolia than in the town shops, for here is displayed only a limited amount of articles, but each so select and advance of the season that what is purchased may be relied on as the height of fashion for later wear.

Cape Ann has the quaint little town of Rockport on its tip-end. Here and at the principal sub-division, Pigeon Cove, are several hotels and many cosy and comfortable little cottages.

Ipswich, Wenham, Hamilton, Essex, Topsfield, and up Newburyport way constitute the inland North Shore, —a region so fair that a dreamy poet is the only one who can do justice to this idyllic, pastoral spot. Great estates of an English type or like the southern plantations with the mansion house standing far back from the highway, abound. Also cottages on less pretentious grounds, but not lacking in charm, are seen.

It was over in these unexcelled scenes that a "home for a poet" was found long ago by Harriet Prescott Spofford at Deer Island. Celia Thaxter, the poet of the Isles of Shoals, was also nearby; and nothing can be more poetic than the "steeple of Newburyport rising at evening filling the air with faint silver hymns that chime with the liquid undertone of the pouring surf."

But coming back to the immediate North Shore region the student of history and science can locate in no better place in the inland section than at Ipswich, where the past seems to be present and even the present has a dreamy air of living as if it were of the past. Much of the charm of Ipswich comes from the mystic light out upon the sand dunes which enfolds and seems to take one into the very heart of nature and God.

And even in this section cottages are often for rent and some of the land has not yet been built upon; even here "we've saved a place for you," if you yield to the lure of the North Shore and are drawn into America's playground for the fashionable folk.

Good roads along North Shore.

Tradition says that it used to be safer to get out and walk over the rocky thoroughfares of the North Shore, but in these days of solid comfort with rubber tires and gasoline to do our bidding, it is a comfort to know that there are such perfectly kept oiled roads, as are found anywhere in the country, intersecting all points of the Shore. "Brown velvet roads," a westerner has called them.

Health features of the North Shore.

The whole section faces the Atlantic ocean, from which comes the bracing ozone that drives away disease and restores vitality to everyone.

The water supply is absolutely pure.

A dearth of mosquitos has gone over the Shore since the vigorous scientific campaign has been waged against them by public spirited people of both the summer and local colonies.

Excellent beaches afford easy and comfortable surf bathing during the entire season.

A swimming pool with an expert instructor is a drawing card in the Magnolia section.

Golf, tennis, boating, horseback-riding, walking and motoring are other means freely indulged in by health seekers.

Amusements that may be expected on the North Shore.

Famous horse shows where horses of international renown are shown. Last season, Judge Moore, of New York and Pride's Crossing, showed his famous horses on his private race-track at Pride's, the event being the biggest benefit of the summer for the Red Cross.

Dog shows: Some noted kennels are on the Shore.

Church fairs, musicales, lectures, recitals, and other interesting things, all likely given as last year,—for war relief or some specially needed home affair.

An unusual feature last year was the opening of estates and gardens to the public on stated occasions, the funds going to the Red Cross.

GROUP OF SUMMER SHOPS ON LEXINGTON AVE., MAGNOLIA

Topsfield—the Beautiful

One of Most Delightful Places in the North Shore Region—A Little Off the Beaten Path

LILLIAN McCANN

TOPSFIELD is noted for its beautiful hills, from which wonderful views are obtained—of which it is said there is nothing finer in the eastern part of Massachusetts. Although so close to the North Shore, Topsfield is one of the most difficult places to see for the ordinary tourist that is within the realm of the Shore resorts. Someone in the village quaintly remarked the other day that they had just found out that they belonged to the famous North Shore.

Only 24 miles from Boston, 10 from Salem and 15 from Newburyport and from four to six miles from Hamilton-Wenham, yet this unexcelled little spot is rarely seen by anyone but automobilists. Upon your arrival at the station on the western division of the Boston & Maine, the white houses of the little village with their great background of forest-covered hills assure you that here is a village worth visiting.

You pass up the main street on which are the low store buildings of a rather commonplace appearance, and come out upon the beautiful Common—so typical of New England. Facing this fine old green, with its noticeable monument centering it, are the usual buildings of a country village,—the Town hall and churches and some spacious mansion houses. At one end is the Parson Capen house standing on a low hill, and said to be the finest example of the 17th century dwelling in New England. It is now owned by the Topsfield historical society and contains many interesting relics. Each year the society serves a 17th century supper as a part of the annual meeting. This is served on wooden trenchers and eaten without forks, only broad-bladed steel knives and pewter spoons being considered 17th century fashion. This old house was used two years ago by the French Wounded society and also as a meeting place for a class in first aid.

As one approaches the Commons from the station, an English lytch gate is seen on the right, just below the fine old three-story house which seems to own the gate. The place is "White Commons," the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Emery. The lytch gate leads to the garden —an unusual one—a "green garden" being the idea carried out, where bloom is only incidental. This place formerly belonged to Squire Emerson Holmes, but has had many beautiful things added and placed around it by the Emerys.

Going out High street to Boston street leads to one of the famous hills in Topsfield and on this particular one is the tall brick house belonging to Capt. and Mrs. Ernest Pentacost. Here Mrs. Pentacost is living the year-round with her family of four little ones, while the Captain is over in the British Royal Naval Reserve, where he was called at the beginning of the war. From the terrace of this place it seems as if you can see all over Topsfield. Some of the sights seen off in the hazy, dreamy atmosphere (so different from along the Shore) are "Witch Hill," the Thomas W. Pierce home; the T. Emerson Proctor place, "Bradstreet Farm," the Charles W. Taintor, Arthur H. Wellman, James Smith, and other places, one of which belongs to Mrs. James Morrill Marsh. Far over Wenham way may be seen "Highover," the home of Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Wm. Phillips, of Washington. The tall white spire of the Wenham church may also be seen, and a bright streak in the greenery is said to be Squam river. At night Ipswich light, as well as others, are seen.

Continuing out in this direction from the village two miles, a noticeable home comes in view, that of T. Emerson Proctor, of Commonwealth ave., Boston. After wandering over the beautiful grounds laid out near the house in the form of grassy terraces and gardens and being taken through the long greenhouses adjoining the house by the courteous gardener, one feels that it is worth the two-mile walk. The greenhouses have twenty-odd compartments, each one filled with some choice flower, a few of which have drawn medals at the Topsfield fairs. Some of these plants are indeed rare and beautiful and look almost like artificial creations in their spic and span quarters. Fruit houses and vegetable houses are also a part of the long greenhouses.

"WHITE COMMONS," THE HOME OF MR. AND MRS. WILLARD EMERY AT TOPSFIELD

After viewing these the gardener kindly directed a recent visitor to the "Bradstreet Farm," a part of the Proctor place, and on which is a wonderfully built rockery beside a pond in the midst of an arboretum of which the North Shore may well be proud. Only about five minutes' walk from the home on the hill, yet one almost seems miles from human-kind while wandering through the pretty winding paths (rhododendron bordered) which lead to the rockery and pond. When this is reached its beauty may best be appreciated by walking over the rustic bridge and skirting the pond opposite the rockery, coming back to it by crossing another bridge and gradually bending around the pond and up to its labyrinth. A wise head and a lover of the beautiful and odd combined must have created this rockery, for if ever stones and flowers were adroitly put together it is here. Rocky paths and stone steps lead to the topmost ledge on which one needs must rest and look over the little pond before descending to the dark cave-like part into which the lower paths seem lost.

Before leaving the place one is informed that these exquisite little rock flowers were not even covered this winter, and that where a hundred men used to be employed, now only a handful are in service. One also hears of the corn and other things being raised on the place since the war started. Even a mill has been arranged to grind the corn. All feed is now raised for the livestock. Chickens and some handsome pheasants are also seen in long screened-in runways back of the poultry houses which form part of the farm buildings standing around three sides of a square.

When asked if Mr. Proctor spent much time at his Topsfield home, the answer was, "No, he's all business. He goes to Boston every morning and comes out at six at night. I don't see what he has it for."

The visitor was rather curious to see what Mr. Proctor looked like, after viewing his beautiful grounds (not even knowing of the rockery until that day, and not even sent to it by any editor), and when she saw him alight at the station that night from the six o'clock train, she agreed with the workman, "all business," but a disciple of the old school of courtesy and kindness.

Other delightful explorations may be taken in Topsfield, but this one was "sufficient unto the day."

*Truth crushed to earth shall rise again;
The eternal years of God are hers;
But error, wounded, writhes with pain,
And dies among her worshippers.*

—BRYANT.

Bear your cross with a song—not with a sigh.

I have loved the feel of the grass under my feet; and the sound of the running streams by my side. The hum of the wind in the treetops has always been good music to me, and the face of the fields has often comforted me more than the faces of men.—JOHN BURROUGHS.

Glimpses Here and There of North Shore Estates

Some Signs of Early Summer
Activities Typical of the Times

MR. AND MRS. DUDLEY L. PICKMAN, of Boston, have a beautiful estate about a mile deep fronting on the water at Beverly Cove. This place is emphasizing gardening this spring as never before. Besides the home garden, sixteen community gardens will be allotted to the Beverly people, and a little over four acres are being gardened by the club of forty North Shore girls. More vegetables will be canned than last season, and the surplus, as usual, will go to the Beverly hospital and other institutions.

The greenhouses have been used for storage this season, the plants having been given away or thrown away. Back of the long structures is a miniature dark pine forest in which turkeys are now serenely setting on their nests, and in the cool depths of which many a fat Thanksgiving bird is raised each season. Turkey raising is a most successful hobby of the gardener, who also raises about two hundred chickens each year. Enough cows are on the place to supply four families with milk and cream the year round. The gardener says that the cows pay for themselves in many ways, but in no respect more than in the question of fertilization (the topic of the day in agricultural circles), in which the up-keep of the place is due to the small herd.

The box hedge around the beautiful little brick-walled garden lying in such a formal pattern by the side of the house has been considerably damaged by the severe winter.

Two other houses are on the estate, one occupied by a relative, Willard F. Peele, and another cottage which is rented each season.

Mr. Peele will open his house this month and the Pickmans will come July 1 from their between-season home in Bedford.

COMMON LANE, the beautiful wood drive beginning near the postoffice at Pride's Crossing and winding through the woods to other drives leading past the Montserrat Tennis club and hence on to Beverly Cove, is being graded and by the time the season is on will be one of the best drives on the Shore. On this secluded road is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip S. Sears, of Boston; at the intersection of Common and Branch lanes; while just opposite are the homes of the Harold J. Coolidges, of Boston, and of Dr. Thomas O. Shepard, the latter of Salem. Near the beginning of the lane at Pride's Crossing are located the estate of Mrs. James F. Curtis, of Boston; the George Dexter cottage, to be occupied this season by Mrs. John T. Willets, of New York, who had a cottage at Magnolia last summer; and the Shaw estate, known as "The Commons," the home of the late Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, of Boston. These three estates are on the right as the lane is entered at Pride's; while on the left, but off the lane and on Thissell street, may be seen the cottages of Augustus P. Loring and A. P. Loring, Jr., of Boston.

Near the railroad crossing, about a mile or more from the beginning of the driveway, these lanes merge into Boyle street, and near this point is located the vacation house for girls maintained by Mrs. Ratchesky, of Beverly Cove and Boston. This was opened last season.

Past the Montserrat club and nearing Chapman's corner, the terminus of the Beverly car line, are the homes of the Wm. Baldwin Millers, of New York, and Francis I. Amory, of Boston, on the right; while on the left is that of Miss Katharine E. Silsbee, of Boston.

This makes one of the most delightful wood drives or walks on the Shore with typical homes, gardens, babbling brooks, great rocks and fine, old trees for company.

"OFF LOTS," the Thissell street home at Pride's Cross- of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus P. Loring, of Boston, is one of the miniature farms on the Shore. Besides the keeping of a few cows, a great sight on the place is the chicken yard in which five hundred birds are raised each season. Three incubators are successfully used.

This season about eight acres will be planted in vegetables and corn, including one acre of potatoes. Fruit and berry gardens are also seen, the whole place seeming to be utilized for food. The greenhouses were shut down completely this winter and now only wood is being used for heating the young seedlings.

A pretty feature of the Loring estate, and one seen by passersby on Common lane, is the natural pond or rather ponds seen on this side of the place. These used to be the haunt of many ducks and geese, but now only two or three are left to enjoy it. The water is filled with goldfish, some of unusual size.

The gardener says that flowers have given way to vegetables and one would almost wonder where a flower could grow amidst all the preparations for their edible sisters.

A son's family, the A. P. Lorings, Jr., make their year-round home also on Thissell street and a daughter's family, the Samuel Vaughans, have a year-round home on Hale street, Beverly Farms.

AT "OBERLAND," the Harold J. Coolidge estate at Pride's Crossing, vegetables and no flowers is the substance of the orders sent to the gardener this spring from the Boston home. About seven acres will be planted this year, an increase of three acres over last season. Much canning will be the rule for the summer. The boys in the family, Harold J., Jr., and Lawrence, have always had their own little garden, but this year their time and labor will be given to the head gardener, whom they will help in weeding and in other ways, owing to the scarcity of help.

Half a dozen sheep are now among the farm pets, this place having the honor of raising sheep for many seasons before the present demand for them.

Mrs. Coolidge is one of the tireless workers in the Red Cross and is now resting a short time at the between-season home in Virginia, where the family went May 1, planning to come to the North Shore home about June 1.

A walk through the attractive grounds leads to the conclusion that there will be a few flowers, at least,—just those that were hardy enough to "pull through" the winter, so the gardener says, with the addition of those in the tiny conservatory attached to the barn, and heated by the same plant that heated the gardener's cottage.

DR. AND MRS. HENRY F. SEARS, of Beacon st., Boston, have one of the beautiful homes amid large grounds which make the Beverly Cove places so sought after. Its water view is unsurpassed. It is situated between the Dudley L. Pickmans' and the Bryce J. Allans'—both homes of unusual charm and beauty.

Dr. Sears has a mammoth greenhouse on his place which had a rest this winter from its usual duties. Plants were given away or sold and after November those remaining were thrown out. The chrysanthemums "pulled through" the fall without heat. Only the palm house was kept heated sufficiently to save these rare plants. Now a low wood fire heats the seedlings and the grapes, peaches and nectarines are all coming on as usual. Besides the ordinary big vegetable garden, an acre of ground on which is a young orchard will be utilized for potatoes. Canning will be in vogue for the summer.

Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made man upright.

—Ecclesiastes.

THE SYDNEY E. HUTCHINSONS, of Philadelphia, will come on about the middle of June to their home at Beverly Farms. The winter has been very severe with the beautiful garden, playing great havoc with the box borders, which are all over the garden, and with the tall privet hedge along one side. The gardener says that box hedges cannot be replaced now on account of the war, because the box is a native of England and Belgium. A few spring flowers were seen the other day shining brightly above the poor, brown borders. The gardener was busy cutting down and pruning away all remains of the freeze. One could hardly realize that this was the bril-

What the North Shore Offers Vacationists

Native Charm of Landscape, Beautiful Landlocked Harbors, Aquatic and Athletic Sports, and War Relief Work Aplenty

IN this, the opening number of the NORTH SHORE BREEZE, are pictured in but a small degree the beauties of the North Shore. Volumes would be required to unfold the charm of surroundings on this section of the coast; art galleries might be plentifully stocked with the wonderful landscapes and marine views of this section. In only a small way can the joys of existence on the North Shore in summer be put before the vacationist in assisting him to choose a restful spot for his summer sojourn. No pen has yet been able to truthfully set forth the wonders of this great vacation land; no camera or artist's sketch has yet revealed its beauties, but they are here awaiting your discovery.

If you are an annual visitor to the North Shore, no description is needed; if you have yet to spend a summer here, you have a wonderland in store for you this summer. If you are an enthusiastic motorist, the splendid roads of the North Shore offer you opportunities you cannot better elsewhere. Is yachting your hobby? Then at Marblehead, at Gloucester, Manchester and other famed harbors along the Shore you will be at home. This is the yachting center of America. Beautiful, deep, landlocked harbors abound.

If you are a follower of the popular pastime of golfing you will be delighted at the number and excellence of the many North Shore courses—such as the famous Myopia Hunt club links at Hamilton and the Essex County club at Manchester. The same will apply if you are a lover of tennis. Horses? Polo? Yes, we have scores of horse lovers here; our hunt clubs are famous. Are you looking for a summer home site? There are none better anywhere. Do you prefer to spend your vacation at a summer hotel surrounded by the gay life which characterizes one? North Shore hotels are the best and are sufficient in number, style, cuisine and accommodations to please any taste. North Shore hotels are modern in every respect.

Do you love quiet? You will be able to find it in a secluded, prettily wooded spot on the North Shore. If you wish to be alone by the water, there are neat and modern little cottages set snugly away by the water-side all along the North Shore. The North Shore does not attract the kind of crowds found in many resort sections. Along the entire Shore the summer visitors are representative Americans. If you are socially inclined (and who is not?) you will find kindred souls on the North Shore.

Many visitors to the North Shore return in the fall with a wealth of antiques collected among the little shops scattered along the Shore. This section is the greatest source for antiques anywhere in this country. Modern stores in all of the towns along the Shore serve visitors, attractive tea rooms cater to the autoists and the many country clubs are the mecca of vacationists. The North Shore even in winter with its bleak landscape, ice and snowclad, is picturesque, but in summer it is an Eden.

We invite you to be with us the coming summer.

A BOSTON WEDDING of much interest to the North Shore was that of Miss Ethel Lyman Paine and John Francis Moors, which took place last Saturday noon in Trinity church. The Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann officiated, assisted by the Rev. George Lyman Paine, a brother of the bride. Miss Paine, who was given in marriage by her brother, Robert Treat Paine, was a stately bride in white satin with a court train. The lace veil was worn by her sister, Lydia L. Paine, at her wedding to Lieut. Cummings twenty years ago. Lieut. and Mrs. Charles K. Cummings are of Pride's Crossing. Their little daughter, Margaret, was one of the attendants, the other attendant being little Adelaide Brown,, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Brown, and a niece of the bridegroom. The best man was Arthur Moors, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers included Francis J. Moors, another brother, Wm. H. Brown, and Godfrey L. Cabot (Beverly Farms) brothers-in-law, John H. Storer, brother-in-law of the bride, and others. Many North Shore folk were in attendance.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Lieut. and Mrs. Cummings, 6 Joy street. Mr. and Mrs. Moors will live at 32 Mt. Vernon st. Among the relatives on the Shore are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, 2d, of Manchester, and the Misses Paine, of Pride's Crossing, where is located the Paine estate.

Col. and Mrs. Henry E. Russell, of Boston, have decided to spend the summer at their place in Manchester Cove, instead of going into the Maine woods, where they have a camp.

Mrs. Russell Sturgis and household have arrived from Boston and are settled at their Smith's Point home for the season.

The Randolph B. Dodge family, of 11 John st., Brookline, are now settled at "The Bandbox," their Wenhams home. The Dodges are receiving congratulations over the birth of a son, Randolph B., Jr., on May 15th.

Mrs. Charles M. Cabot will be in charge of the Beverly Farms Red Cross workroom in the Public Library building this season, taking the place of Mrs. Robert W. Means, the manager for last season. Mrs. Cabot remained at the Farms most of the winter.

Dr. and Mrs. J. Henry Lancashire have been enjoying a visit in New York from their daughter, Mrs. E. Laurence White, of Beverly Farms.

Mrs. Maurice M. Osborne and little Theodore, will be in Springfield with Lieut. Osborne, who is at the arsenal, instead of spending the summer, as usual, with her mother, Mrs. Charles M. Cabot, of Hale st., Beverly Farms.

Mrs. John T. Willets and family, of 907 Fifth ave., New York, will come on to the North Shore next week—May the 28th. They have a cottage at Pride's Crossing this season.

MISS KATHERINE CROSBY, of West Manchester, is one of the young riders who is often seen on the Shore roads. Since she began riding ponies at the early age of four years she has developed a strong love for this equestrian art, while her brother, Henry (ambulance driver in France) never "took" to horses at all, but rather to motors. At "Apple Trees," the stables are much reduced since the war, but Miss Katherine still has Sophia, a little brown three-year-old, and a handsome, spirited-looking chestnut, Fire Fly, a four-year-old, from Judge Moore's stables. Her driving horse, or "phaeton" horse, is also a fine-looking specimen, called Diamond Dick. This is a three-year-old from the Alfred Vanderbilt stable at Newport. Two other horses are in the Crosby stable, but they are considered "too old to mention." Lucky old horses that can end their days peacefully at "Apple Trees," the home of the S. V. R. Crosbys.

Mrs. Greeley S. Curtis and family, of Boston, are among this week's arrivals in Manchester.

Frank P. Frazier and family, of New York, have arrived at their West Manchester summer home this week.

The first services of the season at Emmanuel Episcopal church, Masconomo st., Manchester, will be on Sunday, June 2.

F. M. Boynton and family, of Philadelphia, have returned to Manchester for the summer and are again occupying the Alexander Porter cottage on Singing beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Hayward, of Wayne, Pa., will return to Dr. Brown's "Grove" cottage, Sea st., Manchester, again this season.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Burnham, Jr., of Boston, will occupy the Clark cottage on Blossom lane, Manchester, this season.

"Villa al mare," the Beverly Farms home of Mr. and Mrs. George Lee, will be North Shore headquarters for the Italian relief work which has been carried on in Boston this winter. This will be one of the new workrooms on the Shore. Mrs. Louis Niles Roberts and Mrs. Buonamici have been in charge of the Boston work.

The workroom for the American Fund for French Wounded will be reopened on Thursday, June 13, and Mrs. E. S. Grew has for the third time given the use of her coach-house for the meetings, which will be held on Mondays and Thursdays from nine-thirty to one.

Mrs. John Caswell and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth, will occupy "Round Plain Farm," their beautiful home at Beverly Farms, and will not rent it as was previously announced. The young daughter is one of the enthusiastic farmerettes and will do her "bit" at the war garden in Beverly Cove, looked after by the North Shore girl farmers. This is one of the homes in which the father, and son, John, Jr., are both at the front in France.

CAPTAIN Q. A. SHAW MCKEAN, of Pride's Crossing, carried off the honors in the big horse show at Camp Devens last Saturday. Over 250 horses and mules, ridden or driven by officers or enlisted men, were shown in the eleven different events on the program. Each rider was clad in the olive drab of Uncle Sam's fighting men, lending a distinctive and appealing touch not common to the average horse show. Captain McKean, who is commanding officer of the Headquarters Troop, with two horses entered, carried off two first prizes and one second. Towards the end of the show a rare sight was seen. The horse show was going on in one part of the parade field, the 302d Infantry were holding a parade in another part and the Ammunition Train were being presented with a flag in a third place. Just before the gas mask mule race started, retreat was sounded: The 301st Artillery band, which furnished music at the horse show, stood up and played "The Star Spangled Banner." Everyone in the audience arose and stood at attention. At the conclusion of the national anthem the show was resumed and the last event staged.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Read (Edith Fabyan) are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son May 16, at the Boston home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Wright Fabyan, of West Manchester. Mr. Read is in the national aviation service.

Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane and her daughter, Miss Katharine, will open their Manchester home next week. Mrs. Lane has been spending several weeks in Baltimore with her parents. Her father, Prof. Gildersleeve, has been very ill, but has now recovered.

A favorite place for North Shore folk to dine is at Ye Rogers Manse, Ipswich, Mass. Tel. 85-M. adv.

Francis M. Stanwood and family will not come to Manchester this summer, but will remain at Brookline.

North Shore residents showing horses in the Memorial Day show at Chestnut Hill, include Miss Eleonora R. Sears and George S. Mandell.

Mrs. John Chess Ellsworth is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. L. Chalifoux, in Lowell, and will later come to the Ellsworth home, "Wayside," Manchester Cove.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Blodgett and family, of Grand Rapids, Mich., will arrive at Pride's Crossing, where they will again occupy Mrs. L. M. Sargent's place on the waterfront, about the first of June.

Andrew Carnegie, 2d, and family, are on their way north from their winter home in Fernandina, Fla. They are now at the Virginia Hot Springs, with Mrs. Carnegie's sister, Mrs. Walter J. Mitchell and Mr. Mitchell. Both families will come to their homes in Manchester Cove, within a week or so. The Carnegies plan on spending the mid-summer at their camp in the Adirondacks.

Thomas P. Beal, Jr., of Ober st., Beverly Cove, vice-president of the Second National Bank, Boston, has gone to Washington as assistant to Howard Coonley, recently made vice-president of the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

D. A. Sullivan and family will close their Brookline residence the first of next week and will move to their cottage on Masconomo st., Manchester, for a long season, as usual.

The John S. Curtis "Yellow House," on Hale st., Beverly Farms, is showing lilacs of great growth and profusion of bloom. This place was occupied by the F. R. Galacars last season.

Mr. and Mrs. James C. Neely, of Brookline, who formerly were at Swampscott, will this year occupy "Rollo" cottage, Beverly Farms.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Cochrane, of Boston, have been spending some time at their Hamilton place, but are expecting to open the Pride's Crossing home this week.

Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Houghton, of Boston, have arrived at Pride's Hill, Pride's Crossing.

Miss M. E. Haven is now at her Beverly Farms home. Her sister, Mrs. Waldo O. Ross, will also leave Boston shortly to join her. Mrs. Franklin Haven will open her house on the Haven estate, June 1.

Mrs. Charles M. Amory (Gladys Munn) is in Virginia, where Mr. Amory is in training at Camp Lee, Petersburg. The Amorys occupied "Arbor Vitæ," Smith's Point, Manchester, last season.

Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Crane, Jr., of 1550 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, will come to Castle Hill, Ipswich, the first week in June. Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Boardman and little sons, T. Dennie, 2d, and Reginald, Jr., arrived at "The Brick House," West Manchester, last week.

Dr. and Mrs. George B. Shattuck, of Boston, are newcomers to Beverly Farms this season. They will be in the Ahl "Red House," corner of Hale and Valley sts.

The Grafton Winthrop Minots have taken "The Alhambra," the Gardner cottage next to the home of Wm. Amory Gardner, at Mingo Beach, Pride's Crossing. Last season Mrs. Minot (Constance Gardner) and baby were with Mr. Gardner, while Mr. Minot was in Washington in the War Department.

Mrs. Eben D. Jordan, of Boston, will not come to the Shore this season, but will again take a cottage at Bar Harbor.

The Page & Shaw tea room at Pride's Crossing has been opened for the season—open daily, Sundays and holidays and evenings. Afternoon tea, ices, sodas, and all the delicious little things for which the Page & Shaw tea room is noted. A large display case has been installed this year in which is carried a most attractive line of fancy articles such as bags and fancy boxes and the like. A pianola is another new feature this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtlandt Richardson, of Boston, are among the newcomers to Manchester, this season. They will occupy the cottage on Sea st., in which the Frederic M. Burnhams have lived. Capt. Burnham is now at Camp Merritt, N. J., and Mrs. Burnham (Rosamond Eliot), will spend the summer at the home of her sister, Mrs. Richard Sears Lovering, Old Neck road, Manchester. Capt. Burnham was home this week for a short furlough.

Mrs. Rebecca McM. Colfelt, of New York, who had the James Means cottage, Manchester, last season, will occupy "The Plains," the attractive home of the artist, Eric Pape, situated on School st., Manchester, near the Essex County club grounds. Mrs. Colfelt usually spends most of the winter in Magnolia.

Rev. Fred. C. Lauderburn, who has recently resigned his position as vicar of St. Stephen's church, in Boston, spent last week-end with Rev. Neilson Poe Carey at the rectory, Beverly Farms. Mr. Carey's mother, Mrs. George D. Carey, who has always been with him each summer, will not come to the Farms this year, but during June and July will be with her daughter, Mrs. Albert Wall, at Llewellyn Park, West Orange, N. J., and in August and September will be with Mrs. Henry M. Thomas, another daughter, at Blue Ridge Summit, Pa.

If Mrs. Francis R. Spalding, who is doing war work in France, could see her West Manchester home this week, she would see a feast of lilac blooms—purple and white, in the most luxuriant clusters imaginable.

Mrs. Edward B. Haven has again rented her cottage on West st., Beverly Farms. This season the Charles J. Carter family, of Kansas City, will occupy it.

Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, 2d, and children, will again occupy the Storrow cottage, Beverly Farms, while Mr. Shaw is in France. Their own house in Preston place was occupied by the Paul Moores last season.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic R. Galacar, of Boston, will return to Beverly Farms this year, but will occupy the Arthur Luke "Owl" cottage, instead of "Yellow House," Hale st., as last year.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Griswold Flagg, of Villa Nova, Pa., are newcomers to Manchester this year. They will occupy the Churchman house on Smith's Point.

Mrs. Jere Abbott, of 406 Beacon st., Boston, is again occupying the Tibbits cottage on Harbor st., West Manchester. She is among this week's arrivals.

Major and Mrs. Wm. Littauer, of Boston, will occupy "Foregate," the West Manchester home of the late Mrs. Gordon Prince. Last year, Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Douglas Robinson (Dorothy Jordan), of New York, were in this place, one of the most attractive on the West Manchester road.

Mrs. Basil Douglas Hall, of The Bronx, New York, is the guest of her father, Dr. George H. Washburn, "Oak-Ledge," Manchester.

Along the Cape Ann Shore

Notes by ALEX. G. TUPPER

CAPE ANN.—The prospects for the season of 1918 in this section of the North Shore appear bright. Every day now the list of cottages remaining unrented lessens, and a large number of new families are expected to make their summer home in this famous and picturesque location.—Gloucester and its suburbs, East Gloucester, including Bass Rocks and Eastern Point, Annisquam, West Gloucester and Rockport,—including Pigeon Cove. The many old families, who have fine summer homes here, are arriving now to take possession of their estates.

There has been little building activity, owing to war conditions and the high cost of building, although there has been sales of real estate, which give promise of a boom in cottage building, at the close of the war when prices get to be somewhat normal. The hotel proprietors seem to be greeting the season with a smile, for bookings have been unusually good and prosperity for them seems to be a marked assurance.

GLOUCESTER holds varied attractions for the summer visitor. Nowhere on the coast is there a finer harbor filled with interest in the fishing industry, shipping, yachting and water sports. Her beaches, clean and inviting, are unexcelled, and bathing, one of the chief pastimes of the summer season, is near at hand all along the Shore. The yachting season is lively and there are two fine up-to-date clubhouses, the Gloucester club, at Rocky Neck, East Gloucester, and the Annisquam club, on the Annisquam river, between Gloucester harbor and Ipswich bay. The many beautiful drives along the Shore boulevards and through the wooded sections of the landscape are famous. Automobiling and saddle riding are more popular each year and there is even a revival of the bicycling days, for there is keen enjoyment in the wheeling rambles in the lovely paths and by-ways, where carriage nor automobile can penetrate.

The life-giving invigoration of the bracing salt air, and the savor of the pine and bayberry has restored many people to renewed health. Many a business man has returned to his duties in the busy city, refreshed and filled with new energy, after his vacation on Cape Ann. The lovely, natural scenery and the flower-perfumed air, from the Magnolia and the wild rose, has inspired many an artist and writer, and here we find material aplenty. Over at East Gloucester, especially, we find located noted artists and literateurs, creating great things in the higher arts, in a peculiar and individual atmosphere, for Gloucester is "Gloucester," the world over. In the greatest art galleries are seen subjects taken from the docks, the moors and sweeping hills, and in literature is founded life in Gloucester or mention of her name.

The Gloucester Board of Trade offers any information or courtesy to summer visitors, the headquarters being on Main street, Postoffice square. The various fishery concerns welcome visitors to their plants, as well as do other industries of Cape Ann, including the granite quarries. The golf links of the Cape are the noted ones of the Bass Rocks club and the Rockport Country club.

EASTERN POINT.—The season in this section of the North Shore certainly appears bright. The owners of big estates here, with few exceptions, will come early to spend the season. The many hotel proprietors have excellent bookings. Hawthorne Inn, it is expected, will be crowded with people at an early date. Quite out of the usual order, there has been but one cottage erected during the winter, when, usually there are several under construction. The new house is for the Misses Grace and Elizabeth Spalding, of Brookline, situated on Ledge road, near the Gallery-on-the-Moors.

It is to be expected that East Gloucester will have her usual quota of artists, in keeping with the record of former years, in fact, this artistic centre will have more painters and sculptors than ever before. It is reported that several of the leading artists of Provincetown and the South Shore, as well as Lyme, Conn., will come here. Guy C. Wiggins, who was located here for several years has erected a studio cottage in Lyme.

News has been received recently of the death of Miss Helen M. Knowlton, an American artist, widely known as being a pupil of the late William M. Hunt. Miss Knowlton died in Needham on May 6. She was born in Littleton, August 16, 1832, and she was the daughter of John S. C. Knowlton, who for forty years was editor of the Worcester Palladium. Miss Knowlton was a summer resident of East Gloucester for a great many years, where she was well-known among artists and writers. She was for years a guest at the Hawthorne Inn. Miss Knowlton began to study art in Boston, where she placed herself under the guidance of Mr. Hunt. She also studied with Frank Duveneck, the Cincinnati artist of prominence, who summers here annually. Miss Knowlton taught drawing and painting in Boston for thirty years and her charcoal work, landscapes and portraits in oil have been exhibited at the Boston Art club, the National Gallery and other places. "Talks About Art," is a volume written by Miss Knowlton, the result of her close association with Mr. Hunt, while she was his pupil.

The Clay estate, "Finisterre," at Eastern Point, near the lighthouse, has been opened for the season. Mr. and Mrs. Clay arrived together, the first part of the month, but Mr. Clay returned to Chicago in a few days, to return here in early July.

Miss M. L. Davison and Miss T. deR. Hawley, of New York, have arrived at the Davison Spanish villa, "Villa Latomia," at Eastern Point, for the season.

Mrs. S. A. Raymond, of Cleveland, O., expects to arrive at her Eastern Point estate, "The Ramparts," in a few weeks. Her son, Edward Raymond, is in the U. S. navy service, being on a patrol boat in the south.

Mrs. Robert C. Rathbone, of New York and Washington, D. C., has arrived at her summer home, "Hacienda," Niles Beach boulevard, Eastern Point, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. William Steele Grey, of New York, have arrived at their Eastern Point bungalow, "El Nido," for the season.

Mrs. N. H. Weeks and daughters, the Misses Weeks, of Manchester, N. H., are located at their attractive summer home, Eastern Point, for the season.

The Gallery-on-the-Moors, Ledge road, East Gloucester, is being devoted to Red Cross work and on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons and Wednesday evenings, there are many workers present on surgical dressings. All day Fridays, the Gallery is open for sewing for the French wounded. Since opening the Gallery on April 17, over 10,000 dressings have been made. The workers have the pleasure of hearing music, singers and pianists offering their services. An attractive war poster exhibition is being held at the Gallery on Friday and Saturday afternoons, from 2 till 5 o'clock, the public being invited. The Gallery-on-the-Moors is an auxiliary or branch of the Gloucester Red Cross and all work is being turned in to the latter headquarters. Any persons wishing to come to the Gallery to work will be welcomed. Although the Hawthorne Inn Casino and the Bass Rocks Golf clubhouse will be centres for Red Cross work, to which summer residents are invited to come and work, visitors will be also invited to assist in work at the Gallery-on-the-Moors.

Mrs. William E. Atwood, of Ledge road, whose untiring work and attention given for the Red Cross cause at the Gallery-on-the-Moors is greatly appreciated by the Gloucester Red Cross, was in Washington, D. C., during the winter, taking instruction for the Red Cross work.

BASS ROCKS.—The important improvement in this section is the new Shore boulevard, which the city of Gloucester has taken over for reconstruction. The part now finished is the stretch between the entrance on Bass avenue, to the junction of Nautilus and Atlantic roads, approaching Hotel Moorland. The work is proceeding nicely during the fine weather of this spring and it is planned to give the smooth surface as far along the Shore as possible, well into June, until traffic is too extensive to continue the labor. The stone crushing plant is installed at the point near the Stacy colonial cottage.

The Siamese Legation will arrive in a short time to spend another season at this resort. The Siamese Prince and Minister, with his family and attachés, will occupy the Harding estate on Page street again and E. H. Loftus, the First Secretary and his family, will be located in a cottage on Bass avenue, near the Good Harbor beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mills and Miss Georgianna Dodge, have arrived at "Under-the-Cliff" cottage, Atlantic road, for the season.

Dr. William Jarvie and family, of Montclair, N. J., arrived recently at the attractive Jarvie estate, Bass Rocks.

Mrs. Henry Souther and daughter, Miss Polly Souther, have been stopping for a time at the Harding cottage while their home on the rocks, near the beach, has been prepared for occupancy.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Eaton, of Lawrence, have opened their summer home on Souther road, Bass Rocks. They have been entertaining Lawrence relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Scott, of Philadelphia, may now occupy their estate "Tragibigzanda," Bass Rocks, this season. Mr. Scott is the head of the Red Cross committee of Philadelphia. Miss Letitia Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Scott, is a Red Cross nurse "over across."

Mrs. Ellis Mendell and daughter, Mrs. Elsie Hall are occupying the Mendell cottage, Atlantic road, Bass Rocks.

The Thorwald and Moorland hotels will open about the middle of June for the season. Both houses have excellent bookings.

ROCKPORT.—The season for Rockport and Pigeon Cove promises to be a busy one. Real estate agents have rented many cottages and hotels are heavily booked. Things at the Rockport Country club are being put into the "pink" of condition for an early opening. C. B. Martin, of Boston, has been at Land's End making arrangements for the opening of the Turk's Head Inn, and the Straitsmouth Inn will be open the first of the month.

The Rugens, of Springfield, have opened their cottage on Sandaba avenue, Land's End, Rockport, for the season.

Harold J. Laski, an instructor at Harvard college, has taken a lease of the Poole bungalow, Atlantic ave., Rockport, for the summer.

Joseph F. Reynolds, the Boston artist, has opened his pleasant summer home on Flat Point, Land's End, Rockport, for the season.

The Brock cottage on Flat Point, Land's End, has been leased to J. Dennie Thompson, of Andover, for the season.

Mrs. Jennie Tracker, of Providence, R. I., has opened her Headlands cottage, Rockport, for the season.

ANNISQUAM.—The summer inhabitants of Annisquam are gathering. Here and there along the picturesque windings of the bright blue river and the fresh green marshes, the cottages may be seen with shutters thrown back and signs of life showing again. In this quaint village, once the popular mooring of the fishing industry of Cape Ann, delightfully picturesque at every turn, hundreds of the summer population of the North Shore find recreation. On the high hills overlooking the rolling country and the stretch of sea and sand dunes, or along the wooded roads with their natural growth of foliage and field flowers, one will find people of prominence from various sections of the country located in cozy cottages, having made Annisquam their resting place for years, coming season after season, arriving early and staying late. A new-comer of prominence to Annisquam this season will be Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, president of Amherst college. He will occupy one of the pretty cottages on Norwood Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Wisewood, will come on from Washington, the last of the present month, for the season. They will have the Adams "Vista View" cottage.

There have been no new building operations at Annisquam this year. The Norton and Hawkins cottages, started last autumn, will be completed this season early for the owners. Charles L. Norton, whose new house is located at Rockholm, Annisquam, is an instructor at Mass. Institute of Technology.

Tracy Hopkin, the New York artist, and his wife, will not be at Annisquam this season. Their house will be occupied by Rev. Oliver Hart Bronson, of Salem.

Arthur Kidder and family, of Winchester, have the Adams homestead, Annisquam, for the season.

Miss Charlotte Jones, of Boston, has leased the Adams cottage, "Rocknest," for the season.

Mrs. Alice Hardwick, of Boston, widow of Melbourne H. Hardwick, the artist, has arrived at her bungalow on River road, Annisquam, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Brundage, of Washington, D. C., are occupying the Morrill cottage on Dennison st., Annisquam. Both are artists. Mrs. Brundage is a prominent illustrator of books, especially children's stories.

George R. Nutter and family, of West Cedar street, Boston, will occupy the Blair cottage, Annisquam, this season.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter O. Adams, of Erie, Pa., have arrived at their Annisquam summer home, making the trip by automobile here, from Erie.

Archibald L. Monks and family, of Brookline, will occupy "Edgehill," the Pear cottage, at Rockholm, Annisquam.

A boy ten or twelve years old, with a small plot of land, working under careful direction can produce more for the support of the family than could be purchased with the same boy's wages working in factory, shop or mill. Work is good for them, and they enjoy it. And what work could be more ideal than work in a garden?—Bureau of Education.

—DINAH MULOCK CRAIK.

TO those who have, in former years, enjoyed the cooling breezes of the North Shore during the summer months, the announcement that the far-famed New Ocean House will be opened to guests on the 15th of June, will be indeed welcome news.

There were rumors last winter that this great hotel, with its seven-story concrete Annex connected, so beautifully situated that its environment might well be the subject for a Longfellow or a Whittier poem, was to be taken over by the government. The management announced some two months ago, however, that there is no truth in these stories, and added that bookings are already large for the opening weeks.

Arthur L. Race, proprietor of Brandon Hall, Brookline, is to be manager of the New Ocean House this year. Associated with him will be Gilman N. Lougee, known to many patrons of the hotel. There is little need of introduction to the New England hotel public of Mr. Race, for he has been prominent in these circles for years. As proprietor of Brandon Hall, one of Brookline's most exclusive family hotels, he has made a great success. During the past few months he has been doing much work of a patriotic nature, speaking on the necessity of conservation of food throughout New England. Before this he was active in the work of securing cooks for the great military cantonment at Ayer. For the last three seasons he was proprietor of The Masconomo, at Manchester-by-the-Sea.

E. R. Grabow will doubtless leave much of the management of the hotel to Mr. Race and his colleague, Mr. Lougee, for he is chairman of the steamship division of the United States Food Administration and General Passenger Agent of the United Fruit Company. Owing to the fact that he is giving so much of his time to government work he will have but little opportunity to care for the managerial interests of the New Ocean House, and for this reason he has selected the men in his opinion best suited for the task.

While many of the readers of the Breeze-Reminder are thoroughly familiar with the details of the New Ocean House, which is one of the finest hotel properties of its kind in the world, a few words regarding it may not be amiss at this time.

Located twelve miles from Boston in Swampscott, facing the wide expanse of Massachusetts Bay, it stands a monument of the business enterprise of its builders and owners. During the past two years it has been greatly enlarged, re-arranged and beautified. Its capacity has been much increased and its nearness to Boston makes it easy of access.

The New Ocean House consists of two distinct portions, the main hotel and the Annex. The latter is a splendid seven-story building. The main house has 160 rooms and 80 bath rooms. The Annex has 68 rooms and 66 bath rooms. For the accommodation of patrons who prefer the privacy of cottage life, there are on the grounds of the hotel and not far from it four cottages of from eight to twelve rooms each. The total accommodation for guests is 450.

The dining room has a seating capacity of 500. It is enclosed on three sides by a continuous line of French windows, affording pleasing views of the gardens in the rear. It is further lighted by an ornamental dome thirty feet in height and sixty feet in breadth. What was formerly the dining room has been transformed into a lounge and foyer, handsomely decorated. A feature of added interest this summer will be specialty shops, representing Boston and New York firms.

This summer the hotel and cottages as a whole, will be operated on the American plan, with an optional a la carte service from six a. m. to ten p. m., at no extra charge. By this arrangement the formality of elaborate meals at stated times is done away with, and the superior convenience of a la carte repasts—what you want when you want it at a fixed price—is thus provided.

Every room in the Annex has bath adjoining, and every chamber window affords a pleasant view. The entire building is heated by steam and each room in the Annex, as well as in the main hotel, has a long-distance telephone.

The lawns that surround the hotel are spacious, level, perfectly kept and most attractive, with pergola walks, flower gardens, tennis courts, facilities for other lawn games, and comfortable seats at numerous vantage points for reading, as well as for watching the lawn sports and the bathers. The 18-hole golf course of the Tedesco Country club is located one and one-half miles distant from the hotel.

A new fireproof garage, of very large capacity, equipped with every convenience for the automobilist, is nearly

An innovation in the operation of the New Ocean House is the plan whereby the Annex—which is open completed and will be ready for occupancy this summer, from June 15 to October 1 in connection with the main hotel as a combined establishment—is continued in operation during the fall, winter and spring (from October 1 to June 15, thus being kept open the year round) as a private apartment hotel of the highest class, with suites of from one to six rooms as may be desired, and affording all the facilities of home, hotel and club life, at a single inclusive rate.

Dancing will continue to be one of the amusements of the hotel.

Upon the further side of every cloud
The sun is shining;
So turn thy darkest clouds about
And view their silver lining.

MARBLEHEAD NECK.—

Mr. and Mrs. James P. Munroe, of 12 Brimmer st., Boston, have taken for the second summer the Wheelock cottage on Nashua ave., Marblehead Neck. Mr. Munroe is president and treasurer of the Munroe Felt & Paper Co. Mrs. Munroe was Katherine Winthrop Langdon. They have one daughter, Elizabeth Winthrop.

Miss Harriet E. Clarke, of Chestnut st., Worcester, will be at "Gray Rocks" again this season. Miss Clarke is an active member of the Marblehead Neck colony, taking a lively interest in their branch of the Red Cross.

Workmen and cleaners have been busy all this month at the club house of the Eastern Yacht club on Marblehead Neck, trying to put it into order so that it may be opened on May 29. Very hard work is required to remove the traces of its occupancy by the Naval Reserves last summer, but it will be done so that the club members may have the use of their property this coming season. The house has been painted both inside and out and the tennis courts and extensive grounds are being carefully prepared. The yacht club floats are to be put overboard this week. All this indicates that there will be some yachting at Marblehead this season.

The F. E. Peabody house has been opened for the season and the large American flag which flies from a flagstaff on the lawn is the first one to make its appearance on Foster st., Marblehead Neck. The gardener is also busy and the huge beds of pansies have been put in, the first flowers to be set out on the Neck. In addition, the truck garden across the road has been planted, while the hot beds are full to overflowing with slips which will be put out when the weather becomes settled. The small orchard of dwarf fruit trees is most interesting to look at these early summer days when they are in full blossom.

The Corinthian Yacht club will open its doors for the season, June 8, and everything is being put in thorough condition for the coming season which promises to be livelier than that of last year. The G. Paul Brackett house on Ocean st., Marblehead, is one of the handsomest in that section, the white house setting back from a well kept lawn. This year the land surrounding the rear of the house has been cleared and crops are being put in.

DEVEREUX.—

Dr. and Mrs. Herbert J. Hall, of Devereux, are very much interested in promoting the work to be started to teach incapacitated soldiers. Mrs. Hall is a sister of Dr. Joel Goldthwaite, the well-known physician, who has recently returned from service and observation in hospitals in Europe, with the Smith Unit.

CLIFTON.—

John L. Smith, superintendent of the A. W. Preston place at Clifton, is one of the active men in the community in the campaign for war gardens. He is going about the district giving lectures on the early spring planting and the later cultivation of vegetables. Besides all this, he has more than time to look after his own duties at the Preston place, which has one of the finest truck gardens in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Eaton, of 44 Dexter street, Malden, will soon be at the Shore, where their summer home, "Seven Gables," at Clifton, is being put into condition. Mr. Eaton is president of the S. S. Pierce Co., of Boston.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry Ehrlich, of Commonwealth ave., Boston, are coming to their summer home at Stearns beach, Clifton, early this year, owing to the sudden spurt of warm weather. Brown and their two attractive daughters, Miss Mary and Miss Louise, have opened their home on Atlantic ave., Clifton, after spending the winter at the Copley-Plaza hotel, Boston. The family, elated with their success at farming last year, are busily engaged in getting the crops into the ground during this month.

Dr. Little did worthy service the past winter during the Halifax disaster.

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Vorenberg and family are opening "Green Gate," their attractive cottage on Puritan road, and the gardener is busily at work putting the place in order, so that it may be, as usual, one of the show places of the Lincoln Point section.

It is learned from authentic sources that the Lincoln House, situated on the point of the same name, off Puritan road, and owned by the Bergengren brothers, is to be razed, with nearby cottages, the site to be cut up into house lots. The house, one of the best known hotels on the North Shore, was built in 1864-5 by Stephen H. Wardwell, and was named in honor of President Lincoln, at the time he was assassinated. Then it accommodated but 75 guests, being three stories high and with a flat roof. In 1870 it was remodeled, a French roof being added.

About thirty years ago, after Mr. Wardwell's retirement, it was taken over by his two sons, Stephen W. and Robert B., who enlarged it for the accommodation of 175 persons.—Lynn Item.

BEACH BLUFF.—

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McGregor, of Sea View avenue, will be one of the prominent families in the social life this summer, as their home is a centre of activities. Miss Claire D. McGregor, their oldest daughter, is one of the most interesting of the younger set and wherever she goes a good time is assured. The entire family is devoted to the various sports and they are the life of the Tedesco Country club.

The new home of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll T. Brown at Beach Bluff, has been considerably improved under the strenuous work of a landscape gardener, who has laid out the grounds most artistically.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Crocker have closed their all the year-round-home on Ruby street, Beach Bluff, for the summer, as they have gone to Washington, D. C., where Mr. Crocker is engaged in government work.

LYNN.—

GLIMPSES OF NORTH SHORE ESTATES

liant garden that greeted the passerby in the summer time.

The adjoining two acres will again be planted in potatoes and about two more acres will be used, as usual, for general vegetables. This vegetable garden with its borders of flowers and greenhouse in its midst is always a picturesque spot on West street and has always abundantly supplied four houses with vegetables.

THE FRANK PIERCE FRAZIERs, of New York and West Manchester have given up their "blue" garden this year to the raising of vegetables. The blue flowers which made such a brilliant showing last year will have to rest until the war is over. Already the beds have been seeded down with winter vegetables. No seed flowers will be sown at all, only the borders of hardy plants being retained, and, of course, the wonderful rose garden and Japanese rock garden. In the latter many early blooms are noticed and the gardener reports small loss from the winter among the rare rock plants. On the bank of the little pond is a bed of yellow daffodils showing prettily out to the road.

The Frazier home commands a matchless view. From the piazza the eye sweeps over the rolling lawn, the rock garden, the rose and vegetable gardens and beyond to the beach and water-encircled Mystery islands.

The seven German shepherd puppies in the kennels are noisy guardians of the place and give a rather disconcerting welcome to visitors in the gardens.

A large cement bird-bath under the terrace near the house draws many feathered friends to its rocky and natural looking cave during the season.

*God does not send us strange flowers every year:
When the spring winds blow o'er the pleasant places,
The same dear things lift up the same fair faces—
The violet is here.*

—A. D. T. WHITNEY.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Little, of Ocean street, have opened their handsome residence again after spending several months at their apartment in New York. Mr. Little is planning great things for his Sorosis farm at Marblehead and goes down every day to superintend the work. At the Little residence, the grounds are being laid out this year, not with beds of flowers, but with vegetables, making a handsome display, as well as providing food for the household.

NAHANT.—

Lieut. Edward M. Guild, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Eliot Guild, of Ocean street, Nahant, and 102 Beacon st., Boston, has been wounded in action somewhere in France. The extent of his injuries are not yet known. The Guilds' handsome summer residence is being opened for the season, and after a few days at the Hotel Curtis, Lenox, they will take possession for the summer. Lieut. Guild was very popular with the summer people. He is a graduate of Harvard, class of 1915, attended the first Plattsburg camp and was promoted into infantry soon after his commission was received. He is a member of the Hasty Pudding club, Iroquois club, Spee club, Institute of 1770 and the D. E. K.

Edward C. Johnson, of 123 Marlboro st., Boston, will have with him at his Nahant cottage, his daughter's family, Mr. and Mrs. Vittorio Orlandini and children, of Boston.

IT is said that some of our visitors from across the sea think our women are too gay and have no real conception of the horrors of the great war and the suffering of the belligerents.

They do not know, perhaps, that it is a great idea that inspires all these gayeties. All these seemingly gay functions are to raise money to assist the war and the warriors, or to comfort and help the weak-hearted, or to feed the hungry and clothe the naked among the allies. Often they are planned and carried out by those whose hearts are heavy with grief and who, though wearing a smiling face, carry a burden almost too heavy for mortals to bear.

No work is too difficult for them when the end in view is to help the various organizations formed for the purpose of aiding where there is need. Girls who have used a needle only for the daintiest bits of embroidery, and then as a pastime, now sew and mend the coarsest garments; knitting has become an old story, and the speed with which they manipulate the yarn is only rivalled by the machine with electricity for its motive power. Artists give their best pictures; singers and actors their finest productions, all for the cause; and if they are gay and inspire gayety in others, it is helping in the great crusade that in the end will make the whole world better and happier.—Boston Herald.

The North Shore Breeze.

Boston and New York papers may be at your door every morning, but the NORTH SHORE BREEZE and Reminder will be a breezy guest on your piazza once a week. All important resorts on the Shore are covered by the BREEZE. A social calendar is a feature each week, in which the reader may easily see at a glance what will take place the following week. Old subscribers say that summer would not be complete on the Shore without the BREEZE, which was begun in 1904 in the interest of the North Shore summer colony, and is published (in magazine form) the year round.

We are ne'er like angels till our passion dies.—

EDITORIAL

WAS THERE EVER A SPRING so beautiful as that now unfolding its verdant freshness on these New England shores! Oh, how exhilarating along the hard winding roads of the North Shore, with their ever-changing landscape,—now a country road, stone walls, white apple blossoms; then into deep green pines, out! and a flash of the blue ocean; then away again, pass green lawns, inviting homes, patches of garden, thatched fences—on and on. How could the magnificence of nature or the art of man conspire to produce more wonderful views to the eye!

It seems impossible to think that in a world so beautiful, where the birds are singing so joyfully, there hangs the heavy cloud of war; that the greater part of the world is in arms, and bent on killing. Those who are here as well as those who are “over there,” have sorely felt the strain of the past few months, and it will be a solace and a relief to many an anxious mind and heavy heart, to return to the re-creating peace and rest of these North Shore surroundings.

Frivolities and absurdities never were characteristic on the North Shore. Life here is different. Wine suppers, extravagances and excesses have never been in any way associated with the high character and intelligence of the families who have found a haven here.

Very many families of the North Shore summer colony are represented by sons “at the front”—in the aviation corps, in relief work and in the trenches. A Roll of Honor would include the names of nearly every other family here.

The leading activities this season promise to be in relief work, knitting, bandage making, and functions for the raising of funds for all the soldier boys.

If you can come now, yet delay your coming, you will miss one of the best springs we ever had. Last year on Memorial Day the lilacs were still in the bud; this year, as we write, they are in full and luxuriant bloom.

This special issue of the BREEZE will go to many who know the North Shore slightly or perhaps not at all. Our message to them is this: All who are in earnest sympathy with the war; all who want relaxation, amid beautiful surroundings; all who wish to shun high social life this season; all who love the sport of yachting (which has been sanctioned and encouraged by the government),—these will find the North Shore the most delightful spot on earth during the season of 1918.

SUMMER ON THE NORTH SHORE is Nature's own handiwork. It invites to rest and to recreation on land and on sea. A few days or weeks spent in the bracing air of this section is an exhilarating tonic to the weary, and the change likewise is a delight to those who come from states where summer is oppressive. The North Shore—all New England, in fact—is a wonderful re-invigorator in summer. Come, partake of its beauties, its wonderful beaches, its motor roads, its delightful drives, its woods, its hills, its fields—come to New England, the playground of America!

WHEN THE LIBERTY LOAN has been over-subscribed nearly forty percent, it indicates that America expects to make her dollars do their duty. Germany will take notice!

MEMORIAL DAY RETURNS once more for our observance, but this year it is freighted with new memories of the greatest struggle of the ages. The Grand Army of the Republic has maintained with reverence the traditions of the past with a devotion and faithfulness that is commendable, by caring for the graves of the soldier and sailor dead of the nation, those who have died for our liberties in the establishment of our nation, the Revolutionary War, the Great Civil War and now the great world war. The people are united now as they have never been in the history of our country by the common suffering of the hour. The President has named the 30th of May as the day for national humiliation and prayer. How better can the purposes and intent of the day be carried out than by a universal observation of Memorial Day? For years the Grand Army has maintained the patriotic traditions of the nation and this year, all the people with their hearts saddened by the losses of the war, will unite with them with a new feeling and spirit. Too long have the people been unmindful of the real meaning of the day. Memorial Day is not a day for frivolities, pastimes, picnics, recreational tournaments and secular labor. Let all the people heed the President's call and observe the day with a free will and a loyal heart!

THE STAGE IS SET! Everything is in readiness for the actors. Mother Nature took pity on us and hastened the setting of her stage fully two weeks or more ahead of time. Not in years have the lilacs and kindred flowers bloomed so long before Memorial Day. Last year they were not out for the day, but now the cry is that there will be no flowers by that time. Never did the whole Shore look more beautiful in May; never did the splendid roads and drives appeal to the passerby as in this May. Great spread-out bushes and clumps of lilacs, hedge-rows of them, and delicate shrubs just starting—all laden with the most exquisite blooms in white and lavender. And the smell—well it is wafted everywhere, and seems even to be mixed with printers' ink. Not only is Nature doing her part, but the vanguard has come and prepared the dwellings for the actors, and those “who know” say that June 1 or thereabouts will see the big exodus from town life to the North Shore.

THE EARLY SPRING has brought with its good cheer the evidences of the hard winter. Valuable plants show the intensity of the severe cold. Beautiful California privets all along the Shore are being cut back although the roots are showing signs of life, but it will take at least three years for the hedges to recover from the effects of the winter's blight. Box-wood hedges and box-wood trees used for decorative purposes are dead. The buds on peach trees have undoubtedly been affected. Small fruit trees have been found cracked by the intense cold weather. Many valuable plants that have been carefully removed from warmer climates and rooted in northern climes in hopes that they would become acclimated, have perished. It is impossible to calculate the great losses of valuable plants in money or appreciation by flower lovers. The unfortunate thing is that because of war conditions many of the plants cannot be replaced because all shipments from abroad have been discontinued.

HOME RULE WITHOUT the obligations which such sovereignty involves would be a farce. The deputation which will be sent to America to present reasons why one part of the allied world should be excused from the military responsibilities of the present situation, will obtain a hearing, and that a just hearing, from the American people, but the very best way for the Isle in the Sea to demonstrate the worth and loyalty of the inhabitants to the allied cause is by assuming the military responsibilities of the hour. It is inconceivable that any nation or part of a nation that has borne a true and faithful part in this struggle will be denied in the councils of the nations the justice which their cause demands. No one would deny to Ireland any rights or liberties, but would insist upon the maintenance of those rights and liberties by a faithful discharge of military obligations. The Hun must be pressed back. This is the primary question at the present hour. Nothing else counts. Every available man of military age must be ready, willing and enthusiastic for service, and Ireland, with all the nations of the earth, must "play up and play the game."

MASSACHUSETTS HAS DETERMINED upon a plan of action relative to the maintenance of war charities. Already the public has known the value of the work done in Massachusetts to regulate and to restrict the activities of charitable organizations in the state. The same regulation should be extended to the war charities and a very careful and discriminating counsel should adjudge, regulate, and if necessary prohibit the activities of any war charity in order that the funds of the well-intentioned Americans may be well invested, duplication of work avoided and money conserved. The state proposes to appoint a Board of Supervisors of War Charities for this purpose. The bonafide charities will welcome and will have everything to gain and nothing to lose by the arrangement and the pseudo charities that are mulcting the public will find their work made more difficult, if not completely obstructed. The bill should become law.

THE PRESIDENT HAS PROCLAIMED a new registration day—June 5—when every young man, alien or citizen, who has become 21 since June 5, 1917, must present himself to the Board of Registrars in his district. No young man is exempt. The new registration will make available nearly 800,000 men. This is one of the necessities of the war situation and every parent should see that every young man of 21 should register.

AMERICA AND CANADA now have a community of interest that cannot be denied. Before the war, the Canadian peoples and America fraternized with a good spirit, but the war has intensified that feeling by eliminating once and for all any differences fancied or real which existed between the countries. Reciprocity in sympathy, human interests and political aims as far as the great war is concerned now exists beyond a peradventure of a doubt. Canada realized more quickly than did the United States the importance of the great struggle over seas and for three years was fighting, with the motherland against Germany for the freedom of the seas, the rights of all nations to be self-determining in their type of civilization and the rights of small nations to the pursuit of liberty and the choice of political administrations. Now, America has awakened and Canadians and Americans are allies in the truest sense to win from Germany the right of self-determination and the privileges of freedom. Mr. Root's tribute to Canada was opportune, just and honorable. All America rejoices that Canada has been loyal to the motherland in this great struggle and that the two countries are now associated in the great war for liberty, equality and justice. America respects, honors and loves Canada for her heroic stand.

THIS IS LILAC WEEK along the North Shore and the blooms are breaking with a profusion. The buds have been forced along by the unusually warm weather of the last three weeks so that the season is fully two weeks earlier than last year. Then, the lilacs had not bloomed fully Memorial Day and this year those who have depended upon them for Memorial Day will be obliged to find other flowers. There are all kinds of lilacs and one with a flower guide might easily find most of the varieties known in this section of the country. The shrubbery has come on this year wonderfully well and motorists are having an unusual opportunity to enjoy the blessings of nature.

"WHEN THE WOMEN OF AMERICA realize that nothing in the world counts but the winning of this war—it is won. You women who are natural born hoarders, give up that precious little pile of savings, so painfully accumulated."

THE FIRST AERIAL FLIGHT has been taken by the Washington and New York mail service. "The world do move"; up in the air at that.

North Shore Kitchens in War Time

"ON the family table you can Hooverize, but you cannot on the help's table. The family will do with a made-over dish, while the help will turn up their noses at such a dish. If the help were kept to some rules, then the cook would know what she has in her ice-box for the different tables. The help rule the kitchen in many places and if the cook says anything, then she is considered 'hard' to get along with." Such are the sentiments and experiences of a North Shore cook, Mrs. Augusta Gallagher, who has been in prominent homes in New York and Boston, besides on the Shore.

In some mysterious way the cook is blamed for the help's lack of taste and appreciation for left-overs. Verily the days of a cook are not all sunshine. With so many different tastes to cater to, both on the family table and on the help's table, with a limited amount of food, with a conscience that does not sanction throwing out good food—these are some of the trials of a cook who has caught the spirit of Hoover. Mrs. Gallagher was raised in Sweden and was early taught to save food. She says that she has always cooked the food for the help's table in as palatable a manner as possible. According to her they prefer nothing but meat, freshly cooked vegetables and rich desserts, while the wise cook can concoct the most appetizing dishes out of a bit of left-over meat, a tablespoon of chopped meat adding much to the improvement of a simple egg dish for six people. She says that cooks who know all the branches of cooking and have a strong dislike for throwing out food can take readily to Hoover ideas.

The following recipes are original with her and make excellent luncheon dishes, often using up many scraps:

Put a little chopped meat in pop-over cups and drop an egg on it and set in the oven to cook. The egg turned out with the bits of meat on top and placed on a slice of toast, a half of a toasted muffin, or on a mushroom, and served with a white sauce, tomato sauce, or mushroom sauce, makes a tasty egg dish out of the ordinary.

Stuffed Cabbage

2 cups of any left-over meat, chopped fine
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup of cooked rice
 $\frac{3}{4}$ cup soaked bread crumbs (use milk)
 1 egg

In mixing, if too stiff, add a little milk. Boil the cabbage until the leaves will roll without breaking. Put a spoonful of the mixture in each leaf, fold and drop in a skillet in which a sliced onion has been added to the fat. Cook with a cover on until the leaves are a golden brown, and serve with a sauce made from the juice left in the skillet.

Her macedoine of fruit has been made and much approved in the Chas. F. Ayer family and also in that of the late Frederick Ayer. She takes any kind of left-over fruit, melons, chestnuts, etc., sweetens and sets the mixture aside until three hours before serving, when she puts it in a mold to freeze until as hard as ice cream. Maraschino wine is added to the fruit with the sugar. She serves this with cake at a dinner or a luncheon.

More of her recipes will be given next week.

Food Administrator Henry B. Endicott, who is to be of the North Shore colony this year, is now urging the use of cornmeal, as there is an abundance of it on the Boston market at five to eight cents per pound, and a liberal use of it now will aid in the saving of white flour. He is also urging this week the use of barley and oatmeal.

Boston's men's clubs are abjuring the use of white flour and their superintendents are having open conferences for an exchange of ideas. The BREEZE wishes to do its "bit" in the food conservation game and will each week have something in regard to war cooking. An exchange of ideas can thus be made of much benefit. The BREEZE will endeavor to interview as many mistresses and cooks as possible, and will also welcome war recipes from its readers.

The North Shore in War Work

BEVERLY FARMS' Red Cross workroom (always proud of being workroom No. 1 in Essex County) has grown in its attendance and usefulness since last season. The great need for surgical dressings has been nobly met by the Farms people this winter and now that the summer colony is coming on it is conceded beforehand that the workroom, situated so conveniently in the Public Library, will draw its full quota of workers from their midst.

Mrs. Robert W. Means was the chairman of the workroom last season. She spent the winter in Boston and her work was taken up by Mrs. Chas. M. Cabot, of Boston, who remained at the Farms all winter, and who will now conduct the work this summer.

Sewing is not done in this workroom, only the making of dressings and knitting in the homes. The winter's work has turned out 350 knitted articles, including socks, sweaters, trench mitts, helmets, mufflers and wristlets.

Work is progressing now on the 100 "front line" packets required. These are the only dressings made and sterilized in this country and sent direct to the firing line, all others being sent to base hospitals, etc. The contents include 1 pad, 2 bias bandages, 4 gauze compresses, 1 applicator and 2 tampons, the whole wrapped and sealed making a little packet 6x4 in.

The room is open Monday all day and evening; Tuesday evening, Wednesday afternoon, Thursday afternoon and evening and Friday afternoon. Monday night has been reserved for the Foresters, Thursday for the Baptist church societies, Friday afternoons for the Woman's Relief Corps, thus leaving all day Monday, Tuesday evening, Wednesday afternoon, and Friday afternoon open. There is an average attendance of 200 workers a month.

Women in charge of the workroom on various days include Mrs. Thomas Connolly, Mrs. Edward Campbell, Mrs. Howard Doane, Miss Jennie Bolam, Mrs. George Wood, Miss Mary Murray and Mrs. Frank I. Lamasney.

The Farms workers extend a cordial invitation to join their forces and thus make this one of the strongest little workrooms on the Shore.

"If you love me, weigh me"

BABY power today—man power tomorrow. Have your children under five weighed and measured.

The children's year began April 6, and was planned by Miss Julia Lathrop, of the Federal Children's Bureau, to call attention to the children of the United States so that we may not sacrifice our children in this second year of the war. The weighing and measuring test is the first feature of the work—all of which is planned to protect children from the special dangers of war time and to save the lives of 100,000 little children before Apr. 6, 1919.

Many of the physical defects which caused the rejection of one-third of the men coming up for examination in the first draft are believed to date from some slight trouble neglected in early childhood. And the children's bureau emphasizes the fact that a higher standard of physical fitness in the rising generation can be assured only by greater attention to the physical condition of children.

According to the bureau, height and weight and their relation to each other are a rough index of a young child's health and development. For instance, when a child is strikingly below the average weight for his height or is strikingly small for his age, it indicates that expert advice about diet and daily care is needed. Insofar as the test makes it plain to parents that the physical condition of their children needs special attention, and insofar as it leads to community provision for public-health nurses and consultation centers for babies and young children, to a safeguarding of the milk supply, and to other measures for the protection of children, it will aid in conserving their health and in reaching the goal of 100,000 lives saved during children's year.

The record card which the children's bureau has prepared for this test gives a table of average heights and weights for boys and girls at birth, at every month of age from the 6th to the 48th and at every year from the 5th to the 16th. One-half of the card will be retained by the parents. It includes the table of heights and weights and has blanks for subsequent records so that parents can watch the child's growth; for while a single examination is valuable a series of examinations is far more valuable.

The other half of the card provides also for recording the height and weight of the child at the time of the national test. It will be used by the local committee in analyzing the facts about its own community and then it will be forwarded to the children's bureau at Washington.

Miss Marion Tucker, who will come to the Manchester home with her parents, the William A. Tuckers, next week, has kept in close touch with her navy league work in the Manchester schools this winter. Just now white socks and a white sweater are underway, also gray socks for the Red Cross. Girls in the 4th and 5th grades are making socks and also knitted squares for an afghan.

WORKROOMS

THE executive committee of the Manchester Red Cross met for regular monthly meeting, May 13, at the home of Mrs. Raymond C. Allen. Working committees for the year were appointed as follows: Mrs. Wm. H. Coolidge, chairman of the workroom; Mrs. Ellery L. Rogers, vice-chairman of the workroom.

Committee on sewing: Mrs. E. L. Rogers, Mrs. Frank P. Bullock, Mrs. Wm. Hawkesworth, Mrs. Thomas Baker, Mrs. S. Albert Sinnicks, Mrs. E. S. Knight, Mrs. G. S. Sinnicks, Miss Theresa O'Neil.

Committee on First Aid: Dr. F. L. Burnett, Mrs. R. C. Allen, Mrs. Leonardo W. Carter, Miss Grace McGregor, Dr. R. T. Glendenning.

Committee on knitting: Mrs. J. W. Campbell, Mrs. W. B. Calderwood, Mrs. Allen S. Peabody.

Receiving and packing: Mrs. J. J. Connors, Mrs. David Fenton.

Purchasing supplies: Mrs. Wm. H. Coolidge.

Relief of needy families: Mrs. Wm. Follett, Mrs. John Baker.

Publicity: I. M. Marshall, J. Alex. Lodge.

THE next meeting of the Manchester Red Cross workroom will be held in the basement of Horticultural hall, Wednesday afternoon, May 29. Though it was a question whether the ladies would like so well to work here as in the old quarters, the executive committee decided that the Manchester workroom should be situated for the summer months, where the greatest number of workers would prefer to come, and where the largest amount of work would be accomplished, and Horticultural hall seemed to fill this bill best.

But it is sincerely hoped that all the ladies that have worked so faithfully in the past will feel as the committee does, and not only come to all the meetings possible, but bring their friends and neighbors that have not been in the habit of attending.

Everyone's help is much needed and desired, and more and more so, as this terrible war goes on; and because the number of workers may be increased by summer residents coming, we must not let our work slacken in the least. The War Service is counting on each and every one, wherever they are, in the summer or winter.

The workroom will be open several days each week for sewing, surgical dressings and knitting, but on account of reorganization in the bureau of supplies we are asked not to increase the work days till allotments for work can be arranged and given to each branch.

All work, including hospital garments, surgical dressings and knitted goods, will, in the future, be produced according to allotments given out from headquarters.

These are taken from government orders, that come direct from General Pershing, and others in command in France, to the American Red Cross. It is expected these quotas will come in the first of June.

As each worker is a part of this great organization, the American Red Cross, that is trying to serve our men across the sea in the very best possible way, and to the very best of their ability, let us join the ranks with more zeal, and work this summer like the soldiers, ready to do whatever our government asks, and coöperate without criticism in every possible way, meeting the orders that come to us from the Red Cross headquarters.

—CHAIRMAN OF THE WORKROOM.

TOPSFIELD has a very prosperous club, known as the Friendly club, organized several years ago by Mrs. Thomas W. Pierce, Mrs. Percy Chase and Mrs. F. Percy Smerage. About sixty-five members are in it and all are intensely interested in the Special Aid work in the town, and have loaned their club rooms the past winter for the work and will do so another winter. For the summer months the society will work in the vestry of the Methodist church and has moved in this week with the coming of the summer colony.

The officers include Miss Katherine Wellman, president; Mrs. W. H. Herrick, vice-president; Mrs. Thomas L. Jenkins, treasurer; Miss Elizabeth D. Peabody, secretary; Mrs. Thomas W. Peirce, chairman of surgical dressings committee; Mrs. James Duncan Phillips, chairman of wool committee; Miss Florence Janes, chairman of sewing committee; Mrs. F. Percy Smerage, committee on classes; Mrs. Harry Pon, chairman in charge of children of the society.

Miss Helen Jordan, the first president of the Topsfield Friendly club, has been in France the past two years, nursing.

In addition to the twenty-one birds noted a week ago at the pond by Lobster Cove on the Wm. L. Putnam estate, Smith's Point, Manchester, the same bird student saw the following this past Saturday: Maryland yellow-throat, humming bird, water thrush, Wilson's warbler, kingfisher, and oven bird. New birds seen Sunday on Powder House hill, Manchester, were the wood pewee, kingbird, blackpoll warbler and red-eyed vireo.

"The coming registration of women is important because women are going to be called upon more and more to take the places of men who go to war. For a time we thought rolling bandages and scraping lint was the only thing women could do. Many women like spectacular stunts. They seem more military. I never knew there were so many women who wanted to go to France.

"Every woman over 48 years old who was never taught to do anything and can't speak French wants to go to France. Our country needs the army of women at home just as much as the army of men in France. It needs the same kind of devotion from its women as from its men."

MOST SUCCESSFUL ENTERTAINMENT FOR BENEFIT OF MANCHESTER RED CROSS

Manchester's Red Cross society profited by $76.05 this week when the Sandy Bay Dramatic club of Rockport, presented the four-act drama "The American Flag," before a full house at the Town hall, Wednesday evening. F. J. Merrill, chairman of the society, spoke briefly before the curtain rose, thanking the Boy Scouts for filling the house by their energetic ticket selling, and Long's orchestra which had volunteered its services for the evening, giving an enjoyable program throughout the affair. The actors also came in for a word of appreciation from Mr. Merrill, who spoke of their zeal and enthusiasm in getting up such a timely, patriotic play and that all of the net proceeds were given to the Red Cross. They have played twice in Rockport, and in Lanesville.

The actors include Esther Swanson (Dixie McMillan, a little patriot); Homer Orne (Judge Oliver, American consul in France); Alice Lawson June Oliver, an American girl in France; George Taylor (Bob McMillan, a brave young American); Lillian Lawson Bremer (Rozika, a Hungarian gypsy girl); Wilbert Rowley (Karl Steinberg, a German officer); Charles M. Stevens (Kommandant Wolff, a German officer); Arthur G. Leman (Ignatz Schell, an honest Israelite); Wilbert Rowley (Major Marvin, an American officer). It was really an "all-star" assembly.

The readings by Mrs. Sidney H. Savage and vocal selections by Mrs. Vincie Cooney Grier, between acts were greatly appreciated also.

Miss Norris accompanied Sub-Freshmen pupils to the Peabody museum, in Salem, last Saturday to see the special exhibit of relics of the present war.

Mrs. Frank P. Bullock, of 18 Norwood ave., who underwent a slight operation at the Peabody hospital last Saturday, is doing well this week and rapidly recovering from the effects of it.

Benjamin G. Foster and family, who have been living in Boston the last few months, will move back to their home on Central street, tomorrow. Mr. Foster has a position at the Crosby Steam Guage plant in Somerville.

Douglas Foster and Wilbur Standley, 6th graders, captured a prize turtle this week in the brook back of E. S. Knight's. It was a snapper and weighed about twenty pounds, measuring two feet in length and one foot in width. They fished it out with a dip net and pole and after showing it around town tied its tail with a slip-knot, but it escaped from the Foster home dragging tub and rope down to the water. The boys declare they will re-capture it.

The North Shore Horticultural society met last Friday night in the Manchester Horticultural hall. The meeting was not largely attended owing to "busy times" among the gardeners and the speaker could not be present. On June 7, a talk will be given on "Spraying" and June 21, "Canning" will be given in the afternoon, by Mr. Farley, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. This last lecture ought to bring out all of the housewives. Lectures are always open to the public.

THE LATEST SONG THE SOLDIER BOYS ARE SINGING

"I'm Gonna Pin My Medal on the Girl I Left Behind," is the name of the latest song the soldier boys are singing. It is the newest thing out and was written by Irving Berlin, a private in the Depot Brigade at Camp Upton. It is sent to us by a Manchester young man, Sergeant Peter J. Wilson. The chorus of the song is as follows:

I'm gonna pin my medal on the girl I left behind
She deserves it more than I
For the way she said good bye
You should have seen her try
To keep away the tears that blind
A braver hero would be hard to find
She puts a smile in ev'ry letter that she signs

DR. WILLIS, OF MANCHESTER, AT THE FRONT TWO MONTHS

Mrs. E. M. Latons, of Manchester, who is improving as rapidly as possible from an injured knee, the result of a fall over two weeks ago, received a pleasant little note this week from her old-time boarder and friend, Lt. Frank A. Willis, who is in France. The letter was written on April 23. The doctor says:

"I think of my good friends in Manchester very often, indeed, and this brief message is a forerunner of a long letter which I hope to find time to write you. We are kept extremely busy all the time and our time for writing is limited, but I hope I will find a few spare hours in the near future. We have been to the front for two months and our division is in for the second time. I have charge of the work on the detachments in the area of repose, and on the German prisoners in this area, of whom there are many."

SHE KNEW FROM EXPERIENCE

"What is conscience?" asked the Sunday school teacher.

There was dead silence from the class.

"Oh, you know," she said encouragingly. "What is it that tells us when we do wrong?"

"I know," said the littlest girl in the class; "it's grandma."

"When any lady comes to see Aunt Eliza, said Harold, they both talk at once all the time, and yet each of 'em seems to hear what the other one's saying. I can't make out how they do it. Grownup people are so clever!" — KENNETH GRAHAME in Golden Age.

MAGNOLIA

Mrs. Abbie Story and Mrs. Alice Foster spent the week-end in Winchester visiting relatives.

Mrs. Octavia Wilkins, of Cambridge, is occupying one of her cottages on Magnolia Point, for a few weeks.

Miss Dolly Malanison met with a painful accident last Sunday morning by falling on a piece of glass and cutting her knee quite badly.

Oscar P. Story has recently purchased the Newton house on Summer street, and he and his family have already moved into it.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Walter S. Eaton attended the public reception given to Miss Cassandra M. Barrows Wednesday evening in the City hall, Revere, and in honor of her long and faithful services as teacher and principal of the public schools of that city. For more than a decade Dr. Eaton was Miss Barrows' pastor.

Among those, in this village, who took part in the Red Cross parade in Gloucester, Monday night, were Lt. John J. Burke, who though a busy lawyer, is giving much time to his country and in ways not generally known to the public, and Laura Abbott the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Abbott, who has won honors in athletics.

Services will be held in the Village church next Sunday at 10.45 a. m. and at 7.30 p. m. Dr. Eaton will preach at the morning service and after a brief service of song and prayer work for the soldiers' relief will be the order for the evening. Last Sunday evening the men folded 72 bandages or 7 more than they did the Sunday previous.

The May Party that was given in the Women's clubhouse last Saturday evening was largely attended and was a social event that will not soon be forgotten. After an entertainment of songs and recitations by the young people and under the direction of Mrs. Dennis C. Ballou, the boys and girls wound the ribbons around the May pole and then all, both young and old, enjoyed the rest of the evening dancing, and during which time refreshments were served.

Among those who are collecting for the Red Cross this week are Mrs. John Burke, Mrs. Leon Foster, Mrs. Frank Abbott, Mrs. Edward Wilkinson, Mrs. Alice Foster, Mrs. Fred S. Lycett, Mrs. George Adams, and Miss Mary Abbott. Acting upon the suggestion that Dr. Eaton made to the members of his congregation last

The Farmer's Share

Livestock is marketed from farmer to consumer at a lower cost than almost any other farm product.

The United States Department of Agriculture reported in 1916 that the farmer gets for his cattle "approximately two-thirds to three-fourths" of the final retail price paid by the consumer for the resulting beef.

Under normal conditions, the farmers' share of retail prices of various farm products is approximately as follows:

Butter	71 per cent
CATTLE	66 2-3 to 75 per cent
Eggs	65 per cent
Potatoes	55 per cent
Poultry	45 per cent
Fruits	35 per cent

The difference between farmer's price and retail price represents the necessary expenses of packing, freight and wholesale and retail distribution.

Swift & Company not only performs the manufacturing operations of preparing cattle for market in its well-equipped packing plants, but it pays the freight on meat to all parts of the United States, operates 500 branch distributing houses, and in most cases even delivers to the retail butcher. All this is done at an expense of less than 2 cents per pound, and at a profit of only about 1-4 of a cent per pound of beef.

Large volume of business and expert management, make possible this indispensable service to the live-stock raiser and to the consumer, and make possible the larger proportion of retail prices received by farmers.

COPLEY THEATRE, BOSTON

"Arms and the Girl," a play entirely new to Boston audiences, will be given by the Henry Jewett Players at the Copley theatre, next week. Its production in New York some months ago attracted no little attention, and it has been hailed as one of the strongest and most entertaining of dramas dealing with the present war. Its authors are Robert Baker and Grant Stewart, and they have made an especial appeal to theatre-goers by placing its action in Belgium in the early days of the German invasion.

The plot, the characters, the scenes, and the dialogue of "Arms and the Girl" are picturesque in the extreme. Its incidents deal with an unpremeditated marriage of two young Americans, who were total strangers to each other, up to the time of their meeting in an inn in the Belgian town of Beaupre in the days when the Germans were overrunning the city, and both comedy and drama mingle throughout the course of the play.

"Do you see that young fellow working hard over there?" said the manager of a factory. "He's made up his mind that some day he is going to get my job away from me." "Is that so?" said the visitor. "I shouldn't think you'd keep him around here, then." "Great Scott, man, I'd be very lucky if every fellow in this factory had the same idea!"

Duty is doing the right thing at the right time.

Louis Hamberger, a well-known Beverly Farms young man, was among those who were awarded the degree of bachelor of law at the commencement exercises, Boston university, on Monday. He is not 21 until August and will be given his parchment when he reaches his majority.

BEVERLY FARMS. PASTOR WRITES A PRAYER-HYMN FOR OUR MEN

Rev. Clarence Strong Pond, of Beverly Farms, has written a prayer-hymn, which he has dedicated to "our loyal men" and to the faithful workers for the Red Cross in every land,—"a prayer-hymn for our men, for our allies true, for our beloved country and for a righteous, victorious peace." It was sung last Sunday at the special Red Cross meeting at the Beverly Farms Baptist church for the first time and became instantly popular. It is as follows:

God bless our loyal men,
Serving on land and main,

Our loyal men.
Faithful as nations call,
Valiant, as heroes fall,
O God save them all,

Our loyal men.
God bless our Allies' stand
For Truth and native land,
Our Allies true.
While cruel battles roar,
Guard them on sea and shore,
Honored evermore,
Our Allies true.

God bless our belov'd land,
Guide her by thine own hand,
For Truth and Right.
When enemies plan harm,
When echoes war's alarm,
Protect by thine arm,
For Truth and Right.

Our Father—God to thee,
Guardian of Liberty,
To thee we pray,—
That our right arm be strong,
Strength'ning right, righting wrong.
To sing vict'ry's song,
O God We pray.

SUMMER OPERA IN BOSTON

Back to the good old days of summer opera in Boston. Henry W. Savage, who has more musical comedy successes to his credit than any other producer, is the good fairy who turns the pages backward over the last few years and inaugurates a summer season of musical comedy at the Tremont theatre, Boston.

The keenest interest is displayed in the announcement that Mr. Savage will offer "the only Mitzi" in a new play with music, entitled "Head Over Heels," at the Tremont theatre, Saturday evening, May 25. Mitzi is considered America's foremost prima donna comedienne today and is the only player that Mr. Savage has elevated to stardom during his theatrical career.

"Head Over Heels" is the romance of a little girl acrobat, who comes to America with her "brothers and sisters" of the troupe. Head over heels

The Girls' club of the Baptist church will hold its annual "At Home" at the chapel this evening.

Miss Althea Manning, of Hartford, Conn., has been spending her vacation at Beverly Farms, visiting friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. McKenzie, of New Rochelle, N. Y., have been among the visitors at Beverly Farms, the past week.

Albert Powers, a well-known Beverly young man, who has been at the city proper bank of the Beverly Trust Co. for some time, was this week transferred to take charge of the Beverly Farms branch.

Miss Edith Marshall, who has spent the past winter at St. Augustine, Fla., and who returned home in April, left this week for Bemis, Me., where she will spend the summer. At Bemis, Miss Marshall will be employed, as last year, at "The Birches," the largest and most popular summer hotel in that vicinity.

Edmund L. McDonnell and George Drinkwater, Jr., two well-known Beverly Farms boys, who are in the U. S. service and have been in training camps in the south since last fall, came north this week with their detachments, which are expected to start "over seas" within a few days. They were home on Wednesday and yesterday for brief furloughs. The boys are looking well and are anxious to get into active service as soon as possible.

Beverly Farms was called upon and was not found lacking in contributing its share for the Red Cross fund this week. In the drive, the Beverly Farms committee is known on the list as Team 11, consisting of the following members: Frank I. Lamasney, capt.; Howard A. Doane, Frank I. Preston, F. W. Varney, Dr. C. M. Murray, Percy Huxley, Edwin F. Campbell, George S. Williams, Harold Varney and Howard P. Williams. They have done splendid work, and by dividing up the village, giving each collector certain streets, where house to house canvass was made, they have reached nearly every person, with the result that the amount collected was indeed most gratifying. The great good that the Red Cross has done and will do in the work of caring for the wounded and the families of the killed and wounded across the water, must appeal to all. If you have not already been asked to contribute, do not wait, but send your mite to any of the above named committee.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Matthews, of Augusta, Me., have been visiting friends at Beverly Farms the past week.

The Public Service dept., has applied road oil to portions of certain streets in Beverly Farms during the past week.

Naylor's bus line, after a short vacation, is again running. The schedule is a new one, for the bus now runs between Beverly and Manchester, stopping in Beverly Farms to pick up or drop passengers.

Registration of young men who have reached the age of 21 since June 5th, 1917, will take place at the aldermanic chamber, Beverly City hall, on Wednesday June 5th. The registration will open at 7 a. m. and close at 9 p. m. At Beverly Farms there are numerous well-known young men whom this new draft registration will affect.

Next Thursday is Memorial Day. The program at Beverly Farms is practically the same as in past years. The line will form at 1.30 p. m. in Central square, consisting of the police, North Shore Cadet Band, the members of the Beverly Farms fire department, Andrew Standley Camp, S. of V., Preston Post, 188, G. A. R., and invited guests. After a short march up Hale st., the line will counter march through Hale to High st., to the Beverly Farms cemetery, where Preston W. R. Corps, and the school children, will join in the exercises. The usual ritual services will be held and the graves of departed comrades decorated. The line will then be reformed and march through Hart, Hale and Beach sts., to West beach, where Preston W. R. Corps will hold services in honor of the sailor dead. The march then will be up West street to Central square. Spanish War veterans are invited to march with the other organizations, and all citizens are cordially invited to join and cooperate in carrying out the services. Another Beverly Farms young man anxious to do his bit, is Dr. Daniel F. Murphy, who applied for service in the U. S. Medical Corps, the past week.

Mrs. Alexander Campbell has leased her house on Warren st., Montserrat, and plans to move to Beverly Farms. She is to occupy apartments in the Marshall house, 45 Hart st.

The North Shore Cadet Band will furnish music for the Cabot street promenade in Beverly tomorrow evening. They will also play for Preston Post, 188, G. A. R., in Beverly Farms, on Memorial Day.

Miss Helen Donnelly, who has spent the past two weeks visiting her parents in Clinton, returns to Beverly Farms today. Next week, Miss Donnelly resumes her old position as one of the "Hello Girls" at the local telephone exchange.

Owing to the scarcity of flowers for Memorial Day, Preston Post, 188, G. A. R., will appreciate very much indeed, any contribution of flowers sent to them. A committee will be at G. A. R. hall in the forenoon of Memorial Day to receive all donations of flowers sent in.

Station Agent W. E. McDonald moved his family back to Beverly Farms the first of the week. They have spent the time since last fall in New Mexico, where they went to benefit Mrs. McDonald's health. She is somewhat improved, and all are happy to be back again to little old Beverly Farms.

Mrs. Roy K. Patch (Almira Williams) was one of a party of Beverly people to go on to New York, Tuesday, to meet the Beverly boys, who are members of Field Hospital Unit, 30, just coming north, after a winter's training in the south, to Camp Upton, N. AMERICAN DESTROYERS IN SUBMARINE ZONE COVER MANY MILES

Some indication of the ceaseless watch kept on the high seas, in the path of American troopships, by United States naval forces operating in European waters, may be gained from statistics just compiled at the naval headquarters in London. These statistics show that a single force of American destroyers operating from one base had steamed almost 1,500,000 miles up to April 1. The maximum distance covered by a single destroyer was more than 580,000 miles from May 1, 1917, to April 1, 1918. This destroyer was one of the first to arrive abroad after war was declared.

It has been announced that Vice-Admiral Wm. S. Sims, commanding United States naval forces abroad, offered to send an auxiliary force composed of naval units to the French front at the beginning of the German offensive. The chief of staff of the French navy and General Foch did not consider that the circumstances demanded the presence of such a force at the front.

The French have had a naval division operating in the forces of the Lorraine sector for some time and the naval units have made their part of the line as shipshape as possible, with everything from big naval guns down to sleeping hammocks and ships' cats.

The American soldiers billeted in England for temporary training or enroute for France are more and more compelling the admiration and coöperation of the English people. The National Sporting club, of London, has started a series of weekly entertainments for enlisted men of the United States army and navy.

NEW PLAN OFFERS MILITARY INSTRUCTION TO COLLEGE STUDENTS

Military instruction, under officers and non-commissioned officers of the army, will be provided in every institution of college grade which enrolls for the instruction 100 or more able-bodied students over the age of 18, beginning in September, 1918. The necessary military equipment will, so far as possible, be provided by the government. There will be created a military training unit in each institution. Enlistment will be purely voluntary, but all students over the age of 18 will be encouraged to enlist.

The enlistment will constitute the student a member of the army of the United States, liable to active duty at the call of the President. It will, however, be the policy of the government not to call the members of the training units to active duty until they have reached the age of 21, unless urgent military necessity compels an earlier call. Students under 18, and therefore not legally eligible for enlistment, will be encouraged to enroll in the training units. Provision will be made for coordinating the reserve officers' training corps system, which exists in about one-third of the collegiate institutions, with this broader plan.

SEE YOUR OWN FAULTS

Make sure that, however good you may be, you have faults that, however dull you may be, you can find out what they are and that, however slight they may be, you would better make some patient effort to get quit of them.—RUSKIN.

One kind of a hypocrite is the man who after thanking the Lord for his dinner, proceeds to find fault with the cook.

—SHIPBUILDING AT ITS BEST IN THESE WAR DAYS.

Essex is humming with shipbuilders these war days. For the past 25 years the two oldest yards—Story's and James'—have had just work enough to keep the industry alive. Today the James' has two vessels about ready to launch. One is a beam trawler and the other a fisherman, built on familiar lines and looking trim enough for a cup defender. Both these vessels will have auxiliary power.

The beam trawler is being constructed for Frank C. Pearce of Gloucester, well-known in the fishing trade in that city. She is to be christened the Pioneer, inasmuch as she has several new features, which will be tried out for the first time. She will have a twin screw propelled by a crude oil engine. The Pioneer is 140 feet over all, 22 feet wide, and will draw about 14 feet of water.

The fisherman is 150 tons and is being built for Benjamin A. Smith of Gloucester. The James' yard was started about 1830 and has been in the same family for three generations.

Arthur Story is building four vessels. One of them is a beam trawler and another, a good-sized schooner, will probably become a freighter in the coastwise trade. The others are fishermen. They are all built in the most substantial fashion out of native oak, for the most part cut in the woods of Essex County. Some Oregon pine is also used.

O. S. Lantz has started a new yard in the same town. He is building two 150-foot, 325-ton schooners for the coastwise trade, one for New Yorkers and the other for a Boston concern. Mr. Lantz says that there is no trouble getting contracts for building ships, but the great difficulty is getting men and material.

Government agents, representing the emergency fleet have been to Essex and have looked over the situation down there, but so far none of the Essex shipbuilders have been offered any government work. Mr. Lantz says that the Essex yards could build ocean going tugs and vessels of that description. The other two yards say that they are not hankering for government jobs, and while they wouldn't refuse them if they were offered, they are quite willing to continue on private contracts.

The three Essex yards employ about 75 men, pay good wages, and are proud of the character of the work they turn out.

"We have to build our ships to withstand all kinds of weather," said Mr. James. "You know they can't turn around and come back to port if they get caught in a nor'easter. Give me good old Essex County live oak for a ship. It will stand the hardest kind of pounding, and will last longer than anything that grows in this country."

Don't be content with doing only your duty. Do more than your duty. It's the horse that finishes a neck ahead that wins the race.—ANDREW CARNEGIE.

MODERN THEATRE, BOSTON

Marguerite Clark, the dainty little star of the films, will be one of the two stars to be shown in their latest releases for the first times in Boston at the Modern theatre throughout the coming week. Her appearances in her new photoplay, "Prunella," will be welcomed by her hosts of admirers the world over. It has a story of infinite charm, and in the central character of little Prunella it is said that she has one of the best parts of her notable career. The companion photoplay will be "Mile-a-Minute Kendall," picturing Jack Pickford in a breezy role of a young man whose forcefulness leads him to accomplish wonders in the way of fulfilling his ambitions to be a capitalist.

Man is not merely the architect of his own fortune, he must lay the bricks himself.

Glimpses Here and There of North Shore Estates

Some Signs of Early Summer Activities Typical of the Times

II

COOLEDGE'S POINT is one of the most delightful sections in Manchester to wander around in. Some of Boston's oldest families have been coming there for years, as well as a few from New York and other places.

The home of the Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge is a comfortable home-like structure near the roadside, not far from the entrance to the Point. The great charm of this place is the Italian garden, much of the beauties of which have been extolled in the BREEZE from time to time. But one never tires of crossing the little stone bridges over the brook and going into these gardens. Here, another sign of the severity of the winter is visible. All of the pretty little box borders which were of particular charm to the garden are gone. The frozen box has been dug out and grass seed sown. The flowers will bloom according to their seasons, but they will keep company as last year with luscious vegetables,—plebians that have come into the aristocratic little garden on account of the war. Here they will be watched by the handsome marble Neptune that is keeping watch over the basin of gold fish beneath, with trident in hand. The two leopards will lend their silent stone presence and the hours will be marked by the Italian marble sun-dial brought from Venice.

Vegetables in such surroundings should not only do their "bit," but their "best," in the great garden game now on.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT TREAT PAINE, 2D (Ruth Cabot), have a typical seaside, "windswept" home on Coolidge's Point, Manchester. The brown-shingled house, with its white trimmings and green blinds, occupies one of the highest points with the water far down below it and reached by paths and stone steps. A great waste of boulders and jagged rocks lies between the Paine estate and that of Reginald Foster adjoining. A most delightful path down to the water leads through the garden,—half wild and half cultivated. A few old-fashioned flowers and much blossoming shrubbery are around, but the general idea is conveyed of a simple, half-rustic seaside garden. A path leads out to the big tennis court, also much surrounded with shrubbery. The rocky garden, with its vine-covered stones and tiny plowed patch, is left through a pretty white gate in the stonewall, which runs in front. This wall, surmounted with a rustic fence, is a charming ornament and is enough to make any passerby wish to see what lies back of it in the quiet seclusion of the place.

MRS. T. JEFFERSON COOLIDGE, JR., has made little change in her place on Coolidge's Point, Manchester, this season, with the exception of changing her beautiful walled-in formal garden lying by the house and terrace from annual flowers to perennials.

The greenhouse has had an abundant supply of fine snapdragons this winter and is still showing a few of exceptional size and coloring.

Roses, rhododendrons and grass were much hurt by the severe winter, but the Boston and English ivy on the gardener's cottage seems to have been completely frozen. Speaking of gardener's cottages, nowhere on the Shore is there a prettier or more artistic looking one than this brick house harmonizing so well with Mrs. Coolidge's handsome and stately brick residence.

The rose garden and large vegetable garden are attractive features, the latter showing many fine peas of good growth for so early in the season.

The charm of this place lies to the casual observer in the great trees that surround the front lawn through which the avenues wind to the impressive main entrance.

THE GEO. F. WILLETT place, Coolidge's Point, Manchester, is having the beautiful grounds prepared, as usual, for the summer. The house was not open last year and it is not known whether the family will come for the mid-summer or not, having kept their Norwood home open last summer. The big brown-shingled house, surrounded with velvety lawns, rose beds and much ground, in a wild, natural state, is one of the most attractive on the Point. The formal garden is being laid out as usual. The house stands near the water's edge, but high above it on the rocky promontory. An attractive feature is the large tennis court, around which the pink ramblers always make a pretty shield during their season. Such a beautiful and ideally located place among the pines and rocks ought to draw its owners this summer, after an absence of one season.

THE BRADLEY gardens and greenhouses at Beverly Farms are ever a source of enjoyment to the passers-by on Hale street, where they lie between the street and railroad and just opposite the estate of the Albert J. Beveridges. The house, with its extensive grounds, is situated across the track upon the hill, on a portion of the Paine estate. The main driveway is from the Pride's Crossing entrance. While the Robert S. Bradleys have their house and grounds more or less shielded from public view, their gardens are hospitably placed by the roadside and invite observation by their neat and attractive appearance.

More vegetables than flowers is the rule here and last week thrifty-looking pea vines were in full blossom, an evidence of the excellent out-door work of the gardener. Hot beds are yielding up their seedlings for the garden and soon the whole will be a model vegetable garden in full bloom. Flowers are used in some parts for borders.

The greenhouses have run all winter and have produced vegetables as well as flowers for the Boston house. Strawberries growing in pots in the grapery section are a novel sight, making an ornamental plant that is a good food producer. These have furnished the family table with fruit for a number of weeks. Around the boxes in the large rose section of the house, New Zealand spinach is growing, also in other odd places, thus forming a delicious vegetable salad as well as a thing of beauty in the greenhouse. Beans are also blossoming for the second crop in the house. The spinach has been sent into Boston twice a week all winter.

Carnations and roses have been abundant this winter, and now the Canterbury-bells are coming on, and the many pots of hydrangeas for the cottage piazzas are ready for the summer. Some fine specimens of French hydrangeas are in full bloom. Flowers matching the general color scheme of the rooms have always been noted in the Bradley home.

Many greenhouse men on private estates have said that they think their places cannot be kept running another year. Many were closed this winter either completely or partially and it is in those kept open that the men say the "luxury" will probably have to be discontinued next winter owing to the coal situation.

"THE CHIMNEYS," the beautiful summer home of Mrs. Gardiner Martin Lane, situated in Manchester, on Summer street, next to the Richard H. Dana home, on the fine little beach bearing the Dana name, is one of the cluster of homes that has grown up in that vicinity around the Dana nucleus. It will be of interest to new-comers upon the Shore to know that Mr. Dana, the poet, purchased thirty acres in 1845 lying between the beach and county road. This was known as Grave's Beach. The History of Manchester has this to say: "The land was mostly covered with a luxuriant forest growth, and Mr. Dana built the first summer house, a plain, substantial house, overlooking the sea. In speaking of this retreat, Charles Sumner pronounced it finer in point of location and scenery than the famous Biarritz, the summer resort of Napoleon III. For many years the Dana family made this their summer home. Richard H. Dana, Jr., spent several summers in Manchester, and found here a greatly needed respite from a laborious professional life." And the Dana descendants are still occupying it, although the present house, so near the Lane home, is not the original one, but was built later, about 1885.

At the Lane home the front lawn is again plowed for a planting of potatoes, and the greenhouses and vegetable gardens are preparing to do their "bit" in the way of food production.

The terraced gardens at this home are unusually beautiful each season. The main garden, in which is the water garden, with its great circular basin surrounded by five smaller basins, fronts the sea and lies near the house. This leads to a lower terrace and thence down to the rose terrace and wall garden, the latter showing rare Alpine plants and other rock flowers. The vegetable gardens entered next are a picture in themselves with the flower-bordered central pathway leading on to the greenhouses and woods beyond in which is the wild-flower garden.

A delightful tea house and other resting nooks are features of the terraces.

The birds are invited for guests by unique little quarters lodged in the trees, some quite near the charming little house that the young daughter, Miss Katharine, has cooked and entertained in for many a summer. Notwithstanding that she has made her debut in Boston and Baltimore society this winter, it cannot be believed that she will not yet often steal out to the little white house with its "trusty servant" knocker and brew a cup of tea for her friends.

Just up the hill and also with a matchless view seaward is another little house with childhood memories. This is the "rainy day" house, where the six Dana children (now grown men and women) used to play when their noise became unendurable in the Dana cottage.

(So one might go on with almost an endless chain, telling of the beauties and activities on the Shore. It is hoped that these short sketches will convey in their meagre way some idea of the North Shore homes to those who have never seen them.)

"LEDGEWOOD," the Montserrat home of Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, has a delightful little Japanese garden near the house. This is a sunken affair and is filled with many rare plants and trees from the Orient. Some of the maples, of exquisite leaf and coloring, were brought by the late Mr. Peabody from Japan. Wild flowers, old-fashioned flowering shrubs and rhododendrons are among the well-known plants keeping company with this little spot of old Japan which shows much of the quaint and foreign.

On the other side of the house and running all the way down the rocky hillside are the rose arbors, things of great beauty in their season. Hugging the rocky ledges all over the place, and especially bordering the gravel paths and steps leading down from the hill on which the house stands, are flowers, always flowers, keeping up a continuous bloom of some kind all through the season under the fine old trees that cover the hill.

MRS. JOHN C. HOWE's garden at the West Manchester home has lost much of the box and cedar which has always been such a pretty feature around the flowers in her garden on the lawn back of the house. A fine vegetable garden is spread out, as usual, on the lawn sloping down to the railroad. From the garage to the willow driveway leading to Norton's Point and running diagonally across the lawn and gardens is a new walk made of white flagstones, which will be a noticeable line in the garden with the green grass spaces between the stones.

This is one of the most attractive of the West Manchester houses, being built along English lines, with many picturesque features, such as dormers, little balconies, windows of interest, and a Gothic entrance porch. The whole is stucco covered. It was remodeled and much enlarged a year ago.

Some unique little bird houses are around the grounds, seeming to fit in with the architecture of the place.

BREVITIES

By JOSEPH A. TORREY

Force and tact

Turn plan and purpose into act and fact.

Art by hesitation next?

Do the duty that is next.

A good fire, a good light, a good book:

Where else for comfort would you look?

All kindness is but justice, don't you know?

That which we surely owe.

Domestic happiness—would you win it?

Make the house cheerful while you are in it.

Life is a long, long day of care and cark;

When all is done to go home in the dark.

Cease thy murmurings long and loud;

The blue of heaven is larger than the cloud.

Hats off!

Along the street there comes

A blare of bugles, a ruffle of drums,

A flash of color beneath the sky;

Hats off!

The flag is passing by.

MRS. T. JEFFERSON COOLIDGE, JR., of Coolidge's Point, Manchester, will have her young son, William A., with her this summer, after St. Mark's school is closed in June. Her son, Capt. T. Jefferson, 3d, is in the 302d Field Artillery at Camp Devens, while Ensign Amory Coolidge, another son, who joined the Naval Reserves, has been for the past two months on a destroyer in the North Sea.

Mrs. L. M. Sargent will remain in her Boston home this summer with frequent motor trips to the Shore to see her friends and for visits with her father, Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge, of Coolidge's Point, Manchester. It was erroneously stated in the BREEZE a few weeks ago that she had taken a cottage for the summer on Coolidge's Point.

Mrs. C. W. Amory, mother of Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge, Jr., of Coolidge's Point, Manchester, will occupy the small white cottage on the Coolidge estate this season. This is where Mrs. L. M. Sargent has lived and where the F. L. Higginson, Jr., family spent the past two summers before going to Wenham. The ground has been plowed all around the cottage and will be a war garden of potatoes.

Col. and Mrs. E. M. House, who are expected the last of this week or early next week will find that their cottage on Coolidge's Point, Manchester, has been improved with a coat of green paint. It was formerly a red house. Immense lilac bushes are in the rear, where also is the thrifty looking vegetable garden belonging to the Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge, on whose estate the House cottage is located. Col. House comes to the Point because it is cool and he can get the ocean breezes from all sides.

Mrs. H. G. Nichols and family, of Boston, will again occupy the little white cottage belonging to Mrs. Robert de Wolfe Sampson, situated on Ocean street, Manchester, just opposite the home of Mrs. Sampson. The cottage will be surrounded, as last season, with the war gardens belonging to Mrs. Sampson, Mrs. Myron C. Wick, Miss Isabel Lane and Mrs. Nichols—a community garden of Manchester Cove residents.

Rev. and Mrs. Wm. H. Dewart are leaving Manchester Cove tomorrow for Andover, where they will spend the summer. Mrs. Dewart was in Boston all last week, helping in the Red Cross drive. The boys, who are at school, spent last week-end in the home. They will be actively interested in gardening in Andover this summer. The George G. Snowden family will occupy this attractive place, "Crowhaven," again, coming in a week or more.

"Rockmarge," at Pride's Crossing, has been opened ready for the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Moore, of New York. Here, as elsewhere, much damage was done in the fine gardens by the severe weather of the past winter.

THE first June wedding on the North Shore will take place tomorrow, June 1, in the Church of the Ascension in Ipswich, at 12.30. Miss Elizabeth Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Rand Thomas, of Boston and Ipswich, will become the bride of Benjamin Perley Poore Moseley, of Newburyport and Boston. Miss Thomas will be attended by Mrs. Franklin H. Clark, Jr. (Frances Sturgis), as matron of honor, and by Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Jr. (Eleanor Fabyan), and Miss Charlotte Moseley, a sister of the bridegroom. Little Bettina Thomas, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Thomas of St. Louis, a niece of the bride, will be the flower girl. Valentine Hollingsworth will be the best man. The ushers will be George U. Peters, Gordon Means, Stephen V. R. Crosby, Charles Boyden, Archibald Blanchard, all of Boston, and Charles Doolittle, New York, and Mr. Blossom, of Cleveland. A reception will follow at "Inglishby," the new home of the Thomas family in Ipswich.

Mr. Moseley, Harvard '04, is the eldest son of Frederick Strong Moseley and is associated with him in business. The Moseleys also have a summer home at Islesboro, Me., besides their beautiful one in Newburyport, where the newly wedded couple will reside this summer.

Mrs. Augustus Peabody Gardner will spend most of the summer with her daughter, Mrs. Grafton W. Minot (Constance Gardner), at "The Alhambra," the cottage at Mingo beach, Pride's Crossing, belonging to Wm. Amory Gardner. They are now in Washington.

The Henry S. Grew family, of Boston, have spent some time at Hot Springs, Va., and will be of the arrivals in West Manchester early in June.

"Lilliothea," the home of George R. White and his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. Bradbury, of Boston, on Smith's Point, Manchester, was opened over a week ago, and the family is settled here for the summer.

The Misses Sturgis, of Boston, have opened "Rookwood," Summer st., Manchester, for the season.

Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Jr. (Eleanor Fabyan), and little son, Theodore, 3d, will spend most of the season at the Virginia Hot Springs, where Mr. Frothingham will visit them as often as her can leave his work in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Curtis and their daughter, Mrs. Harry Byng, have opened "Sunfield," the home at Beverly Farms.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Saltonstall, of Beverly Cove, have taken a cottage at Blue Ridge Summit, to be near Mr. Saltonstall's work in Washington. They will be members of the largest and most notable Washington official colony ever quartered there. They recently entertained with a large dinner for Admiral Grant, naval attaché of the British embassy, and Lady Grant.

The McDonald cottage on Shore road, to Dr. Freeman Hibben, of Brookline, who occupied it two seasons ago, but who had Island View cottage last year.

The Butler cottage on Western ave., to Henry D. Schmidt and family, of Washington, who have been occupying it for so many years.

Stearns' Villa to John T. Barnes, of Haverford, Pa., who is a newcomer in the cottage colony here. The Barnes' have a country estate at Haverford called "Four Winds." They have been frequent visitors to the Ocean-side hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Laurence White's little daughter, Sarah Lancashire White, or "Sally," as she is familiarly known, was six years old this Tuesday. In honor of the day a company of merry little folk gathered at her home in Beverly Farms, where games and refreshments were enjoyed immensely.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter D. Denègre and daughter, Miss Elaine, are expected to come on from Washington this week-end. "Villa Crest," the West Manchester home, never looked any fairer than now with the wonderful freshness of spring hanging over everything. The Denègres purchased a new home in Washington this year. It is understood that Mr. Denègre's work in Washington will keep him there more or less this summer though Mrs. Denègre and Miss Denègre will be active in war work activities on the North Shore as usual.

Frederic R. Galacar and family, of 74 Mt. Vernon st., Boston, will arrive at Beverly Farms next week, where they will spend the summer at Luke's "Owl" cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Neal Rantoul, of Boston, are now settled at their home on West Beach, Beverly Farms. The usual fine vegetable garden is coming on, while just across from their house, the lawn facing the water, on the Hon. Robert S. Rantoul place, will again be the potato "war" garden as last year.

The Bernard C. Welds, of Boston, are arriving tomorrow at Beverly Farms. The beautiful lilacs around the cottage will still present a fine showing for them.

The George A. Dobyne family are expecting to come to their new home in Beverly Farms next week. The Dobyne's are St. Louis people who have built one of the show places on the Shore. It will be practically a year before the place is completed.

Newcomers to Manchester this summer will be the Charles Hosmer Morses, of Chicago, who have taken the Cobb cottage on Masconomo street. The Morses spent last season at "The Homestead," Annisquam. Their Chicago home is 1132 East 49th street. Mr. Morse is president of Fairbanks, Morse & Co., manufacturers of machinery. Mrs. Morse was Miss Charlotte Ingersoll. There are two daughters, Misses Elizabeth and Martha, and a seven-year-old boy, Charles. They will arrive next week.

Mrs. Chas. S. Hanks will open her house at West Manchester this week for the summer, after spending the winter in Washington.

Dr. J. H. Lancashire and family are among the week's arrivals on the North Shore, after a winter in New York city, where they have a beautiful new home. They will be settled at "Graftonwood," their summer estate in Manchester, within a few days.

The Godfrey Lowell Cabot family moved down from Boston on Wednesday to "The Oaks," Beverly Farms. The daughter, Miss Eleanor, is convalescing from an operation for appendicitis. The young son, Jack, will soon be home from school, while the other sons, James and Thomas, are in the aviation service.

Mrs. Francis Adams Lane and Miss Isabel Lane are now at "Overledge," Manchester Cove, after a winter spent in St. Louis. The son, Dr. P. C. Lane, of New Haven, is coming later, also the daughter-in-law, Mrs. Nathaniel T. Lane, of Cambridge. The latter's daughter, Helen Le Roy Lane, who was married last season to Wells Blanchard, will not be here, as Mr. Blanchard is in Washington in government work. A grandson, Nathaniel T., Jr., graduates from Andover academy this June.

A favorite place for North Shore folk to dine is at Y^e Rogers Manse, Ipswich, Mass. Tel. 85-M. adv.

SOCIETY NOTES

Mrs. Francis H. Williams, and son and daughter, Edward E. and Miss Elizabeth Williams, of Hotel Charlesgate, Boston, will come to "Att-Lea Lodge," Magnolia, next week for another season. This is a charming eleven-room cottage with dainty and harmonious furnishings of a most restful nature. The wide piazza faces the water, affording an excellent view of the little bay, the beach, the North Shore swimming pool, Coolidge's Point, and the hills and woods of Manchester beyond, over which the sunsets are said to be the most perfect of any place on the Shore. The lodge belongs to Miss Margaret L. Corlies, who, with her mother, Mrs. S. Fisher Corlies, occupy "Att-Lea House." The Corlies estate is one of the most charmingly situated at Magnolia. The family came in the early spring from Boston and have enjoyed it to the fullest, opening their house for week-end parties continually, and have proved that Magnolia is just as interesting in the spring or late fall as in mid-summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Leland have closed their Boston house, 422 Beacon street, and are at their delightful summer home, "Old Tree House," on the rocks washed by the waves from the bay, at West Manchester.

The Edmund Kent Arnold family, of Boston, will arrive tomorrow at "Ledgeside," their cottage on Sea st., Manchester.

"Crowncliff," the Manchester home of the Eugene Gray Fosters on Coolidge's Point, has been showing some lilacs and other blooms that it seems too bad the Foster family did not come on from New York in time to see. They are planning to arrive here the first week in June.

James Means and family, of Boston, have arrived at their Manchester residence, "Meadow Ledge," this week. One of the sons is a first lieutenant in the field artillery. He has been in training in one of the western camps, but has just been ordered to Camp Devens for more intensive training, undoubtedly in anticipation of early sailing for the other side. He has been home this week on a short furlough.

A wonderful sight is seen at the Manchester Cove home of Mrs. Robert de Wolfe Sampson, where the sloping lawn is showing thousands of purple and white lilacs in most gorgeous array. Mrs. Sampson has been out from Cambridge a few times this spring, and will open her house for the season, June 1.

Mr. and Mrs. George G. Snowden, of Indianapolis, Ind., and Manchester Cove, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest W. Longfellow (Harriet Spellman) arrived at "Edgecliff," their summer home in Manchester, this week. The Longfellows make their winter home at Hotel Belmont, New York. They have been in Cambridge a short time this spring and last week celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in the Craigie house, the home of Miss Alice Longfellow. Mr. Longfellow is the eldest of the five children of the poet Longfellow, his mother being the beautiful Frances Elizabeth Appleton. He is an eminent artist and has his little studio at their home on Coolidge's Point. The Longfellows, and the Danas (the poet Longfellow's second daughter, Edith, married Richard H. Dana), have long been associated with Manchester.

Lieut. Guy Norman, U. S. N., is recovering from a slight operation at the Mass. General hospital in Boston. Mrs. Norman has just left Washington for the cottage at Newport. The Normans are of the Beverly Cove colony.

The Manchester Woman's club is planning a gala day, July 10, on the Common, when aprons will be sold for the benefit of the Manchester Visiting Nurse fund. The Food Centre will furnish refreshments.

The Reginald Foster family have opened their house on Coolidge's Point, Manchester. Mr. Foster came in advance and has superintended the making of a vegetable garden, the finest looking one in his immediate vicinity. The brown-shingled house, with its stucco trimmings, is set on the high rocks overlooking the water, and an excellent sea-view is afforded. Stone steps lead down to the little flower garden, where there is an interesting bed of pansies this spring. The gardener says he selected a dry place, planted the pansies in the fall and covered them deeply with leaves. Upon removing the leaves the pansies have bloomed and look as if just set out from a greenhouse.

Mrs. Clarence L. Hay (Alice Appleton) has leased the Frederick J. Alley cottage in Hamilton for the summer. Last year she was in the Hoyt cottage on her father's place, "Appleton Farms."

Mrs. Christopher Raymond Rodgers (Alice Meyer) has come on from Washington to be with her mother, Mrs. George vonL. Meyer, at "Rock Maple Farm."

Mrs. Wm. G. Wendell (Ruth Appleton) will spend the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis R. Appleton, at "Appleton Farms," Ipswich. Mrs. Wendell has lately returned from war work in France, while her husband, who is the son of Prof. and Mrs. Robert Wendell, is abroad.

If you are in Ipswich and are looking for a place to enjoy a cool and refreshing ice-cream, college ice or soda water, meet me at Helen's Cozy Corner Parlor, Central street. adv.

The Wakefield Literary club motored to Ipswich last Friday, May 24th, and enjoyed one of Y^e Rogers Manse's famous dinners, followed with dancing and a general good time. The Malden Whist club is scheduled for a dinner and dance at the same place next Wednesday, June 5.

DELICATE AND DELICIOUS WAR BREADS

Four demonstrations will be given by a competent woman on Wednesday afternoons at four o'clock, July 10, 17, 24 and 31, at the residence of Miss Corlies, at Magnolia. No notices will be sent out, but those wishing instruction may apply to Miss Corlies. Course tickets $5.00. adv.

Magnolia

MANCHESTER'S Public Library has a little blue-bound book that is of peculiar interest to the North Shore. It is entitled "Norman Prince, A Volunteer Who Died for the Cause He Loved," with memoir by George F. Babbitt. It was published the past December, 1917, by Houghton Mifflin Co. It is dedicated to the "Lafayette Flying Squadron" (formerly the Escadrille Américaine)—those gallant young Americans who led the way their country was later to follow."

The book contains, beside the memoir, his own story, letters, a chapter from his father, a comrade's tribute, his brother's service, tributes from the French envoys, and a closing chapter on the messages of condolence and appreciation sent upon his death by the friends and governments he had assisted.

As all the North Shore knows he was the younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Henry Prince (Abigail Norman), of "Princemere," Wenham Neck. The memoir fittingly tells of his early love of sports and how this love of the "strenuous life, combined with his intensely patriotic instincts and his deep sympathy with the cause of the Entente nations,—more particularly for France,—prompted him to go abroad and offer his services in their behalf."

It is further stated that in all of his spoken or written messages no word of doubt as to the ultimate triumph of the allies was ever made. One letter says:

"Everything goes well. Before the end of this war we shall have aeroplanes with at least 800 or 1000 horsepower, flying from Soissons to Petrograd, setting fire to the four corners of Berlin."

One letter to his mother says: "I am so afraid you will worry more than ever when you hear of poor Kiffen Rockwell's death. I know how anxious you must be with the two of us over here. Keep very busy, ride a lot, go out to dinners and get as many other distractions as possible so that you will not have too much time to think of us."

The book has a handsome plate showing the decorations awarded by the French government.

"When Norman fell at Luxeuil, it was a trying moment to Frederick, who had lost his only brother and the companion of his lifetime, but he promptly offered his services to France in his brother's place and he fought with the Lafayette Escadrille until he came home on a short furlough. He subsequently returned to France to rejoin his squadron with courage undaunted, and with unflagging faith in the ultimate triumph of the cause he loved and for which he was proud to be actively enlisted."

The book can be read at a sitting and one lays it down feeling that he knows the Prince boys.

The wedding of Frederick H. Prince, Jr., took place last summer and the young wife has just recently joined her husband near Paris. The parents are residing, as usual, at their beautiful home, "Princemere."

Emmanuel Episcopal church, Masconomo st., Manchester, will open on Sunday, June 2. Service at half past ten and Holy Communion at the close. The Rev. George J. Prescott will have charge of the service.

Mrs. Jacob Rogers, of 285 Andover street, Lowell, will spend the summer at Marblehead Neck, as usual, with Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Dunbar, also of Lowell, who have a cottage on Ocean ave. Mrs. Dunbar was Mary C. Rogers.

Oatmeal wafers

Stuffed Mushrooms

Soak bread in milk till very soft. Cook slightly the scooped out portions of the mushrooms with some finely chopped onion in little fat and pour this mixture over the bread. Add yolk of egg, salt and pepper to taste and pinch of sugar. Fill the mushrooms, put in a buttered pan and cook till done. Serve on split toasted muffins with their own juice as a sauce.

Asparagus Timbale

Line a buttered mold with cold asparagus left from a meal. Instead of cream sauce take two cups milk, one-quarter cup white cornmeal and cook until the consistency of a thick cream sauce. Add five slightly beaten eggs, a few tops of asparagus, pepper and salt and put in mold and cook until it is set. Turn out on a platter and serve with any sauce, preferably an asparagus sauce.

Stuffed Cauliflower

Plunge a solid head of cauliflower into boiling water and cook until done, but not falling to pieces. Take from the water and scoop out the inside, leaving a rim of about one and one-half inches. Take as many eggs as the cavity will hold, scramble very lightly, add a few mushrooms, chopped ham or any meat, and put contents in cauliflower, sprinkle thickly with cheese, place in a hot oven to melt cheese, serve at once with a sauce. The cauliflower scooped out can be used the following day as an au gratin dish.

Other recipes by this North Shore cook were given last week.

HERBERT HOOVER's most recent appeal was read by the pastors of many churches Sunday, at the Memorial Day services, along with President Wilson's proclamation.

In part it reads: "But the situation with regard to wheat is the most serious in the food supply of the allied world. If we are to satisfy the minimum wheat requirements of our armies and the allies and the suffering millions in the allied countries, our consumption of wheat in the United States until the next harvest must be reduced to approximately one-third of normal. "It is inconceivable that we should fail in this crisis. For each of us who can personally contribute to the relief of human suffering, it is a privilege, not a sacrifice. All elements of our population cannot bear this burden equally. Those engaged in physical labor need a larger bread ration than those in sedentary occupations. Because of the constant daily employment of women and the lack of home baking facilities, many households in large urban centers, require a food ration already prepared, such as the bakers' standard 'Victory Bread' loaf. Furthermore, we must constantly safeguard the special requirements of children and invalids.

"To meet the situation abroad, and to prevent serious suffering at home, it is imperative that all those whose circumstances permit shall abstain from wheat and wheat products in any form until the next harvest.

"In the case of sugar we are embarrassed by the necessity of using ships for carrying our soldiers and feeding the allies, and in consequence we must use sugar with great economy. We must emphasize the importance of canning and preserving on a large scale among our people this summer, and our available sugar must be conserved for this purpose."

The healing of the seamless dress
Is by our beds of pain;
We touch Him in life's throng and press,
And we are whole again,

Along the Cape Ann Shore

Notes by ALEX. G. TUPPER

EASTERN POINT.—A pleasant change in the appearance of the Hawthorne Lane corner, is the new color given to the Hotel Delphine, one of the oldest summer hostelrys on Cape Ann. The house has been painted white with light green shutters, with the extensive lattice work on the front being also the green color of the shutters, making a very attractive appearance. The Delphine will have many guests in a few days, being one of the first houses to open in East Gloucester, for the season.

The Hawthorne Inn casino resumed its air of festivity last week, when a large dancing assembly was held on Friday evening, by the Frank E. Davis club, of Gloucester, about 350 people being present. Decorations were in red, white and blue, and Sewall's full orchestra, augmented by Boston musicians rendered music of a high order for dancing. The second big party of the season at the casino is the assembly of the Gorton-Pew clerks' club and guests, this Friday evening.

The Dr. B. Farquhar Curtis cottage, Windover, formerly the studio cottage of Parker B. Mann, the landscape artist, charmingly situated on Niles beach boulevard, Eastern Point, facing the beach and harbor, has been opened for the season. Miss Anne Aspinwall Curtis, of New York city, has arrived at Eastern Point.

The John H. Proctors, of Brookline, have arrived at their Eastern Point cottage, near the Clay estate, for the season. The Procter house was extensively enlarged last season.

The Misses Lathrop have returned to their Rocky Neck estate after an extended stay in Salem.

A naval wedding took place at St. John's Episcopal church, Gloucester, last Saturday, at high noon, when two young people from far-off Louisville, Ky., George Herbert Stansbury, Jr., and Miss Frances Evans Fawcett, were united in marriage, by the rector of St. John's, Rev. J. H. C. Cooper. The wedding was simple in detail, and very quiet. There were no attendants and only the immediate relatives were present. Mr. Stansbury is of the United States Naval Reserves and he is an instructor at the Harvard Radio school. He wore his uniform at the altar and the bride was charmingly attired in a smart traveling costume. Following the ceremony, the wedding party was driven to the summer home of friends of the couple, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Damon Allen, of Boston, at Rocky Neck, East Gloucester, where a wedding breakfast was served. Mr. and Mrs. George H. Stansbury, parents of the groom, came on from Louisville for the wedding, being the guests of the Allens. Mr. Stansbury is vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, of Kentucky. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Fawcett, of Louisville. The newly married couple will be at home immediately at their new residence, Hampden apartments, Cambridge.

MARBLEHEAD NECK.—Mr. and Mrs. James P. Munroe, of Boston, are at Marblehead Neck for the season, and are stopping at one of the Sea Gull cottages until their home is in readiness. Mr. Munroe is president and treasurer of the Munroe Felt and Paper Co.

The Eastern Yacht club at Marblehead Neck opened at noon Wednesday for the season, after being closed for a year, in that the clubhouse was at the disposal of the government last summer. Superintendent Sleeper has the place in ship-shape order and he has more rooms rented this season than at any other time during the last ten years. Just what the plans are for the summer have not fully been settled, but it is anticipated that through July and August the musical evenings will be in order. The former ladies' dining room at the end of the clubhouse has been remodeled into a sitting room of gray and white with rose colored curtains. The Eastern Yacht club has tendered this room to the Red Cross, Marblehead Neck branch. The billiard room has been converted into a ladies' dining room.

Charles B. Wheelock's boat has gone overboard, and is now anchored off the Corinthian Yacht club, Marblehead Neck.

The floats have been put overboard and everything is in readiness for the sounding of the gun on Saturday next.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bowman, of Winchester, have arrived at their summer home, "Belair," on Ocean ave., Marblehead Neck, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Shuman and their little family will be at their summer home on the Neck, "Moll-hurst," the latter part of this week for the season. Mrs.

Shuman drives her own car and with Mr. Shuman and the children, Arthur, Francis and Lilian, is often seen motoring along the roads on the North Shore. She has been active this winter in war work, being chairman of all committees of the Military Smileage Ball and a member of the Military Entertainment committee appointed by Governor McCall.

CLIFTON.—Dr. and Mrs. Henry Ehrlich, of Commonwealth ave., Boston, have arrived at their summer home, Stearns' beach, Clifton. Both Dr. and Mrs. Ehrlich are enthusiastic golfers and they are prominent members of the Kernwood Country club. Mrs. Ehrlich is one of the prime-movers in the Red Cross work being done at the club and last year she hit upon a novel idea to earn money for the Red Cross. She knitted golfing sweaters for the members of the club, the proceeds from their sale being turned over to war work.

WORKROOMS

MRS. THOMAS B. GANNETT, of "Waldyn," Manchester, has made a generous gift to the Manchester Red Cross workroom which began work this Wednesday in its new quarters in Horticultural hall. In order that the society would not have to draw upon any funds to supply the equipment for the hall, Mrs. Gannett has given this herself, the supplies including tables, scissors and other tools needed in the making of surgical dressings.

Mrs. Gannett and Miss Sheridan, who makes her home at the Gannett house, have received their certificates as divisional instructors, and are going to help in the Manchester branch of the Red Cross.

THE "LITTLE CHAPEL" village workroom at Magnolia has done a vast amount of work this winter under the supervision of Mrs. Harry Foster. Open every day and evening in the week, with Wednesday night reserved especially for the younger girls and Saturday night for the boys, the village people have surely "done themselves proud" in the good work turned out. It will continue just the same all summer. Its cool looking interior, where the green settees and rockers look so inviting against the green and gray walls, will be found a most pleasant place in which to do the required work this summer. The breezes will come in through the white curtained windows and will be further aided by an electric fan. On Memorial Day a flag raising was an event on the lawn. A service flag with twelve stars also is an honor to the "Little Chapel."

THE NORTH SHORE workroom for the American Fund for French Wounded will be reopened Thursday, June 13, at Mrs. Edward S. Grew's home, "All Oaks," West Manchester. This will be the third time that Mrs. Grew has most kindly given her coachhouse for the purpose. The large and commodious place makes an ideal workroom and is always filled with about one hundred workers each day. The meetings will be on Mondays and Thursdays from 9:30 to 11. Mrs. Geo. H. Lyman is again chairman, Miss Harriet Rantoul is treasurer and Mrs. M. G. Haughton, secretary.

The committee consists of these officers and Mmes. Timothée Adamowski, Robert S. Bradley, W. W. Caswell, Henry S. Grew, 2d, Lester Leland, R. P. Snelling and the Misses Elaine Denègre and Alice Thorndike.

"If you love me, weigh me."

Baby power today—man power tomorrow.

England and France have realized that work for better children is vital war work and England has proved the value of what she has done by bringing down her baby death rate to the lowest point in her history. Their achievements are an inspiration to the eleven million women of the Woman's committee of the Council of National Defense who have determined that 100,000 children's lives shall be saved in Children's Year.

More than two million babies—in town and country, rich and poor, well and sickly—are tipping the scales and standing up to the yardstick, unless they are too little to stand, in answer to the request of the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor and the Woman's committee of the Council of National Defense that parents enter their children in the nation-wide test which began on April 6th, as the first step in the Children's Year campaign to save 100,000 babies.

This weighing and measuring test is a spring inventory of the welfare of the nation's children. The draft took stock of the men who will go to the battle front in France. It found less than two-thirds of them physically fit for service. Many of these men were rendered unfit by defects which authorities declare could have been prevented if they had been discovered and cared for in childhood.

The children who survive to manhood and womanhood with defects bear the scars of diseases, injuries, and general conditions which have proved fatal to others. The infant death rate is nearly as great as that of men and women who have completed their allotted three score years and ten; nearly a fourth of the deaths that occur at all ages are those of babies under five.

Is it necessary that these little children run so great a risk of death? Newsholme answered that question when he said that if children were well born and well cared for the infant death rate would be practically negligible.

The weighing and measuring test is giving thousands of communities in the United States opportunity to find out whether their children are well born and well cared for. Weight and height are a rough index of the health of the growing child, and the test will show individual parents and communities just how each child compares with the average. Follow-up work will be planned to fit the needs shown by the test, and will continue throughout Children's Year. The bureau believes that individual mothers and fathers must realize how vitally war-time conditions affect the welfare of their children if 100,000 lives are to be saved during Children's Year.

First of all the test can give parents an indication of the health of their own children. In addition it can provide a basis for judging how adequately the community is guarding all its children. The test can thus offer a starting point for bettering the conditions which affect children's welfare. Some adverse conditions individual parents can remedy; others demand community action; but the Children's Bureau believes that in one way or another, children must be given increased protection if the baby death rate is to be reduced here as it was in England during the second year of the war.

WILL MANCHESTER WOMEN ENLIST?

THE Manchester Red Cross has been given large—very large quotas, for the workroom to accomplish during the month of June: 200 winter bed shirts, 350 pairs socks, 75 sweaters, and a large allotment of surgical dressings.

This means work, if we are to do what is expected of us.

A woman once said, she could not knit in the summertime, as it was too warm to work with wool.

How about our American boys in winter in the freezing trenches and driving over land and sea, and through the air?

Can we let them stop because they are too cold for want of our warm knitted socks and garments? Not for a moment.

For these men who are depending on us, let every woman who is in Manchester this summer, enlist and sign up for Red Cross work as many days as possible. The workroom in Horticultural hall will be open next week on Wednesday and Friday afternoons from 2 to 5 o'clock for sewing, Wednesday morning from 10 to 1 o'clock, and Thursday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock for surgical dressings work. These dates may be changed somewhat later according to the allotments of work sent in, and the number of workers that come. This will be announced in the NORTH SHORE BREEZE.

All loyal American summer residents are urged to come and give their help, as these very large quotas of war work are given in consideration of the added number of people in this section, during the summer months, so that everyone is needed and counted on to meet the government call, sent from the Red Cross headquarters to Manchester-by-the-Sea.

—M. H. COOLIDGE,
Workroom Chairman.

A SERVICE AUXILIARY to the North Shore Garden club (girl farmerettes raising vegetables at Montserrat for the Beverly hospital) has just been formed. This is an unique and practical plan and has been worked out by Mrs. E. Laurence White, of Beverly Farms. Baskets will be placed at all workrooms over the Shore and workers will be asked to bring a few vegetables to put in them when they come to the workrooms. Mrs. White is then to see that they are gathered up and delivered the same day to Beverly hospital. Little effort will be required to pick up a few vegetables as one is leaving for the workroom, and the plan, it seems, would be of much help to the hospital.

MANCHESTER CHURCHES

Emmanuel Episcopal church, Masconomo st., Manchester, will open on Sunday, June 2. Services at half past ten and Holy Communion at the close. The Rev. Geo. J. Prescott will have charge of the service.

The ladies of the Missionary society of the Cong'l church will meet with Mrs. James Crocker, Bennett street, Thursday, June 6, at 3 o'clock. Topic: "Strength."

With all thy getting,—get Wisdom.
—KING SOLOMON.

Announcement

The practice of calling upon telephone operators for information as to the time of day has grown to the point of interfering with the efficiency of telephone service.

For such information 100,000 calls are made daily in New England, the bulk of such calls coming naturally at times when it is most difficult to handle them.

Service efficiency now demands that the work of the operating force should be relieved of unnecessary burdens, and that all energies be directed toward the furnishing of effective telephone service, and to that alone.

Prompted by these considerations, the PRACTICE OF GIVING INFORMATION AS TO THE TIME OF DAY WILL BE DISCONTINUED BEGINNING JUNE 3, 1918.

EDITORIAL

LAST YEAR PEOPLE of surprising intelligence were alarmed by the rumors which the war aroused, who did not go to the Shore because of the fear of German aggression; the remembrance of the Deutschland's visit aroused fears. Consequently, to their later regret, some—a very few—did not sign their leases. The folly of the hysteria is now only too well known. A reputable Boston paper, which has been the leader for two generations of all New England newspapers and probably not surpassed by any similar publication in America, has taken notice of the hysteria of last year by a timely and sane editorial:

"There will be no uneasiness in any quarter this summer about sojourning on the seashore. The German submarines have too much business on the other side to leave them any warrant or excuse for adventures in this direction. If they cannot 'get' our east-bound troopships on the Atlantic they certainly cannot and will not risk the transatlantic journey for the sake of a random shot at a summer hotel. The resorts are as safe in 1918 as they were in 1913, or in the drowsy days when Thoreau tramped the length of the Cape and found there no other social excitement than that furnished by a Methodist camp-meeting. As the event proved, they were just as safe last year; but in 1917 our war was new, and the Germans were supposed to be eager to get at us anyhow, anywhere, and the Deutschland had been over, and there were some cautious people who 'didn't know.' They know now, and they will not worry. The submarines are still abroad, but they have an unsatisfied ambition from which no transatlantic gamble will draw them, and that is to interfere with the steady flow of American troops to Europe. Happily the ambition is likely to remain unsatisfied. The percentage of destruction effected on our expeditionary forces is considerably less than one-tenth of one percent. But whether they strike transports or whether they do not, they will not cease to devote their attention to that task.

"Just at a casual glance, and without pretension to the gift of prophecy, one would say that there was never a year when seashore sojourning would be more agreeable than the present will be. The land is uneasy, and groans with travail; but the sea, our sea, is changeless, and is peace eternal; itself 'unconquerable, unrepined, untired'; it imparts to the soul of man a sense of repose in troublous times which nothing else can yield, because nothing else is so immune to man's disturbances. There are some things in our cities and towns that we shall all wish to get away from this summer, and there will be no surer refuge from them than the shore of the sea."

Fortunately the dwellers upon our Shore were not alarmed by the rumors thus combatted, but many of the American watering places were harmed by the fears aroused. There can be no safer place to spend one's summer than the North Shore of Massachusetts.

THIS YEAR WEDNESDAY, JUNE FIFTH, is the date for the Children's Auto Outing. Boston has always rejoiced in this practical philanthropy. Yearly the poorer children of the city have been mobilized and taken by automobile to Nantasket beach. The Boston Automobile Dealers' association have had the coöperation of the owners of cars on the Back Bay and the North Shore and the large number of cars still needed should be forthcoming.

ALL OF THE CASUALTIES of our war will not be registered upon the list of dead and wounded. Men who have sacrificed themselves in other lines than those which are primarily military in their scope, should be remembered with affection and esteem. Undoubtedly, Charles Wagner, the Huguenot preacher, the author of The Simple Life, gave his life in service for France, although his work did not call him into the field of combat. The author of many articles and addresses, he will be remembered by the American readers primarily because of his thoroughly appreciated volume on the simple life, although his other works have had a wide reading in his home land. The volume was the expression of his own soul longing for simplicity in religion, social relations among men, political institutions, dress, wealth and the conduct of the affairs of life. The volume was an expression of his soul experience, which America little appreciated when the volume appeared. The war has taken a heavy toll, but none will be missed more than Charles Wagner. His first service was in a Germanized province and to escape from the thralldom and oppression of the Germanism of the province he studiously applied himself to the study of the French language and then crossed the border to enjoy the liberty of French institutions and to escape the Prussian "atmosphere." Now, America can understand The Simple Life as it has never understood it before. The European background has now become the centre of thought and those who have not read The Simple Life since it first appeared, may well read it again as one of the master soul experiences revolting against the restraints of social inequalities, injustices and hypocrisies.

THE WILLINGNESS OF ALL AMERICANS to help win this conflict has been one of the compensations for the horrors of war. Men and women of all walks of life have contributed faithfully and willingly of their service and knowledge. The women have knit, doctors have healed, clergymen have preached, editors have written, and now the lawyers are giving advice, "free" advice. The demands of the war have aroused a great number of people to changes brought about rapidly by death. Young, inexperienced men and women have been forced to think of what changes will be wrought in their affairs by a sudden death. Many of our men in the service have not had an opportunity or the thought to set their affairs aright and now comes the legal talent of the country to aid them with the best of advice. The Boston Legal Aid society has issued a remarkable little volume, "A Hand Book of Legal Suggestions" for men in the service. The volumes are being delivered freely to our loyal men. At the society headquarters the volume is available to anyone applying. This volume is a distinct contribution to the cause and will be a welcome aid to counsellors, clergymen, draft board members, enlisted men and the members of families with men at the front. The thanks of the appreciative public are in order for the work so well done by the Boston Legal Aid society.

THE INVESTIGATION of the aeroplane difficulty was not welcome news to Americans, but the news that the American Liberty motors have arrived in France and are in service is better and more welcome.

THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT PRESENTED to America the colossal monument, the Statue of Liberty, that rises out of the water of New York harbor to welcome to our shores the newcomers to the land of opportunity and liberty. The generous gift will ever stand as a memorial to the bond of love which binds the two peoples. The visible gift is appreciated, but the spirit which is expressed surpasses it in value and worth. Now, Italy is giving expression to her admiration and friendship for America by the presentation of a bronze copy of the priceless famous antiquity, the "victory" of Brescia. May the gift be but an Italian prophecy in bronze of the successes of the American arms. The original was found in 1826 amid the ruins of the Temple of Vespasian in the Forum of Brescia. The Forum was dedicated to the Capitoline divinities Jupiter, Juno and Minerva. The statue is credited to a Greek sculptor and has been cherished by Italy and admired by the whole art world as one of the truly great pieces of work extant. "Victory" will be a welcome addition to our treasures in art, but America appreciates the more the pure spirit which prompts the gift. America has not been unappreciative of the noble course of the history of the Italian people in their struggle for national unity and liberty. Coming out of the chaos of political relations stage by stage the Italian states have been bound together and their struggles for liberty, equality and fraternity have ever been admired by those of our people who have tried to understand them and their holy desires for political integrity. We are allies now in a world war for freedom, and may the statue be a symbol of the successes which shall attend the allies in their world wide work!

THE PACIFISTS WHO ENDEAVORED to force their opinions upon the recent Unitarian Convention discovered that the license which they have abused in the past would not be tolerated as an expression of the polity of the denomination. The liberal polity of the organization and the individual liberty of the particular leader may have led a few astray, but the meeting last week afforded all the delegates an opportunity to express opinions, and without a reasonable dissent the denomination placed itself on record as for the war as the "one" great task that must be accomplished. It is remarkable when one considers the unanimity with which all denominations of the Christian Church, avowedly for peace, have rallied to the support of the flag, Catholic and Protestant alike. All are one in purpose in winning this great war.

THE ITALIAN FUND does not run counter to but coöperates with the Red Cross work, although specifically intended for the work in Italy. Those who give may know that the work is being efficiently done. Lewis Niles Roberts has served the cause of the allies well in his position, and now that he leaves the work for other spheres of usefulness in aid of Italy the work will not lag. Already a substantial and growing enterprise, the fund should be trebled before the month goes out.

IT IS REMARKABLE how the advices of General Wood given early in the war and pigeonholed by the administration have proven to have been invaluable then and are only recognized tardily now. General Wood has not been accorded the opportunities for service that his intelligence, training and service would warrant.

FROM TIME TO TIME little fragments of news come through from Europe such as these, "mutiny in Austrian navy," "thirteen German sailors have been sentenced to death and two to imprisonment for twenty years." What do these mean? Are they indications of discontent?

THE WORK OF THE GENERAL THEOLOGICAL LIBRARY, of New England, and situated in Boston cannot be overestimated. It is the centre of information on the great fields of service for the churches of all denominations and their opportunities for service. It affords the clergymen of New England the opportunity to obtain volumes particularly adapted to the work of their chosen profession, carefully selected by a volunteer committee. The public libraries may supply the needs of the general public, but it cannot endeavor to furnish professional works for any particular class. So the General Theological Library has specialized and furnished an unique and unrivalled collection of works on religion, social service and the great fields of modern usefulness open to the church. The work has grown and the philanthropies of Boston have not its equal in its wideness of influence. Philanthropic givers, who are casting about for a practical opportunity to have their funds set at work to the best advantage, will do well to investigate the merits of the well-conducted and valuable library.

PRESIDENT WILSON HAS ESTABLISHED a new precedent that will prove a credit to him. The pity is, that he did not call to his service men in political parties other than the Democratic party, sooner. It would have united the forces of America the more quickly. The appointment of Mr. Hughes to the very important position of commissioner for the examination of the aeroplane difficulties was a master stroke. Mr. Hughes' patriotic response to the call to service was equally creditable. President Wilson has established a valuable precedent that New England may hope to have him follow again and again in the future. There is no better way in which the people can be united than to feel that the President is determined to carry on the war upon a high and non-partisan plane.

THE RAILROAD MEN WILL RISE UP and call this administration "blessed." The world war has wrought great reforms. Bye and bye McAdoo will know how to take political advantage of the great coup. The railway workers deserve all the help they can in meeting the high costs of living and they should have reasonable and just compensation for the work done, but the justice of the cause and the fairness of the increase cannot dismiss the political strategy and opportunity accomplished by the move.

AMERICA WAS A LITTLE SLOW in perfecting the rapid fire machine gun, but when perfected and put upon the field of action it has acquitted itself well. The delay was worth while. Let it be hoped that the delay in the aeroplane construction will prove as beneficial.

WHILE THE RUMORS come from Ireland concerning Sinn Feiners and the rest, it should not be forgotten that three hundred and sixty-five thousand Irishmen have already volunteered and have been or are in service for the allies.

THE IDLERS AND MEN in non-useful pursuits are to be forced into occupations that will give them an opportunity to serve humanity and obtain work that has rich rewards in the service rendered for humanity.

There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows, and in miseries.

All the world's a stage
And all the men and women merely players:
They have their exits and their entrances.

Mrs. F. S. York, of Lynn, is spending a few days at the home of Mrs. Sarah Perkins.

Otis F. Bohaker, of Smith's Point, is out with a fine-looking Dodge touring car, 1918 model.

Another barge of coal arrived for Samuel Knight Sons Co., on Wednesday, and is now being unloaded.

John Corley has a position as sexton at the Sacred Heart church and caretaker of the grounds of the parochial residence.

Miss J. Hester Rust was home from Simmons college for the holiday. Miss Rust is a member of this year's graduating class at Simmons.

The lilac bushes growing on the Alfred S. Jewett place down by the water, some of the roots of which are piercing the stonewall, have been a pretty sight the past week with their great purple blooms bending over and reflecting themselves in the water.

"Baby Week" begins tomorrow, June 1, and will last over another Saturday, June 8. Every baby in Manchester is expected to see the inside of the emergency room, next to Smith's Express, on Beach st., sometime during the week. Trained nurses and members of the committee, of which Mrs. D. T. Beaton is chairman, will be present to assist the mother with the baby while it is weighed and measured. Fully a hundred babies are expected.

Benjamin F. Merrill, of North st., must be a typical New England farmer of the old school. Since living in his little cottage perched on the side of the Town hill he has converted the bare rocks back of his house into little garden "pockets" (what the Shore gardeners use for rare Alpine plants), which are producing a goodly amount of beans, cucumbers and other things. To a westerner it seems like a "play" garden, an almost incredible feat to do on the granite rocks. Many a spendthrift and otherwise idle person could get a vision of what he might do if he would study the difficulties under which Mr. Merrill must have labored in his "rock garden," all these years. He was a young boy in Boston when the Civil War broke out and his patriotic zeal led him to run away as a drummer boy. He drummed a while for the soldiers, but had to be brought back home as he was not quite old enough.

Mrs. Alfred Hersey entertained Alfred Bott, a sailor boy, of Gloucester, over Memorial Day. Her son, Cheever L. Hersey, of North Andover, has passed his examinations and hopes to enlist in the Naval Reserve.

Manchester had many tired patriotic women last night. The W. R. C. worked faithfully during the morning at the G. A. R. hall, making bouquets and at the Baptist Church, preparing for the evening supper for 200 guests. In the morning 117 bunches of flowers were arranged and many button-hole bouquets, supplying the G. A. R., S. of V., and themselves.

Manchester and Newburyport High schools met on the playground diamond yesterday morning, at baseball, and the local boys met defeat, 9 to 1. Considering the size of the school as compared to Newburyport, the game played by the local boys was good. They did well last week, in their game with Gloucester, to hold them down to a small score, inasmuch as the visitors have two or three hundred boys to draw from, whereas Manchester has a total enrollment of less than forty.

COMMUNICATION

MANCHESTER THREATENED WITH THE YELLOW PERIL
Editor North Shore Breeze,

Dear Sir: Please permit me, through your columns, to voice my protest at the erection of large, bilious yellow, advertising signs in the very heart of our town, on the very border of an area upon which large sums of money have been spent, both by the taxpayers and by individuals, to make beautiful. Here is where we have our beautiful old church, with its type of architecture and open belfry, of which we have more reason to be proud than many of us realize; our beautiful and costly library, our dignified drinking fountain, our attractive columns of lights, our well-kept "Common," with its beautiful lawn and flowers, and even surrounding our old "village green," are buildings that carry with them a certain quaint flavor of antiquity; but this—this note of discord, is like a fester in one's eye, for truly may it be called an eyesore.

For years I have advocated a Village Improvement society, that might have the power and authority to consider and pass upon such innovations, so that as far as possible, "improvement in looks" might always go hand in hand with progress, and I still hope that at no distant date such a thing may be possible, for I believe it a nec-

Notes About Manchester
Boys at Home and Abroad

A few weeks ago a Canadian recruiting officer visited Manchester and summoned to appear for the Canadian service several young men, who were supposed to be eligible. Simeon Cool and John Chatman, natives of Newfoundland, but both of whom are married and settled here, and have taken out their first citizenship papers, were among those called. Both had been in the local draft and were not called because they were in Class 4 (married men with dependents). Cool wrote to the War Department, for information as to his status, as he would prefer to enlist from here, rather than with the Canadian forces. He received the following answer last Saturday:

"Replying to yours of May 22, if you have taken out first papers and have been classified in 4, you need not anticipate any trouble from the Canadian authorities, as they have no jurisdiction over you." The letter was signed by Roger Wolcott, Major, U. S. R., officer in charge of the draft, at the office of the adjutant general of Massachusetts.

Needless to say this letter was somewhat of a relief, as the local young men had been notified that if they had not enlisted by June 6, they would be subject to immediate draft.

Clifford Saulnier has already gone from here in the Canadian draft, and his brother, William Saulnier will go on June 3.

MEMORIAL SUNDAY SERVICES

REV. F. W. MANNING PREACHES
STRONG SERMON AT MANCHESTER
CONG'L CHURCH

Union Memorial Day services were held Sunday morning in the Manchester Cong'l church, with the pastor, the Rev. F. W. Manning, in the pulpit. Guests of honor present included Allen Post, 67, G. A. R., Col. H. P. Woodbury Camp, 149, S. of V., and Allen Relief Corps, 119.

Impressive music was rendered by a large choir led by A. C. Needham. Special numbers were the "Prayer of Thanksgiving," by E. Kremser; "To Thee, O Country," Julius Eichberg; response, "At Thine Altar Lowly Kneeling," C. W. Hanscom. Miss Porter played a violin solo as an offertory.

After the regular opening service of the church the minister read the President's proclamation in regard to the day, and also Hoover's latest statement as to the food situation. The President's request that Memorial Day be a day of prayer, "beseeching Him that He will give victory to our armies as they fight for freedom, wisdom to those who take counsel on our behalf in these days of dark struggle and perplexity, and steadfastness to our people to make sacrifice to the utmost in support of what is just and true, bringing us at last the peace in which men's hearts can be at rest because it is founded upon mercy, justice, and goodwill" was fitting introduction to the sermon delivered by the Rev. Mr. Manning.

AS GOOD SOLDIERS

The Rev. Frederic W. Manning spoke on the subject "As Good Soldiers," taking his text from II Tim. 2:3—"Suffer hardship with me, as a good soldier of Christ Jesus." Rev.

Mr. Manning said in part:

"Memorial Sunday has come again, and never before was there such a one as this. A year ago we were, nominally, in the great war. Today we are really in it. A year from today we may be twice as deeply in it as we are now.

"Our great peace-loving republic is being transformed into an armed camp. The soldier, once so rarely seen among us, is now everywhere in evidence. The best manhood of America is being poured into the service. Memorial Sunday this year has the double significance of being peculiarly in grateful appreciation of our good soldiers of the Civil War, and of our good soldiers of this greatest war of history.

"Our boys of '61 offered their all upon their country's altar. They carried the flag to victory, saving the Union and freeing it from slavery. The great and strong republic today has been made possible by the service rendered by our good soldiers of the Civil War. In the same spirit our good soldiers of today go forth to save American freedom and deliver America and the world from the curse of German militarism. Who doubts but that our good soldiers now will bear to victory the flag that has never known defeat!

"Our first great duty is to win this war; and we must win it greatly, with magnificent abundance of resources and nobility of purpose.

"German militarism must be smashed to prepare the way for that better world for which our good soldiers are fighting over there.

"We are a peace-loving people, but peace is not our highest good; we care more for justice and liberty than we do for peace. We want a world of righteousness and freedom, not a world of anarchy and militarism. The peace we care for is the peace that goes hand in hand with justice and liberty. We want a world blessed by American freedom, not cursed by German militarism.

"To accomplish our noble purpose for America and the world, every true American today should live in the spirit of the good soldier. Not all can literally be soldiers, but all can serve in the spirit of the good soldier. There is that in the spirit of the good soldier that is akin to the spirit of Christ. He gave himself for others. He suffered and died for principle. His cross is the world's symbol of the spirit of sacrificial giving. War, bad as it is, teaches some important lessons. It is giving to many new meaning to the cross of Christ. The good soldier bearing his cross, sees new glory in the cross of Christ. The favorite hymn of our good soldiers over there is said to be: "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross, On Which the Prince of Glory Died."

"New sacrifices for our flag add new meaning to it. The stars in our service flag add new lustre to the 'Stars and Stripes.' By reason of our world service our flag has become a world flag.

"The world is not wholly given over to cruelty and death. If sin abounds, grace abounds much more also. The Red Cross stands for mercy and life. During Red Cross Week, I have noticed the Red Cross posters. One impressed me greatly—the one with the good soldiers in the background marching to battle, and the American girl in the foreground with extended hand pleading for help for the boys who may be laid low by the fortune of war. The one that impressed me the most, however, was the simplest—just the Red Cross and the word, 'Give.'

"The good soldier gives in the spirit of the cross, and in that spirit all good Americans must live today."

MEMORIAL DAY PROPERLY OBSERVED IN MANCHESTER.

PATRIOTIC ORDERS AND CITIZENS IN GENERAL PAY THEIR RESPECTS TO THE HONORED DEAD

Memorial Day was fittingly observed in Manchester yesterday by the patriotic orders and citizens in general, including the local company of the Mass. State Guard.

The membership of Allen Post, 67, G. A. R., has dwindled to such small proportions that one is impressed by the meaning of the day, as the ranks of the Grand Army of the Republic grow less, and added significance is given to the day in these times of stress, when nearly every family in town is affected by the great war in Europe.

Headed by a platoon of police and the Progresso Band, of Gloucester, the parade started from Grand Army hall, at two o'clock. Commander Enoch Crombie, of Allen Post, was chief marshal. Co. I, State Guard, in command of Captain Alexander Robertson, did escort duty, followed by the Boy Scouts. Then followed Col. H. P. Woodbury Camp, 149, S. of V., the members of Allen Post being at the end of the line.

Summer street, Union and Rosedale cemeteries were visited and the graves of departed veterans were decked with flowers, the Boy Scouts and State Guard members assisting in this part of the day's exercises. Following the ceremonies at the Rosedale cemetery, the line marched to the Town Wharf, being joined by the members of Allen Relief Corps, and a large detachment of members of the Arbella club of girls. Services in memory of the sailor dead were held and flowers were strewn upon the water.

A short concert was given by the band after the exercises on the Common, after the line was dismissed. In the vestry of the Baptist church at five o'clock, the W. R. C. served a splendid New England supper to the members of the various organizations taking part in the parade. Nearly 200 persons were served, and nothing but the highest praise was showered upon the ladies for the excellence and the sup-abundance of the meal served.

The day's exercises were concluded by a patriotic meeting in the Town hall in the evening.

PATRIOTIC EXERCISES IN THE EVENING

Manchester Town hall was crowded in the evening for the Memorial Day exercises, to which the public was invited. Commander Crombie, of the Post, presided. Music was furnished by the Schubert male quartet, of Boston. Rev. Frederic W. Manning, offered prayer. Lincoln's "Gettysburg Address," always a part of these exercises, was read by Dana Younger.

The address of the evening was by Rev. G. E. Allan, of Gloucester, who spoke eloquently, contrasting many conditions in Civil War days with the present. He said in part:

"Before the Civil War, the people were deep in the love of self interest rather than of right. The states misunderstood their rights in relation to their neighbors. These conditions must have either destroyed the nation or have brought the war which gave a new birth to things. To the old soldiers we owe the saving of this nation and keeping it the grand, big country that it is. Now all the boys—north and south—are going in the same ships across; all are brothers, helping to free the world.

"When the Civil War finally broke out there were people then who did not want to take sides. The people who do not want to take sides now had better go to Germany. In a question of right and wrong, silence is indicative of being on the 'money bags' side.

"Lincoln had strong characteristics, as also had Grant. Lincoln was a man of vast sympathy, broad vision, and a keen sense of justice. Even his enemy could feel safe with him. He was like all men who have led the world,—big of heart. Grant, the stern general, had self-control, poise and determination.

"The objectives of the war were seen completely as it went on. Lincoln's vision was realized and the Union was preserved and individual freedom to all people gained. This is what the boys went in to do and they came out of it with that accomplished. If socialistic organizations are not loyal in every detail at this present crisis they will meet a stone wall, because the country will not be balked.

"A man or a body of men in the exercise of what they call freedom must not be permitted to menace society, or the nation. We must learn to distinguish deeds done under the holy name of freedom.

"The question of suffering in human development brings out the thought of God. God is in the Red Cross and in every effort put forth to help suffering man.

"The place of our nation in the present war is an honor to which we must be fully alive to the responsibility. Its cause is ambition,—ambition in a ruler, and has been conducted ruthlessly, with robbery, murder, devoid of justice, and with an unbelievable treatment of women and children.

The speaker closed with a fine tribute to President Wilson, and the present day Memorial proclamation: a prayer that God will forgive our sins; purify our hearts to see and love truth; to accept all things just and right; and that God will give us victory.

NEW DRUG STORE OPENS IN MANCHESTER

A new drug store has been opened in Manchester this week, in the store in Central square, formerly occupied by the Walen Drug Co. Ropes Drug Co., of Salem, which operates two stores in that city and one in Beverly, has leased the store and, after installing new fixtures and a complete assortment of the lines for which this concern is justly famous all over Essex County, opened for business on Memorial Day. Newell Knowlton, a registered pharmacist, formerly connected with the Beverly store, is the local manager.

The Ropes concern maintains a storage stock house in Salem and carry one of the largest and most complete lines of drug store accessories from a wheelchair to tooth powder, of any concern in the state.

MANCHESTER

Alarm signal to be sounded on fire whistle in emergency: "1-2-5" repeated

It was announced at the Monday night drill of Co. I that the moving picture show given for the company's benefit two or three weeks ago resulted in the treasury being increased to the amount of $65. A vote of thanks was extended to Manager Sanborn of the Horticultural hall for his courtesy in making the show a possibility.

Co. I made a good showing in the Memorial Day exercises. Fifty-five officers and men were in line, in addition to six who marched with the Sons of Veterans. After the parade Capt. Robertson put the boys through a short drill at the playgrounds, ending up with the guard mount. After this the company went to the Baptist church and enjoyed a splendid New England supper served by the ladies of the W. R. C.

IN THE SERVICE

As a result of some misunderstanding with the draft board, Arthur Russell, colored chauffeur for F. M. Boynton, was ordered to Camp Devens, Friday, having been in Manchester only a few days.

Three more Manchester boys are leaving today for Camp Upton, N. Y., Peter Maslin, Fred Killam and Joseph Spinney.

Ralph P. Young, a former Manchester young man, on the reportorial staff of the BREEZE, for a year and a half until last September, was called for the aviation section training camp at Camp Dick, Texas, this week. He enlisted last fall. Mr. Young has been working on the Boston American the last nine months.

John H. Green of Allen's drug store was called in the draft and was supposed to start away this week, but he has been changed over to Class 2, as he is married and has dependents.

Two Manchester young men were in the group of sixteen that started away from Beverly last Monday morning, in the draft quota, for Camp Upton, N. Y. They were Peter A. Brown, one of the proprietors of the Manchester fruit store, and Philip Dioguardi, the latter a laborer, living on Forest st. William Scott, of Forest street, who was to have gone, was placed in another class at the last moment.

The BREEZE $2 a year postpaid.

BY TWO AND A HALF TIMES ITS QUOTA

During the past week, all over this great country, a campaign has been carried on, to raise one hundred million dollars for the second Red Cross war fund. Here was a cause we all could support, feeling that every dollar we gave would help relieve suffering and bring comfort and solace where it was most needed.

Manchester was given a quota of $10,000. This seemed like a large amount coming so soon after her magnificent contribution of over $430,000 to the third Liberty loan. The local committee—having charge of the drive—knowing the town, never had a doubt but that she would respond most generously to the call. Manchester has good reason to feel proud, for when the campaign closed, it was found that she had contributed, in cash and pledges, $25,000.

The committee tried to reach every person in town so that they might have an opportunity to give to the fund. No doubt some were missed, but the slight was not intentional for some of the collectors called three times before finding some of the people at home. Contributions from ten cents up to $2500 were received.

Of course the town appreciates the fact that our going "over the top" was in a very large measure due to the generous help of our summer residents. The committee was ably assisted by Reginald Boardman, a number of large subscriptions having been secured by him. Harry Purington, the treasurer of the Manchester branch of the Red Cross, helped in every way possible. The committee owes a debt of gratitude to the collectors who gave their time so willingly to the good cause with such excellent results. We feel honored in having had a part in helping to raise the second and Red Cross war fund.

—R. T. GLENDENNING,

PRESENT OWNER IN MANCHESTER

Manchester now can lay claim to hand-made flags as a part of her war work. Mrs. Martha Chute has made two and rumor says she is going to make a third this summer.

Manchester has another hand-made flag of the long ago. This one is in the possession of Chas. W. Fritz, who works at the E. A. Lane paint shop. It came to him about 25 years ago from his aunt, Mrs. Louis Perry, who made it while living in New Orleans in the 50's as a birthday gift for Mr. Perry. After the war the Perrys came to Manchester, where they lived on Forest street.

Mr. Fritz says that his aunt never cared to talk about the flag, always avoiding the subject with tears in her eyes. But he found out by various conversations with her a little of its history.

In those days feeling ran high and every northern sympathizer in the south who dared fly our banner had them taken away. The Perrys had two flags, a large one (evidently a ready-made one) and the smaller one made by Mrs. Perry. To save them from the rebels she wrapped them about her body under her dress. It became too warm to wear them and Mrs. Perry decided she must have some other equally safe place for them. She put them in an old hand-satchel and buried it in one corner of her chicken coop, carefully raking all possible debris over it.

The war was finally over and the old satchel was dug out. Here were two flags the rebels had not captured and they soon found their way up to the north and to Manchester. The larger one was accidentally burned, but the little one is here to remind us of those sad times. It measures 3x6 feet and has 36 stars. It is supposed to be the only flag saved in the south.

So the bare facts run. But our patriotism teaches us to read much between the lines, and how glad we ought to be in these days, that the

MAGNOLIA

The BREEZE $2 a year postpaid.

The working people of this village gave $169.75 to the Red Cross last week.

Victor Nelson will work this summer for Leon Foster, our local druggist.

Mrs. Frederick W. Eaton, of Norwich, Conn., is spending a few days at the parsonage, visiting her husband's parents.

We are informed that the Men's clubhouse will not open until about July first, and the Women's clubhouse will open about the same time.

The usual services will be held at the Village church Sunday at 10.45 a. m. and 7.30 p. m. Dr. Eaton will preach both morning and evening.

Brief memorial services were held Thursday morning in the Village cemetery—a custom that has been observed for many years. The exercises consisted of singing by the school children, decorating the graves of the fallen heroes and prayer by the pastor of the Village church.

The "Upton Club" of Boy Scouts met in the pastor's study at the Village church last Sunday evening to register and to plan work for the summer. Among the useful things they are to do this summer is to mow the lawn in front of the Village church and to keep the grounds about the church looking neat and attractive as they have been in previous seasons. This service so cheerfully offered by the Scouts is greatly appreciated by those who are most interested in the moral and spiritual welfare of this place. The Village church is the only one here that is open all the year and it should be supported by all living in this vicinity whether they be all-year or only summer residents. Close the doors of the Village church and property in this village would depreciate in value fifty percent, for no self-respecting person would want to live in a community where there was no church and no religious services held on the Sabbath day. The mayor of Boston was right in saying that "Father" Taylor was worth twenty armed policemen for lawlessness and crime are sure to reign in communities out of which have gone the institutions and forces that make for righteousness. The Boy Scouts will do their "bit" for the local church—an institution that is greatly overlooked these days, but which is essential to every community.

WILL NOT TELL WHAT TIME IT IS—A WAR SAVING

"We are on the trail of every kind of interference with efficient telephone service at the present time, as well as seeking for all forms of waste in the telephone business," said Manager Rolfe, when asked about the discontinuance of the giving of time by operators to subscribers, on Monday, June 3. "As in all big businesses in these war times, we must make every part of the organization as efficient as possible, and any usage of the telephone which in any way impedes the service for the government or for subscribers must be eliminated.

"While the giving of the time of day to anyone who has called has been of service to some of the public, the practice has grown to such an extent that many of the telephone companies in other parts of the country, as well as ourselves, have felt it necessary to discontinue to give such service. In the New England company's territory there have been 100,000 calls per day, the bulk of such calls coming at times when our operating forces find it most difficult to handle them.

"As such a burden is obviously an avoidable waste, and as so large a portion of those inquiries have become a habit with many people, as happens in homes where clocks differ, and particularly through the desire of children to learn the time easily, we are confident that our desire to direct all our energies toward the furnishing of effective telephone service will be understood by our subscribers. Relieved of that burden, the operators will be better able to serve all users of the telephone.

"Should any subscriber, through long habit, thoughtlessly ask the operator for the time after next Monday, the operator will make this response: 'I am sorry, but it has become necessary to discontinue giving the time of day.' Our subscribers, therefore, will know that this is the standardized statement which will be used by all operators throughout New England territory, and an operator's refusal should not in any way be considered as a personal discourtesy."

Stewart Cooper and family, of Cambridge, have moved to Beverly Farms, occupying apartments in the Day house on Oak st.

Arthur J. Harlow on Tuesday reported to the Charlestown navy yard and was assigned to duty. He has enlisted in the navy as a carpenter.

Mrs. Mary A. Larcom, of Larcom place, returned home the middle of this week, after a pleasant four weeks' vacation spent visiting her daughter, Mrs. Guy McIntosh, at Medford.

The W. U. Tel. & Tel. Co., which has maintained a most attractive office in Neighbors' hall block the past two summers, has decided not to renew their lease and therefore will not open the office this summer.

The wedding of Miss Anna R., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. Pierce, and one of Beverly Farms' most popular young ladies, to Calvin V. Smith, of Beverly, will take place in Beverly Farms, next Monday, June 3.

The usual memorial exercises were held at the Beverly Farms school on Wednesday afternoon and were witnessed by members of Preston Post, G. A. R., Preston W. R. Corps, and other visitors, many of whom were parents of the children. The exercises were most interesting and the children must have put in much work and time in order to have presented such a pleasing program.

Observance of Memorial Day at Beverly Farms was carried out in detail, as printed in last week's BREEZE. The line formed at 1.30 p. m., in Central sq., and was of the following formation: Police, the North Shore Cadet Band, members of the fire department, Andrew Standley Camp, S. of V., Preston Post, G. A. R., Spanish War Veterans and invited guests. The line of march was up Hale st., then counter-march through Hale, High to the Beverly Farms cemetery, where the line was met by Preston W. R. Corps, and the school children. After the graves of the honored dead had been decked with flowers, the usual ritual service was conducted at the G. A. R. lot. The line then formed, marched through Hart, Hale and Beach sts., to West Beach, where Preston W. R. Corps held their services for the sailor dead, and flowers were cast upon the water. The line then proceeded to Central sq., and was dismissed. In the evening, special services were held at the Beverly Farms Baptist church, and a patriotic address was given by the pastor, Rev. Clarence S. Pond.

Preston Post, 188, G. A. R., desires to express its sincere thanks for the flowers sent to them for use on Memorial Day, also its appreciation for the aid and interest given by all in the carrying out of the program for the observance of Memorial Day.

The annual "at home" of the Girls' club of the Beverly Farms Baptist church, on Friday evening of last week, was a most pleasant affair and besides members, there was a large attendance of friends present. The girls themselves operated the stereopticon machine under the charge of Miss Mollie Davis, while Miss Elizabeth McKinnon read a most interesting synopsis relating to the present war.

On Sunday evening last the members of Preston Post, 188, G. A. R., accompanied by Andrew Standley Camp, S. of V., Preston W. R. C., State Guards and members of the fire department attended the services in St. John's Episcopal church. The service was modeled on that held in St. Paul's cathedral, London, in memory of John Hay, Secretary of State of the United States. Rev. Neilson Poe Carey, rector, preached a memorial sermon.

Beverly doubled her quota for the Red Cross campaign fund, and it was certainly glad news to everyone, as all were intensely interested in the result. The exact total amount that was raised was $90,000.57. Beverly Farms did her share, her proportionate part collected being $932.60, principally donated by the year-round residents. Team 11, which had charge of the soliciting, did grand work and deserve much credit. Members were Capt. Frank Lamasney, Howard P. Williams, Frank I. Preston, Fred W. Varney, Dr. C. J. Murray, Geo. S. Williams, Percy Huxley, Howard A. Doane, Harold Varney, Edwin F. Campbell and Arthur A. Woodbury.

John J. Shea, a well-known Beverly Farms boy, was among the sixteen who on Monday last answered the call to the colors and left for the national army service, going to Camp Upton, N. Y.

The Public Service department has made good progress in the sidewalk improvement. Granite edgestones have been installed on a portion of Vine st., also on the east side of Hart st., as far as the residence of W. B. Publicover.

COPLEY THEATRE, BOSTON

At the Copley theatre next Monday, the Henry Jewett Players will continue to present for its second week, "Arms and the Girl," the new Belgian war comedy by Grant Stewart and Robert Baker. Although its authors have had the temerity to place the scenes of their play in the midst of the atmosphere of Belgium during the German invasion, they have also had the artistic sense to write a play that possesses intrinsic merits of its own, aside from its timeliness.

The plot of "Arms and the Girl," its episodes and its characters, are all picturesque. Its incidents revolve around the unpremeditated marriage of two young Americans who were total strangers up to the time of their meeting at an inn in the Belgian town of Beaupre while the Germans are over-running the city.

"HEAD OVER HEELS," AT TREMONT THEATRE

The opening performance at the Tremont theatre of the new Henry W. Savage play with music, "Head Over Heels," was in the form of an ovation Saturday night, when there wasn't an empty seat in the house.

Of course, the chief welcome was given the mischievous, melodious, mirthful Mitzi, whose versatile art has developed materially since she became the subject of conversation among Boston theatre fans during the "Sari" engagement and later when she was the saucy, ragged boy in "Pom-Pom."

Mitzi always can be trusted to create a thrill or spring a surprise on her audience. In "Head Over Heels," it is her acrobatic ability as well as her power to bring a lump in the throat as she portrays the character of the wistful, pathetic little figure, who must perform the hazardous feats of skill as the topmount girl and is controlled by the will of her cruel Italian master.

There is an unusually attractive ensemble, gorgeously gowned, who can sing and dance and do both well, a well-known troupe of acrobats and the big Savage Opera orchestra under the direction of Harold A. Levey.

THE LORE OF THE LUCK

Hard luck is almost a synonym for laziness.

Good luck is the twin brother of hard work.

Luck is a disease for which hard work is the only remedy.

Luck longs for a dinner, while labor goes and earns one.

Luck is a weather vane with the distinguishing points broken off.

COMMUNITY MARKETS PROVING A SUCCESS WHEREVER TRIED

The community market in Lynn has opened for the season, the market days being Wednesday and Saturday. This market is held at the same place as last year, near the West Lynn end of the Common, and is under the same management.

The Cambridge market opened on May 25th and did a successful day's business, there being about a dozen farmers present with good-sized loads, which included spinach, lettuce, rhubarb, cucumbers, asparagus and radishes. The market-place is around the police station, a few steps from its location last year and is being managed by Joseph R. Johnson. Market days are Tuesdays and Saturdays. There is a probability of a second market opening in Cambridge in the near future.

The market committee of Haverhill have set June 15th as the opening day for the market in that city. Market days will be Wednesdays and Saturdays.

The new wholesale market operated by the Lowell Market Gardeners and Fruit Growers association will open its season in the new market building in Washington Park, Lowell, May 31. The new building is 120 feet long and contains stalls for sale of goods. The market opens daily at 5 a. m.

It is expected that community markets in Gloucester, Peabody, Salem, Reading and Framingham will be in operation, together with the Boston municipal markets.

The city of Lawrence is making plans for the opening of a large wholesale and retail market which should have a large patronage.

Farmers and market gardeners should keep in mind the markets in their vicinity, as all, whether wholesale or retail, offer unusual opportunities of disposing of produce at a good price.

He'd like to stamp Democracy
Forevermore from land and sea,
And make earth's motto "Gott und me,"

But can the Kaiser?

Not much! Your Uncle Sam's the man

To knock the tar from such a plan,
And so, in plain American

It's CAN the Kaiser!

MEMORIAL DAY EXERCISES

IN MANCHESTER PUBLIC SCHOOLS OF UNUSUAL INTEREST THIS YEAR

MEMORIAL DAY exercises in the Manchester schools were of an unusual nature this year. From the entertainment of the little folk at the Price school at 10 a. m., through the High school exercises and flag raising at 11, and the day's climax in the Town hall in the afternoon by the pupils of the grammar grades, the day united as never before the boys and days of '61 with the present. The exercises of all the schools were held on Wednesday.

Adjournment was then made to the yard, where Miss Elsie McCormack, president of the Senior class, presented the school service flag, and Mr. Matthews accepted it. Miss McCormack, assisted by other class officers, Miss Helen Knight and Miss Pearl Conant, hoisted the handsome new flag and its companion service flag. Mr. Matthews read the names of our boys now in service who had been students at one time of the High school, explaining that the one gold star on the flag was for Michael Coughlin, whose death recently occurred. In the list, members of this year's class are, Gordon Baker, Joseph B. Dodge, Walter Eicke, Alfred Needham and Royal White.

Commander Stanley made a short talk and Miss Porter led the school in "The Star Spangled Banner."

George A. Priest School

A large number of patrons and friends attended the exercises of the George A. Priest school at the Town hall in the afternoon. A pretty feature was the children in line on the Common, from which they marched in with the invited honor guests, the visiting G. A. R., and the Boy Scouts. The school orchestra played. Francis Finley, teacher of music, led the chorus singing. Com. Enoch Crombie introduced the speakers of the day, Com. of the Dept. of Mass., G. A. R., being the first, who told how pleasing such exercises are to the old veterans. He spoke of the lessons taught by Memorial Day and how much it meant to the old soldiers to have had the honor of following the flag in '61, bringing out that it meant just as much to the boys of today. He closed by saying that their fighting days were over, and that it is up to the young men of today to win this war, the greatest of all, so that democracy shall rule forever.

Lawrence F. McCarthy was the next speaker. Manchester boys and girls gave their former playground instructor a rousing welcome. He presented a fine appearance and spoke in a stirring manner, which greatly enthused his young listeners. Mr. McCarthy, who is superintendent of the Army and Navy Service club in Boston, has about 8000 men a week passing through his hands. They come from all quarters of the world. He spoke of the regard he has for Manchester and its feeling of home for him, saying that the brotherly, homelike feeling is fostered in the army and navy and all are made to feel they are working for one supreme cause, represented by the Red, White and Blue. Enthusiasm resulting from children's pledging allegiance to the flag, he commented on as one of the greatest factors in their training.

Sailor Robert Burke, U. S. Foreign Fleet, delighted the children with his stories of "over there." He has just returned and expects soon to leave again. He is in the employ of the National Press and is writing his stories for prominent Boston and New York papers.

The program of the afternoon was as follows:

Glimpses Here and There of North Shore Estates

Some Signs of Early Summer Activities Typical of the Times

III

"ATT-LEA HOUSE" is one of the new old places at Magnolia. To look at this cottage, situated so invitingly by the roadside on the high land out near the point around which the Shore road bends so delightfully, one would never think that it had been made out of a plain old house, constructed without a thought of the fitness of things as the feminine architect sees them. But such is the case. About three years ago Mrs. S. Fisher Corlies, of Philadelphia, was told by her physician that she must live near the sea. So with her daughter, Miss Margaret L. Corlies, she came to Magnolia, and under the daughter's supervision the old house on the hillside was transformed into its present state.

Every good point in the old house was retained and everything was added to make it a complete and comfortable cottage. Since the BREEZE is not an architectural magazine, details cannot be gone into. But Miss Corlies must have missed her calling in life, in that she didn't take up architecture as a profession.

An interesting feature in the house upstairs is a large and prettily shaped window taking up much space in the hall wall between that and the guest room. This gives light and breadth to the old hall, to which the guest room and dining room beneath are part of an extended wing, and when the room is occupied a screen shuts off the window. Other signs of woman's ingenuity are in the adjoining bath-rooms between suites, thus economizing in plumbing; and the numerous cosy and convenient nooks and closets, etc.

The rare old furniture from the Philadelphia home was brought on, and now much that fills the little home is doubly precious because the most of it was picked up in other days in what is now the devastated regions of Europe.

The grounds are half rustic and have some trees of longer growth, while much of the shrubbery, the young fruit trees and others have been set out recently. The attractive arborea privet in front of the house is frost proof as well as insect proof and is a thing of beauty now when the hedges all around it are dead—the result of the past winter.

A beloved little inmate of the Corlies home is the handsome Pekingese, Wu Tang Ti, a most lovable little friend to all visitors. At this winter's show in Boston he took first prize for the best bred dog in America of his kind. Eight ribbons constitute a pretty ornament in the home, two firsts, two seconds, four thirds,—honors fallen to the little fellow.

Since Miss Corlies came to Magnolia she has taken as her protégé, a charming young Gloucester girl, Miss Helen McDonald, and is having her voice trained by Mrs. Hall McAllister, of Boston and the North Shore. This young girl has a high and deep contralto voice which has developed much this winter. She was recently heard at the recital given by Mrs. McAllister's pupils at the Copley Plaza, and, no doubt, will be heard on the Shore sometime this summer.

Last, but not least, mention must be made of the thrifty-looking little vegetable garden on the sloping ground at one side of the cottage. This garden is the chauffeur's "bit" and contains a great assortment of vegetables.

Miss Corlies is not only one who can direct, but delights in doing things herself. Putting the "lodge" in order each spring for its tenants is particularly interesting, as well as painting a table or doing a pleasant thing for someone.

ORCHIDS have come to inhabit the North Shore since Albert C. Burrage, of Boston, built the two immense conservatories at his Pride's Crossing home and purchased the Spaulding gardens at Beverly Farms, now known as the Burrage gardens or sometimes Burrage farms.

The entrance to the place at the Farms is at Webster ave., through a gateway flanked at either side by tall stone posts topped with stone baskets filled with carved stone flowers. The drives and paths lead to the great rose garden (much injured by the winter) and past the pretty little lake with its charming bridges and classic features and on to the greenhouses. Here is where the fruit and orchids are raised that are taken later, in some instances, to the show houses at Pride's. Here are seen grapes, nectarines, melons, tomatoes and cucumbers, all of extraordinary growth.

If orchids are sought the visitor must ask for George Janson, the orchid man. He will show you the 2000 or more pots of orchids, plants with curiously shaped roots and fantastically shaped flowers. These orchids came in great shipments to the Burrage house from Africa, South America and the Philippines. Some are very rare and were plucked from the trees in their far-away homes just to come to the North Shore. Some orchids are being raised from the seed, a very unique and difficult experiment.

After viewing this orchid growth at Beverly Farms the visitor naturally wishes to go to the Pride's Crossing greenhouse to see those that are in full blossom.

Mr. Janson is almost as interesting as the orchids. A man who has spent forty years in the cultivation of such peculiar plants as orchids would seem almost to partake of their nature. But he has retained his typical English characteristics and tells in a modest way of his twenty-five years' work in England at one place, a commercial orchid house. This is only his second private place in the forty years.

(To a recent visitor he courteously asked if she would wear a "buttonhole" bouquet. Of course she made the right reply. With two great lavender orchids in her belt she started on her way. Someone told her such flowers sold for one dollar or more apiece in New York. It seemed almost sacreligious to wear a two-dollar "buttonhole" around Beverly Farms, while hunting up "copy" for the BREEZE, but it would have been worse to have thrown it away.)

THE Beverly Farms estate purchased about three years ago by Hon. and Mrs. Albert J. Beveridge, of Indianapolis, Ind., has been named "Boulderwood," the former name of this, the McKee estate, being "Selwood." The massive boulder near the entrance to the grounds has been the persuasive influence which caused the change.

The massive stone house is set in the midst of grounds with fine old trees for sentinels. The trees are a special feature of the place and show a large and choice variety.

The pretty little pond, with its statue of Pan in the center, busy with his pipes, is about the most attractive part of the grounds. Here the lily leaves are showing on the water and the rocky banks are beginning to be gay with rhododendrons (see picture on front cover of this issue).

Since the Beveridges have owned the place, the gardener has made a vegetable and flower garden combined at the foot of the hill on the Everett street side. The usual vegetables are seen, but intensive gardening is the idea of the gardener, who produces from two to three crops on his soil in a necessarily small space of land below the rocky hillside. On the side of the hill he has a small orchard of dwarf fruit trees, among which are growing melons, squashes and cucumbers. Also on the hillside near the bottom is the strawberry bed. These did not suffer from the cold because the ice did not form on them as it did on level ground. He now has the thrifty looking vines tucked around neatly with excelsior (his own idea), the object being to keep the berries clean, and considered by him as better than the usual hay or straw, in that there are no seeds in it to drop down to make more weeds.

Roses also stood the cold remarkably well, every bush in the patch seeming to have been untouched. Flowers border the outside of the garden next to the tall rustic cedar-pole fence and also some of the vegetable beds along the gravel paths.

The entrance to the estate on Hale street is marked by two great elms with high and lofty branches meeting arch-like, so typical of entrances to New England estate.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN L. THORNDIKE, of Bridge street, West Manchester, have a vegetable garden coming on that the gardener, Patrick O'Brien, takes much pride in showing after his sixteen years of service on the place. The garden proper, with its vegetables and berries and fruit trees, is about one acre enclosed by a wire fence, over which roses are clambering profusely in some parts. Outside the garden is an acre of potatoes and beets, the latter of a variety for cows. Last year 145 bushels of potatoes were raised. The tennis court will again be a potato patch for the garden game now on.

The small greenhouse was used for the seedlings and bedding out things this spring. When the gardener was asked recently if he was raising lots of vegetables, he said, "O, Lord, yes, let me show you."

His garden is laid out in sections, flower-bordered, and planted with every vegetable in the seed catalog. The sweet corn is planted in clusters or hills instead of the usual way in rows. His idea is that the corn gets more air through the wide spaces between the clusters than if planted in rows. The hills are thinned out and the young corn shoots given to the chickens, of which there are about 150 on the place.

With berry bushes he is very successful, his gooseberry and currant bushes being unusually healthy when so many others are infested with disease. Three times a year he thinks sufficient for spraying.

Flowers are also a part of the Thorndike home, where they occupy the little annual and perennial gardens near the rose garden on the lawn facing the railroad. At one side of the house is a little Italian garden newly made.

Pansies by the door on either side, of such great size and abundance as to immediately attract attention, are the usual spring and early summer feature of the place. They were sown last June and raised outside all winter, only recently being set out by the house.

"OLD PLACE," the home of the Frank B. Bemis family at Beverly Farms, is having an attractive addition built on one end. It is one story only and will make a new library, 35x24 feet. It will be finished in old English oak and the casement windows will have leaded-glass, while the ceiling will have a conventional pattern of elaborate design. Haven & Hoyt, of Boston, planned the room and Roberts & Hoare, of Manchester, are doing the building. The Bemis house is a fine stucco structure of unusual artistic design and is surrounded by trees of large and peculiar growth throughout the attractive grounds. A big copper beech is of interest, but the Norway spruce trees, grown very tall, have their limbs extending and drooping clear down to the earth, some of which have taken root and formed new trees six or more feet from the mother tree.

The gardens are across the street from the home and are surrounded by high vine-covered, rustic-cedar pole fences. The main entrance on West street is by a convent gate, very quaint and unique. Stepping stones lead through the rhododendrons to the pergola, vine-covered, with a rustic seat beneath, and from which a brick walk runs through the gardens to the greenhouse in the rear, passing under the long grape arbor on either side of which are the vegetables. Vegetables have been increased this year, but the flower garden, with its fine showing of perennials, will still be a thing of beauty to the passersby on West street.

The greenhouse has a section devoted to tropical plants, besides some fine blooming plants in other parts. A noteworthy group of plants is a collection of English begonias, a rare thing here. Near the greenhouse is located the gardener's cottage, a brown stucco building harmonizing well with its surroundings.

AT "The Oakes," in Beverly Farms, a miniature chicken farm is in the making. Already 150 chicks are peeping under the big trees back of the house. On this pretty hillside a rat-proof chicken house is built and everything is arranged to raise so many chicks in a remarkably small piece of land, showing what can be accomplished with labor and thought. Mrs. Godfrey L. Cabot is superintending the work of raising chickens as she has done so many other things along the line of food conservation since the opening of the war. At her home in Cambridge this winter she raised a large number of incubator chickens. These were raised in her house practically. Ducks were also raised in Cambridge. Mrs. Cabot has long been interested in chickens, and at her cottage at the Farms usually feeds the chickens through the day after the gardener has given them their morning feed.

The vegetable garden at the Cabot home has also been much increased this year by using a large piece of land adjoining, which is part of the Matthew Bartlett place, whose house stands next to the Cabot cottage.

Miss Eleanor Cabot has made a study of landscape gardening and this year, according to her plans, much shrubbery was set out along the driveway and hillside near the garage.

Mrs. Cabot made a special study of foods last season and gave a few interesting talks on the subject at the Beverly Farms library. While the Cabot men folk are all in active service, Mrs. Cabot is doing her "bit" in her quiet way.

THE George Lees, of Brookline, are now at "Villa al Mare," their charming Italian villa at Beverly Farms, where Mrs. Lee will open her garage for a workroom for the Italian Relief, beginning June 18 — Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, nine-thirty to one.

Mrs. Robert Hale Bancroft has opened the old home at Hale Farm, Beverly. Community gardens will again be a feature of this fine, old place, one of the most historic in Beverly.

Mrs. William Phillips, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, came on from Washington last Saturday, to the beautiful home, "Higlover," situated on Wenham lake, in the North Beverly section.

Mrs. S. Burt Wolbach, of "Skerryvore," Pride's Crossing, is on the committee formed in Boston that has to do with the children's cottage opened this Monday afternoon on the Boston Common. The little house, planned by Miss Watson, of the Rockefeller Foundation, will have exhibits portraying the food, health and play of the normal child from birth to five years of age, in compliance with the Child Welfare work of the country.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Warren Merrill and daughter, Miss Rosamond, left Boston last Friday and are now settled at "Rockhurst," the summer home on Smith's Point, Manchester. The young son, Ensign John Lee Merrill, has been eight and a half months in the war zone.

Mrs. John Chess Ellsworth and children, of South Bend, Ind., arrived at "Wayside," in the Manchester Cove colony, Tuesday, after spending a few weeks in Lowell with Mrs. Ellsworth's mother, Mrs. J. L. Chalifoux.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Esselstyn, of Pine Lodge, Old Neck road, Manchester, have Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Sargent, Jr., of Brookline, with them for the entire summer.

A memorial art building will be erected at Newport for the late Howard Gardiner Cushing, of Boston, Newport and New York, a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Cochrane, of Pride's Crossing.

While Mrs. Gurnee Munn was in Washington last week with her sister, Mrs. Arturo de Heeren, she received word of the detail of her husband, Lieut. Munn, signal officer in the aviation section of the reserve corps, U. S. A., as assistant in the American embassy in Paris. Mrs. Munn will no doubt visit Mr. Munn's mother, Mrs. Chas. A. Munn, in Manchester, sometime this summer.

"Edgewater House," at Beverly Farms, is to be opened June 15, when Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter and children will come on from Washington. Col. John R. Williams, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Williams, and Mrs. John Ballentine Pitney (Frances Williams), parents and sister of Mrs. Leiter, will be with them this summer. Capt. Pitney was wounded in France recently.

PRIDE'S CROSSING arrivals of the week include the John W. Blodgetts, of Grand Rapids, Mich., in the Sargent cottage, who came on Monday; the F. L. Higginsons, of Boston, who arrived on Tuesday; and the Edw. L. Kents, of Boston, who came yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Frick were over from New York to spend last week-end at "Eagle Rock," Pride's Crossing, where their little grandchildren, the Childs Frick children, are now domiciled for the summer. Childs Frick is now in training in the aviation camp in Texas. Miss Helen Frick is engaged in war work near Paris.

The Chas. K. Cummings family, of Boston, the Eben Richards family, of New York, and Judge and Mrs. Wm. C. Loring, of Boston, are among those recently settled in their summer homes at Pride's Crossing.

Mrs. G. S. Patten, Jr., and little daughters, Beatrice and Ruth Ellen, have come to "Avalon," the beautiful Pride's Crossing home of Mrs. Patten's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ayer. She will keep the place open all summer. With her now are Miss Anne Ruggles and brother, William Ruggles, of Norwich, Conn.

Mrs. E. Preble Motley, of Beacon street, Boston, has arrived at her house in Pride's Crossing. Last summer Mrs. Motley occupied a cottage in West Manchester and did not open her own house.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Bradley and daughters will leave Boston the latter part of next week for their home at Pride's Crossing.

Mrs. Wm. H. Moore, of New York, came to "Rockmarge," Pride's Crossing, yesterday. Mr. Moore is showing many of his noted horses at the Devon, Pa., show, which opened yesterday, and closes Saturday, after which he will come on to the summer home. Two car loads of his horses went from the stables at Pride's for the show.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Rantoul and Miss Eleanor Rantoul were Sunday guests of Hon. Robert S. Rantoul at Beverly Farms. Miss Rantoul is secretary at the Boston headquarters of the American Fund for French Wounded, while Mrs. Rantoul devotes much of her time to Red Cross work in the Salem branch. She is also Essex County chairman of the War Stamps' campaign.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Parker Bremer and family, of Boston, will come to their home on Smith's Point, Manchester, about the middle of June. Their daughter, Miss Edith, who came out the past winter, is a member of the North Shore Garden club.

Francis R. Spalding, of the Copley-Plaza, in Boston, came to "Barnstead," their West Manchester home, last Saturday. Mrs. Spalding and the son, Evans, are still in France, engaged in war work.

THE WEDDING of Miss Elizabeth Whitwell Thomas and Benjamin Perley Poore Moseley, which took place in the Church of the Ascension in Ipswich last Saturday, was the first one of the season on the North Shore. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Rand Thomas (Gertrude S. Fabyan), of 303 Commonwealth ave., Boston, and "Monstone," East street, Town Hill, Ipswich, formerly known as "Inglishby," the estate of the late Chas. P. Searle. Mr. Moseley, Harvard '04, is the eldest son of Frederick Strong Moseley, of 144 Beacon street, Boston, and "Maudesleigh," Newburyport. He belongs to the Harvard and Exchange clubs, of Boston, and is associated in the banking and brokerage business of F. S. Moseley & Co., Boston. Mr. Moseley's late mother was Miss Alice Poore, daughter of Major Perley Poore.

At the church pale pink roses decorated the altar, and palms and two tall standards of English ivy were at the chancel entrance. Wallace Goodrich, of Boston and West Manchester, played an interesting program of organ music while the guests were assembling, taking his selections from various French composers, among whom were Cesar Frank, Saint-Saëns, Widor and Bizet. He played Mendelssohn's "Wedding March." The ushers were Archibald Blanchard, G. Quincy Peters, W. Gordon Means, Samuel W. Lewis, S. V. R. Crosby and Charles Boyden, all of Boston, and William S. Clough and Chas. A. Doolittle, of New York. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Alexander Mann, D. D., of Trinity church, Boston, who was assisted by Rev. Robert B. Parker, of Ipswich. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

She made a most charming bride in her heavy white satin, trimmed with rare old lace, which had belonged to her grandmother on the maternal side. The tulle veil was worn well back from the face and she carried a large bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley, white orchids and swainsonia. The matron of honor, Mrs. F. Haven Clark, Jr., wore lavender chiffon over pink satin. The bridesmaids, Miss Charlotte C. Moseley and Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Jr. (Eleanor Fabyan), wore pale blue chiffon over pink satin. All three wore large picture hats in colors to correspond with the gowns and carried blue larkspur and pink roses. The little flower girl also carried out the idea of blue and pink and was very sweet looking in her blue organdie, pink sash and big hat, while her basket contained pink roses and forget-me-nots. She was Elise Thomas, niece of the bride and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Malcolm Thomas (Elizabeth Bliss), formerly of Boston, but now of St. Louis.

Valentine Hollingsworth of Boston was the best man.

At the close of the service, which was at 12.30, the guests went to the Thomas home, where a wedding breakfast was served on the great grassy terrace. Little tables were set under huge umbrellas, which must have been appreciated on last Saturday—a typical summer day. A reception followed on the terrace. The beautiful gardens just below the terrace were in gala array with the usual spring flowers, but were made more festive by having pots of exquisite Easter lilies placed at intervals throughout, which lent a "bride-like" atmosphere. Music was furnished by members of the Hawksworth orchestra from New York.

The young people will live in Ipswich this summer, returning about June 18, to the cottage recently purchased from Prof. Geo. Fillmore Swain, on Town Hill, by Mr. Thomas, for a wedding gift to his daughter. The place is charmingly situated close to the Thomas house.

Among the relatives and guests present at the wedding, aside from those mentioned above, were Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Bradlee and their sons; Sargent and Malcolm, Miss Ann Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. George Fabyan, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Fabyan, Theodore Frothingham, Miss Mary Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Thompson and children, Mr. and Mrs. Percival Lombard and children, Dr. and Mrs. Marshal Fabyan and children, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Bradlee, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Bliss, Miss Bliss, Mr. Cahart, Mrs. Russell Sturgis, Jr., and Haven Clark. These represented the Thomas and Fabyan family connections.

Miss Poore, of Newburyport, a great-aunt of the bridegroom, and with whom he has made his home, was present; also his father and Mrs. Moseley with their young children, Harriet, Helen and Fred. An uncle, Charles Moseley, and Dr. and Mrs. Nason, uncle and aunt, were also present from Newburyport. Others included Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Abbott and Edward Abbott, of Westford; Dr. and Mrs. George Clark, Miss Katherine Moseley, Mrs. Richard S. Spofford, Mrs. Ernest Pentacost, Mlle. de Mostuejouis, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Fessenden, Mr. and Mrs. Neal Rantoul, Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Wellington, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Auchincloss, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Stevens and Mr. and Mrs. G. Howard Murley.

Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul!
As the swift seasons roll,
Leave thy low-vaulted past:
Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
Till thou at length art free,
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Carter, of Brookline, always the first of the Oceanside contingent to arrive at Magnolia, came yesterday. The hotel will open week after next.

Mrs. Stephen W. Phillips, who has kept her summer home at Topsfield open most of the winter season, has been spending a few weeks at Atlantic City, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. William W. Caswell and their daughter, Miss Dorothy, of 265 Clarendon st., Boston, are returning for a second season at the Brownland cottages, Manchester. The young son, Wm. W. Caswell, Jr., U. S. A., 101st Engineers, is now abroad.

THE MISSES LORING, of Pride's Crossing, got up one of the most interesting impromptu war talks that has ever been given on the Shore, last Sunday. Taking advantage of the week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, of Wenham Neck, who had with them the noted M. Justin Godart and his companions, the Misses Loring telephoned all over the Shore Sunday morning and brought together a representative audience in the Beverly Public Library at six o'clock in the afternoon. The speakers were introduced by Mayor McPherson, of Beverly, M. Godart speaking in French, followed by a speech in English by one of his attendants. Our flag and a large Red Cross flag were used at the library desk, where the speakers stood, while on either side were rows of Red Cross workers in white with their showy veils, some of red, blue, green and white. Back of these, in both wings of the room, were many friends, all standing. The Beverly Boy Scouts filed in, but could get no farther than the inner entrance and stood in a double line reaching almost back to the street. At the close of the talks Miss Louisa Loring proposed three cheers for France, which were heartily given. M. Godart is vice-president of the French Chamber of Deputies and is at the head of the medical division of the French army. He has been sent officially to this country to give thanks for the work done by the Red Cross.

Mr. and Mrs. Prince entertained at luncheon on Sunday for the guests, followed by a tea at the home of the Misses Loring, preceding the talk. On Friday night Mr. Prince gave a dinner for M. Godart at the Algonquin club in Boston, at which meeting Senator Lodge made a stirring talk.

Among those present at the Beverly meeting were Consul Flamande, of Boston; Mrs. Wm. Caleb Loring, Mrs. John Phillips, Mrs. Wm. Phillips, Mrs. Charles Bohlen, of the summer colonies; Albert Boyden, of Beverly; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Woodbury, Gloucester; and among other Red Cross officials, Mrs. Edward Winslow, superintendent of surgical dressings for Essex County, and Miss Baker, superintendent of hospital supplies for the county.

If you are in Ipswich and are looking for a place to enjoy a cool and refreshing ice-cream, college ice or soda water, meet me at Helen's Cozy Corner Parlor, Central street.

A favorite place for North Shore folk to dine is at Y^e Rogers Manse, Ipswich, Mass. Tel. 85-M.

AT the memorial service held at the Beverly Farms Baptist church by Post 188, for our soldier dead, the orator of the day, who was selected by the Post, the Rev. Clarence Strong Pond, minister of the church, paid a tribute "to the service of Lieut. Harry Byng, who laid down his life for England—and England's cause is now our own; to the memory of Augustus Peabody Gardner, patriot, statesman and soldier, who first aroused America to her impending responsibility and danger; to Norman Prince, a lover of France, a loyal American, who served his country, France and the allies in the fight for the supremacy of the air, and for Michael Cadigan, the son of loyal Irish-Americans, who returned in the new generation to fight for the cause of national liberty in the old world. All laid down their lives in service for their country and will be honored. There is a memorial in India, bearing an inscription, 'In Memory of an Undying Love.' Repeated, the words rise and are echoed and re-echoed by the echo chamber of the tower, coming back again and again. 'In memory of an undying love!' So will the memory of the loyal men who died, be cherished by the men of their own times and all future time."

MRS. WM. STURGIS H. LOTHROP, of Boston, has sub-let the Smith Farm house on Proctor street, Manchester, to Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Taylor, who, with their daughter, Miss Marcia Taylor, moved into it Wednesday from "The Craigs," their summer home on Smith's Point, Manchester, which will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. A. Moses, of Washington. These changes were made through the office of T. Dennie Boardman, Reginald and R. deB. Boardman, of Boston and West Manchester. Other rentals follow:

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Thorndike, of Boston, will have "Apple Orchard" cottage, belonging to the Luke estate, in Beverly Farms.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Gray Griswold, of 783 Park ave., New York, have leased the Smith's Point home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Stanwood for the coming summer and are expected there about the middle of June. The Stanwoods will remain at 277 St. Paul st., Brookline, for the summer.

Mrs. Charles P. Curtis, of Boston, has taken the Renton Whidden cottage on Proctor's Point, Manchester, occupied last season by the David M. Osbornes, of Boston. Mrs. Charles P. Curtis, Jr., will also be close by at the Morgan homestead on Proctor street, as was previously stated in the list of rentals furnished by the Boardman agency.

MONTSERRAT will welcome several new families this season, prominent among them being Dr. and Mrs. Paul Thorndike, of Boston, who are newcomers to the Shore this year. They have taken Mrs. E. A. Manning's cottage at Montserrat, so that the daughter, Miss Anna, will be near the garden cared for by the Shore girls this summer and of which she will be in general charge. This cottage was formerly the Puritan Tea Room.

Edgar J. McGill, of Montserrat left Monday for Camp Devens to engage in Y. M. C. A. work, going later to France. His sister, Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, has returned to the Montserrat home from Atlantic City and New York, where she attended missionary conventions. She is much interested in the founding of a woman's medical college in Shanghai, China, as well as war work along temperance lines.

Dr. and Mrs. George Kline, who have occupied one of the Peabody cottages at Montserrat for some time, are leaving next month. Dr. Kline was formerly head of the Danvers Insane asylum and is now in charge of such institutions all over the state.

Mrs. Charles H. Price, of Salem, is again at her home in Montserrat Highlands, where a charming Salem garden has been laid out near the house.

L. T. GUY NORMAN, U. S. Naval Reserve Force, died Monday morning at the Mass. General hospital in Boston, following an operation which had been considered successful. His summer home was "Bee Rock," Beverly Cove, and the winter home was at 86 Washington street, Newport, and also in Washington.

Although not in the best of health at the outbreak of the war, Lieut. Norman entered the naval service as an ensign, his rank at the close of the Spanish-American War, and to do this resigned his seat in the Rhode Island state senate. He returned only recently from sea duty. He first was assigned to the U. S. S. North Carolina. Later, in recognition of his services, he was promoted to junior lieutenant and was then assigned to the Oklahoma, convoying troopships across the Atlantic. About two months ago he was assigned as lieutenant.

In his business Guy Norman had been a director of various companies and was a trustee of important business interests. Mr. Norman was a member of the Somerset club, the Myopia Hunt club, Tennis and Racquet club, Eastern Yacht club at Marblehead, the New York Yacht club and the Knickerbocker club in New York.

On Sept. 9, 1893, Mr. Norman married Miss Louisa Palfrey, of Boston and Beverly. Their only daughter, Hope Norman, became the wife of Elliot C. Bacon, of New York, where they now live.

Mr. Norman leaves his wife and his daughter, Mrs. Bacon, and is survived also by several brothers and sisters, who are: Maxwell Norman, of Boston and Hamilton; Bradford Norman and Reginald Norman, both of Newport; Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, of Boston and Wenham, who was formerly Miss Abigail K. Norman; Mrs. William R. Hunter, of Newport, who before her marriage was Miss Edith Norman, and Mrs. George Cerio, also of Newport. She was formerly Miss Mabel Norman.

WENHAM.—

Mrs. B. W. Currier, formerly of Lynn Shore drive, has returned from a visit with her daughter in Schenectady, N. Y., and will open her attractive summer home, Cherry street, Wenham, this week.

Mrs. Charles D. Sias and her niece, Miss Martha D. Sias, are on a trip to Yama Farms, N. Y. The Wenham home is "Sunny Slope Farm," one of the most attractively located places in that section, with broad acres and extensive views. Mrs. Sias makes her winter home on Bay State road, Boston.

IPSWICH.—

Mr. and Mrs. Roger S. Warner, of Chestnut st., Boston, have arrived in Ipswich for the summer.

The Francis R. Appleton family, of New York, is now settled at the beautiful "Appleton Farms," Ipswich.

Two of Most Beautiful Estates on North Shore

Linked Together, in a Way, Last Week by Moseley-Thomas Wedding

TWO of the most beautiful estates on the North Shore were linked together, in a way, by the marriage last Saturday in Ipswich of Miss Elizabeth Whitwell Thomas and Benjamin Perley Poore Moseley, the former of Ipswich and the latter of Newburyport.

The Isaac Rand Thomas family took possession of their new home in Ipswich the past year and were among the early arrivals in the town this spring. It is the former Searle place known as "Inglisby," but has now been re-named by Mr. Thomas, and will be called "Monstone Farm," for his famous steeplechaser, "Monstone," the "first and best" hunter he ever had.

The place is on Town Hill, has extensive fields and meadows, substantial farm buildings and large and impressive mansion house facing over Plum island way. The red-tiled roof may be seen far out on the Ipswich river when boating over to Castle Hill, Great and Little Necks, and the other points of interest seaward. Always there seems to be a dim, ethereal light hanging over this section of Ipswich. At times this halo is greater and is said to be caused by certain atmospheric conditions. From the grassy terrace in front of the Thomas home may be seen even Agamenticus and the New Hampshire hills on clear days, while Plum island, Grape island, the Isles of Shoals and Cape Ann (Lanesville and Annisquam side) are distinguished out past Ipswich bay.

Standing on the terrace the fine Ayreshire cattle, twenty or so, which Mr. Thomas is making a specialty of, are seen grazing contentedly on the mystical looking meadows. Much of the land has been plowed and planted in vegetables and grains. Mr. Thomas will make no alterations until after the war, but will strive to have the place produce as much as possible.

Miss Thomas has always been one of the prominent riders in the Myopia Hunt set with whom she mingled. This love for fine horses must have been inherited from her father, who has some noted blood in his stables. Besides "Monstone," which defeated the best cracks from New York at the Myopia races two years ago, and which was the last horse ridden by the late Richard Mortimer, Jr., whose death occurred recently in France, Mr. Thomas owns a noted colt, son of "Trojar," winner of the derby in England in 1913, and last, but not least, "Midget," the high-stepping pony, a winner last year at the Burroughs horse show in Hamilton.

Mr. Thomas made his daughter a wedding present of the attractive cottage (formerly Prof. Swain's home) and it is here the young people will live this season. It is a green-shingled house with green blinds, wide piazzas and glassed-in porch, standing near the top of the hill and reached by a shady path from the Thomas home. This path leads past a spring of delightfully cold water. The cottage is being painted, papered and furnished and is supposed to be ready about June 18. Attractive lawns, a garden, spirea hedges and tennis court are features of the place. The views from the upper chamber windows are similar to those at the Thomas house.

MR. MOSELEY comes from an old Newburyport family. Although born at "Indian Hill," where the house is said to be almost a museum with historical relics and of which pages could be written, it is not that Newburyport home that is to be described, but the estate on which Mr. Moseley's father, F. S. Moseley, is now living. Mr.

Moseley has made his home since his mother's death principally with his aunt, Miss Poore, in Newburyport, who sometimes spends her summers out at the old family place, "Indian Hill."

But "Maudesleigh," where the father, Mrs. Moseley and young children are living, is one of the show places of the old town, "Island valley of Avillon," as Harriet Prescott Spofford calls it. Here, about one thousand acres are in farmland, gardens and park-like condition. The place has a mile of frontage on the Merrimac river and is rich in memories of Whittier. It is said that "no American writer, unless Irving be excepted, has done so much to throw a graceful veil of poetry and legend over the country of his daily life. Essex County and the beaches lying between Newburyport and Portsmouth blossom with flowers of Whittier's planting."

To walk through the Moseley place is to recall Whittier at many points. The chief feature of this fine old place, aside from the wonderful river view and beautiful wooded grounds and driveways, paths and rustic bridges, is the section of 150 acres on which are the famous laurels, and a pond with ducks. The laurels cover about 40 acres of this park and were once the picnic grounds of the community. Wm. Lloyd Garrison and his anti-slavery friends used to go to the laurels for picnics. In Whittier's poem, "The Laurels," he says:

"Make room, O river of our home!
For other feet in place of ours,
And in the summers yet to come,
Make glad another Feast of Flowers!"

"Hold in thy mirror, calm and deep,
The pleasant pictures thou hast seen;
Forget thy lovers not, but keep
Our memory like thy laurels green."

He wrote this in 1870, an occasional poem "at the twentieth and last anniversary." The father of the present owner purchased the laurels and added it to the already extensive Moseley estate. In 1876 appeared "June on the Merrimac":

"O dwellers in the stately towns,
What come ye out to see?
This common earth, this common sky,
This water flowing free?"

"You find but common bloom and green
The rippling river's rune,
The beauty which is everywhere
Beneath the skies of June;

"The Hawkwood oaks, the storm-torn plumes
Of old pine-forest kings,
Beneath whose century-woven shade
Deer Island's mistress sings.

And Curson's bowery mill;
And Pleasant Valley smiles between
The river and the hill."

And Pleasant valley lies just across the river from the Moseley home and the other places are nearby. To stand on the great grassy terrace between the house and river bank and look over into Pleasant valley, where Haverhill lies about seven miles up the river and Amesbury three miles down the river, is to see one of the sights worth traveling miles to gaze upon. To turn from the river-view and look at the house does not destroy the charm. Here it stands, a long, rambling, artistic creation of English architecture, which has been added to from time to time and has grown more like its surroundings with every alteration.

The Deer island spoken of in the poem is the home of Harriet Prescott Spofford, who was at the wedding of young Mr. Moseley the other day.

The gardens, great squares enclosed by hedges eight to fifteen feet high, with the nearby greenhouses containing flowers and fruits in abundance, and the large Italian garden with its low box-bordered beds (not frozen box) are a most interesting feature of the place.

A striking point of interest (especially for strangers in Newburyport) is the trolley route out to the Moseley place. This is over High street, a most remarkable street, lined on either side by old New England houses of great charm and dignity. Old churches, extensive lawns and great trees also add to this splendid display of mansions built in the three-story period of architecture, when owners vied with each other as to who could create the most artistic doorway.

Upon leaving the trolley at the right road hours can be spent in wandering over this fine old place of the Moseleys, and like Whittier says, although

"You know full well these banks of bloom,
The upland's wavy line,
And how the sunshine tips with fire
The needles of the pine.

"Yet like some old remembered psalm,
Or sweet, familiar face
Not less because of commonness
You love the day and place."

Along the Cape Ann Shore

Notes by ALEX. G. TUPPER

BASS ROCKS.—Although several cottagers of prominence and long standing as summer residents of this beautiful section of the North Shore, are already settled in their summer dwellings for the season, the coming week will find quite a number of early arrivals. There are many players on the golf links daily and considering the long, hard winter and destruction caused by frost, the links are in very good condition. The season of tournaments for the club members will be made very interesting.

Mrs. Charles Scott, Jr., accompanied by her chauffeur and maid, came on from Philadelphia several days ago, to look over "Tragibigzanda," the big Scott estate at Bass Rocks, to prepare it for rental. Mr. and Mrs. Scott do not expect to be at Bass Rocks this season, much to the regret of their friends in the colony. Mr. Scott is chairman of one of the important Red Cross boards in Philadelphia, doing great work, and Mrs. Scott is also doing valuable service and her share in the army of true, patriotic women workers of America. Mrs. Scott took a leading part in the great amount of Red Cross work accomplished last season by the Bass Rocks unit of the Gloucester branch of the American Red Cross. Mr. and Mrs. Scott have a daughter, Miss Letitia Scott, a popular member of the North Shore set, who is now a Red Cross nurse "over across."

Mr. and Mrs. Sears B. Condit, Jr., of Brookline, are now occupying their Page street, Bass Rocks estate, which they purchased last year of the Day estate. Mrs. Condit is paying particular attention to her "war garden" this spring, and in a short time it will certainly look fine.

The Dearborns, of Boston, have opened their Page street house and have taken occupancy for the season. The family comes early and remains late.

One of the most attractive seashore houses and surroundings at Bass Rocks is that of Miss Emily McGuckin, of New York City. Situated as it is, at the edge of the golf links, nestling low and artistically amid old-fashioned lilacs and a lovely garden of roses, honey-suckle, clematis, hollyhocks, and other flowers of their season, all-comers admire its attractiveness and very home-like atmosphere. The house, colonial in design, overlooks the fresh, green sweep of golf links, with the ocean and Thatcher's island lights beyond. Miss McGuckin is now occupying her house and she has her brother, Walter McGuckin, of New York, with her, for the season. Coming to Gloucester for a great many years, Miss McGuckin has a keen fondness for the place, and an interest in the welfare and development of this select vicinity of the North Shore.

Miss McGuckin also owns an attractive estate on Page street, on the delightful hill section, which she rents each season.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Hyde, of 5918 Drexel road, Philadelphia, are occupying their fine estate on the shore side of Bass Rocks, formerly the Robertson estate. Mr. and Mrs. Hyde purchased the estate near High Popples last year and improvements from time to time are making the place very inviting and attractive.

Dr. Octavius T. Howe and family, of Boston, are occupying the Howe estate on Souther and Brier roads, Bass Rocks.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. McDuffie, of Lawrence, the former being treasurer of the Everett Mills and York Mills, of Saco, Me., having offices in the John Hancock building, Franklin street, Boston, are pioneer summer residents of Bass Rocks, who come to their estate, Atlantic road, early next week, for the season. Mr. and Mrs. McDuffie have been at their cottage for several days, accompanied by members of their family, Lieutenant Charles D. McDuffie, of Camp Morrison, Va., who came up for a visit, another son, Lieutenant Howard C. McDuffie, of Camp Devens, Ayer, Mrs. McDuffie's sister, Miss Anstiss Howard, and a young granddaughter, Miss Anstiss Bowser, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. C. B. Bowser. Mr. and Mrs. McDuffie left for Lawrence to spend the week-end and their house is to be occupied permanently the coming week.

Mrs. W. A. Hill, of Washington, D. C., who purchased the charming Day Swiss bungalow on Page street, Bass Rocks, last season, has opened the house.

The Winthrop Sargents, of Haverford, Pa., are expected in a few days to occupy their house on Nautilus and Atlantic roads, Bass Rocks.

The Moorland hotel will open next Saturday, June 15th, for the season, with a fine booking.

The Thorwald hotel, Bass Rocks, will open for the season on June 20th. Accommodations for guests have been largely taken and 1918 prospects appear very bright for the management.

EAST GLOUCESTER.—A fine new summer residence of English design, the plans being drawn by E. L. Phillips, the Gloucester architect, is about completed on Ledge road, East Gloucester, on a splendid view-point, near the Gallery-on-the-Moors. The exterior of the house is of stucco, with a high roof and timbers. The house is 50x60 feet. From the left of the main entrance hall, from Ledge road, is situated the studio, 16x25 feet, with a gallery extending through the second floor. The studio has a porch and den. At the right is the living room and the living and dining rooms open on a living porch on the south side of the house. On the first floor are also a kitchen, two pantries and a porch on the rear. There is a den at the end of the main hall and there are four big fireplaces in the house. The interior will have stained colors. On the second floor are five bed rooms, each with a bath, a maid's bed room and bath. There is a balcony and sleeping porch on the south side. B. C. Clark was the builder, the plumbing was by L. E. Andrews, the electrical work by Howard and the foundation by Charles Hart. The contracts were all given to Gloucester firms.

A. W. Buhler, the marine artist, has returned to his Rocky Neck studio, after the winter and spring spent in St. Augustine, Fla. Mr. Buhler did much painting in the south, bringing home many canvasses.

Seth K. Ames, the well-known owner of a New England chain of butter and egg stores, has purchased the property of the Procter heirs, situated directly on the waterfront, at the Rocky Neck side of the causeway, or at the end of "The Bar," so-called. Mr. Ames is having a big wall built and the land is being filled in and cottages will be erected thereon.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew are the parents of Major A. Piatt Andrew, of the American Red Cross Ambulance Corps in France, and formerly U. S. Assistant Treasurer. Mr. Andrew is a well-known banker in La Porte.

Mrs. R. B. Burchard, of Providence, R. I., who purchased the Russell cottage, near "The Ramparts," Eastern Point, a year ago, arrives this week at her house, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stewart, of Boston, have arrived at the W. J. Little cottage, number two, near "The Ramparts," for the season. Mr. Stewart is the Boston manager of the Cunard Steamship Company. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart have been coming to East Gloucester for many seasons.

The Marblehead-Swampscott Section of North Shore

Notes by KATHERINE GAUSS

SWAMPSCOTT.—

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Sherman Hilton, of Swampscott, announced the engagement of their daughter, Adriene, to Lieut. Herman Hathaway Granger, of Fort Worth, Tex., at a tea given last week Sunday at their home. The wedding will take place in June and will be one of the most prominent of the spring activities.

PHILLIPS BEACH Neighborhood club is one of the most active of those along the Shore, and it is a centre for war work. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays the Red Cross surgical dressings classes meet and the rooms are filled with workers during the all day sessions. Recently the ladies of the club sent sixteen pairs of socks to the Coast Artillery auxiliary, which were gladly accepted; a note of appreciation has been received by the club members. During the winter the club also sent 596 francs to the "Comite Franco-Américaine pour la protection des enfants de la frontiere," and it was used for the welfare work being carried on by this committee in the interests of the little children of the war zone.

CLIFTON.—

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Boyd, of Washington st., Newton, have taken the Stearns house on Atlantic ave., Clifton, for the summer season. Last year they were comfortably located at "Willowmere," on Clifton ave. Mr. Boyd is of the firm of K. Williams & Co., Boston.

The Tedesco Country club is open for the season, and under the able direction of Manager Taylor the house has taken on a very comfortable air. The great rooms are all renovated and the dining room has been put in order for the several parties which have already been held. Golf and tennis are getting under way and the tournaments will soon be arranged. It is expected that there will be a weekly entertainment such as that of last year, which included music and dancing.

The Boston Real Estate Exchange held a dinner at the Tedesco club, Thursday, and sports were a part of the afternoon program. Many of the members of this exchange are also members of the Tedesco club.

MARBLEHEAD harbor is looking more prosperous these days, for a larger number of boats than last year have been put overboard and an interesting season is promised. Lieut. Parker H. Kemble, U. S. N. R. F., formerly one of the active racing men of the North Shore, has purchased the sloop Sanderling. This boat was built in Marblehead from the plans of W. B. Stearns of Stearns & McKay.

The "Gringo" has been put overboard. It is the property of Harold P. Cooley, who is in the Naval Reserve service. The yacht will be used this season by his father, Charles A. Cooley, who is house committeeman in charge of the Marblehead station of the Boston Yacht club.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Allen Porter, of Beacon st., Boston, are newcomers to the Marblehead colony this season and they will make their summer home at Peach's Point, where Dr. Porter can get down to his office in Boston every day. For several years past the Porter family have summered at Mattapoisett, where they have been very popular with the summer people.

Mrs. Harris P. Mosher, of Front street, Marblehead, has closed her attractive home for the summer, and has returned to Washington, D. C., where she is busily engaged in war work. Her husband, Dr. Mosher, has recently returned from France and is now stationed in Washington.

Lieut. Commander W. Starling Burgess and Mrs. Burgess, of Nashua street, Marblehead, will not occupy their handsome residence this summer, as government business will keep Lieut. Burgess in Washington, D. C. He is engaged in naval construction work and has been in Washington since winter.

Lieut. Parker Kemble, U. S. N., and Mrs. Kemble, of Marlboro street, Boston, will close their winter home soon and early in June will arrive with their children at Marblehead, where they are to occupy the historic Col. William R. Lee mansion, which they purchased a year ago. Miss Frances Kemble, the only daughter, graduated from Miss May's school for girls in Boston the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard T. Spaulding, of Peabody and Devereux, have gone to Washington, D. C., where Mr. Spaulding is engaged in government service. Mr. Spaulding is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Spaulding, of Atlantic ave., Devereux.

EDITORIAL

ONE WEEK FROM TODAY the people of Massachusetts are called upon to observe Flag Day, by a proclamation of Governor McCall. Every year the Flag Day exercises of our patriotic organizations have been maintained with punctilious and reverend care, but this year, with our nation at war, the flag takes on a new meaning as it flies beside the flags of our allies in France. Flag Day is a commemoration of the anniversary of the day on which the flag was adopted as our national emblem in 1777. "As we come to know that for which the flag stands," the proclamation reads, "and as we see the sorrow, trial, suffering and privation through which it has come down to us, we look upon it with greater reverence and the grandeur of it as a symbol is borne up us. Our flag is an endless source of instruction and inspiration in which we can, with profit, direct our thoughts, not only for the day, but for each day in the year. Few such observances lend themselves to the minds of our boys and girls, but Flag Day is one in which the school children can take an active part, and I urge them on this day, in the schools and elsewhere, to learn something new about the flag."

THERE IS AN OPPORTUNITY for some interested public citizen to render a service to the North Shore communities by organizing a voluntary committee to keep a record, as accurately as possible, of all of the young men and women on our Shore in national service. This list should be made along broader lines than is possible by any one community which makes out a list according to the citizen register. In Manchester a town list would include only the names of such men as were citizens of the town when called to service. There are summer residents who are credited to other cities, in whom we have an interest, and such a list would be appreciated. This should be done for all of the North Shore towns and a list compiled. The work would require only a simple organization, a chairman with a member or two in each community and the list would grow, as many people will be interested and help in compiling it.

THE RED CROSS DRIVES and the Liberty Loan appeal were carried on scientifically, persistently and in the spirit of applied patriotism. Germany has been served with a notice that cannot fail to be understood with the three-fold emphasis that has come from our national assembly, from our soldiers and from our people. The national assembly declared war existed. The soldiers are on the field striking active blows for freedom and world peace. But how about the people? "Are the American people back of the war?" was asked by the German authorities. The most tangible expression of a man's interest is his contribution in cash. The Red Cross drive and the Liberty Loan campaign demonstrated to the German nation that not only had the government declared war and the soldiers been ordered to fight, but the whole American people are back of the government and soldiers.

JUST ANOTHER WORD ABOUT COAL is in order. The nation has another coal crisis to face in the coming winter and word has gone out for everyone to order the year's supply. A word to the wise is sufficient.

NO LONGER MAY ONE interpret patriotism in the terms of selfishness, provincialism or national aggrandizement. The selfishness of Germanic patriotism with its narrow and cruel devotion to the greedy ambitions of the state has forever placed a stigma upon that sort of national loyalty and ideals. Yet one may interpret patriotism so broadly and imperially that the real devotion to one's nation is lost. The real patriot is one who loves his own country with sincerity and honor, and that sincerity and honor teaches him to respect the honorable loyalty of other men to their homeland. Such loyalty to one's own land is the best evidence of respect and regard for the patriotism of another for his native land. One who does not know how to serve and to love ardently his own country is incapable of the larger devotion involved in honoring another's honorable loyalty to his own country. This war is a war of patriotism, the devotion we owe to our own land, and it is devotion to the larger patriotism involved in the support of the loyal honorable defences of the allied nations. America believes in the larger demands of patriotism involved in a world war. America has accepted the larger responsibility and the meeting of that responsibility involves the highest motives of national patriotism.

THE WHEAT SITUATION still remains serious. Mr. Hoover has asked all who can to abstain from the use of wheat from now until the wheat harvest has been garnered. It appears, however, that the corn crop has been generous and ample. There is enough for all. Corn is not shipped readily and the allies are unable to use it with such facility as do the Americans. Three meals each and every day with cornmeal served will probably prove a little difficult to most people who have been accustomed to the use of wheat flour, but the supplies of cornmeal being sold indicates that the American people are not only rising to the situation, but are interpreting their patriotism in terms of service and abstinence.

IT OUGHT TO BE IMPRESSED again and again, says an authority, that owners of Liberty Bonds should not buy unless they can hold them, and should only sell in an emergency. Nothing is gained by selling bonds as soon as subscriptions are ended. The offering of inducements for the changing hands of bonds is contrary to the whole spirit of the loan movement. Patriotic devotion impelled Americans to buy bonds. This spirit should inspire them to keep them. Do not sell your bonds. Every bond sold at a loss, below par, is a discredit to one's country. Hold the bonds!

MAJOR HENRY L. HIGGINSON, of Manchester, is always a patriot and his devotion to the mother country has never been questioned. When he speaks, his friends are ready to listen to the words of advice which his military experience has made valuable. He now urges an army of five million men, or as Wilson would say why limit it to five million men? Major Higginson's service in our Civil War makes it possible for him to speak with authority born of experience.

DID YOU KNOW THAT ten percent of the people of the United States are unable to speak the English language with any degree of facility?

ETHICS HAS EVERYTHING to do with patriotism. The slogan "My country right or wrong" no longer holds. My country for the right, and devotion to her until she corrects the wrong, is demanded now. As R. E. Doremus well says:

"The best meaning of the Monroe doctrine has always been the spirit of chivalry, protection to our neighbor republics to the southward against European aggression. Here in this present war there is a supreme manifestation of this spirit. We fight indeed for our own interests and future. But in America's heart the commanding motive of this war is the sense of obligation, to come to the rescue of Belgium and those who are defending her, obligation to take our place with the allied nations in the defense of humanity and the maintenance of international law. This war is an acceptance of our responsibilities as a people to other peoples, and our duty to uphold and maintain the laws of nations and the rights of humanity. And just as the effort of 1861-'65 was implied in the Revolution, just as the Revolution was implied in the earlier struggle against monarchy, so the part we as a people are taking now, was implied in the whole movement toward democracy, in our whole past as a people. A nation cannot be really free and strong in itself which remains selfishly aloof and shirks its responsibilities any more than a man can be free and strong and noble who remains aloof from his neighbors, and shirks his responsibilities. God had provided some better thing for us, namely that we should wake to our duty, accept our responsibility, and instead of being content to be prosperous and free, should desire to serve the world and struggle for humanity."

When this ethical principle of assumed responsibility has been accepted by the nations of the world, world wars will end. For the promulgation of this principle America has laid down the lives of her sons and is prepared to fight this war to a finish, not for American aggrandizement, not to avenge deaths, not to crush Germany for the sake of crushing that nation, but to enforce the observation and acceptance of the principle of national right and national responsibility and accountability. When this fundamental principle of international law has been accepted for all the nations of the world large and small the very cause of this war shall have been removed and permanent peace will be made possible.

THE WOMEN'S MUNICIPAL LEAGUE, of Boston, of whose board of directors, Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, of our Shore is an enthusiastic member, is proving itself to be a patriotic organization with a large usefulness. Originally organized to improve conditions in the city of Boston, it was prepared to meet the special responsibility which the war imposed so unexpectedly. The ability of the organization to continue its regular lines of work and to meet the newly imposed conditions is in itself a testimony of the value of the organization and an evidence of the broad-sighted policy and good judgment of the organization. There are the usual departments of organization, councils, finance, membership, press, publication and public meetings, all of them general committees. The work of the organization involves departments of education, food sanitation, housing, public health, committees on building sanitation, cleaning, occupational hygiene, abatement of the noise nuisance and quackery. There are junior branches with leagues in the schools. There is one departmental branch at Jamaica Plain. The work of the organization has been well planned and the personnel of the departments contains very many North Shore names. It is fortunate that the war found the city of Boston prepared with such a strong organization to take up at once the war problems.

THE EDUCATION OF THE ALIENS in America is proving to be a war problem of colossal proportions. Even in the army it has been necessary to teach many soldiers the rudiments of the language in order to make them efficient merely as soldiers and so that they could understand the orders when given. The teaching of the civilian population, especially the women, is going to be a hard task that must be begun and completed. The suppression of German is negative, the teaching of our own language, positive. In order to have our ideals inculcated into the coming citizens, it is imperative that they be taught the English language. The schools care for the children, but the adults frequently fail to have any opportunities provided for them. In approaching the problem the government is considering it not alone as a war emergency, but as a commanding requirement for a continuous policy. Our people must be taught the English language and the nation does well to face the problem.

THE GERMAN U-BOATS HAVE BEGUN to operate in Atlantic waters. The actual toll has not yet been completed, but Germany has determined to bring the war home to America. There is nothing unexpected about the attacks. Every thoughtful person has known since the visit of the U-53 and of the Deutschland that such activities are possible and probable. Now they have been accomplished. It is significant that none of our transports have been attacked. It means that our American navy is doing its work effectively. It is quite evident that the German policy is to draw our navy back to American waters. Why? Is it possible that the German navy is actually planning, as it has been intimated, to make an attempt to get out and open the fight with the allies? One man's guess is as good as another. One thing is quite evident that the U-boat menace along the European shore has been checked quite materially.

THE ETHICAL CULTURE OF GERMANY cannot be better summarized than in this note from a sermon by a German minister and quoted in an official pamphlet issued by our government: "Whoever cannot prevail upon himself to approve from the bottom of his heart the sinking of the Lusitania, whoever cannot conquer his sense of the gigantic cruelty to unnumbered perfectly innocent victims, . . . and give himself up to honest delight at this victorious exploit of German defensive power—him we judge to be no true German."

BOSTON WILL SOON INAUGURATE a merit system plan for the teaching force. The new policy will be watched with interest by educators all over the country. Its success ought to be assured.

The BREEZE has been complimented this week by one of the North Shore ministers on the quotations and literary gems appearing in it. Little "nuggets of gold," he characterized them, preaching many a life lesson to the reader as he hastily scans a column.

As for lilacs, New England plants them on hill slope or along shady lanes, in back gardens, by white fences, in clumps and hedges. Chicago has probably more lilacs than any other city in the world, miles of them along the Lake Shore, but the whole of New England is sweet with them in late May and early June. And how well the somewhat sad harmony of mauve and green suits the rocky land, with its grey sea beating on those glacial ledges, filling the land with the murmur of eternity."—HILDEGARDE HAWTHORNE.

God's plans, like lilies pure and white unfold,
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart—
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold.

MANCHESTER

Mrs. Gladys Walen is clerking at the Ropes Drug Co. store, Central square.

Allen W. R. C. desires to extend thanks to all those who so generously contributed to the Memorial Day supper.

Manchester had eight young men register in the draft Wednesday—those who have attained the age of twenty-one up to June 5.

Flag Day, June 14, will be observed Thursday evening, June 13, at Grand Army hall. Members of the G. A. R., Associates and Sons of Veterans are all invited to attend and to bring their friends.

Miss Cherstine Peterson is to be at Manchester for the summer, to continue her business as hairdresser, etc., conducted so successfully the last two seasons. She will be located at Mrs. M. C. Dodge's, 26 School st.

An impressive feature of the Grand Army parade last Thursday—Memorial Day—was the recognition paid to the old veteran, for 28 years standard bearer of the Post—Dennis O'Sullivan. For nearly a year Mr. O'Sullivan has been confined to his home on Lincoln st. He was absent this year for the first time. The line of march was arranged so that it would pass by Mr. O'Sullivan's house. He was dressed in his Grand Army uniform, and was observed in an upper window smiling down upon his marching comrades and friends, who waved recognition, and saluted him as they passed. The flag was dipped in salute by the Post and S. of V. Mr. O'Sullivan was missed in the line of march this year, especially by the children, who have grown to admire him year after year as he passed along bearing the Stars and Stripes so proudly over his head.

TO THE MOTHERS OF MANCHESTER

The mothers of Manchester are invited to hear Dr. Fritz Talbot, the well-known Boston physician, who is an authority on children's diseases, at a meeting to be held in Price school hall, next Wednesday evening, at 7.45 promptly. Dr. Talbot's talk will be on the care of little children in summer. Every mother in Manchester, who is vitally interested in the care of her children, ought to make a special effort to attend this meeting.

MR. HOOVER'S LATEST REQUEST TO THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA

"Two pounds of meat per person per week, including poultry," is the gist of Mr. Hoover's latest request of the people of America in his new meat regulations just sent broadcast. This two pounds also includes all the bones and trimmings.

Some people will find this regulation difficult; others will find it easy. It has been suggested and is being widely urged that more milk be used in every possible way, as milk is a meat substitute. Milk is a most desirable food for children and it makes an excellent meat substitute for grown-ups as well.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert C. Lamb at their Washington street home, Wednesday of last week.

Allen Post, 67, G. A. R., desire to express their sincere thanks to all citizens of the town, who in any manner contributed to the successful observance of Memorial Day, May 30th.—J. H. Rivers, Post Adjt.

North Shore Kitchens in War Time

AT the Hon. Robert S. Rantoul's home in Beverly Farms, the daughters have been experimenting with many war breads and mixtures. Miss Margaret Rantoul has originated the following, which is proving very successful:

2 cups potato flour
2 cups rye flour
2 cups rice flour
1 cup Graham flour
2 cups entire wheat
2 cups milk
1 yeast cake
3 cups (scant) molasses
1 tsp. salt
2 or 3 tbsp. Crisco or lard
2 tbsp. limewater

Water enough to make a soft dough.
This will make 4 loaves.

The cook, Maria Minda, has originated puffed rice cakes, which are a favorite in the Rantoul family. These are dainty little wafers that are eaten with ice cream. The cook says they crumble easily and much care must be taken in handling after baking. Rolled oats could also be used in the following recipe, instead of the rice:

Into two eggs (whites and yolks beaten together) mix one cup white sugar, one teaspoon vanilla, two cups puffed rice, one-half teaspoon salt, one tbsp. melted butter and drop on greased pan with a big spoon. Makes four dozen.

An old and favorite recipe in the Rantoul family is the following:

Yellow Gingerbread

One cup butter or oleomargarine, two cups sugar, two eggs, one-half cup milk, one-quarter teaspoon soda, one tablespoon yellow ginger (tumeric), one teaspoon Slade's ginger, two and one-half cups white flour.

It is suggested by Miss Rantoul that potato or rice flour could be used in place of white flour during war times. This makes a cake of delicious thickness and coloring.

Balance your living accounts each day, and happy you! if you find the credit on the side of being instead of having.—OLIVER VERNE RICH.

"A habit is a step in character.—
MRS. DAVID O. MEARS.

AT the home of Mrs. Arthur F. Luke, of Beverly Farms, the cook, Ellen Anderson, has had great success with oatmeal bread made according to the recipe from Miss Farmer's school of cookery. The rye bread she has modified and uses more rye meal than called for in the recipe, and also takes one-half cup molasses to two cups of liquid in place of the brown sugar, as per recipe. She also uses Crisco in bread and cake, with an equal amount of butter in the latter, and has found that beef drippings is excellent for cookies. Croquettes and timbales have been in her line since the war.

The following potato bread is her own recipe:

One cup water, one cup milk, two cups mashed potato, one-half yeast cake, one-quarter cup white sugar, one egg, salt to taste.

Set in the morning and bake during the day. Mix the ingredients thin, let rise three hours, then put in flour to make a stiff dough.

MRS. GEORGE LEE will open her garage on Hale street, Beverly Farms, for the Italian War Relief work this summer. Ladies and gentlemen are most cordially invited to make surgical dressings for the relief of the Italian wounded. Subscriptions are urgently requested in order to defray the expenses of purchasing gauze and other necessary materials. Funds may be sent to Mrs. Hobart E. Warren, treasurer and secretary, Beverly Farms. Mrs. Lee will be chairman and the days will be Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, from 9.30 a. m. to 1 o'clock, beginning June 18. The work has been carried on in Boston all winter at the headquarters, 292 Boylston street.

THE workroom for the American Fund for French Wounded opens Thursday, June 13, in Mrs. E. S. Grew's spacious coach-house at "All Oaks," West Manchester. Meetings will be held on Mondays and Thursdays from 9.30 to 1 o'clock.

The society is again appealing to the residents of the North Shore for personal service and financial aid. So far, 2,065,111 hospital garments and supplies have been distributed, and 10,649,886 surgical dressings have been sent to 8,338 hospitals in France.

During the past year dispensary and refugee work has been added. The society has also been appointed agents in the "Home Communication Service" for the American wounded in the hospitals, and has assumed the responsibility of the service in the French hospitals exclusively.

This year more money is needed owing to the rapid growth of the work. Checks may be made payable and sent to Miss Harriet Rantoul, treasurer, Beverly Farms. Mrs. Geo. H. Lyman is chairman, Mrs. M. G. Haughton, secretary, the rest of the committee being composed of the following: Mmes. Timothée Adamowski, Robert S. Bradley, W. W. Caswell, Henry S. Grew, 2d, Lester Leland, R. P. Snelling and the Misses Elaine Denègre and Alice Thorndike.

Sailor Burke, of the U. S. Foreign Fleet, who spoke in Manchester last Wednesday, emphasized the knitting question. He said a sock lasts about three days in good condition during hard work. In the North sea, where he had been recently, he spoke of the cold often necessitating the wearing of three pairs besides their big boots and often two or three sweaters under their coats. He thought that children should be encouraged to add their mite in knitting.

Horticultural hall makes one of the best and most convenient workrooms on the Shore. It is well lighted, roomy (basement room is used), convenient in every detail, and Wednesday presented one of the most business like workrooms imaginable. Placards are placed around the room, giving silent instructions to workers, and the walls have Red Cross posters of interest hanging on them. A blackboard in front has the quota written upon it. A number of placards say that "Any question concerning work should be asked of the instructors or monitors."

THE NORTH SHORE may well be proud of the work being done by Mrs. Maynard Ladd, wife of Dr. Ladd, of Manchester and Boston. He is also in France in charge of an American Red Cross hospital near Toul. The following extract from a letter in regard to her work was written by Major Fletcher Steele, of Rochester, N. Y., who is in Red Cross service in France:

"I wish you could see the preparation, big and little, for what we have to meet—the Red Cross, I mean. I don't know about other things. One of the most interesting details I have chanced on is the work that Mrs. Maynard Ladd is doing. She is the Boston sculptor I used to know there. She has a studio over in the Latin quarter, high up in a quaint, crazy building, where she is making faces for French soldiers who no longer have any faces. I took pictures of two of them the other day. I would not want to describe it if I could. Mrs. Ladd is making them new faces from photographs of what they once were, modeling, painting and finishing the whole thing herself. They are almost miraculous.

"The expression does not change, of course, but they are so human and full of life, that one seems to feel no lack. She has even arranged so that they can smoke. Here is a godsend to wretched unfortunates that only a sculptor of real ability can give, and no one knows how long it will be until she must begin on new faces for American boys whose own are shot away."

THE ELIMINATION OF "JAZZ"

BREEZE READER AGREES WITH WRITER IN ST. LOUIS PAPER ABOUT DANCE HALL MUSIC

(A BREEZE reader has sent in an article taken from a St. Louis paper, with the comment that "The following from the International Musician, published at St. Louis, Mo., is a start in the right direction. All lovers of true music must desire that such a move might be universal."—ED.)

By C. A. WEAVER, Des Moines, Iowa

ABOUT the sanest and most wholesome suggestion which has thus far been made in the never-ending discussion concerning Des Moines dance hall regulation is the official decree that "jazz" shall no longer be tolerated as a method of terpsichorean inspiration.

In other words, the public authorities have taken official cognizance of what all musicians worthy of the name have long known to be a fact, namely, that "jazz," so-called, is not music at all, that it is nothing more nor less than a species of wind-jamming hysteria, sensuously degrading rather than elevating, nerve-racking rather than inspiring, a coarse fibered travesty upon melody and an insult when mentioned in the same breath, the same room or in the same hemisphere with divine art of music.

"Jazz" is admittedly a modern creation. Specialists have established the fact by irrefutable evidence that the "jazz" jargon had its origin in the New Orleans underworld, and from that nauseous and hopeless habitat the disease blew its fetid breath across a world feverishly longing for something—it knew not what.

The result was that public taste degenerated, real music fled, mere noise arose to a premium, time-tried and respected band and orchestral instruments were laid upon the shelf while the wildest prodigy who ever blew out the front door of pandemonium with a ukelele in one hand and a cow bell in the other was proclaimed the real artist of the new day.

Thank heaven, it was only a passing craze. Music could not be counterfeited, or camouflaged forever. "Jazz," under governmental decree, is now headed "For the vile depths from which it sprung

Unwept, unhonored and unsung," while music, that which Milton called the "Heavenly Muse" and Shakespeare described as a "concord of sweet sounds," will eventually be restored as one of the elevating forces in a harmony-loving universe.

"BABY WEEK" A SUCCESS IN MANCHESTER

"Baby Week" has been a great success in Manchester. Beginning last Saturday and ending this Saturday evening, the mothers of Manchester have kept the nurses and committee members busy each day. On the first day thirty-seven babies were weighed and measured. The summer residents are beginning to send in cards with the tabulated records of their babies, some of whom have been weighed and measured at home. A complete account of the work will be given next week. Mrs. D. T. Beaton, chairman of the committee, reports that the babies are coming up to all expectations, showing what a healthful place they are living in. Others on the committee are Mrs. Frank A. Rowe, Mrs. Bertram Floyd, Miss Marion Spinney, Dr. R. T. Glendenning and Mrs. Lewis Hooper. This is the Child Welfare committee of the Parent-Teacher association in Manchester.

WAR SAVINGS AND THRIFT STAMPS

The next campaign for war funds will be in the interest of the purchase of war savings and thrift stamps. An active committee of women will conduct the campaign in Manchester, with Mrs. Allen S. Peabody as chairman.

It is interesting to note that Manchester has already accomplished much in the sale of stamps. The total sales from Dec. 1, 1917, to June 1, 1918, were:

Thrift stamps 4418, value $1104.50
War Saving stamps 779, value 2443.44

Total cash received $3547.94

The number of thrift cards exchanged for war saving stamps, 195. Jan. 1918, was the best month, $870.61 being received; May was the next best, $726.21.

War savings stamps sold in December for $4.12; the price now (June) is $4.17, payable Jan. 1, 1923, for $5.

The above information was furnished by Postmaster Frank A. Foster.

FOOD WILL DECIDE THE WAR

The regulation of the United States Food Administration requiring the purchase of a pound of some other cereal for each pound of wheat flour, gives to each housewife and cook the privilege of doing her patriotic duty.

The Food Centre will cooperate with us and with the housewife by giving suggestions and recipes for the use of these wheat substitutes.

AMERICAN INFANTRYMAN HAS ADVANTAGE IN AMMUNITION EQUIPMENT

The American infantryman in the Expeditionary Forces carries 200 rounds of ammunition in the pockets of his light canvas webb belt and his bandoleers. The German soldier has only 120 rounds, and thirty of these are in his knapsack. To secure them at a critical moment he must lose valuable time.

The American webb belts, according to the War Department, are far superior to the German leather bandoleers. They are not affected by prolonged rains nor torrid weather. The manufacture of these belts is one of the most intricate of the operations in the textile field. U. S. army belts are made almost entirely of cotton.

The exact weight of the 220 rounds carried by the American soldier in France is twelve pounds. With the Springfield rifle twenty-three aimed

MAGNOLIA

William M. Hill, of Boston, has been a guest at the parsonage this week.

Harold Bemis, of Shelburne Falls, was a guest of Dr. and Mrs. Walter S. Eaton over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Doland will occupy a part of the Frank H. Davis house on Magnolia ave., this summer.

The Magnolia babies were weighed at the "Little Chapel," under the direction of Mrs. Alice Foster, on Tuesday afternoon.

The usual services will be held in the Village church Sunday at 10.45 a. m., and 7.30 p. m., and they will be conducted by the pastor.

The Women's clubhouse will open June 10th, and Miss Edna G. Symonds will be in charge until July 1st, when the matron, Mrs. Alice Peart, will begin her duties.

The Men's clubhouse will open the first of July and Fred Dunbar will be the manager this season. The restaurant will not be open this summer, but arrangements have been made by the manager with proprietors of the local boarding houses to furnish meals for the patrons of the club.

Tuesday of this week the "Little Chapel workers" sent to Boston for the American Fund for French Wounded another hamper containing the following articles: 12 bed jackets, 36 surgical shirts, 12 sets of pajamas, 18 over-dressing socks, 24 bath mitts, 70 round tumbler covers, 42 lawn covers, 5 bags, 13 pairs comfort slippers, 1 suit boy's clothes, 1 jacket and 5 helmets. These were made by Mrs. Frank Abbott, Miss Lillian Upton, Mrs. H. P. Colfelt, Miss Rose Nelson and Mrs. W. Richardson. Also there were 4 pairs of wristers, made by Miss Abbie May and Mrs. Mary Upton, and 2 pairs contributed by Mrs. R. McM. Colfelt; 6 knitted flood cloths and 2140 compresses.

IN THE SERVICE

NEARLY EVERY YOUNG MAN OF MAGNOLIA IS IN THE SERVICE

Harold Richardson has recently enlisted in the Naval Reserve and he expects to be called into the service in a few days.

Vernon Wolfe, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Wolfe, spent the week-end visiting his parents. Vernon is stationed at Newport, R. I., and he reports that he is greatly pleased with "Uncle Sam's" treatment of him.

Ralph Story, who is at Camp Devens, made a hasty visit to his parents,

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Story, and many friends, last Sunday. Ralph was looking well and we are sure that he, as well as all the other Magnolia boys, will give a good account of himself.

Russell Lucas, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Lucas, left home early Tuesday morning to begin his new duties in the Naval Reserve. Surely there is no lack of patriotism on the part of our young men, for now nearly every one is in the service of their country, and so far as we know every young man in this village has at least tried to get into the service that is to defeat the Huns.

BEVERLY FARMS

NOTES OF ST. JOHN'S PARISH, BEVERLY FARMS

The summer schedule of services begins next Sunday and is as follows: Holy Communion every Sunday, 8 a. m.; morning service and sermon, 10.30 a. m. Attention is called to the fact that the hour of this service is changed from 10 to 10.30.

The Men's club held the final regular business meeting of the season Wednesday night in the parish rooms. During the past winter the members have enjoyed a series of very successful meetings with speakers of unusual interest, with an attendance of from 40 to 60 men.

The annual fair for the benefit of the parish house fund, which had become one of the events of the summer on the North Shore, will probably not be held this season. The women and girls of the parish, who usually devoted their time during the winter in preparing for the fair, have been giving their efforts this past winter to work for the Red Cross. The parish home can wait, but the needs of the war cannot.

The parish rooms in the Marshall building are rapidly becoming indispensable in carrying on the activities of the church. During nine months of the year they are in constant use. Last winter, for two months, to conserve coal and electricity, the choir rehearsals and the Lenten services were held there. They are the meeting place of the Men's club, the Woman's auxiliary and the younger people. Several parish socials and dances took place in them and for several months, while the library was closed, the Beverly Farms branch of the Red Cross met there nearly every afternoon and evening. Also on several occasions, the use of these rooms was given to organizations outside of the parish for entertainments in behalf of war activities. While adequate to the present needs they are proving what a benefit to the community a properly equipped parish house would be.

Who is the man defeated? Columbus in his cell?
Livingstone dying lonely? Or Gordon when he fell?
Not these the lost, the hopeless, those who have striven and died,
The real and fatal failures are those who have never tried.

—Priscilla Leonard.

Mrs. Fernand Machain, of Valley st., met with an accident the first of this week, which caused a hurried trip to the Beverly hospital, where she spent the day. She cut her left wrist on a broken plate, and as it was found that a blood vessel had been severed, for a time it looked quite serious. She is now getting along very nicely, however.

"Some farmers," "the girls behind the hoe," and other words of praise can well be applied to the two Beverly Farms young ladies, Misses Mary McTiernan and Emily McDonnell, popular telephone operators, who have a garden in Haven's field, and it is "some garden"; if you do not believe it, go and look at it. The young ladies deserve much praise, for very often they are up at five o'clock and hard at work in their garden. They are making some of their neighbors hustle to keep up to them and have as good a garden as theirs.

SMITH—PIERCE

St. Margaret's church at Beverly Farms was the scene of a pretty June wedding on last Monday evening, when Miss Anna Pierce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Pierce, of Pride's Crossing, became the bride of Calvin V. Smith, of Beverly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson Smith. The Rev. James H. Downey officiated. Miss Pierce was most attractively gowned in white tulle and carried lilies-of-the-valley and orchids. Miss Mary Pierce, a cousin of the bride, was her only attendant. She was pretty in a simple gown of rose pink tulle, with which she wore a black hat of the same material. Henry Daley, of Beverly, served as best man.

After the ceremony a wedding supper was served for the immediate family and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith left soon after for Niagara Falls and other places of interest in New York, where they will stay two weeks. On their return they will reside at 215 Woodlawn terrace, Waterbury, Conn., where they will be at home to friends after July 1.

Preston Post, 188, G. A. R., and Preston W. R. C., 93, have received the following invitation to take part in the observance of Flag Day on Friday of next week—June 14. The invitation has been accepted on the part of both organizations. The letter is self-explanatory:

Beverly, Mass., June 3, 1918.

"The Beverly lodge of Elks, 1309, will conduct Flag Day exercises, Friday, June 14, at 6.30 p. m., at the Elks' Home, 75 Cabot st., Beverly, Mass.

"We extend to your society a cordial invitation to participate in the exercises.

"In view of the conditions that now exist, the exercises this year will show an appreciation and loyalty to all that the flag represents to us as citizens of this great republic."

The letter is signed by Arthur E. Johnson, chairman of the committee in charge, and P. Joseph McKeone, secretary.

S. John Connolly, of Beverly Farms, is the exalted ruler of the Beverly lodge of Elks.

Come to me, O ye children!

And whisper in my ear

What the birds and the winds are singing
In your sunny atmosphere.

For what are all our contrivings,
And the wisdom of our books,
When compared with your caresses,
And the gladness of your looks?

Ye are better than all the ballads
That ever were sung or said;
For ye are living poems,
And all the rest are dead.

—Longfellow.

MANY OPPORTUNITIES OPEN FOR SPECIALISTS IN WAR DEPARTMENT

There is a list of 137 occupations where the demand for men in the War Department constantly exceeds the supply.

A pressing need exists in the army for men experienced in handling mules, and before all future needs are met a recruiting campaign may become necessary. No difficulty has been experienced in getting men who can buy and handle horses, but blacksmiths are scarce.

There is a constant demand for butchers, and cooks are greatly needed. In several technical branches, particularly the engineers, men for the higher positions are plentiful, but the workers for the ranks are scarce. Experienced mechanics, especially those familiar with automobiles are always in demand.

More interpreters than can be used have applied for positions with the War Department, and applications for commissions as army chaplains are also in excess of the need. The excess totals thousands in each case. Clerks for general work are plentiful, but there is demand for specialists. At present there is a surplus of dentists and pharmacists.

A babe in a house is a well-spring of pleasure.—MARTIN F. TUPPER.

MOTHERS! ATTENTION!

Mother, if your child grows into a strong man or woman
he will thank you.
If he grows up to be a sickly or deformed man or woman
he will blame you.
Study the card the nurse gives you.
If you have a 100% baby take him home and keep up the good work.
If you have an 80% baby learn today how to make him into a 100% baby before next April.
If you have a 50% baby take him to the doctor.
Find out whether you are doing the right things or the wrong things.
Do not be satisfied with your own ideas.
The ideas of a man who spends every day of the year curing weakly and sick babies in the newest and best ways are better than yours.
It is easy to let things slide down hill, but at the foot of the hill is a dead baby.
MOTHERS—You have a right to the best advice, help and conditions for your child.
Go after them today.
The care of a sick child is up-hill work.
But on the top of the hill is a well baby.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE

AND THE WAR

PATRIOTISM was the keynote of the recent convention of the Mass. Woman Suffrage association in Boston, and of the big public rally at the Boston Opera House, with which the convention ended. The following resolutions were passed at the business session and confirmed at the public meeting: "That the delegates of the Mass. Woman Suffrage association, in their 49th annual convention assembled, renew their pledge of unswerving loyalty to their country in its great contest with a treacherous and ruthless foe. We will give our best efforts to defend it against enemies both foreign and domestic. We will continue and extend our war work; we will support the Constitution of the United States and stand solidly behind the great struggle to make the world safe for democracy, both at home and abroad"; and "that the association pledges its support to the armies and navies in the field; to the President and Congress in the government; to the workmen and women engaged in providing the materials of war. According to our opportunities we will join in Red Cross and other relief work; we will pay our taxes and buy Liberty bonds; we will make public addresses and use private influence and give the service of heart and soul to the winning of the war." By these resolutions; by the reports of an immense amount of war work already being done; by the election of Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird as vice-president and by the noble patriotic speeches of Mrs. Chapman Catt and Dr. Anna Shaw at the Opera House, the charge of "pacifism" was more than answered.

The other officers elected were: President, Miss Blackwell; second vice-president, Miss Maud Foley; treasurer, Miss Fanny Osgood; clerk, Mrs. Florence Perkins. The councillor elected for the fifth councillor district (the Essex County district) is Mrs. Evelyn Masury, of Danvers. Many persons well-known on the North Shore were in the great audience that overflowed the Boston Opera House and greeted with enthusiasm the two famous women, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National Suffrage association, and Rev. Anna Howard Shaw, chairman of the Women's committee of the Council of National Defense. In this office Dr. Shaw is really the first woman in the country today, and she made one of the most moving patriotic addresses that have been heard in Boston, full of wit, humor and pathos. She told of the war work of women everywhere and of how much more they must do in this country; and among other things she said: "I could not look in the face of a young man who is giving his life for democracy if I had deserted or neglected the cause of equal suffrage, which is part of democracy." Mrs. Catt, in a dignified and intellectual address showed that equal suffrage is a war measure at this time; (as President Wilson has said) that no news from this country could please the Kaiser more than the news that equal suffrage had been defeated in our Congress,—for he is the arch anti-suffragist of the world; that our two Massachusetts senators are blocking the progress of the world in opposing the federal amendment for suffrage; and she called on Massachusetts to arise and resume its old place of leadership in the great fight for democracy.

COPLEY THEATRE, BOSTON

"The Liars" will be remembered as one of the most successful of last season's plays at the Copley theatre. Its revival next week will therefore be especially welcome. One of the most brilliant of the many plays written by Henry Arthur Jones, "The Liars" has been acted wherever the English language is spoken. It was produced first in London by Charles Wyndham, and later in this country John Drew presented it to the American public.

One of the best examples of an ingeniously constructed comedy, "The Liars" sparkles with brilliant dialogue. It deals with the foibles of English social life, and it contains much of the wit to be found in a London drawing-room. It takes a critical situation in the married life of an English couple, weaves a story around it, and carries it forward in extremely realistic and romantic fashion. The plot, the situations, and the dialogue, alike contribute to the entertaining qualities of the play.

A TONGUE TWISTER

(This is said to be a certain cure for hiccoughs if repeated in one breath)

When a twister a-twisting, will twist him a twist,
For the twisting of his twist he
three times doth untwist,
But if one of the twines of the twist
do untwist,
The twine that untwisteth untwist-
eth the twist.
Untwirling the twine that untwist-eth between,
He twirls, with the twister, the two in a twine;
Then twice having twisted the
twines of the twine,
He twisteth the twine he had twined in twain.
The twain that, in twining, before in the twine,
As twines were untwisted, he now
doth untwine;
'Twist the twain intertwisting a twine more between,
He, twirling his twister, makes a twist of the twine.

THE LITTLE SHORE BOATS*

Like darling babes with blinking eyes
Upon some dear old mammy's lap
The little shore boats' cuddly-lights
Go drifting by the old wharf's cap,
While softly, sweetly, gently, steals
The lullaby of drifting keels.

I see the eddies swirl and play
And laugh unto their watching stare,
The great white blankets of the sails,
Like coverlets so warm and fair,
While softly, sweetly, gently, steals
The lullaby of drifting keels.

Oh, beautiful the moonlight's glow,
The little shore boats in the stream,
The chimes a-striking, sweet and low,
While softly, sweetly, gently, steals
The lullaby of drifting keels.

—CLARENCE MANNING FALT.

(NOTE: The shore boats are the little sloop-rigged boats that fish along the shore and in Ipswich Bay.)

Upon a Bull's horn once there sat
A consequential little Gnat.
And as he was about to fly,
He buzzed unto the Bull "Good-Bye,
May I go now?" "You tiny Hum,"
Said Bull, "I didn't know you'd come."

A Store Selling At Last September Prices

In these days of fast advancing prices, it is hard to believe this possible; nevertheless, it is true; we are doing just this thing. The prices in our Fiftieth Anniversary catalogue are the prices of last September and we are still selling at these same prices today.

HOW WE CAN DO IT

We just have to do it on account of our catalogue. When it is published in the Fall, it is understood to hold for one year, and in spite of these times when practically everything is advancing in price, we are still adhering to this principle.

When we made up our catalogue last Fall we knew the only way we could keep down to catalogue prices would be to lay in a very large stock, large enough, if possible, to last for a year.

This we did, and that is why our prices today are the same low prices of early last Fall, the only exception being some few sizes of diamonds and these have advanced only slightly.

DANIEL LOW'S IS MORE THAN A JEWELRY STORE for in addition to diamonds, watches, gold and silver jewelry, rings, etc., it carries quantities of articles which are essential in every home, such as silver tableware, china and glass, electric lamps, clocks, stationery and nickel and brass articles.

It also carries a fine line of useful articles for the "Men in the Service" as well as conducting a fully equipped repair department.

We extend you a cordial invitation to visit our store for we believe that we can please you and we know that we can save you money.

Have Returned From Red Cross Work in France

Two North Shore Women Back Home Again, in Manchester, After Absence of About 20 Months

BACK home again in Manchester with nothing but praise on their lips for the French people and rejoicing in the privilege that has been theirs of being emissaries of the American Red Cross in France, have come to two of the North Shore's well-known women, Miss Margaret Curtis and Miss Mabel Sturgis, who arrived at their respective homes last Thursday night, after an absence of about twenty months.

Miss Curtis has occupied the important position of associate chief with Edward T. Devine, of New York, who is in charge of the refugee bureau of the Red Cross civilian work in France, having as her special department that known as the Seine, which is Paris and its suburbs.

Miss Sturgis has also been in the refugee work with the department of Yonne as her center. This was in an agricultural locality, so the work varied a little from that in Paris. Her particular work was in providing furniture for the refugees, who were placed in suitable apartments in buildings chosen by the Red Cross.

Miss Curtis and Miss Sturgis had been doing relief work with the Shurtleff memorial organization in France, before joining the Red Cross last June, as soon as it started active work in France. Miss Curtis had also been over to work for a short time previous to the long sojourn when they both left September 30, 1916. Miss Sturgis has a sister, Miss Evelyn Sturgis, who is with Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby in Y. M. C. A. canteen work in France.

Miss Curtis briefly outlined the work this week for the BREEZE writer. She says the civilian workers get so interested in their work with the refugees that they forget about the military side of the Red Cross,—forget almost that a war is on,—but are assured by those in authority that everything done for the families at home reacts upon the morale of the army immensely.

Paris is, of course, the headquarters for the American Red Cross. Military and civilian work are the two heads under which it works, the former including the canteen, hospital and casualty bureaus; the civilian dealing with the children's, tubercular, mutilated, reconstruction in the devastated sections, and the refugee bureaus. Paris also has a dispensary for the refugees, in which Dr. Richard Cabot, of Boston, is one of the workers.

Miss Curtis was in charge of the Paris office and has helped to locate the refugees in that crowded city. A law was made eight months ago that no more new ones could be lodged there, unless they were coming to live with families already settled or had means of support independent of the government. France had 200,000 new refugees after the second offensive. That there is still work

MISS MARGARET CURTIS

MISS MABEL STURGIS

*Two Boston and Manchester Women Who Returned
This Week From War Work in France*

is shown by the fact that one night (they nearly always come into Paris by night) between 11 and 2 o'clock there were 4,600 came into one station. She says office hours were necessarily irregular, although they tried to work in shifts. The refugees now coming in from the north are provided with food and shelter while passing through the city to other destinations. The providing of mattresses and blankets for a night's rest is only a sample of the hurried work managed so successfully by the Red Cross.

Of course the various bureaus of civilian work overlap, the children, the tubercular, etc., being a part of the general refugee work, yet each distinct enough to warrant a separate bureau.

Miss Curtis cannot laud the French people enough in their reception of the American Red Cross during the past year.

She says: "When our workers went over there with all their system and detail and said 'we will take care of your refugees,' France might have become very jealous and not have cooperated as she did, even if not able to do the work herself. But the Red Cross found favor with the official and private life immediately. They claim it is the best organization they ever had in their midst, not because we brought them money and workers, but rather organization."

Miss Curtis says the French are keen to learn and are humble, saying that they were individualistic, while we brought system and a knowledge of the power of organization to them. "It is a joy to work among such people," says Miss Curtis, "but they can't fool me. They have 'organization,' or else they could never have managed in such a wonderful manner the passage of their troops over the narrow road to Verdun. Just now every nerve is being bent to strengthen and care for the army, and the American Red Cross has simply gone over to care for the refugees in its own way."

When the Red Cross started its work they found the refugees crowded into miserable quarters. Normal family life was the object sought by the society. Sanitation and morals could not be respected in the nasty little overcrowded rooms which they found inhabited. Two beds in a room for six or eight people with mattresses taken off and placed on the floor and sleepers on both springs and mattresses, thereby increasing sleeping quarters, is a sample of what they found.

France was divided into eighty-six geographical departments, ten of which have been invaded. Miss Curtis' department was small, but one of the most important. She says 121,000 refugees were given aid through the French government in Paris.

These people are not the scum of the earth, but a good class, many of whom have been farmers (eighty per cent of the French army is of the farming class) and other people in moderate circumstances.

The Red Cross in Paris began by getting a list of unfinished buildings from the police. (We go into details here because this was the department cared for by Miss Curtis.) The police cheerfully gave a list of 150 and when the workers went out to inspect them they found twenty-two more. Some were in the business districts, others had been planned for palaces, etc., and some were just in the first stages, therefore unfit for use. All building was at a standstill. The Red Cross found a difficulty in getting nails, hinges and other metal finishings for the buildings they determined to complete for the refugees. The Red Cross attended to all the details of inspection and secured workmen (old men only available ones) to assist them. Out of the 172 inspected only 105 were found suitable, and fifty-one are now ready for occupancy. These fifty-one represent lodging for 1763 families, counting five to a family, which when multiplied by five gives the number of souls looked after and more of an idea of the enormous work,—8815 lives.

The refugees are given help from the government. With this they pay the rent asked. Those that are able to work, many of them going into the munition factories.

The item of furniture for their new quarters is of interest. The simplest kind is loaned to them, and being naturally a thrifty, home-loving people they wish to own it, so the Red Cross sells it to them for three-fourths the usual price and upon the installment plan.

The Red Cross has been instrumental in getting French societies of various natures (charitable and housing societies) to manage the buildings and choose the families that should occupy them. Five such societies have assumed the responsibilities of buildings.

Of these French societies Miss Curtis speaks with much enthusiasm. The Secours National, composed of the men of France, has been appointed by the President to dispense all money in France sent in from any source to provide help in no specially designated manner. Thus the "national help" is a good hands.

The French women are swinging the farming work with great success, according to Miss Curtis. Factories manufacturing luxuries have been turned into munition plants, with additional workers to their crew. The government is urging the grouping of farms to make a plot of thirty acres, which are then plowed and planted by the government.

When asked if they were returning to France soon Miss Curtis said that nothing definite had been decided upon.

In the upper hall at the Curtis home, where Mrs. Greely S. Curtis now has all of her daughters with her,—the Misses Frances Harriot, Isabella and Margaret, there is an interesting collection of war relics brought over by Miss Curtis. Among these is a little passport book highly prized because it shows the permit issued for her to go into the war zone after refugees. This was not easily gained, and briefly states the day and reason for entering, a place where the merely curious cannot get in.

Other souvenirs are bread tickets, money of both paper and metal, badges, a wooden sign from the first line trenches, a thick scarf knitted by a blind soldier, who had also lost an arm (it was knit on a small machine), and among other things some of the bright, cheerful work taught the despondent by the American Quakers, who are doing such fine work over there.

A white silk parachute arrangement, "star shells," which are sent up and hold a Bengal-light long enough to see if any Germans are moving in "No Man's Land," is also among the collection. Of course these are used on both sides.

Miss Curtis tells her story in a simple, straight-forward and business-like manner, every now and then throwing in some word of praise for the French people and their fine coöperation with our Red Cross.

Miss Curtis saw many home people while abroad. Returning on the same boat with them was Miss Helen Clay Frick, of Pride's Crossing, who had seen six months' service in the department of the Ain, an agricultural district, where she was under Miss Dewson, formerly head of the Lancaster reform school for girls. Miss Frick helped in refugee work and also with the rapatriés. Miss Curtis, Miss Sturgis and Miss Frick landed in New York.

Miss Curtis also saw Russell Tyson, of Chicago, and formerly of Manchester, who is in the Red Cross military department, and one day saw Miss Charlotte Read, ambulance driver, of Manchester. Miss Elizabeth Ayer, formerly of Ipswich, was also among the ambulance drivers seen.

Miss Curtis says there was not much social life indulged in. The work during the day was of an intensive nature and the workers were usually glad to rest at night. Of course she and others spoken of were volunteer workers. While there are many salaried people working for the Red Cross abroad, no large salaries are given, only medium ones being considered.

MISS HELEN C. FRICK, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Frick, of Eagle Rock, Pride's Crossing, who is just home from more than seven months in France, where she has been engaged in reconstruction work in helping to rebuild some of the small villages in the path of the German first offensive, has brought home official recognition from the French government of her magnificent services and the Red Cross ribbons which show that she had six months' service in France.

Miss Frick is very modest about her work in France, but from stories told by her associates, she was an inspiration to the workers—there was nothing to be done that she left undone—and she has won the love and the admiration of all the French people with whom she came in contact, especially of those in the villages whose homes were restored. Miss Frick did not forget the employees at the mansion house nor on the estate, and she brought home enough German helmets captured by brave French soldiers to give nearly every employee a real souvenir of the war; and she brought home other remembrances in the shape of trinkets made by the soldiers in the trenches and in the hospitals, which she is presenting to her friends.

In her work in France she had the whole-hearted coöperation of her parents—as she has had for the vacation home for working girls, which she maintains at Wenham, and to which she will give her attention for the summer months, in addition to her Red Cross and other work.

Miss Frick plans to return to France in the fall. She has had many experiences, comes home with a wonderful appreciation of the heroism of the French people, the splendid morale of the French fighting men and a glorious optimism in the ultimate success of the allies in the great world war.

Glimpses Here and There of North Shore Estates

Some Signs of Early Summer Activities Typical of the Times

IV

IF you will go with me in your imagination on this fifty-cent ride and then take it, you will be glad that you ran across this copy of the BREEZE. Nowhere on the North Shore can you get so much for fifty cents.

First, you must get yourself to Ipswich, which is not counted in the fifty cents. Truly,

"I love to think of Ipswich town,
Old Ipswich in the East countree,
Whence on the tide you can float down
Through the long, salt grass to the wailing sea,
And lie all day on the glassy beach,
And learn the lesson the green waves teach,
Till at sunset from surf and seaweed brown,
You are pulling back to Ipswich town."

Well, that practically covers the fifty-cent ride. But, oh, so much to see! The little tugs are puffing away at the wharf on Ipswich river and you choose one and then go speeding out of the little town "o'er the lovely, curving, winding river." The ride makes you partly agree with Captain John Smith, who wrote of it in 1614: "This place might content a right curious judgment; but there are many sands at the entrance of the harbour, and the worst is, it is imbayed too farre from the deepe sea." Not too far for the pleasure rider, though, who would stretch that fifty-cent ride out to eternity, almost, when the right mood is on.

The river widens as it leaves the town and runs delightfully through salt marshes and around little islands. Several creeks help to fill its channel. Summer homes are seen here and there along the journey, among which are "Monstone Farm," the I. R. Thomas place; Miss Caroline Bates' "Red Lodge" on Labor-in-Vain road; also on this road, "Greystone," the Arthur L. Sweetser place; and Dr. Bailey's and Gould's also are seen.

Great Neck and Little Neck are fascinating stretches of barren land winding over which is a roadway, the "Way to Jeffries' Neck"; however, on our boat trip, we may stop at any landing desired on the Necks, and find that Little Neck is a thriving resort of small cottages. Great Neck has pasture for all the cows in Ipswich during the summer, and here they graze contentedly, looking to the passersby in the tugs, "sky-high" up on the barren ridge and rather mystical looking in the queer Ipswich light, caused by atmospheric conditions, which hangs over everything.

On past "Castle Hill" (really our goal) we go to Plum island, view Grape island, and know that beyond are the Isles of Shoals and that Parker river empties out in the sea also up to the northward. On a fair day the New Hampshire hills and Agamenticus may be seen.

But turn the little tug around and plow through the sea (real sea here) and on the left view "Castle Hill," with its low rim of shining, yellow, rolling sand dunes. See the little lighthouse on the sands, on its own bit of government land, but a part of the fine stretch of sand surrounding "Castle Hill," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Crane, of Chicago. Nearly all of this great panorama (all for fifty cents) lies at the front door of the Crane home, which crowns the hill in a truly majestic manner.

More than 2500 acres comprises the estate. This hill was given to Governor John Carver's son in 1634, and nearby is the house where Rufus Choate was born. On alighting from the boat (not included in the ordinary ride, however) you are on the beach where the Ipswich school children are entertained each June with a picnic. Here they come with their teachers, bring their box lunches, to which Mr. Crane adds ice cream and other delights, and have a glorious day. Little boats bring them out and the beach is patrolled to guard their safety, all at Mr. Crane's expense.

A path leads up from the beach to the gardens and house. This comes up gradually through the pine woods for about half a mile, and then goes into the famous rose garden, which is terraced and of unusual beauty, with its great variety of roses and only made about four years ago. Then comes the long Italian garden, with terraced walls, the whole of which is generally planted in blue, white and pink flowers. Plant decorative features, the tea houses, a lily pond and a beautiful white marble group, —the last work of the noted Boston artist, Bela Pratt—have always been particularly noticeable in the Italian garden. Outside of the garden are the long grassy terraces leading to the sweeping lawns around the mansion house.

One great avenue of green sward flows like a river over the tops of three undulations down to the beach. Down at the foot of the hill on which the house stands, and in the path of this great sweep of green, stands the casino and bachelor quarters. Between these two buildings, which are united by terraces and steps, lies the salt water swimming pool in the courtyard, formed by the arrangement of the end buildings.

The bachelor quarters is a most unique little house with rooms for eight and a cosy little sitting room, also. Here are the dozen or more marble dressing rooms and shower baths attached to the swimming pool.

The casino is an attractive room done in cream and brown and seats about 200. The heavy-beamed dark ceiling and tapestries and chairs are of interest. Kathleen Burke gave a stirring war talk in this room last season. The beautiful gardens were also opened to the public last season on two week-ends as a benefit for the Cable Memorial hospital in Ipswich, given to the town by the Cranes in memory of their friend, Benjamin Stickney Cable, who was killed in an automobile accident while visiting them.

The farm buildings constitute a striking group when the place is approached from Argilla road. They are of cement, with tiled roofs and every modern convenience.

Now, if you are a stranger to this ride, go take it and get all that is coming to you for fifty cents. You may not get it all, but you will at least get to Plum island and back, even if the call at the Crane estate must be postponed until some other more "fortunate" time.

AN interesting sight on the estate of the Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge, Coolidge's Point, Manchester, is in the pheasant pens, just off the Italian garden. Here some extremely interesting beauties are seen, including two pairs of Lady Amhersts, two pairs of golden pheasants, two of silver and a pair of wood ducks. Their brilliant coloring is of a strong torpical nature and they draw almost as much admiration as the pretty garden—the fine Italian garden, with its beds filled with vegetables to help out Uncle Sam.

The pair of silver pheasants are very peculiar, according to their caretaker, William Till, the only man along the Shore who has been able to raise pheasants. It has been tried on various estates, but without success. In the inland region they are found, especially in Wenham, at Dr. John C. Phillips' duck farm by Wenham lake. But the silver pheasants have always exhibited a trait unknown before. The large and handsomely marked male sits on the eggs (thirteen under him this year) and after twenty-eight days have passed they are incubated. His little wife's work is done after she lays the eggs and she struts happily around while he patiently sits on the nest built on the ground. Other varieties take twenty-four days for the eggs to incubate.

These birds have been on the Coolidge place seven years, coming originally from Concord. Pheasants usually do best when the eggs are put under hens, the mother pheasants seeming to lose the sense of caring for their young when they are in captivity. Some interesting babies are now seen at the Coolidge place, while hens are incubating pheasant eggs. The whole difficulty of rearing them is in their earliest stage. Most of the fine birds seen there have been raised by Mr. Till.

The ducks were once a feature of the place, when they were kept in the little pond on the estate and from which the brook is an outlet that runs by the gardens and on out to the Cove.

Coolidge's Point is considered about 116 acres, but now the estate is much lessened by the number of houses (over a dozen) that have taken tracts of land from Mr. Coolidge's original estate. His place is wild and has some wooded paths leading through it, short, but delightful.

ROBERT J. EDWARDS and the Misses Edwards, of Boston, will again occupy the Lancashire cottage on Hale st., Beverly Farms. Little & Browne, of Boston, planned the improvements made to the house this year. The hall has been paneled and the dining room altered and made lighter by the addition of some new windows. A high, latticed fence, painted green, now encloses a part of the yard. A fine view over West beach and the shores beyond is to be had from the piazza facing the railroad.

Adjoining is the home of the E. Lawrence Whites. These two white houses with their touches of green are very noticeable at the Farms. The Whites have an extensive vegetable garden and potato patch on their rear lawn. No doubt many a vegetable from these gardens will be slipped into Mrs. White's car, as she goes to the Red Cross workrooms this summer. She is the originator of the "Service Auxiliary" to the garden club of North Shore girls who are raising vegetables on the Dudley Pickman estate at Beverly Cove for the Beverly hospital. Mrs. White's plan is to have baskets placed at each workroom this summer into which a few vegetables can be put by the workers as they come,—just a few picked up, which will help make a big basketful at the workroom. These Mrs. White and her helpers will see get to the hospital the same day.

Back of Mrs. White's garden and built down on the hillside are the chicken houses and runways, in which several hundred chickens are raised.

Three or four handsome little dogs are always seen running about the lawns and walks, making delightful, soft, curly balls for the little daughter, Sally, to play with. A few flowers are seen here and there over the place, and in the vegetable garden they give their usual softening look.

IT is with a sad heart that one will view the beautiful Haven garden this year at Beverly Farms. One of the oldest gardens on the Shore, where the box hedges were waist high and thick and shaggy—now is a thing of the past, a mute reminder of the winter of '17-'18. Those who see the garden this year for the first time might be interested in the following item which appeared in the BREEZE three years ago:

"The Haven estate at Beverly Farms has one of the most beautiful of the typical old New England seashore gardens. Planted over sixty years ago by the Hon. Franklin Haven, who was one of the early settlers in the summer residence colony at the Farms, it shows the mellowness of age in its wonderful growth of box hedge by which it is surrounded. Box hedge, which is of unusually slow growth, is here seen in rich, luxuriant rows and adds much to the fragrance of the garden by its spicy, pungent odor. The garden is arranged in four large squares surrounded with the box, and having lovely walks between. The squares have old-fashioned flowers in them of great beauty. At the outside of the garden on one side is a lilac hedge, on another side is a closely trimmed and rounded hedge of arbor-vitæ, while separating the main garden from another garden of lesser prominence containing vegetables and some flowers, is a tall massive arbor-vitæ hedge with an archway uniting the two gardens. A charming view of the garden is seen from Miss Haven's doorway in the old original Haven homestead. Standing on her piazza, the main walk of the garden between the four squares, is seen leading under the tall archway into the back garden. In the center of one square is an immense oak tree sent by Daniel Webster from his home in Marshfield years ago to be planted in this garden, after he had enjoyed a visit at the Havens. Another interesting spot on the estate is up on the hillside along the driveway leading to the home of Mrs. Franklin Haven. At one side of the road is a rough stone resembling a cut-out sea. From this seat a fine sea-view through the trees is visible, forming a picture framed with the dark green of the pines, oaks and birches. All around it seems like a bit of the primeval forest with the rocks and ferns and wild things which abound. This place is doubly interesting when told that Col. Franklin Haven cut the view through the forest for his friend, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, who used to delight in resting on this old stone sea to look out at sea. This was in the days when Dr. Holmes spent his summers in Beverly Farms and lived in the cottage near the railroad, from which he gave his address as Beverly Farms-by-the-depot, so as not to be outdone by his Manchester neighbors by the sea."

On this estate oxen are still used to do the heavy work and in haying time may be seen drawing in the loads of hay from the pasture by the sea.

*The Beauty which old Greece or Rome
Sung, painted, wrought, lies close at home;
We need but eye and ear
In all our daily walks to trace
The outlines of incarnate grace,
The hymns of gods to hear!*

—WHITTIER.

THE Andrew Carnegie, 2d, family, arrived at "Seawold," Manchester Cove, last week, in time to see their vegetable garden in its interesting early stages; also in time to see the realistic garden scarecrow in all its newness before the winds and rain batter its face and destroy any of its big, bulging body. Not an ordinary scarecrow is this, with a few clothes hung on sticks. This one seems to have real meat under the clothes.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Culbertson, of Louisville, Ky., have arrived at their home on Summer street, Manchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Mitchell are now at "Glen-dyne," Magnolia ave., Manchester, after a stay at the Virginia Hot Springs. They spent the winter in Florida.

"Little Orchard," in the Manchester Cove section, was opened this week by the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Roland C. Lincoln.

The Randolph F. Tuckers, of Chestnut Hill, have been week-end guests of Mrs. Tucker's parents, Col. and Mrs. E. M. House, Coolidge's Point, Manchester. The baby granddaughter, Louise Auchincloss, has now come to be with the Houses. The baby's parents are the Gordon Auchinclosses, of New York.

Two acres that have been planted to vegetables for fifty years, is what the gardener says of the fine gardens along Ocean street on the Manchester place of Mrs. Greely S. Curtis and her daughters. Truly this is a well-kept and interesting garden patch, where every foot of land seems to be conserved.

Dr. James Anderson and daughter, Miss C. F. Anderson, of Brookline, arrived at their cottage, "Lily Pond," Coolidge's Point, Manchester, this Monday.

Miss Laura Wick, of Youngstown, Ohio, has been of the early arrivals in Manchester Cove. Her mother, Mrs. Myron C. Wick, and the rest of the family will come the last of the month. Mrs. Paul Wick is also coming on. Her husband is in the Naval Reserve. Myron Wick, Jr., has been in the ambulance service over a year.

Arthur W. Kennard, of Boston, who has been living at the Oceanside hotel, Magnolia, for a number of seasons, will live in the Hoyle cottage this summer, near the new store which his firm will have on Lexington ave., instead of in the Oceanside as heretofore. Mr. Kennard will bring his household servants from Boston next week, and will return to Boston in late September. All the family will come to Magnolia for a few weeks, then the oldest daughter will enter a Red Cross hospital, and the two older boys will go to a boys' farm for the summer. The younger members of the household will go to a summer camp, and all will return to Magnolia for the closing weeks of the summer. Mr. Kennard has a fine summer home in Cazenovia, N. Y., but he has leased it for this season.

THE George A. Goddard family, of Boston, will come to their Everett street home at Beverly Farms next Thursday. The Goddard place is on the hill adjoining "Boulderwood," the Beveridge estate, and part of the pretty little pond, which is such a feature of the Beveridge place, lies on the Goddard land. A charming pine-needle path skirts the pond, leading to either place. The view from the Goddard home is exceedingly fine. A few flowers are blooming near the house in anticipation of the family's arrival. The vegetables down by the roadside are as thrifty as ever, in their garden beds,—this being one of the gardens that always attracts attention on Hale street.

Mrs. Francis L. Higginson, of Pride's Crossing, chairman of the first district of the National Woman's Liberty Loan committee, gave a luncheon at the Chilton club in Boston last Friday to the New England chairmen and vice-chairmen and members of her executive staff.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyon Weyburn (Ruth Anthony) are now at Beverly Farms. The young son is called Reed Anthony Weyburn.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Bradley and family, of 411 Commonwealth ave., Boston, have opened their summer home at Pride's Crossing this week.

Mrs. Franklin Haven, of Beacon Hill, Boston, arrived at the Haven estate, Beverly Farms, yesterday. In viewing the frozen box Mrs. Haven says that if the times were not so tragic she would think the loss of so much of the box in the old garden a sad one.

Myopia Hunt club will have no pony polo this season, for all the polo players are now in the service.

Miss Eleonora R. Sears, of Beverly Farms, will exhibit at the Newport horse show in August, and also in Readville, Brockton and other places. Harness horses and ponies will be shown at Newport.

Mrs. Robert Gilpin Ervin and small son, of Philadelphia, are visiting with the former's mother, Mrs. Henry G. Nichols, of 382 Commonwealth ave., Boston, and who is now in the Sampson cottage at Manchester Cove. Capt. Ervin is with the Flying Corps in Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, of "Princemere," Wenham Neck, gave a luncheon Tuesday at their home for M. Macel Delaney, the new French ambassador to Japan, who is on his way to the new post, making a visit to Washington before going to the Pacific coast. M. Delaney was for several years mayor of Paris and it was there that the Princes, who had a winter residence in Pau, in the south of France, met him, and the visit offered the opportunity for a return of hospitalities. Other guests for the affair were St. M. Stephen Lauzanne, editor of the Le Matin, of Paris; Capt. Martin, his attaché; Col. Paul Azan, and other members of the French military mission to this country; Prof. Roscoe Thayer, of Harvard, a summer resident of Manchester; and a number of North Shore colonists.

It asks your help more earnestly this year than ever before, that in the midst of the trouble and anxiety of lives today, it may bring a bit of pleasure and cheer as a message from you. If flowers are picked the night before and put in water, they last much better than when brought freshly picked. Wild flowers also are much appreciated and very few are brought to the Flower Mission. It is a great pleasure to have children help in the packing of the flowers.

At the annual election of the Essex County club, Manchester, last Saturday night, William Hooper, was re-elected president. Henry Sturgis Grew was elected secretary and treasurer to replace F. M. Burnham and Thos. P. Beal, Jr., who filled the offices last year.

ON Monday, July 1st, the North Shore unit of the comforts' committee of the Navy League will again open its headquarters at the Grande Maison de Blanc, Magnolia, for the sale of wool, needles and the directions for making the warm knitted garments for the men of the United States navy, army and marines.

Through the efforts of the North Shore women knitting for our unit last summer, over 1000 articles were made and given to men in the navy, and it is to be hoped that this summer even this splendid record will be at least doubled. The numbers of our fighting men are increasing rapidly and by next fall, when the call comes for thousands of knitted sweaters, mufflers, wristlets, helirets and socks, we must not be found wanting. It is earnestly hoped that everyone will respond to this call and help add to the comfort of our men in the service, at home and overseas.

The prices of our wool are as follows: Bear Brand, in gray, khaki and natural, $1.00 a hank, $4.00 a pound; Granston, in gray and white, 70c a hank, $2.80 a pound.

Those wishing to purchase wool from us and not return finished articles to our unit, will be charged an additional 25 cents a hank, this money to go to a free wool fund to supply wool to women who wish to knit, but who cannot afford to buy the wool.

LOIS MCGINLEY, Chairman,
MARION TUCKER, Vice-Chairman.

Mrs. Monroe Douglas Robinson and little daughter are visiting the former's mother, Mrs. Eben D. Jordan, in Boston. The last of the month they will all go to Bar Harbor, Mrs. Robinson returning later in the summer to visit on the North Shore. Mrs. Jordan's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Robert Jordan, has taken a house in Westwood, while her husband is in service abroad.

Mrs. Alexander Winsor (Hope Bancroft,) of Weston, will spend the summer with her mother, Mrs. Robert Hale Bancroft, at "Hale Farm," Beverly.

The Unitarian church on Masconomo street, Manchester-by-the-Sea, will open for the season on Sunday, June 16. Service at 10.45. Dr. Francis G. Peabody, of Harvard university, will preach this Sunday.

Emmanuel Episcopal church, Masconomo street, Manchester. Service at half past ten Sunday morning, and Holy Communion at the close. Rev. Paul Sterling will preach Sunday, June 16.

TO the visitors on the North Shore and those who have not yet discovered it: The Italian War Relief Fund of America has a good place at Beverly Farms to make surgical dressings for the wounded Italian soldiers. Mrs. George Lee's garage on Hale street is the place. The room is large and light and airy and will be cool this summer. About thirty people can work comfortably in it.

Mrs. Lee has formed a committee of supervisors who can teach and give directions to those who may not know the methods. The committee includes Mmes. Frank P. Frazier, Henry P. McKean, Jr., Walter J. Mitchell, Edwin Mower, Robert Treat Paine, Oliver Turner and Lawrence White.

Mrs. Lee requests gentlemen as well as ladies to come and help. Any gentlemen at leisure on the North Shore will be most cordially received at the workroom to help do the work which is so urgently needed. Mrs. Lee says they are requested as earnestly as the ladies are, to come and help.

This is a new workroom on the Shore. See other notes of it in the War Work department. News items will appear frequently in the BREEZE in regard to the work. Beginning with June 18, it is open Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, from nine-thirty to one o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. James Clark Grew will probably keep their Washington home open all summer. The children will be sent to their summer home at Hancock, N. H., where Mrs. Grew will join them later.

Charles Hopkinson, of the Curtis estate, Manchester, has been spending a week or more in New York.

ADJT. FREDERICK H. PRINCE, JR., and Mrs. Prince, returned to their cottage at "Princemere," Wenham Neck, on Tuesday. Mr. Prince has spent two and a half years in active service with the French flyers on the western front. Last summer he was home on a brief furlough, when he and Mrs. Prince were married. Mrs. Prince was Miss Elizabeth Harding, of Washington. Mr. Prince has been honorably discharged because of defective vision. He has come to America to offer his aid in any way possible in organizing and promoting the efficiency of the United States Flying Corps. He will soon go to Washington to formally tender his services. He has spent seven months in training in France with all sorts of airplanes and has become familiar with the operation of both training and fighting aircraft.

MR. AND MRS. FRANK P. MITCHELL, of Washington, have re-named their new Wenham home purchased last year, calling it "Birch Hill." It was the Cunningham place, known as "Hillcroft." The changes begun last season have been completed, making a new kitchen and service quarters of modern efficiency. Haven & Hoyt, of Boston, were the architects. This is an attractively situated home in Wenham and is located near "Sunny Slope Farm," the home of Mrs. Charles D. Sias, of Boston.

The Wenham Tea House opened this Wednesday with Mrs. Philip Downes, as usual, in charge. Old and new friends will find a cordial welcome. This was one of the first tea houses in New England to start a Hoover day last fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodolphe L. Aggassiz and family, of Boston, are now settled at the Hamilton home for the summer. Some improvements have been made the past year on the place.

The E. Hamilton Social club is arranging for a lawn party and bazaar for Wednesday, July 10, at the home of the Albert A. Dodges, Woodbury's corner, E. Hamilton. Many of the summer residents in Hamilton and Wenham are assisting in preparing articles to sell. The proceeds will be used for the Red Cross.

Strangers on the way to Newburyport this summer will notice the big brown house set back from the road on a hill and seemingly embowered in trees. This is the home of Mrs. Lawrence Carteret Fenno and her daughters, of Boston. It is just about a mile beyond Rowley and is called "Ox Pasture Hill." The young daughter, Miss Pauline, is president of the North Shore Garden club of farmerettes raising vegetables on the Dudley Pickman estate at Beverly Cove for the Beverly hospital.

MRS. EDWARD WIGGLESWORTH, of School street, Manchester, has her little granddaughters, Miss Sally and Miss Dorothy Porter, of Boston, with her for a few weeks. Later the little girls will go to Maine for the summer with their father, Alexander S. Porter, Jr., while Mrs. Wigglesworth will, as usual, spend July and August at Jackson, N. H. The Manchester home has been very attractive this spring, with its lilacs and other flowering shrubs along the driveway leading up to the house on the hill, set among so many fine trees.

Rhododendrons are making a fine showing this week in the Pride's Crossing section at the entrance to the estate of the Misses Loring; around the sweeping avenue on the front lawn of the Henry C. Frick place; at the Harcourt Amory place; and may also be seen through the gateways at the Oliver Ames home, although not as plainly and generously visible as at the other places.

The Ladies' Dog club held its annual bench show at the Boston Athletic association, Riverside, Wednesday. Many North Shore people were interested in it. Proceeds went to the 101st Engineers' regimental fund.

Mrs. Hall McAllister, of Boston, who lived at the Boylston A. Beal house last summer, will spend one day a week on the Shore this summer to continue with her music pupils. Mr. and Mrs. Nevil Ford (Louise McAllister) are in Boston, where Mr. Ford is in government work.

Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, Jr., who returned to Wenham this week, has been doing nursing and other war work since she went to France along in the winter to join her husband, the aviator, who has also returned. Other North Shore women returning this week from Red Cross work in France have been Miss Margaret Curtis and Miss Mabel Sturgis, of Manchester, and Miss Helen Frick, of Pride's Crossing.

URGENT NEED OF NURSES

In an appeal sent out by the Red Cross the need of nurses is dwelt upon at length, and a campaign is to be undertaken to enroll 20,000. The appeal says "It is highly important that every possible effort be made to arouse general public interest in the serious need of providing an adequate nursing force for our army and navy.

An aroused public sympathy and interest in this feature of the war is bound to have its strong, although indirect, effect upon the campaign and will be of extreme value to the Red Cross in future campaigns to augment the nursing forces."

Labor and material are essential to victory; use both sparingly.

Dr. J. Henry Lancashire and daughter, of Manchester, were in Gloucester last Saturday, and took a lease of the store, 6 Centre street, which they will open at once as a branch of the Navy League, and as soon as possible this store will be fitted as headquarters for the men of the navy when in Gloucester. Miss Lancashire has been much interested in this work the past winter in New York, and has given her entire time to one of the branches established in that city. She will be at the head of the branch here and proposes to interest representative citizens here in order that it may prove a success. Her brother, Ammi, is an ensign in the navy and through him she has found the need of just such a place for the men of the navy when they happen in port. It is proposed to have the place made very attractive with reading and writing facilities and all kinds of games and suitable entertainment will be provided from time to time. There is no question but such a place will be welcomed by the men who will make it their headquarters and will be made welcome at all times.

The Friendly Hand

When a man ain't got a cent, an' he's feelin' kind o' blue,
An' the clouds hang dark an' heavy, an' won't let the sunshine through,
It's a great thing, O my brethren, for a feller just to lay
His hand upon your shoulder in a friendly sort o' way!

It makes a man feel curious; it makes the teardrops start,
An' you sort o' feel a flutter in the region of the heart.
You can't look up and meet his eyes; you don't know what to say,
When his hand is on your shoulder in a friendly sort of way.

Oh, the world's a curious compound, with its honey an' its gall,
With its cares an' bitter crosses; but a good world, after all.
An' a good God must have made it—leastways, that's what I say
When a hand rests on your shoulder in a friendly sort o' way.
—James Whitecomb Riley.

Along the Cape Ann Shore

Notes by ALEX. G. TUPPER

EASTERN POINT.—The Farrell show place, "Felsenmeer," Grape Vine Cove, is being prepared for the early arrival of the family, from Albany, N. Y.

Mrs. S. A. Raymond, who came on from Cleveland, Ohio, several days ago, to her estate, "The Ramparts," Eastern Point, has taken her departure, to return here the first of July.

Mrs. A. W. Pollard and two daughters, Miss Katherine Pollard and Miss Priscilla Pollard, of Boston, have arrived at the attractive Pollard estate, Eastern Point. The Pollard estate was enlarged last season and the grounds made very inviting. The family circle is much depleted this year, as F. Wilder Pollard, son of Mrs. Pollard, is first lieutenant in the U. S. Artillery, located at Camp Devens; Mrs. Jonathan S. Raymond, Mrs. Pollard's daughter is in Washington, D. C., where Lieutenant Raymond is in the Ordnance Department; and Mrs. Alvin F. Sortwell (nee Miss Elise Pollard) is at Long Island, N. Y., Mr. Sortwell being an ensign on one of the transports. Mr. and Mrs. Sortwell have an estate, "Cedarhurst," at Hamilton, which they will not occupy this season. Mrs. A. W. Pollard is hoping to have some of her family with her at various times during the summer, at Eastern Point.

The Hawthorne Inn will open on June 17th for the season, when some people are expected to arrive.

The John Greenoughs, of New York, are expected at their Eastern Point estate sometime next week, for the season.

Randall Davey, a New York artist of prominence, has leased the Wonson cottage, near Mount Pleasant ave., for the season. Mr. Davey and family are now located at East Gloucester.

Mr. and Mrs. Langdon Gillette, of New York city, have arrived at their summer home on Grape Vine road, Eastern Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Taylor, of Morristown, N. J., were early arrivals at the Eastern Point colony, taking occupancy of their estate on Eastern Point road.

Miss Lotta Crabtree, the well-known actress (retired), who is so fond of East Gloucester, has arrived at the Pilgrim House, Rocky Neck, for the season.

The Gallery-on-the-Moors, Ledge road, East Gloucester, is open on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons for Red Cross work and any new volunteers in making surgical dressings will be welcomed. The sewing for the French wounded is on Fridays. Any information will be given by telephoning 460.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Irvine, of Danbury, Conn., have leased the Wonson studio, formerly occupied by Miss Eleanor Weare Pearson. Mr. Irvine is an artist, who is securing material in this vicinity.

William K. Harcourt, the English actor, has come to Eastern Point for the season, being an annual Hawthorne Inn guest. Mr. Harcourt is registered at the Harbor View for the present.

BASS ROCKS.—The Souther Land association is making improvements from time to time in the Bass Rocks section. The latest development is the erection of a curving stone wall at the circle near Mount Pleasant avenue, Moorland road and Page street, in the vicinity of the Siamese Legation summer headquarters. The golf links will be extended to this point and there will be a decided change in the appearance of this particular locality. The city has leveled the road with the use of gravel and the steam road roller.

A big undertaking on Page street, Bass Rocks, is the laying of the new city water main. A large force of workmen, with the assistance of the steam drill, has removed a great amount of ledge and the pipe has now been laid more than half way along the street. The force of water has been insufficient for some time for the many summer houses in the Page street colony.

Work on the improvement of the Atlantic shore boulevard, taken over by the city of Gloucester, has been temporarily suspended owing to the increasing arrival of the summer residents. Operations will be resumed in the autumn.

The Marblehead-Swampscott Section of North Shore

Notes by KATHERINE GAUSS

SWAMPSCOTT will take on a new lease of life Saturday, when the big New Ocean House and Annex will throw its doors open to guests for the season of 1918. With a bigger advance booking than ever, this popular North Shore hotel has a very busy season in store for it, for it is so near Boston it will afford an ideal place for the tired business man or woman, who may be remaining in town this summer because of war emergencies, to run out to remain over night or for a week-end, and yet so secluded that one may well imagine himself a thousand miles away from a city. Right on the ocean, with its scores of battle-craft in the offing, running back and forth in quest of submarines, guarding the entrance to Boston, it is the safest place in New England for one to spend the hot weather.

One of the notable seafront properties in Swampscott changed hands in the sale, announced a few days ago, of the estate of Charles P. Curtis, of Boston, to Al. A. Rosenbush, of Brookline, who buys for immediate occupancy. The property includes 92,000 square feet of land and is valued at $100,000. It has frontages on Puritan road, Lincoln avenue and a town way leading to the ocean, and has extensive views of the ocean and the nearby shores. The land is so treated as to enable the owner to have beautiful lawns, an abundance of shrubbery, shade trees, formal old-fashioned gardens and also a private sandy bathing beach, which is directly in front of the house. The house itself has twenty-two rooms, five baths, electric elevator, sun parlor, and other modern conveniences. In connection there is a gardener's lodge, combination stable and garage, greenhouses and bathhouses.

Major Samuel J. Mixter, of Fairfield street, Boston, and "Mosterne," Galloupe's Point, Swampscott, is in the army medical reserve corps at Washington, D. C.

Capt. James P. Parker, of Jamaica Plain and Puritan lane, Swampscott, is now stationed at the school of navigation at Harvard university, Cambridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Lew C. Hill, of Commonwealth ave., Boston, who have summered for many years at "The Anchorage," Puritan road, Swampscott, have bought a farm in Winchester and will spend the summer there.

The H. H. Hill family, of Brookline, are occupying "The Anchorage," Puritan road, Swampscott, this season. A garden has been planted and the entire lawn space has been given over to vegetables, on a more extensive scale than last year. Around the plots of vegetables have been planted bright red geraniums.

PHILLIPS-BEACH Neighborhood association is a busy place this season, and Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays finds the entire colony at the Red Cross work in the large rooms of the clubhouse. Saturday night a supper and a dance were enjoyed by a large party of people, and the second dance of the season will occur this week.

Today, Friday, June 14, "Cinderella," will be presented by the Washington school children for the benefit of the French war orphans, at the Phillips Beach Neighborhood association, and an interested audience will no doubt be present. The patronesses were Mrs. Arthur Wynn, Mrs. Arthur Bent, Mrs. Morton Bunting, Mrs. Carrol Brown, Mrs. Charles Conklin, Mrs. Stanley Forbes, Mrs. Henry Holder, Mrs. Arthur Huguley, Mrs. Walker Johnson, Mrs. Charles Price, Mrs. Richards Robins, Mrs. Charles Rolfe and Mrs. Willard Spaulding.

EDITORIAL

HOW AMERICA HAS STEELED herself to the hazard of war!

A year ago when a stray submarine sank a few small vessels off Nantucket, a spasm of terror seized the shore resorts everywhere. Hotel reservations were cancelled and plans for cottages given up, and many removed themselves to the mountains and interior lakes.

This year not one submarine, but a whole flock of them (estimated anywhere from seven to three), has cruised the Atlantic seaboard and to date has sunk over twenty vessels on our coast.

Yet, such a change has come over the American people in a short twelve months that those who have planned their summer here, have taken almost no notice of the submarine menace. The hotel reservations are way ahead of what they were last year—fifty percent in some cases—and almost no cancellations have been made on account of the submarine scare. The real estate dealers say it has slowed up rentals somewhat, but that leases are continuing to come in. One summer resident at Marblehead wrote when sending in his lease: "My wife was a bit timid about the submarine, but I argued her out of it, and we have decided to come down and help 'watch for 'em.'"

There is good reason to believe that our resorts will not be molested. In the first place our shore bottom for three miles out is full of rocky knolls, bars and shoals, and it is dangerous ground for submarines to operate in. Then, the mission of the submarine is to destroy ships, and munitions of war, and they would hardly waste time or valuable ammunition killing a summer boarding house or a cottage that costs less than one of their torpedoes.

EVERYONE HAS BEEN QUOTING or misquoting the references to "what is so rare as a day in June." Yet this year it is true. The North Shore never enjoyed a pleasanter month of June. Added to the fact that the warm weather came early and trees, shrubs and flowering plants started promptly, the birds have been numerous and the wild gardens by the brooks, roadsides and in marshes have been wonderful this year. The season has begun well and fortunate is the man who has been able to adjust his business affairs and begin his summer out of door life on the Shore. Nature seems to be doing all she can to help make us forget the harsh winter that has just passed. Let it be hoped that the pleasant June is but a harbinger of the good days coming throughout the summer.

FREDERICK H. PRINCE, JR., is home, after a successful and highly creditable experience in war service in France. He brings home an honorable discharge and commendation for his efficient service for the nation. When one has done his duty for his country there is a satisfaction that goes with it that cannot be gainsaid or overestimated.

THE GRADUATION EXERCISES of high schools and colleges all over the country this year will be conducted along patriotic lines. Already parents and pupils have "caught the idea" and the simpler dresses worn and the lessened expenditures made at graduation time will be a great relief to parents and more just to the young folk.

THE COLLEGES OF AMERICA are proving their ability to rise to the situation presented by the great war. Despite the fact that most of the colleges have lost from a third to a half of their matriculated members, they have been kept open, the courses of study continued and the work of the colleges maintained as far as possible. Harvard is only typical of the colleges of America. The roll of honor of colleges that have been faithful in the national crisis would be a roll of the colleges of America. The Harvard alumni and Harvard college have been alert; despite the fact that the university has lost thirty-five percent of its students and 193 members of the teaching force, the work continues and over 4000 cadets or naval enlisted men are being trained in Harvard buildings on Harvard land. The laboratories are being used by the government for research work and the best talent of the institution is placed at the disposal of the nation. The Reserve Officers' Training Corps prepares men for the officers' training camps as soon as they reach majority. In Paris, the Harvard alumni maintain a bureau which provides all Harvard men with a home and club at the University Union in the city. The Salle Francaise is a unique opportunity presented to men expecting to go to France to learn the French language. At home a war records office is maintained and the compiling of the permanent records of the services of Harvard men is kept. All of this work has been maintained and cared for with considerable expense. The Alumni association has afforded the alumni an opportunity to meet the expense involved which will amount to less than one-half a hundred thousand dollars this year. It presents a democratic opportunity for many men to assist their Alma Mater materially in war times. What Harvard is doing is creditable and will be heartily and efficiently maintained by the alumni. The cheering factor is that while Harvard is enthusiastically helping, every other college in the land is helping with an equal loyalty and devotion. America may well be proud of her colleges.

THE ARM CHAIR STRATEGISTS do not appear to have very much standing in this great war. One's guess is as good as another's. Only it will be well to remember three things in reading the news: first, that the allies have control of the sea; second, that the allied line has never been broken, and third that there are able generals giving all of their time, strength and energy to the formulation of the plan of victory. They may be depended upon to do their part. We must do our part, not by winning the war on paper, but by a cheerful prosecution of our daily tasks, exercising thrift in purchase of materials and food, and by a loyal support of the government in every possible way. This is morale. Let Foch plan his fight and let the people do their part.

THE PRESIDENT HAS WISELY planned for the finances of the nation to be cared for now instead of next winter. The new plans will delay Congress in Washington, but they are willing servants in this hour of strife.

THE PURCHASES OF LIBERTY BONDS may still be made through your banker. Every Liberty Bond taken out of the market is a contribution to the great cause.

THE NEW HAVEN TANGLE does not seem to unravel. While the stockholders are anxious to have their dividends, it does not quite appear how the property will be able to meet the obligations outstanding. Some criticisms have been made by certain factions that the directors should have brought suit against certain persons because of the alleged mismanagement of the property. The money values involved appear to be about $150,000,000. It is difficult for the average layman or stockholder to rightly appraise the situation. The directors of the road preferred not to bring suit for reasons that they have frankly stated. It is also alleged that the Westchester property guaranty eats up $800,000 per year in interest charges, which if eliminated would afford the road a tidy sum of money to meet the interest charges upon the stock by way of dividends. It is proposed to take action (by a committee of stockholders), to bring suit for the money lost as alleged by mismanagement and to devise ways of being relieved of the Westchester guaranty. The stockholders of the company, are, of course, interested in their dividend interests and desire the success of the company to be attained. Whether the proposed way out suggested by the George P. Drury committee is the way to put the company on its feet again is another question. The financial interests of this great industrial railroad will be watched with interest. Whether the suit will be brought is still problematical and the cancellation of the Westchester guaranties one which will need careful adjudication. The owners of New Haven stock, whether interested in this particular plan or not, are not selling their stock in heavy lots, which indicates that they have faith in the railroad and the management.

THE COMMISSION THAT HAS CHARGE of the coal resources of the country are determined evidently to meet the coal situation with intelligence and speed. But the coöperation of the public will be necessary. Three times within a month a bulletin has been announced that requested the consumers of coal to order the coal they will need for the year and have it shipped as soon as possible so that it will be out of the way in the cellars or storehouse before winter. Again the request has been made and every manufacturer, businessman and householder should make it his first duty to see that the coal supplies for the winter are ordered. This part of the program depends upon the consumers. The consumer who has no coal next winter because of his negligence this summer will not be able to say he was not forewarned.

THE WOMEN OF MANCHESTER who heard Dr. Fritz Talbot's address on Child Welfare on Wednesday evening were very fortunate. The care of children is a scientific matter requiring not only love and superficial care from the parent, but scientific knowledge as well. The mothers were fortunate in having so skilful a man address them upon the care of children. Manchester is meeting her part of the national conservation plan for children with an efficiency that is gratifying.

THE THRIFT STAMPS are now on sale. Everyone who can save a little regularly has, in this way, a fine opportunity of helping the government. The alacrity with which the young people as well as the older people are taking hold of the thrift war stamp plan is gratifying. The war is teaching the nation to save. It is a great pity that it was necessary to have had such a calamity in order to inculcate so wholesome a lesson.

GENERAL FOCH HAS BEEN QUOTED as saying that "a successful army never stays permanently on the defensive." The news is reassuring from him because it means that he has a plan to launch when the hour strikes.

THERE ARE THREE GROUPS of business men who have enjoyed and should continue to enjoy the appreciation of the government and of the people who constitute the government, for the good work done in raising funds for the war purposes. Two of these classes of men are the bond salesmen and the bankers. With a unity that has been marvelous, all of the bondsmen of the country laid aside their particular bond issues and sold Liberty Bonds and nothing else. The bankers have had to bear the brunt, not only of the Liberty Loan campaign, but of every other financial campaign of the war. All over the country banks have placed their banking departments at the service of the government and of contributors, and in many cases the bankers have seen deposits dwindle because many depositors did not heed the admonition sent out by the government, requesting purchases of bonds to be made out of current earnings and not out of savings. Practically all the banks on the North Shore have made contributions in both ways that are creditable and when the war history of funds raised is written these institutions will have and should have the just praise which is due them. The uniform courtesy and efficiency with which the various financial enterprises of the war have been conducted has been a cause of great satisfaction to every thoughtful citizen of the North Shore. Only modesty forbids us from saying more than that the third force in the publicity work of the war finance campaigns has been the generous work of the newspapers and magazines. The space which has been devoted has been expensive, although generously given. The press serves the public and such an opportunity becomes the greater opportunity for patriotic service.

THE WAR ABROAD HAS TAKEN many lives and in consequence many women are in mourning either for husbands or sons. The many persons who are met in the cities of France tend to depress the feelings of everyone. In self-defence the people should be spared as much as possible from the horrors of the war. Yet one cannot tolerate even the idea of doing away with the wearing of mourning entirely. The dead of this war deserve to be honored. Fortunately, someone has been doing some thinking for the people of America and it is hoped that the plan will be adopted heartily and systematically by the people who are mourning the loss of loved ones in the war. It is suggested that a band be worn upon the arm instead of the wearing of full mourning; to quote President Wilson: "I do heartily approve of the action of the Women's committee in executive session, namely, that instead of the usual mourning, a three-inch black band should be worn, upon which a gilt star may be placed, for each member of the family whose life is lost in the service, and that the band should be worn on the left arm. I hope and believe that thoughtful people everywhere will approve of this action and I hope that you will be kind enough to make the suggestion of the committee public with the statement that it has my cordial endorsement." This plan will make it possible for mourners to express their reverence for the men in their homes who have died and prevent the gloom and unnecessary expenditures entailed by the wearing of full mourning. It will be well if the idea be given wide publicity before the older plans shall have taken too deep a hold upon our communities.

THE ECONOMY OF ROAD OIL may be effective upon the side streets, but all of the thoroughfares of the North Shore will be maintained this year with old-time efficiency. The plans for war-time economies have not included the main highways. This is wise and efficient economy.

- 1 cup crumbs (crackers or bread)
- 1 tsp. salt; pepper to taste

Put all this through a chopper, then put into small bread pan lined with strips of salt pork. Bake half an hour. Serve with the following

Sauce:

One cup stock, cup of tomatoes, teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, thicken with rye flour and add a tablespoon of butter; cook hard about five minutes. Strain and add a good tablespoon of chopped water-melon preserve. Pour over beef loaf and serve hot.

THE kitchen at "Waldyn," the Manchester home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Gannett, of Boston, has been a Hoover laboratory ever since the war opened. This winter, while the family was in Boston, the cook, Christin Nelson, took a special course in war cooking. She has been with the family five years, ever since the Gannetts began to keep house. With Mrs. Gannett's wishes she has fallen in completely in regard to Hooverizing and has even gone to the extent of preparing a cook book of her own war-time recipes, which she is going to publish this summer. (Watch for it.)

Her war bread is certainly novel and reaches the maximum in conservation and appearance. A loaf was shown to the BREEZE writer and the method explained, which will appear in her little book. She came from Sweden ten years ago and all her life has liked to cook.

Barley pastry, ways of using left-over meat, puddings, salads, experiments with rice and potato flour are a few of her special points of conservation. A most deceiving salad dressing has been contrived with Wesson and Mazola oils, another with two-thirds Wesson to one-third olive oil. These are all served on the Gannett table and are exhibited with pride by the butler.

Mrs. Gannett discusses all Hoover rules with her help and has always received the heartiest cooperation from them and from the rest of her household. She has always lived up to and a little beyond the new food regulations as they appeared. It is over four months since white, graham or whole wheat flours have been used for any adults in the house.

For the children, white flour is used once a day and dark flour twice. And if there are any sturdier boys than Tommy, aged five and a half, John Draper and the handsome baby, Robert T., 2d, who is just learning to walk, we should like to see them.

Courses at the family table have been cut to two or three, no more, even for guests. No old-time desserts, but more of fruit in its season. Meat is used once a day, but is sometimes omitted entirely. Fish is used frequently. No wheat cereals are used. One-half pound of butter per person is allowed a week. Animal fats have been displaced by oils, peanut oils and coconut oils. New oil combinations are used and soap is also made.

LETTERS AND NEWS FROM OUR BOYS IN THE SERVICE

We are printing this week a letter from a Manchester boy—Harold A. Trafton, of the Signal Corps, now in France, which tells something of the life of the "boys over there" in the early part of their stay in France. The letter is dated May 11, and is as follows:

My dear Mother:

Have left our so-called "rest camp" and after a journey lasting thirty hours arrived at a camp, where we will be assigned definitely to some organization or place. Was more or less of a wreck when I arrived, due to a sleepless night on a freight car, and on account of the last place we were in not being very good for sleeping or eating either.

Here everything is quite comfortable, in fact almost palatial, after what we did have. The beds here are very comfortable, the rooms large and airy, the eats good and the toilet facilities good. We are located in a place surrounded by high walls and trees and grass around the yard, which makes the place quite attractive.

Last night I took a walk through the town, my first since April 11, when we left City College. During that time I have not been out to walk except in formation to go from one place to another, and it sure was a pleasure to wander aimlessly through the curious little winding streets and see the people and stores.

Perhaps I'd better tell you some more about our trip. We were all packed in a dinky little freight car about the size of one of those Manchester buses, only not so comfortable by any means. Had wooden benches, and in addition to our packs, carried our own rations, consisting of canned corned beef, canned tomaatoes, canned beans and jam; also some huge loaves of bread. We had our mess right in the train—picnic fashion,—the old car rolling around like a ship at sea. In addition to the eats above, we stopped and got hot coffee at several points. During the night, those that could, slept. I didn't even attempt it, though I did drowse off once or twice. It sure looked funny to see the boys all sitting up with their heads all hanging together in the middle between the seats.

One of the fellows, a little Jew, got left behind at one place, and fortunately a Red Cross train following picked him up and he joined us at the next stop, when his train came alongside ours. We landed here about noon and after a meal were assigned quarters and ate heartily.

Spent the afternoon with inspections and so forth. Had a formal retreat at 5 p. m., with a band, and all the men paraded. It was very impressive and I never realized how much the "Star Spangled Banner" meant, until I heard it played under the conditions of last night.

As we came back from town last night, the band was just winding up a concert with the national anthem and so we all stood at salute. It was very moving to see all the fellows all the way up the street, as well as several French soldiers. They had just completed that and we started to walk several paces, when they played the Marseillaise and again we came to salute, while the thrills played tag up and down my spine.

They use us like white men here and it sure means a great deal after the haphazard treatment we got at the last camp.

—HAROLD A. TRAFTON, M. S. E., Signal Corps.

WE are printing this week a letter written by Patrick Lansey, a young Irishman, who was on the North Shore last summer, living with his relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McTiernan, 118 Pine st. He enlisted in the Radio service, and was on a ship running between the U. S. and England. He was one of less than a score that survived when the ship he was on was torpedoed and sank in less than four minutes. He is now recuperating at his old home in Ireland. His letter follows:

Killavoggy, Dromahair, County Leitrim, Ire.

"I suppose you will be dilghted to learn that in spite of the Germans' efforts to put me under, I am still safe and now at rest in the 'Old Land.' I intended to write at once after my most remarkable escape, but I got very ill as a result of long exposure and shock, and was therefore unable to act according to my wishes. I trust, nevertheless, that you are both well and enjoying life thoroughly.

"I expect you are anxious to receive some particulars of what happened since I last saw you. So I will try to explain.

"I arrived in London from the States without coming in contact with the enemy, but on the outward trip from London to New York, via Dublin, we came face to face with him twice. The first time we fortunately escaped, for the German fired his torpedo too low, with the result that it passed under our ship and missed. We had a good laugh at 'Bill's' bad shot, but perhaps we laughed too soon. Two days later we again came in contact with the enemy and at 2 a. m., on Friday, December 7th, he fired his fatal torpedo, which struck and sunk our ship in four minutes. We had therefore very little time to save ourselves, but God helped us. I was in bed when we were torpedoed and was put sitting upright by the explosion. I at once realized what had happened, so I jumped out, slipped on my coat, then my lifebelt. I tried to send S. O. S., but the lights went out, which showed me that the engine room was under water and that the engines were out of action. I knew by the angle of the floor that the ship was sinking fast by the stern. Cries for help outside assured me that things were in a serious condition. I made an effort to reach the deck, but the door was wedged in by the explosion; fortunately I got out by another door which was swinging clear.

"Some of the crew made brave attempts to lower the boats; on the other hand some lost control of themselves and rushed about the decks crying for help, while others looked on in calm despair and made no efforts to save themselves. One, a little boy, aged fifteen years, sat on deck crying. He had a lifebelt on, but feared the sea and would rather remain to the end than jump into the water. I tried to reason with him that his only hope was to throw himself overboard, but he clung closer to the deck. Then I tried to push him over, but he held the rails in such a way that it was impossible to move him; just then I was called to assist in lowering a boat, so I was forced to leave the poor little fellow to Providence: I never saw him again. We succeeded in getting our boat into the water, but found that it was still held fast to the ship by a thick rope and could only be disconnected by using a knife, but nobody had the presence of mind to find one for the greater part of the ship was now under water, and might at any moment take the final plunge. The waves splashed higher and higher along the decks until the ship lurched and trembled under their pressure. We made a last effort to clear the rope, but it was all in vain; the rope still held us fast.

"To remain any longer on board would prove fatal so I trusted in Providence and jumped into the sea. I plunged toward the boat and was helped in. In the same way eight others were taken out of the water. Desperate atetmpts were still being made to cut away the rope, but all to no use. Then we heard a fearful crash and our dear old ship went under. Before we could disconnect ourselves the little boat turned over and was drawn under, taking us with it. Only three out of the nine came to the surface and I was one of them, so you see God has been very good to me.

"My brave companions passed away to a land where there is no war and no submarines. I floated about among the wreckage for about two hours and was then picked up by one of the life boats which escaped. I thought my end had come more than once and when I felt myself being tossed about by the merciless waves, I began to settle my account with God for a third time that night.

"The night got darker and darker as the moon went down, and as it disappeared into the sea all my hopes of being saved vanished. A few minutes later I realized that I was not the only one fighting against death, for I could hear feeble cries for help. I also began to cry for help, but no relief came. Then I prayed to God and His Blessed Mother for assistance and just at that moment a raft floated into my hands.

I thanked God and got on top and fell fast asleep. I suppose I became unconscious, for when I came to life again, I found myself in the bottom of a life boat and almost covered in water. I got up in the boat and looked around; then I remembered what happened.

"Six hours later we were picked up by a ship going to Liverpool and after four hours' sailing we arrived and I stepped on shore again as fit and fresh as ever. Many of the crew, with the captain and four officers, were lost; only nineteen were saved. The time was too short to even think of the best way to get away from the ill-fated ship.

"I am suffering from pleurisy on the left lung; also from shock; and have been confined to bed for the past five weeks, but I am now feeling much better and able to move around, but I did not go out yet. I hope to be soon alright again, and off to sea.

—“PATRICK LANSEY.”

THE following communication was received by a North Shore resident from Rome, Italy. The communicant is outside of military circles.

It may not be generally known that the highest honor that can come to a regiment in France is to have its flag decorated. It was in the battle referred to below that Frank Amaral, of Manchester, was killed and in the regiment are the other North Shore boys.

Rome, 5th May, 1918
TELEGRAM FROM FRANCE

"The first American regiment cited in the 'order du jour,' during the fighting of the 10th, 12th and 13th of April, the 104th regiment from Massachusetts, showed the greatest bravery and an admirable spirit of sacrifice. Although it underwent bombardments of an extreme violence and was attacked by important German forces the regiment succeeded, nevertheless, in stopping a dangerous advance and at the point of the bayonet retook the demolished trenches, which it had been necessary to abandon at the moment of the first enemy attack. After the reading of this citation the flag of the regiment was decorated.

"Bravo, bravo, our American friends!"

Hartley Withers, the editor of the Economist, of London, says: "Money spent in war time on things not needed is money given to the enemy."

George W. Wickersham, former Attorney General of the United States, says: "Business as usual means waste as usual."

The North Shore in War Work

ITALIAN WAR RELIEF work opens June 18 at Mrs. George Lee's garage in Beverly Farms. Men, as well as women workers, are urged to come. Work will be done on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, from 9.30 to 1 o'clock. Mrs. Lee is chairman of the organization and Mrs. Hobart E. Warren, secretary-treasurer, to whom all subscriptions may be sent for the purchase of gauze and other necessary materials. Those who will supervise the work for the present are Mrs. Frank P. Frazier, Mrs. Henry P. McKean, Jr., Mrs. Walter J. Mitchell, Mrs. Edwin Mower, Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, Mrs. Oliver Turner and Mrs. Lawrence White.

There will probably be others to add to the list later on.

AT the meeting of the executive committee of the Manchester Red Cross, Monday evening, it was voted that the Girls' Knitting club should become an auxiliary of the Red Cross. This club consists of about twenty-five members and is growing fast. Any girl who would like to become a member may do so by going to Horticultural hall on Tuesday evenings at 8.30, where the weekly meetings are held. The object of the club is to knit as many articles as possible of the kind most in demand from month to month.

Just now the imperative need is socks, and it is hoped that by the end of June the number of pairs turned over to Mrs. Campbell as the club's share of the Manchester quota for June will be of material assistance. The finished articles are brought to the secretary at the meetings on Tuesday evenings, and after spending a pleasant, sociable hour or two together, the wool for the coming week's work is distributed to the members. Two knitting machines have been placed at the disposal of the club and as far as possible it is hoped to knit the legs by machine and add the feet by hand, thereby saving time and also making the part of the sock which gets the most wear more durable.

A separate fund has been donated to supply the wool and needles used by the club so the finances of the local branch will not be depleted to keep up the stock of materials. The only condition imposed upon those wishing to join is that they should be members of the American Red Cross.

The officers are as follows: Honorary president, Mrs. T. B. Gannett; chairman, Miss M. J. Sheridan; secretary, Mlle. M. Streuli; treasurer, Mlle. F. Christen; executive committee, the Misses Anna Johnson, Anna Hedlund, M. J. Sheridan, Marnie Runberg and Mrs. Christen Nilson.

Monitors are the Misses Anna Nilson, Bridget Garrick and Anna Turnberg.

A list of the members will be printed next month.

Manchester's Red Cross executive committee met Monday night in the emergency rooms and among other transactions voted upon the following officers for the surgical dressings work: Mrs. Wm. H. Coolidge, chairman; Mrs. Thomas B. Gannett, instructor; monitors, Miss Annie Lane, Mrs. S. Parker Bremer and Mrs. Boylston A. Beal.

THE BEVERLY FARMS Red Cross workers have been called upon for a large amount of miscellaneous articles, which must be made up and turned in at headquarters on or before June 28th. One item on the list is for 200 pairs of socks, which will give an idea of the work to be done, and will emphasize the need of workers. All women of Beverly Farms and Pride's Crossing must realize the importance of this work and should consider it their patriotic duty to give of their time and efforts to the cause.

ALIEN WOMEN MUST REGISTER

Registration of German women in the United States will begin next Monday, June 17, and will continue to and including Wednesday, June 26, Sunday excepted.

The registration will be under the direction of the police, in cities of 5000 or more, but in towns like Manchester, it will be in charge of the postmaster.

All natives, citizens, denizens or subjects of the German empire or of the Imperial German government, being females of the age of fourteen years and upwards who are within the United States and not actually naturalized as American citizens are required to register as German alien females.

An American woman who marries a foreigner takes the nationality of her husband. The naturalization of a male alien as a citizen of the United States naturalizes as an American citizen the wife, together with their minor children.

HOLD YOUR LIBERTY BONDS

"I earnestly hope that every one who has bought Liberty Bonds will try to keep them for the period of the war, at least. * * * If each and every purchaser keeps his Liberty Bond he helps to protect the credit of the government by maintaining the market for the bonds at par, which is a very helpful thing in war time, and he also renders a more essential service to our soldiers and sailors in the field by practicing those economies and savings which release materials and labor necessary to the support, if not the very life of our army and navy."—
SECRETARY McADOO.

IT has been most interesting as the war has progressed, to observe what habits and customs have been lauded as patriotic, and what other ones have passed unnoticed or even been condemned as unpatriotic.

There was the southern penchant for cornmeal—almost in a night it was raised from a purely local custom into a commendable taste that ought to be copied by the whole country. The woman who did not care for sugar in her tea and coffee and who liked fruit better than a sweet for dessert, suddenly found herself called a loyal Hooverite.

Being a bird lover is about the easiest way imaginable of being a patriot. If you do not already belong to the army that goes birding on spring and summer mornings, join them. Their work is delightful and brings rest from wartime worries and cares. And remember, the birds can do more than we can to save the crops.

The BREEZE has published the birds as seen this spring. Two new and rare ones for this locality were seen in Ipswich last Saturday by one of Manchester's bird students: the bobolink and indigo bird. At the Montserrat station the yellow-throated vireo was seen.

Remember that National War Savings Day is June 28. Pledge yourself on or before that day to save to the utmost of your ability and to buy War Savings Stamps, that there may be more money, labor and materials to back up those who fight and die for you.

You may not be able to fight, but you can save and buy War Savings Stamps.

The rooms will still be open daily from four to five o'clock, when Miss Long, the nurse in charge, will continue the work. Summer residents are continuing to send in cards showing reports of their children.

Frank Pinette and Herbert Lampron, of Somerville, former Manchester boys, figured in a bad accident on the Lynn-Revere Beach boulevard a week ago last Sunday. They were riding on a motor cycle and in order to avoid running into a boy on a bicycle, they ran the machine into the fence by the side of the road. They missed the boy, but severely injured themselves, so that both had to be taken to the hospital with broken bones and bad bruises.

Manchester is to celebrate the Fourth of July this year as usual, but with a little different program than heretofore. It was voted at the annual town meeting in March to appropriate $500, but to leave the matter of celebration with the Board of Selectmen. At their meeting Tuesday evening the board decided to arrange a program for the citizens and their guests to enjoy the day as usual.

There will be nothing on the program for the forenoon, officially, but in the afternoon there will be a patriotic parade, in which the various organizations of the town will be invited to take part, including the State Guard company.

There will be a flag raising on the Common, when a service flag will be hung out in honor of the men who have gone into the country's service. In this connection there will be speech-making and possibly a roll of honor will be read.

A band concert will be given both afternoon and evening by the Salem Cadet Band.

CALLS NEW MINISTER

REV. HERBERT E. LEVOY WILL COME TO BAPTIST CHURCH, MANCHESTER, LAST OF THIS MONTH

The First Baptist church, Manchester, has voted to extend a call to Rev.

REV. HERBERT E. LEVOY

Herbert E. Levoy, of Warner, N. H., to become its pastor to succeed Rev. Albert G. Warner, who left here a few weeks ago for Lowell. Rev. Mr. Levoy preached in Manchester on May 19th and was so well liked that it was decided to have a meeting of the church to vote on extending a call to him.

Mr. Levoy is a native of Star Lake, a small town located in the northern part of central New York state. He attended Cook's seminary, in Rochester, N. Y., before coming to Boston to study at the Garden Bible Training school, from which he entered the Newton Theological seminary. He was ordained to the ministry at the Calvary Baptist church, Salem, and has held pastorates in Southampton, N. H., and in Townsend, Vt., but lately he has been at Warner, N. H.

While attending the Garden Bible Training school he met Miss Ethel Rolfe, the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Rolfe, of Salem. She was also a student there. They were married five years ago, and have a little daughter, nearly two years old.

Mr. Levoy is a young man of pleasing personality and has had excellent success in his present pastorate. He comes to Manchester with the highest recommendations and will commence his work here about the last of this month (June 30th).

MANCHESTER WOMEN WILL MAKE BIG HUSTLE IN WAR SAVINGS STAMP SALE

The campaign for the sale of war savings and thrift stamps will be on in Manchester next week, and will be in charge of a special committee of women, of which Mrs. Allen S. Peabody is chairman.

Manchester's quota is 800 pledges, which means there must be 800 cards signed whereby a person agrees to buy one or more stamps a month for the balance of the year, the first payment to be made when the card is signed. A stamp costs 25 cents, so that the full amount of a pledge for one stamp will be $3, on a basis of 25c a month.

The canvass of the town will be started Monday morning bright and early, and will be kept up all the week until every person in town is seen.

Manchester women are so busy in various war endeavors that the committee hit upon the scheme of having a woman for every street in town, and two for some of the longer streets, so that the entire town can be covered thoroughly in short order.

In addition to this, the postmen are expected to give all the information they can on the campaign, as to cost of stamps, means of obtaining them, etc.

The campaign starts Monday morning. A stamp costs 25c. Have your quarter ready Monday, and do not stop at one quarter, but have as many more as you can afford. The money put into stamps will go to the government and will be one means of those at home doing their bit in a trivial way to take care of the boys on the other side fighting our battles for us. In due time the money will be paid back by the government, with interest. Buy a stamp!

THE CARE OF CHILDRENEMINENT AUTHORITY ON CHILDREN'S DISEASES GIVES TALK TO MAN-CHESTER MOTHERS

Manchester mothers had a rare treat this week, when they listened to the address given by Dr. Fritz Talbot, of Boston, Wednesday evening in Price school hall. Dr. Talbot is an authority on children's diseases. At the close of the talk, Mrs. D. T. Beaton reported on "Baby Week" in Manchester.

Dr. Talbot's talk was of such a nature that adults could apply much of his advice to the safeguarding of their own health, although the talk was mostly in regard to the baby and young child in hot weather.

In speaking of milk, he said that the best milk available is cheap at any price. "That heat makes bacteria, is the reason that the milk should be kept cold. Keep it clean and cold as the good milkman tries to make it," he said. He spoke of how milk is often allowed to stand on the steps after delivered, and then stand a little longer on the kitchen table before being put in the ice-box. He believes in pasteurizing milk, claiming that the best milk pasteurized is a food that works no harm.

His cure for scurvy is orange juice. The best "drug" on the market for the baby is water. He claims wonderful cures for water, its virtues working alike for children and adults in all diseases, if they will only drink of it in abundance.

Overfeeding the baby in hot weather was another point. Incidentally, he said that he cut out meat almost practically in hot weather. A thinning down of the heavier food with more fruits and vegetables and water added was suggested for the menu. He said the tiniest baby must be given two or more drinks of water, and especially in hot weather.

On the clothing question, he said the baby must be kept cool, not dressed warm enough to perspire.

Fresh air, outdoor life, protection from flies and mosquitoes, were also touched upon.

Many other personal cares for the well-being of children were mentioned, which, if followed, would save doctor bills, as he laughingly said was his mission. Water and castor-oil were the only "drugs" he mentioned.

SCHOOL PRINCIPAL WILL LEAVE
MANCHESTER

Oscar F. Raymond, principal of the George A. Priest grammar school, in Manchester, for the past three years, has resigned his fourth re-election and will become supervising principal of the Franklin school in Wakefield. Mr. Raymond came to Manchester from West Newbury. His home is in Brockton, where he graduated from the High school, after which he took the four years' course in the Bridge-water Normal.

Mr. Raymond has made many friends in Manchester during his three years' residence here. He has been active in the Parent-Teacher organization, school athletics and church work. He goes to a schoolbuilding of ten or twelve rooms.

In the fall, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond and two young children will move to Wakefield.

HORTICULTURAL HALL PICTURES

Elsie Ferguson in "The Rise of Jennie Cushing," will be the feature picture at Horticultural hall, Manchester, Saturday afternoon and evening.

On Tuesday evening, Manager Sanborn will put on Fatty Arbuckle in "Moonshine." Pauline Frederick in "The Hungry Heart," and William S. Hart in "The Last Card." This makes one of the best all-star programs yet offered by Mr. Sanborn, and ought to draw a full house.

The Thursday night shows started this week, but will not be given next week on account of the band concert falling on that night. They will continue through the summer, however, on Thursday nights, except on band concert nights.

OBITUARY

NANCY ALLEN BAKER

Mrs. Nancy Allen Baker, one of Manchester's oldest residents, passed away last Sunday at her home on School street, where she had lived all of her married life.

She was the widow of the late Deacon John Baker, whom she married Jan. 1, 1857, and whose death occurred forty years ago. Six children were born into the Baker home. One died in infancy, and three sons, Eben, John and Robert met death through accidents, all within a comparatively short time of each other, within the last fifteen years. Miss Lucy Baker and Lorenzo Baker are living in the Baker homestead. There are thirteen grandchildren, some of whom are in the service. There are also four great grandchildren. Mrs. Baker was a good mother and also a good grandmother, claiming that she renewed her youth in her grandchildren. She was buried Wednesday in the family lot in Union cemetery, the Rev. Clarence Strong Pond, of Beverly Farms, officiating.

Mrs. Baker was of Huguenot ancestry and a descendant of William Allen, first planter in Manchester. She was born Dec. 12, 1835, in Groton, N. H., one of seven children. Her father was Enos Merrill, of Manchester, member of the Capt. Hooper coast guard company, and her mother was Joanna Allen, of Manchester. Her parents resided for a while in Manchester, and in Groton, Nashua and Hopkinton, N. H., the latter place being the permanent home.

It was while living in New Hampshire that the future Mrs. Baker's health failed and she was brought to Manchester to recuperate. Later she married Mr. Baker, one of the charter members of the Baptist church, and with which she united, previously having been a member of the Congregational church in Hopkinton.

Mrs. Baker had been ill about a year. She has done much knitting lately for the Red Cross, and al-

In the State Guard regimental indoor rifle competition, Co. H, of Salem, was awarded first prize, the score being 1884. Co. M, of Rockport, won the second prize, the score being 1843. Co. I, of Manchester, won the third prize, with the same score as Co. M, but the latter won on points.

Nothing definite is yet known concerning the matter of the State Guard going into camp, though it is generally supposed it will be about the 15th of July for five days. The camp is to be staked and laid out by Lieut. Allen and detail from Co. I, of Manchester. The 15th State Guard regiment will be the first to go into camp.

The non-commissioned officers' association will hold an all-day meeting in Hamilton, Sunday. There will be drill in the forenoon, then lunch, and speaking in the afternoon by one of the French officers, and others.

Co. I holds its regular drills at the playgrounds every Monday evening at 7.30, and as it is not dark now until nine o'clock, about an hour and a half is permitted for drilling. Anybody that is interested may attend these drills. They are held out of doors in plain view of everybody.

The monthly report as to the attendance of the fourteen companies of the regiment shows Manchester again occupying a place near the top of the list. Winthrop leads for the month of May, and Manchester follows.

Visitors from Co. G, of Hamilton, were noticed as interested spectators at the drill Monday evening.

Captain Farnum, of Co. F, Beverly, has been appointed major of the 3d Battalion, to take the place of Major Horton, who recently joined the Naval Reserves.

THE UNIFYING INFLUENCE OF THE WAR

"In my own mind I am convinced that not a hundred years of peace could have knitted this nation together as this single year of war has knitted it together, and, better even than that if possible, it is knitting the world together. Look at the picture: In the center of the scene four nations engaged against the world and at every point of vantage showing that they are seeking selfish aggrandizement; and against them twenty-three governments representing the greater part of the population of the world, drawn together into a new sense of community of purpose a new sense of unity of life." (From the President's Red Cross Speech.)

RETENTION OF LIBERTY BONDS STRONGLY URGED

The prices of Liberty Bonds upon the stock market indicate clearly that it is easier to meet financial needs by selling government securities than it is by selling securities of any other class. This very fact should be a strong deterrent influence which should keep people from selling government bonds. It is quite likely that the retention of Liberty Bonds will prove to be a wise financial transaction.

From the standpoint of patriotism, which prompted the original purchase of Liberty Bonds, there can be no excuse whatever for disposing of them. The purchaser of a Liberty Bond makes a definite, specific act of handing over personal funds to the government, thus providing actual money which can be used for military purposes. Each bond is thus transformed into a concrete, positive unit of labor which is expended in beating the enemy. The more bonds bought, the larger the volume of fresh effort contributed.

But the original purchaser of the bonds should keep them and not relinquish them to another person. If they are so relinquished, the bonds passed become instantly another's contribution, instead of that of the original purchaser. Public sentiment is now demanding absolute support of the war, and nothing but actual possession of the bonds, paid in full by the original purchaser, is complete satisfactory evidence of his contribution, made in that form, to American victory.

A HEAVEN OF A TIME

Little Helen had developed the habit to holding her thumb in her mouth, even while eating. The mother had resorted to all sorts of methods to correct the child and finally in desperation said:

"Helen, the first thing you know you will swallow your thumb, and then what will you do?"

"Well, mother, I should hate to swallow it, because I'd have a heaven of a time without it."

"Why, Helen!" said the astonished mother. "Where did you hear an expression like that?"

"Well—well," hesitated the little girl, "I didn't hear it exactly like that, mother, but I thought it would sound better."—Lippincott's.

Its production again in Boston will be an event of the Copley summer season.

The plot of "A Night Off" is one of continuous merriment. Its action centres around a college professor who has written a tragedy. When a strolling player, who comes to town, hears of it, he wants to have it acted by his company at the local theatre, and he persuades the learned professor to allow him to produce it.

SPECIALIZED CLERKS URGENTLY NEEDED

Expert clerical work has a more important place in the government's war organization than most people realize. In the national capital alone the civilian force increased from 30,000 to nearly 80,000 during the first year of our participation in the war. Nineteenth of the new employees are clerks of one kind or another, and fully three-fourths of them are women.

General clerks, that is, those without a specialty, are not difficult to obtain even under present conditions, but the United States Civil Service Commission, charged with the duty of recruiting the civil service to meet war needs, is experiencing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient number of applications for many clerical positions which require special training or experience. There is an urgent call for applicants for the positions of stenographer, typewriter, book-keeper-typewriter, clerk-bookkeeper, cost accountant, accounting and statistical clerk, statistician, clerk qualified in accounting, clerk qualified in business administration, index and catalogue clerk, schedule clerk, passenger-rate clerk, blue-print file clerk, and assistant to business manager.

All of these positions are open to both men and women. Representatives of the Civil Service Commission at the postoffices in all cities are prepared to furnish definite information and application blanks.

THE AMERICAN'S DUTY

The main duty of non-combatant Americans briefly may be stated as follows:

Increase production, economize in consumption, lend your savings to the government, and hold your Liberty Bonds.

National War Savings Day is only one day; our men in the army and navy have their day every day.

A lunch was served aboard one of the ships of the U. S. Shipping Board, and a cruise to Marblehead was then in order. Upon arrival there, the various rowing crews connected with the merchant marine contested for the honor of winners and an enthusiastic boat load of guests cheered from the deck of the larger boat.

AVOIDING THE RUSH HOURS

EVERYONE knows that there are "rush hours" on the trolley and steam railroads.

Very few persons know that there are also "rush hours" in telephone traffic and that calls are likely to be delayed at certain hours of the day owing to an unusual amount of traffic. The busiest period usually is from 9 to 11 A. M.

Traffic congestion on railroads can be remedied to some extent by placing additional trains or cars on the line. Not so with telephone traffic; each message must have its own exclusive "track".

If these messages could have a more even distribution throughout the day, it would assist in eliminating to a great extent the delays which sometimes occur at rush hours.

Urgent business calls cannot be deferred, but there certainly are many business and social calls that can be made outside the congested period.

By avoiding the high spots, 9 to 11 A. M., our patrons will assist us in our efforts to meet the constantly increasing demands on our service caused by war conditions. This applies to toll calls as well as to purely local calls.

America's Playground---Rich in Historic Memories

In Spite of Its Insistent Present
There is Much of Past Remaining

(Excerpts from Book by HILDEGARDE HAWTHORNE)

SUMMER visitors to New England always take much delight in reading up on the various localities. The public libraries on the Shore are well stocked with books pertaining to the beauties of the old historic places on "America's playground."

"Old Seaport Towns of New England" is as charming a title as "The Lure of the Garden," both books written by Hildegard Hawthorne, and each containing much of interest to the North Shore. Both of these are in the Manchester library. In a way the authoress seems a part of us.

Arriving at Salem, to her, was "like moving into a dream," haunted as it is with memories of her kinsman.

"In spite of its insistent present there is so much of the past remaining. Here is an old house full of memories, there a sudden glimpse of bygone fashions and personalities still real and vital. For instance, as Sister (with whom she journeyed through the old towns) and I strolled down some little side street, where the houses must have stood these hundred years, we saw a little, old lady, with a Paisley shawl over her shoulders and a bonnet on her head, unlatch a gate that opened on a tessellated brick walk, and go trotting up to the pilastered front door. She pulled the bell, and another old lady, who could be seen sewing in the front room close to the window, dropped her work, perked her head, on which was a cap, nodded at her caller and got to her feet to admit her.

"It was the merest trifle, yet it was eloquent of other days, and put you in the mood of another century, which is what Salem always does, for me at least."

Like all sightseers (although the place was not new to them) they hunted No. 27 Union street, where Nathaniel Hawthorne was born and lived until he was four. She says: "We made no attempt to enter, though we had been told that the owner, 'seeing who we were,' would probably permit us to do so."

Back of this on Herbert street is the house most connected with Hawthorne, in which he began to write. "So there we stood, looking at the two old houses, now little more than tenements and never fairy palaces. The old lady in the Paisley shawl had brought Hawthorne far closer to us than did these houses, where he had lived. Such are the vagaries of the human temperament."

At the House of the Seven Gables, belonging in Hawthorne's day to their relatives, the Ingersolls, she writes, "time halts here pleasantly, finding things pretty much as they were almost a hundred years ago."

So the Salem chapter goes on, telling of many interesting things and in closing says: "We left Salem at sunset, over the Beverly bridge, vaguely disturbed by the conflicting impressions of her noisy, commercial present, that will not let you be, and by the obstinate power of her past, equally insistent."

The Marblehead chapter is most fascinating. It opens thus: "Marblehead never bothered overmuch with the Puritan conception of the proper way to live. When Salem was as good as good could be, beating the dangerous

Quakers from out her spotless territory, and making new rules and living up to them every day of the week, when Ipswich earned a holy penny by fining the dames who wore silk bonnets, and the other towns about made things as uncomfortable in this world as their ingenuity could compass, in order to make sure of front seats in the world to come, why, Marblehead welcomed dark pirates openly, gave them grog to drink and pigtail tobacco to smoke, and sat in taverns talking over ways and means for smuggling in another cargo of forbidden merchandise.

"The Puritan code insisted that only church members should dispense the law, and since Marblehead had no such folk, it very contentedly settled the matter by dispensing with the law itself."

On through the chapter the reader is taken in vivid pictures of the old town "with its incredibly tangled streets"; through Abbott Hall with its original canvass of the "Spirit of '76"; Burial Hill and the Old Brig, birthplace of Moll Pitcher, famous fortune teller of Lynn; the Lee mansion, and all of the well-known legends of the old place. Especially interesting are the little sketches of Agnes Surriage and the Fountain Inn, of Flood Irson and other real and half legendary folk.

Beverly and the Rocky Coast

This is the title of a very interesting chapter in "Old Seaport Towns of New England." Miss Hawthorne opens this chapter by saying: "I had always known of Beverly as the home of Lucy Larcom, whose delightful book, 'A New England Girlhood,' was one of the joys of my youthful days of leisure. Many a happy hour I had spent pouring over its pages, so simple and so telling, with their clear and tenderly remembered pictures of a life, whose type has now passed out of our experience. Only then I did not realize that it was passed away, and expected sometime to see the old town with its crooked, wandering Main street, said to have been laid out by the wandering cows as the first settlers drove them to pasture at Wenham. To walk in its narrow lanes, real lanes, too narrow for a wagon, green with grass and bowered with trees, and only occasionally encumbered by a house. The Old South should ring its chimes, and the town clock mark the hours for me, as they had for my heroine, and I, too, would pick out names on the mossy slate headstones on Burial Ground.

"Well, Burial Ground and the Old South and The Misery Islands out in the Bay remain, but precious little besides of the Beverly, or the Farms, that Lucy used to know and love. It is a place of summer homes now, with beautiful, wide streets, where motors hasten smoothly, the beginning of that string of fashion and of wealth that stretches magnificently along the rocky coast clear up to Rockport.

"And by the way, anyone who has owned a car, and who has not taken that wonderful run along what used to be called Cape Ann Side, or that other very different, but equally beautiful, El Camino Real of California, has missed the two immense reasons for owning an automobile in America, and something should be done about it."

Again she says: "This was the country of the Puritans, as Cape Cod is of the Pilgrims, and certainly in many ways the Puritans had the best of it. The islands that lie out beyond Beverly, the Miseries being accompanied by House, Rams, and Chubb, break the rough vigour of the Atlantic, and the land here is more fruitful and smiling. Doubtless the Puritans were not consciously guilty of choosing an easier job than their forerunners, and probably they made up for it in other ways. But a good land it is, and Beverly now grows most of the vegetables for Boston's splendid markets, sheltering them under acres of glass from the uncertain spring."

From Beverly the drive was taken to Magnolia. "Through the woods or by the shore the roads are wonderful. We sat back as the great machine ambled along, well within speed limit. Rules are strictly enforced here, as an alert figure on a motor cycle lurking behind a bend in the road or hidden near a hedge gave witness.

"They'll get you in a minute," confessed our host. 'I've tried it once or twice, but not again.'

"You see few houses along the way, because the grounds are flung so magnificently about them that they fairly disappear in acres of landscape gardening. Beautiful lawns, wild gardens, rock gardens, lakes and streams and splendid trees, and the dark grey road winding before you, mile on mile.

"We decided that President Taft had done as well as could be expected when he chose Montserrat for his summer home. There is a pomp to these beautiful places of course; you cannot spend huge sums of money in building a cottage and laying out the grounds around it without borrowing a touch of the palace. But it is a pleasant pomp, concealing itself very successfully in Colonial architecture, in white walls and green shutters, in broad verandas hung with blooming creepers, that appear more the work of nature than of man.

"Pride's and Beverly Farms and the Manchesters are millionaires' row," said our host, "and we are getting more of them every year. If you have a little cottage here than you don't care to occupy through July and August some frantic searcher for a home will willingly pay you ten thousand dollars for the privilege of doing so."

Manchester's Singing beach was visited, after which the way was made to Magnolia. The ride is thus described: "This whole North Shore is the epitome of vacation, and as Sister and I sat in the car we watched it unroll its myriad fascinations. Now we slipped under the arching green of great trees, or beside silver willows. Suddenly we were running close to the racing sea, that tossed white arms above the tawny rock ledges, or fell and sank on a sandy beach. Then the road curved into a stretch of wild, sweet-smelling woodland, and next we caught a glimpse of a white-walled, red-tiled villa in the midst of stately gardens, that might have been brought by the genie of Alladdin's lamp straight from the Mediterranean.

Presently we skirted a charming stretch where golfers struggled or triumphed, and left that behind to come out on the edge of a lovely cove where yachts bobbed at anchor and grey cottages watched them from the shore.

"The ultimate of Puritanism," murmured Sister. "Time must have a sense of humour."

At Magnolia they had luncheon served "on the American plan by a hotel that had evidently determined to beat every other of the species in variety and number of choices. Gargantua might have eaten straight down the list in his lusty youth, but he would have died of the feat. We all had those fine appetite one picks up so easily on the New England coast, but couldn't make more than a mere dent in the menu."

Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe were visited and the Magnolia woods were much admired.

"Colonel Higginson wrote a page or two of praise about these woodways near old Gloucester, answering Hawthorne's complaint that America knew no stiles and footpaths by telling of the miles of them that grew on Cape Ann. Hawthorne was right in general, for most of our walking has to be done on roads, a proof of how few real walkers there are among us; but here, so close to his own Salem, you can walk all day and hardly need to so much as cross a road."

Gloucester and Cape Ann Typically New England

In the chapter on Gloucester the following paragraph sums up the old town the best: "Perhaps because Gloucester is so intensely New England it ends by impressing you as being thoroughly foreign. Take it apart, with its wooden or brick deck-roofed houses, its Wren-spined churches, its hither and yon streets, its trolley line, it is as American as its Yankee skippers. Taken together, its aspect is so quaint and olden and individual that you cannot believe it was made in the U. S. A."

Cape Ann, with its charming little town of Rockport, was next visited. Dogtown—that unique and remarkable spot on Cape Ann was sought.

"In the center of the promontory there is a high plateau, and here, back in Revolutionary days, a number of non-combatants went to live, partly to get safely from the coast, with its shooting Britishers, partly because they were able to do a little farming and a good deal of berry picking. Most of these dwellers in Dogtown were grass or real widows, and each of these women had a dog for companionship and protection. Hence the name of this little settlement."

Visitors to Dogtown may now see some traces of old cellars, walls and chimneys yet remaining. But "it is all crumbling, silent, weed-grown, intensely deserted." Queer and uncanny looking rocks are scattered all over this section of the Cape, once the bed of a glacier, the "Whale's Jaws" being the one most sought by summer friends with kodaks.

Other chapters treat of town's from Portland to Provincetown and beyond.

MRS. BAYARD WARREN (Elizabeth Sears) has turned her library in the Pride's Crossing home into a knitting-room. This occupies an unique place upon the Shore and is the only one known of so far. Mrs. Warren will teach the knitting of socks on machines. The room will be open every day in the week. Five machines are already in the room and more are to come. Mrs. Warren will be assisted by others who will teach knitting. A complete account of the work will be given in about a month.

Last season the library was a Red Cross workroom for surgical dressings. This year the workers in this upper section of Pride's and beyond have decided to work in the Beverly Farms rooms in the public library.

DELICATE AND DELICIOUS WAR BREADS

Four demonstrations will be given by a competent woman on Wednesday afternoons at four o'clock, July 10, 17, 24 and 31, at the residence of Miss Corlies, at Magnolia. No notices will be sent out, but those wishing instruction may apply to Miss Corlies. Course tickets $5.00.

Glimpses Here and There of North Shore Estates

Some Signs of Early Summer Activities Typical of the Times

"PRINCEMERE," the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, on Grape Vine road, Wenham Neck, is one of the most noted places on the Shore. The great stone house sits serenely in the midst of its natural surroundings, where pine trees play the most conspicuous part. Fine old trees are considered choice ornaments and no attempt is made to have a flower garden.

The polo field at "Princemere" has been, in past years, a great gathering place for North Shore devotees of the sport. All is changed now. This is the second year that it is being used as a hayfield in order to produce food for animals.

The vegetable gardens have been greatly increased since the war, and now about six acres are planted in potatoes and the like.

At the entrance to the estate is the charming little white cottage in which Lieut. and Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, Jr. (Elizabeth Harding, of Washington), are living since their recent arrival from France, where Lieut. Prince was in the French aviation service, and Mrs. Prince was engaged in war relief work.

This little cottage is having an extension built to it, which, in time, will make it a commodious, rambling house of much interest. Gables and diamond casement windows add much to it. The whole is over-shadowed by tall trees of much beauty.

It is understood that Mrs. Prince, Sr., planned the new part of the cottage. The interior will be decorated, as so many of the recently made-over old houses are, with parts from ancient houses. These cornices and wainscoting panels, doors and mantels, from old houses will be used as far as possible. Others to complete the finish will be copied from the ancient models. It will be some time yet before the alterations are completed.

"Princemere" will always be associated most strongly with the great war. Here was the home of Norman Prince, "a volunteer who died for the cause he loved," and a member of the "Lafayette Flying Squadron," "those gallant young Americans who led the way their country was later to follow."

He was the younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Prince.

"SPARTIVENTO," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Little, is one of the most attractive places in Beverly Farms, out on the Grape Vine road near the Wenham boundary line. The line suggests the name of the estate, the "parting of the ways" being its interpretation. This handsome stucco house was built last year out of remodelled buildings. Mr. Little is a Boston architect, so, of course, did his own designing.

A new feature added this year and which is in the process of making is an enclosure for vegetables around the gardener's cottage. This is surrounded by a rustic and wire fence combined. Fruit trees will be trained fan-shaped against the fence. Vegetables will grow in long beds around the fence. Gates in keeping lead into the enclosure.

Vegetables are also raised on other parts of the place. An attractive little flower garden is by the house.

This house is noted for its interior finish in old wood-work from ancient Salem mansions.

The estate lies next to that of the Henry Cannon, Clarks, of Boston.

BURGESS POINT, in the Beverly Cove section, is where the home of Mrs. N. W. Rice and Miss Annie Rice is located.

The picture on the front cover this week somewhat shows the big trees and the rolling lawns which are such a feature of the place around the big white house, with its dark green blinds. It has been said that "wealth can build houses, and smooth the soil; it can fill up marshes, and create lakes or artificial rivers; it can gather statues and paintings; but no wealth can buy or build elm trees—the floral glory of New England. Time is the only architect of such structures."

The Rice house is built between the Col. Wm. D. Sohler place and Ober street, which here runs down past the Rice property and ends in the little cove.

Just over this cove is Hospital Point, on which stands the lighthouse, and the homes of the Henry B. Sawyers, Alexander Steinert and the John Barry Ryans (in A. A. Lawrence house).

An unusually large stable is at the Rice entrance. In days gone by many horses were a part of the place.

The California privet that formerly surrounded the little garden is no more. Other hedges and plants were also frozen the past winter. The Japanese privet is green and thrifty, showing that cold cannot hurt it. The garden has a few bright flowers, contrasting with the greenery everywhere.

Two vegetable gardens are on the land nearby that belongs to the Rice estate.

"VILLA CREST," the West Manchester home of the Walter D. Denègre family, of Washington, is noted these days to the passerby as one of the places heavily touched by the severe winter. The hedge of California privet along both sides of the main driveway, set out eighteen years ago, was frozen, and presents a sad sight, although it is thought that some of it may come out in time. The grass on the front lawn and in the courtyard was also badly killed out. This has been replaced and seeded, so that now and especially in the courtyard, the velvety green lawns will continue a feature of the beautiful place. The courtyard is made by the house, garage and coach-house extending around three sides of the open square.

The Denègre house is one of the most ornamental on the Shore. It is of brownish-yellow stucco, low and rambling, red-roofed, with dull green blinds and plenty of vines here and there. A feeling of rest and seclusion seems to haunt the place. Along the front is a large grass terrace, flower-bordered and centered with a fountain. An iron gateway leads from the terrace to the grounds, a similar gateway being also a feature leading into the courtyard in the rear.

A pretty rock garden is constructed in a most natural way all along the jagged hillside near the house. Here, stone steps and little paths lead down to all sorts of surprising little "pockets" of flowers and beds of roses; to the tennis court below and to the goldfish basin, the latter contrived so uniquely and charmingly out of a pool surrounded with boulders. Great evergreen trees are over all,—the real feature of the place seeming to be the house with its lawns, big trees and driveways.

Annual flowers are discarded, and vegetables will be raised, as last year, to feed all the people on the place. War regulations are strictly in operation in every way. An odd bird-house of commodious proportions, barrel-shaped with a thatched roof, stands invitingly near the courtyard. In these wartime worries it has been suggested that the birds can do more than we can to save the crops.

AT "WAYSIDE," the Manchester Cove home of Mr. and Mrs. John Chess Ellsworth, of South Bend, Ind., improvements have been made both last year and this which have added much to the place.

A new wing was added last year adjoining the dining-room. This is a loggia arrangement and provides a large and handsomely proportioned living-room. It has a great fireplace, with an interesting mantel. Another noticeable feature is the windows. From the long and artistic-looking openings on the Summer street side charming sea-views are seen out over Manchester Cove, Kettle Cove and beyond.

This spring the hall, library and dining-room have been remodelled and done over in a different finish. The work has all been done by Mitchell & Sutherland, of Boston.

The Ellsworths purchased the place a few years ago. Dr. Benjamin Tenney, of Boston, was the former owner.

A new feature of the place this year is the little play-house perched upon the hillside near the cottage.

This is a little 8x10 ft. affair, with cypress siding, diamond leaded glass in windows and doors, and painted brown with white trimmings. A tiny porch runs across the front.

The interior finish is in panel effect. Two rooms with connecting door and each with an outside front door, and a window, are the cosy quarters for the young house-keepers.

The new house was built for the little daughters, Phyllis and Alice, aged eight and four years, respectively.

Passersby on University lane, who are curious to see what is in the little house, may peep in at the windows and see the most charming, simple and durable furnishings, consisting of chairs, beds, a desk, tables, dishes and everything that will induce happiness to the large family of dolls and the two little girls.

M. Kehoe, of Magnolia, designed and built the play-house.

Additional ground was added to "Wayside" last summer and now the place extends to the property of Mrs. Robert de Wolfe Sampson. This new ground is in a natural state so far, with the exception of some rhododendrons and other plants placed around among the rocks and trees.

The winter was hard on much of the hedge and shrubbery around the place, which has had to be replanted largely. Nevertheless, the house seems to be a part of the hillside and landscape, as usual, and nestles among the tall trees and greenery in a most attractive way. Built of cream stucco with dark brown trimmings, an extensive porch across the front, vine-covered, and with stone steps leading up from the street in a rambling, rustic fashion, the house always impresses the passerby as belonging peculiarly to the spot.

The garage, which resembles the house in structure, is at the roadside below the hill, at the entrance of University lane, off Summer street.

University lane leads up the hill and through the woods to many attractively situated cottages.

"Sir Walter Scott, speaking of his own great works, said that all he had ever done was to polish the brasses that already were made."

"LITTLE ORCHARD," the Roland C. Lincoln home on Summer street, in the Manchester Cove section, attracts much attention during the season. The little, low house painted yellow with white trimmings and having green blinds and a red roof nestles in a most comfortable and charming manner beside the road and in the midst of the orchard from which it takes its name.

Lilacs, honeysuckle and other shrubs and vines add much to the beauty of the cottage porches and walls, while the yard boasts of apple trees that have seen many years. The most noticeable feature of the place as it is approached from the Manchester village side is the appearance of the two great boulders in the yard jagged, but softened with grapevines and other greenery running over them.

The frost killed some English ivy this past winter, but the beautiful Japanese barberry hedge running along the front of the place is in good condition and will be ready to bear its bright red berries this coming fall, as usual, while many hedges have been frozen out in its vicinity.

The large tract of land across the road belongs to the Lincoln place and it, too, is filled with a number of old apple trees. The Lincoln vegetable garden is on the hillside in this land, also other gardens, where the land is rented out. Peculiarities and trials of a hillside garden are experienced; nevertheless, it is a thrifty looking patch.

The house contains some part of an old house said to be 200 years old, to which the Lincoln home has been added and made as it now is.

"CROW ISLAND," at Kettle Cove, Manchester, has only Frick, the handsome brown and white Scotch collie, to keep the gardener company when he works around the little gardens still maintained on the beautiful grounds. Frick was a puppy when his mistresses, the Misses Amy and Clara Curtis, went to France to do hospital work. Sad to relate, his old friend, Nigger, died this winter. Frick delights to stay on the island and is always ready for the daily trip over to it.

The gardener built a most unique looking cold storage house last fall near the roadside on Summer street, where his house and little greenhouse and gardens are located. The attractive little stone house has a thick marsh-sod roof, in which the sod overlaps like carpet. The gardener intends to thatch it later on, and then it will look more than ever like those in Europe, after which it was modeled.

*God save our noble men,
Send them safe home again,
God save our men.
Chivalrous, glorious,
From work laborious
Send them victorious;
God save our men.*

*Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these: "It might have been!"*

Ah, well! for us all some sweet hope lies Deeply buried from human eyes;

And in the hereafter, angels may Roll the stone from its grave away!

—WHITTIER.

It is not always easy to tell the difference between an ass and an angel; it confused Balaam a good deal. When he thought that it was only an ass that was hindering him on his journey, it turned out to be really the angel of the Lord. And Balaam's is not an uncommon mistake. —ELLEN THORNECROFT FOWLER.

THE gradual absorption by the Government, of all factory facilities which produce corset materials, has caused a scarcity, which controls and greatly reduces the output of corset factories. Labor conditions are similar. Extraordinary wage inducements, from producers of articles for war purposes, are an attraction which many cannot resist. Under these uncertain and entirely unprecedented conditions, corset makers have found it imperative to readjust their prices, from time to time, without giving advance notice—however, we have been informed that on July 1, many corset makers are again to advance their prices, and in view of this fact, we suggest to our patrons to make their purchases now.

RAYMOND BROWN, RESIDENT MANAGER

MR. AND MRS. MALCOLM GRAEME HAUGHTON opened the ball-room of their house on Pride's Hill, Pride's Crossing, on June 4, for a workroom to make surgical dressings for the American Fund for French Wounded. The meetings will be held on Tuesdays from 8.30 to 10.30 o'clock.

At the third meeting, Tuesday of this week, over fifty were present. Men and their wives come together and make this one of the most interesting workrooms on the Shore.

Long tables covered with green oil-cloth fill the room. Everything is arranged to make the work efficient and pleasant to do. The beautiful room has many lights around it which give a rosy glow over the workers.

Mrs. Haughton not only gives this evening to the work, but spends two days in Boston at it, and one morning at the West Manchester workroom, at Mrs. E. S. Grew's.

Miss Lilian Baldwin, of Lakewood, N. J., is visiting friends along the Shore, and is just now the house-guest of Mrs. Rebecca McM. Colfelt. Mrs. Colfelt is moving into the Eric Pape place in Manchester from the Magnolia cottage and will soon be settled for the summer.

Miss Fanny M. Faulkner, of Boston, arrived at her home on Shore road, Magnolia, this Wednesday.

Admiral and Mrs. Spencer A. Wood and daughters have been guests the past week of Mrs. Godfrey L. Cabot, at Beverly Farms.

Emmanuel Episcopal church, Masconomo st., Manchester. Service at half past ten Sunday morning, and Holy Communion at the close. The preacher on Sunday, June 23, will be the Rev. John W. Suter, Jr.

Unitarian church, Masconomo st., Manchester. Service, Sunday, at ten-forty-five a. m. Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, president of the American Unitarian association will preach. Seats free. You are cordially invited.

Newcomers to the Shore please note that St. John's Episcopal church at Beverly Farms is holding the morning service at ten-thirty this summer.

Mrs. William Tudor Gardiner (Margaret Thomas) and little son, who is three weeks old, have come to Pride's Crossing to visit the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Washington B. Thomas, of "Netherfield." The little son has been named Tudor Gardiner. Mr. Gardiner, who is in the 56th Pioneer Infantry at Spartanburg, S. C., returned Wednesday to his duties after a short visit at the Thomas home.

On Wednesday, July 10, at 11 a. m., the Apron Shop will be open on Manchester Common, for a sale to benefit the Visiting Nurse fund, under the auspices of the Manchester Woman's club. Liberal patronage is solicited.

A favorite place for North Shore folk to dine is at Y^e Rogers Manse, Ipswich, Mass. Tel. 85-M. adv.

THE WOMEN'S MUNICIPAL LEAGUE, of Boston, has been asked to give briefly a few food rules in connection with the latest ruling on the meat question recently issued by Mr. Endicott.

Meat—Restrict consumption, including chickens and poultry to 2 pounds per person per week. This includes bones and trimmings.

Wheat—Use as little as possible. Maximum, 6 pounds per person per month.

Sugar—3 pounds per person per month.

Fats—7 ounces cooking fat per person per week.

7 ounces table fat per person per week.

All rules subject to change at a moment's notice.

In connection with the sugar situation—as some of the West Indies sugar is now at the bottom of the sea—it may be of interest to know that pure maple syrup, made from the first spring sap, is for sale, owing to a delayed shipment just received by Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, Pride's Crossing. The proceeds of the sale will be used for the War Food Work being carried on by the League.

John W. Blodgett left Pride's Crossing, Monday, on a business trip to Grand Rapids, Mich. Mrs. Blodgett and daughter, Miss Katherine, are now at the cottage and will soon be joined by John Wood Blodgett, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dana, of Boston, have arrived at their attractive summer home, bought last year, on the hill opposite the park on Beach street, Manchester. Later in the season they expect a visit from their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Mercer, of Doylestown, Pa.

Mrs. Norton Wigglesworth and family have moved on from Milton to Old Neck, Manchester, for the summer. Mr. Wigglesworth is in service abroad. He was one of the first young men from this vicinity, as a member of the famous Rainbow Division, to go overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Goodwin (Juliet B. Higginson), of Dover, who had "Old Brown House," Hamilton, last season, will come on July 5 to the small cottage on the Gordon Abbott estate, "Glass Head," West Manchester.

"Swiftmoor," at Pride's Crossing, will be opened next week when the young children, Jasper, Clarence and Lloyd Moore, will arrive. Mr. and Mrs. Aksel Wichfeld, of Washington, will join their children early in July.

Mrs. E. A. Whipple and son, George N. Whipple, and the former's brother, George E. Noyes, are settled at their attractive cottage, at West Manchester, for the summer.

The Misses Paine, of Boston, arrived last Thursday at their cottage on the Paine estate, Pride's Crossing. They have a pretty, old-time, rustic-looking cottage up among the pines and other trees on the bluffs overlooking the water. The posts around their piazza are the natural pine, denuded of bark and with the spikes and stub-ends of branches still on them.

MRS. HENRY P. KING, of Boston, came to her brother's home, "Sunset Rock," Pride's Crossing, this Wednesday. Her brother, William Stuart Spalding, and Mrs. Spalding and children, are remaining at their place in Santa Barbara, Calif., this summer, and will be there next winter. John T. Spalding is doing Red Cross work in Boston. Mrs. King's son, Henry P., Jr., was at Harvard this year.

The Henry Payne Whitneys, of New York, will arrive at the Sohler cottage in Beverly Cove the first week in July. This is an attractively situated, large, three-story, brown-shingled house, with dark green blinds. A stone entrance on the ground floor attracts attention because of its peculiar convent style. Fine trees are throughout the place. The grounds are entered by the driveway leading to "Dawson Hall." It extends down to the water, with a frontage lying between the Sohler homestead and the beautiful Italian gardens of Dawson Hall, the home of the late Mrs. Robert D. Evans, of Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald De Koven, of New York, who have spent a summer in both Beverly and Manchester, will be in Nahant this summer, guests at the "Edgehill."

The Misses Loring, of Pride's Crossing, have with them Mrs. Charles Greeley Loring (Katherine Page), daughter of Ambassador Page. Mr. Loring is in France.

Mrs. Greely S. Curtis, of Manchester, has three sons engaged in home work of special importance. Her son, Harry, is in New York as captain in the intelligence department of the army. James is also in New York in the legal council department of the Federal Reserve bank. Greely is at Marblehead in aeroplane work, while Frazier is in California seeking his health. His wife, however, is very active in war work out there.

Richard H. Dana, of Boston, came to his Manchester cottage last Saturday. A daughter, Mrs. Henry C. de Rahm (Frances A. Dana), of Coldspring-on-Hudson, N. Y., is also an arrival of the week. Her young sons, Henry L. and David, will be at the Dana home, as usual. The cottage was opened over three weeks ago by the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Hutchinson (Delia F. Dana) and two children, of New York. The Hutchinsons have with them little Shaw Dana, four-year-old son of Edmund Trowbridge Dana, of New York. The little-boy's mother died a few years ago, and part of the year he is cared for by his aunt, Mrs. Hutchinson, and the remainder by another aunt, Mrs. Allston Dana, of White Plains, N. Y. The Hutchinsons left Monday to go to their place at Lake Asquam, N. H., for the summer.

MISS MARGARET CURTIS, who returned last week after nearly two years in Red Cross work, in France, spoke at Horticultural hall, Manchester, Monday afternoon, at four o'clock. She spoke of Dr. Osgood, of Ipswich and Boston, who has been experimenting a great deal along the line of splints. He now has seven splints, which he says will fit any fracture of the body.

Mr. Murphy has charge of the Civilian Aid in Paris, and while giving a talk before some of the workers, he said that he thought the aid which America has given to France will go down in history as one of the greatest features of the war.

The Children's Bureau of this Civilian Aid is located at a town on the frontier of Switzerland. The Germans are continually sending people back from Germany, and of the 12,000 that have passed through there, eighty per cent of them are children.

A beautiful hotel has been fixed up as a hospital, which has 200 beds in it. Here the sick children are taken care of until they are well, and are then sent on to France. Last year 80,000 babies died in France, and of these 40,000 could have been saved. To help some of these an educational campaign has been started and the workers have been going into the schools and teaching the children. But the most extraordinary and most helpful features of this campaign are the exhibitions, where babies are properly treated and the people are shown how to take the right care of them. The people are very interested in this work and one night 7,000 people went to witness one of these exhibitions.

The main work of this Civilian Aid is the replacing of family life. Furniture is very scarce and is very needful. The workers buy this furniture and sell it to the people on the installment plan. The French are very grateful for this and do not want to receive such worthy gifts for nothing, but can't afford to pay much for them.

The work of undertaking the building of new or portable houses for all of the refugees is not tried. This is on account of the lack of labor, materials and transportation. Instead, unfinished buildings are completed and some of the slightly damaged houses are repaired. All of this is done with very little cost.

When the refugees come back to France they usually have to stay over night in Paris. Between eleven and two o'clock one night 4600 people passed through one station. The Civilian Aid provided them with mattresses and blankets. At the gymnasiums and school buildings food was given to them. At one of the stations were some French women, who had had nothing to eat for twenty-four hours. Miss Curtis gave them a word of courage and they responded: "We certainly will have courage and it is the American Red Cross which is helping to give it to us."

Work done at your residence if desired, anywhere from Manchester to Pride's. Children's hair-cutting a specialty. J. Vasconcellos, barber, Central sq., Manchester. Tel. 53-J. adv.

"Green Court," the Hamilton home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Perkins, of Washington, has been opened the past week. This home is delightfully situated in Hamilton on the Miles river road. It is a house in which many prominent Washington people visit each summer.

Mrs. Frances P. Sears, of Brown's Hill, Wenham, has been spending an unusually busy season the past winter, for in addition to looking after her little family, she has been busily engaged in attending a business college in Salem, taking the stenographic course, in order to prepare for possible war work.

MRS. HENRY W. PEABODY, of "Ledgewood," Montserrat, entertained 200 girls Monday at her beautiful home. The guests represented the Business Women's Council of the Y. W. C. A., in Boston, the department growing out of the women's work at the Billy Sunday campaign. Among others present were Miss Elizabeth S. Porter, who has long drilled the Vincent club girls in Boston, and Miss Mary Fay, chairman of the Mass. War Work Council of the Y. W. C. A. Miss Ina Keith arranged the party for Mrs. Peabody.

Dinner was served by Mrs. Peabody, the dinner-guests numbering about 215, at tables set in the house, on the piazza and on the lawn. The girls spent the day in resting and exploring the woods and gardens of the place. A trip was taken to the nearby cottage of Dr. and Mrs. John H. Mason, where Mrs. Mason (Caroline Atwater, the writer) showed them interesting things and told a few stories.

The afternoon closed with a short business meeting, songs and talks out on the rocky hillside in front of the house.

They voted to have rooms at 37½ Beacon st., Boston, open for war work. Miss Marion Clapp, of Brookline, sang "Gypsy Trail," and Miss Tufts sang "My Task," and a lullaby. Mrs. Mason and Mrs. Peabody gave short closing talks, after which Miss Porter proposed three cheers for Mrs. Peabody.

"Hitting the trail" with Billy Sunday songs was enjoyed by the girls as they "hit" the delightful little "trial" from Mrs. Peabody's home down to the station.

Mrs. Peabody closed her little speech with the thought that never before did this old world so need pleasant people, kindly folk who will help in the good causes and thus help knit the world together in a great brotherhood. She stated that the war will not only make the world safe for democracy, but safe for women and children and Christianity, and that even now there are no more people left who say they have nothing to give except to their own. She then briefly summed up the great part the missionaries are playing and have played in the war.

She said that the President had just been asked if all foreign missionaries should be sent to the war zones. He has replied in the negative, Mrs. Peabody explained, saying their work of Christianizing was needed where they were, but to send their missionary nurses to the front.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN N. WILLYS and little daughter, Virginia, of Toledo, Ohio, arrived at "The Rocks," the handsome cottage that was the home of the late Eben D. Jordan, of Boston. The Willys family occupied it last season, also. Mr. Van Wie, father of Mrs. Willys, is with them for the summer.

Little Elise Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Malcolm Thomas (Elizabeth Bliss), of St. Louis, and granddaughter of the I. R. Thomases in Ipswich, was flower girl last Saturday at the wedding of her aunt, Miss Isadora Bliss, of Boston, and Amory S. Carhart. Elise was the flower girl at the recent wedding of her aunt, Miss Elizabeth Thomas, and Benjamin P. Moseley, which took place in Ipswich.

Mrs. Charles S. Bird, Jr. (Julia Appleton), whose wedding to Capt. Bird took place last November in Ipswich, will pass the summer in Peterboro, N. H., at the home of her father-in-law, C. S. Bird, of Walpole.

If you are in Ipswich and are looking for a place to enjoy a cool and refreshing ice-cream, college ice or soda water, meet me at Helen's Cozy Corner Parlor, Central street. adv.

EASTERN POINT.—The most pretentious estates along the East Gloucester sea and harbor coasts are being opened each day now by the owners, and the season will soon be filled with life and activity once more. All the hotels in this vicinity are now open and guests are arriving daily. It is expected that things socially will be mostly in the interests of war relief work. On every hand we hear the desire expressed to aid in the Red Cross work of the local branch. It is understood that the Red Cross has its work better systematized, so that the many smaller units are being dispensed with and workers are assembling in the larger stations. These work places are established with the permission of the Red Cross. The Gallery-on-the-Moors is one place and it is probable that the units of the Hawthorne Inn casino, which is for Eastern Point workers, and the Bass Rocks golf clubhouse, which is a place for the Bass Rocks summer people, will be maintained to aid the Gloucester branch headquarters. In fact, our aid, our assistance tout-a-fait—the Gloucester branch of the American Red Cross. Smaller circles working in a rather independent way are all being willing and patriotic to coöperate and strengthen the stations where work is collected and packed together in an easier way.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob L. Loose, of Kansas City, Mo., have arrived at "Sea Rocks," the attractive Loose estate, completed last season, at Grape Vine Cove. Mr. and Mrs. Loose are glad to be here to enjoy their summer home this season, as last year they were busy the most of the time directing and giving the finishing touches to their new house.

Merrill Hall, Buell and Crosby, proprietors and managers, has opened its doors for the season of 1918. Merrill Hall, formerly Craig cottage, is one of the oldest established resorts on the North Shore. Mrs. Mary E. Merrill conducted Craig cottage for a great many years, with much success, when hotels were few in this vicinity, and upon Mrs. Merrill's retirement, her daughter, Mrs. Buell and the latter's son, Mr. Crosby, continued the hotel business, having it attractively enlarged, under the name of Merrill Hall. The rooms of Merrill Hall are the most finely appointed of any hotel in East Gloucester.

Henry Davis Sleeper, of Boston, with his relatives, is occupying his interesting estate, "Beauport," situated on the point, near the burned Colonial Arms hotel site, Eastern Point. Mr. Sleeper has improved his house during the past winter, making an addition.

An engagement announced the past week, which is of wide interest, is that of Miss Harriette Paige Lawrence, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence, of Boston and Groton, and First Lieut. Richard Cunningham Proctor, Harvard '13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O. Proctor, of Gloucester. Miss Lawrence is a member of the 1916-'17 Sewing Circle and of the Vincent club. Her sisters are Mrs. Richard D. Fay (Hester Lawrence), of Nahant; Mrs. Stephen W. Sabine (Mary Lawrence), of Groton; and Miss Geraldine Lawrence. Miss Lawrence is a great-granddaughter of Abbott Lawrence, who was United States Ambassador to England in the middle of the last century. She is a niece of Francis Peabody, of Milton, who is her mother's brother, and also of Mrs. Francis Peabody, who is her father's sister. Lieut. Proctor is stationed at Camp Devens in the 301st Field Artillery. The marriage will not be solemnized until after the war.

BASS ROCKS.—The bathing beach has been quite extensively used during the past week. The bathhouse has not been used, but bathers have come in goodly numbers daily in their automobiles, from cottages along Bass Rocks and Eastern Point. The temperature of the water has been very good for this season of the year. The big bathhouse is being put into condition for the patrons, and it will be open next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Farmer and their two lovely children, Barbara, nine years, and Malcolm Farmer, Jr., six years, of New Britain, Conn., are located at the Farmer cottage, "Onarock," Page street, erected two seasons ago. Mrs. Joseph McKay, mother of Mrs. Farmer is also at Bass Rocks, with her daughter, Mrs. Farmer and family.

The Jerome H. Remicks, of Detroit, Mich., have arrived at the Dr. Arthur M. Parker estate, "Felsenspring," one of the most attractive at Bass Rocks. Mr. Remick is the well-known music publisher, of New York and Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. William B. Campbell, of Philadelphia, have arrived at their cottage on Beach road, Bass Rocks, for the season.

ROCKPORT.—The prospects for a very successful season along the Rockport and Pigeon Cove shores appear bright. All the smaller hotels and guest houses have opened for the season, with a number of people registered, and cottages have been renting well. It is expected that before the month expires, practically all of the best cottages will have been taken.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Babbitt, of Brookline, have opened "Pineledge," their attractive estate at Land's End, being located in the colony for the season. The house is delightfully situated on the height of the road, leading to Turk's Head Inn, and surrounded by pine trees and grey ledges. The architecture is artistic and the surroundings ideal. THE LITTLE ROOM UNDER THE RAFTERS

The little room under the rafters—

Oh, me! how the swift years have fled
Since my brother and I, in the days long gone by,
Slept there in the low trundle bed.
I remember its furniture homely,
Its rocker, tall backed, and the stand
Painted blue as the sky, and the bureau so high,
And the looking glass small as your hand.

I remember the old-fashioned rose bush,
That bloomed in its pot on the sill
Of the window so low where the vines used to grow,
The hop vines, with leaves like a frill.
I remember the chest in the corner,
And the odorous herbs asway
In the breezes that blew the low window through,
Bearing scents of the flowers and hay.

I remember how often ere sunrise
The robins my slumbers would break,
As they sung just outside the old roof brown and wide,
In the elms which the winds loved to shake;
And how often at morn have I listened,
And while sunset was staining the west,
To the twitterings sweet of the swallow so fleet,
As she built in the eaves her clay nest.

Oh, the years have been many and varied
Since I knew the sweet peace of that home—
Since I knew the rare bliss of a mother's fond kiss!
And at times when alone there will come
A yearning, an infinite longing
For that dear childhood home far away—
For the old friends and best, and a night's peaceful rest
In that room 'neath the rafters so gray.

—Edwin Booth Lowe, in Good Housekeeping.

EDITORIAL

THE WAR TIMES DEMAND SERVICE of every citizen in positions where they can serve efficiently, and when that call comes Americans respond heartily. The maintenance of high standards for the incumbents of our state offices is imperative, and he who serves is patriotically doing his duty for his state and his country. The Essex Senatorial District, which comprises Beverly, Danvers, Marblehead and Salem requires a man of sterling character, undoubted loyalty to our country and a man of experience to meet the large problems incident to the war and its responsibilities. This year the nomination should be made by the city of Beverly, according to an unwritten law relative to the selection of nominees for the senatorship from the district. There is one man who by his residence, ability and experience is the logical candidate this year and his services should be "drafted"—Augustus Peabody Loring, of Pride's Crossing. Mr. Loring is a man of large legal experience, a resident of Beverly with extensive business interests in Boston and elsewhere. Last year he was elected by the 20th Representative district as a member of the Constitutional Convention which is now in session. He was chairman of one of the most important committees and he has proven one of the most valuable members of the convention. The Second Senatorial district will be fortunate in obtaining his services, and the voters of the district should see to it that he is appraised of their desires. Here is a case in which the office seeks the man and Mr. Loring should and probably would respond to a hearty call as a patriotic opportunity and duty if the call to service were made. There is no question about the wishes of the district. His decision is awaited with interest.

THE NORTH SHORE IS THE LAND of flowers and beauty. There are so many beautiful flowers and flowering shrubs that one forgets in the profusion of flowers those who live on city streets, where there are no green spots, not even shade trees to relieve the dull, grey monotony of city life. There are those who lay upon beds of sickness in city hospitals who know how, but have not flowers to enjoy. In truth, if one wishes to understand "all that God and Man is" in a "little flower," one must be sick, laying upon a bed of pain, with the four walls of a sick room imprisoning. Then a solitary flower in a vase will brighten a whole room and cheer a life. The problem is, how shall the abundance on our Shore be economized? The answer is coöperation. All cannot give flowers and take them to the city. A flower mission has been desirable and effective in this most beautiful coöperative philanthropy. A Manchester flower mission, at the Unitarian church on Masconomo street, is only a clearing house for the work being done along the entire Shore. Flowers are picked the night before, placed in water to absorb moisture for the hot ride to the city, and in the morning they are sent to distributing centres in the city. The children have helped and can help still more by collecting wild flowers. The faithful workers in this flower mission enjoy their volunteer work and they will not lack for an abundance of wild flowers—the children will see to that; nor for an abundance of flowers from the Shore gardens—the owners will see to that. When the gardener comes for instruction it will be Christian charity to tell him to keep the mission well supplied.

ONE OF THE GREAT PROBLEMS of the future, after the war has been fought and won, is the restoration and rehabilitation of Belgium and France. The reconstruction must begin from the very sub-soil and upwards. The very earth has been polluted with graves, refuse, and shells, and the soil for agricultural purposes has been thoroughly ruined. Cathedrals may have been ruined, an indication of progress that has been wiped out, but in the destruction of the soil the very sources of living are wiped out. So begins, after the war, the greatest test of man's ingenuity and skill, ever presented. It must be accepted, for the winning of the war will only precede the winning back of the land and the reconstruction of northern France and Belgium. But the land problem is not the only problem; there are "man" problems. This is the "race" problem. With widows everywhere and men lame, halt, blind and suffering from shell shock, it is a task of such proportions as would test the virility of any nation. This must be followed by the reconstruction of the industries and then the re-winning of the world markets for the products of the mills and industries. While these are being re-won the populations must be fed. The governmental departments also must be reconstructed. The war machinery will have to be transformed for peaceful operations and the whole government mechanism geared to the new work. The very languages of the two countries will have had new elements introduced into them. The English language was greatly influenced by the Norman conquest, and when the philological results of this war are stabilized a still greater change will have been wrought on both the French and the English language by the mingling of the troops of the two nations. What a problem! The war will be won, but the problem of reconstruction afterward will be equally gigantic. America, England, Belgium and France will approach the later problem as heroically as the war was accepted.

IT IS REPORTED that two submarines have been accounted for this week. The reports are still to be confirmed and very likely they will be verified. It is altogether fitting, however, to comment again that the allies have not pursued a policy of announcing to the enemy the destruction of their U-boats. That would not be good war policy. The U-boat menace is being held effectually in check and when the time comes for the people to know the history of the conflict with the success over the submarine it will make thrilling reading and be a revelation to us all. Meanwhile, be it remembered that the very submarine will make it impossible for Germany to sustain on the sea any commerce. The allies will win on the land, but even an incomplete victory for the allies there would mean eventual victory because of the supremacy upon the seas. The game of submarine can be played by two parties.

THERE ARE RUMORS concerning the Liberty motor that are quite pleasing. Everyone is on the qui vive to see what the Liberty motor can do. The details and success of the motor have not yet been made public, but there has been enough leak out to make one feel that the motor is a success and when the time comes for full publicity that the public will be agreeably surprised by the records of the new Liberty motor.

THIS YEAR THE FOURTH OF JULY celebrations all over the country will be simplified. Many expenditures for reasons of economy will be eliminated because of war conditions. The day, however, must not be allowed to pass unobserved. This would neither be patriotic, nor in keeping with a just and honorable reverence for the past. The Fourth of July is a great day in the history of the world. It will be a greater one in the future. It is the birthday anniversary, so to speak, of our nation; the anniversary of the establishment of our democracy, a government of the people, for the people and by the people in America. It brings to mind again all that we owe to the brave and loyal fight for freedom and righteousness which our fathers made in 1770-1778. Now, as we enter seriously this world war to win for the nations of Europe what our fathers won for us, the day looms large. This war will be won, must be won, and America must furnish the men to win it. For democracy and human freedom are we fighting. The very principles represented by the Fourth of July and all it means to this country are also back of this great war. America cannot but think carefully and thankfully as July Fourth comes around again. The celebration to the thoughtful this year will be not in idle holiday making, but in sober thinking of what a miracle for world-wide good government was wrought by our forebears in the Revolutionary War. To think, too, that the freedom won for America is to be ushered in when this mortal conflict is over, in Europe. This year France, Italy and Great Britain will observe the day. For the first time the King of Great Britain will participate in an American Fourth of July gathering. How significant! There is only kindness between the old country and the new.

THE INITIAL WORK of the national Child Welfare campaign has been completed and now the more exacting "follow-up work" will begin. There is no question but what the work has proven most valuable because so necessary. The movement is due entirely to the war. The experiences of France and England in the three years of war preceding our entrance demonstrated the need of a careful consideration of the health of the children in order to minimize the losses always accompanying war. The purpose is national in its scope. There is no question but that great good has already been accomplished because, theoretically, at least, every baby in the country, by the plan, has been examined by a specialist and the parents given advice as to its care. It is already a well-known fact that the high death rate among children can be lessened by a plan of education for young mothers. The Child Welfare campaign is the first step in a great national propagandist movement to effect that desirable end. In the campaign there has been a spirit of coöperation which augers well for the future. Physicians have given their services. Trained nurses have responded willingly despite the demands of the times, and volunteer workers have assured, by painstaking, intelligent service, the success of the many and necessary details. Many city stations are not able to report a high "baby standard," but Dr. Hobart E. Warren, in his report, says, that the standard for the North Shore covered by this district is 95%. This speaks well for our beautiful Shore as a residential district and for the care given the children by their mothers.

THE APPEAL MADE by the President for everyone to purchase only necessary articles is impelled by the most thorough understanding of the vital principles underlying the possibilities of success. Thrift must be exercised and the people are falling in line with a spirit of hearty coöperation that is commendable. Patriotism demands thrift and the people are patriotic. There will be thrift,

IT IS INTIMATED that Henry Ford is to run for a high national office in his own home state at the request of President Wilson. States Rights as a doctrine has passed, but States Rights as an interstate courtesy must abide. Massachusetts does not wish to criticize the activities of a sister state. It is probable that Mr. Ford would welcome the call to service and that the Presidential call is a brilliant piece of "advertising." It is a dangerous method of stimulating "copy." Theoretically the President has a perfect right to call for the help of men in the conduct of our national affairs, but there is another principle involved—that of an executive influencing the election of men to a legislative branch of the government. Once in a while such a friendly interest will not be opposed by the people, but the principle involved is a good one which impels an executive to keep his "hands off" the legislative political matters.

THE AUSTRIAN DRIVE HAS FAILED; as was to have been expected. The two million Frenchmen with all Italy with them assured the world that when the new drive was made the allies would be in a position to meet them and to repel them. The allies are now playing a waiting game allowing the enemy to wear himself down. There is no minimizing his strength or his determination; not that, but there is every reason why the war may be better and more easily won with the least loss of men by holding the lines until such time as the allies may take the aggressive. The unity of command assures now that there will be complete coöperation. The brave French and Italians have valiantly done their duty. May America measure up to the responsibilities of the hour!

THE QUIETEST CLASS DAY in years, but the most impressive, may be said of every Commencement in America. The brave young men of 1918 have heavy responsibilities laid upon them that are not being shirked. The army uniforms in the Commencement lines indicate that the hour has not found our men wanting in determination and patriotic devotion. An impressive Class Day because every son of the Alma Mater, of whatever name, knows that he faces a responsibility passing his power of measuring! Determination marked their faces. Firm and high resolves took the place of hilarity and fun-making. The college world has given itself up to the winning of the war.

CONSERVATION IS IN EVIDENCE everywhere. Now the owners of cars are encouraged to conserve gasoline, oil and tires. What patriotic impulses do not impel, increased prices will compel.

Oh power to do! Oh baffled will!

Oh prayer and action! ye are one.

Who may not strive, may yet fulfil

The harder task of standing still,

And good but wished with God is done!

The North Shore in War Work

THE American Fund for French Wounded, which has so many friends along the Shore, learns this month that it shall continue its work as heretofore, and carry on its war relief for hospitals and French refugees, as usual, while coöperating closely with the Red Cross.

This is the substance of a letter from Mrs. Benjamin G. Lathrop, president of the Paris depot of the Fund.

Mrs. George H. Lyman, chairman of the French Wounded workroom in Mrs. E. S. Grew's coach-house in West Manchester, thought that parts of the letter would bear repeating in the BREEZE:

"It has been decided with unanimous decision that the American Fund for French Wounded is of greater value in France just as it stands, an independent organization functioning in its own way and ready at any moment to respond to the call of the America Red Cross in working as an auxiliary when the occasion requires.

"We are unofficially helping the American Red Cross in the 'Home Communication Service,' which has for its noble purpose the searching for the American wounded in the hospitals, we undertaking the responsibility of this service in the French hospitals.

"The character of our emergency work again brings us very near to the American Red Cross, for there are many times when this big organization calls on us for retail activities that we can effect at a moment's notice. It stands to reason where they deal in thousands and thousands of cases, that one cannot walk into their warehouse and respond to a call for a few dozen articles. On the other hand, we can work without any red tape and as the occasion arises, we respond the moment the demand comes, merely recording the gifts we take from the shelves, as one is always able to reach the head of the department within a few seconds. Thus we were of inestimable help in this last crisis, when the refugees poured in by thousands at the Gare du Nord. The Red Cross came nobly to the rescue, but it naturally takes them several days to have their requisitions recorded and in order to gain time and meet the emergency we would buy each day enough for the moment and draw on the Red Cross supplies for big demands."

*"We support the brave,
Shield the destitute,
Save the wounded."*

Motto of Italian War Relief Fund

A LITTLE TABLE, with attractive badges and medals on which is inscribed the above motto, greets the visitor at Mrs. George Lee's garage on Hale street, Beverly Farms. The medals were designed by Mrs. Maynard Ladd, of Manchester, who is now in France.

The little room is all done in the purest white, harmonizing well with the white clad workers who sit at the three large tables.

Mrs. Lee hopes that the North Shore people will be generous and faithful in coming to the workroom, particularly at this time. Since the Austrian drive there will be many more wounded men whom we must help regain their health before returning to the front to win in this glorious and common cause for democracy.

The workroom opened this week and will be open Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays from 9.30 to 1 o'clock. Mrs. Lee and her daughter, Miss Florence Lee, are present each day.

The following were present on Tuesday: Mmes. E. H. Mower, R. T. Paine, 2d, E. L. Kent, Godfrey L. Cabot, J. H. Lancashire, F. P. Sears, H. P. McKean, S. P. Blake, Chas. E. Inches, Jr., John S. Curtis, and the Misses Margaret Rantoul, Edith Rantoul and Marian L. Blake.

On Wednesday, the following: Mmes. Oliver Turner, E. A. Boardman, Henry B. Sawyer, Henry R. Heard, George L. Hamilton, Mrs. Wallace, of Pittsfield, who was the guest of Mrs. Sawyer, and the Misses E. W. Perkins and M. L. Blake.

The first day 874 dressings were made. These included compresses and strips.

Monitors for Tuesday are Mrs. E. H. Mower and Mrs. R. T. Paine, 2d; Wednesday, Mrs. Oliver Turner; Friday, Mrs. W. J. Mitchell and Mrs. Henry Nichols; Saturday, Mrs. H. P. McKean and Mrs. Lawrence White. Mrs. Hobart E. Warren is secretary-treasurer of the North Shore committee. Clothing for refugees should be sent to 292 Boylston street, Boston.

HAMILTON - WENHAM Red Cross work has not been noted in these columns, until this week. The surgical dressings class has recently completed its work for the New England Surgical Dressings committee, and is beginning work for the Red Cross. During the summer months last year, meetings were held in Hamilton Town hall on Wednesday afternoons, and in Wenham Town hall on Monday afternoons. In addition to these central meetings, two small ones were organized in Wenham in July, and conducted, one by Mrs. George Wilson with meetings one afternoon each week in West Wenham chapel, the work being done by a little society called "The West Wenham Willing Workers" (average attendance eight, dressings made 8947). The other class was organized at Wenham Neck and conducted by Mrs. Josiah Gifford. Fifteen meetings were held at her house, one evening each week (average attendance of twelve, dressings made, upwards of 5000). Total number of dressings shipped to the Peter Bent Brigham hospital during the summer months, 44,049.

During the winter the classes met at Hamilton Town hall on Wednesday afternoons, and at the Wenham Tea house on Monday afternoons. In addition to Mrs. Wilson's class, which met one afternoon and evening of each week, another small class was organized and conducted by Miss Torrey, and later by Miss Welch, with meetings each week at the Wenham Tea house (average attendance twelve, dressings made 3000). Still another, organized and conducted by Miss Torrey, with meetings at her house, one evening each week for six weeks (average attendance nine, dressings made 1500).

Mrs. E. B. Cole sent by motor Wenham Neck members of the Monday class, who would have otherwise been unable to attend.

Dressings shipped during the winter 48,153. Largest number of dressings made during any one month 11,486. Smallest number 4108. Total number for the year 92,202. Average per month 7683.

The workrooms are now equipped for Red Cross work and are open in Hamilton Town hall, Wednesdays (all day except between the hours of one and two) and on Friday afternoons. In Wenham Town hall on Mondays (all day except from one till two) and on Thursday afternoons. A special appeal is made for workers. A large attendance will be necessary on these days in order to complete the large quotas given by the Red Cross.

Mrs. Alanson L. Daniels is chairman of surgical dressings; Mrs. Walter H. Seavey, instructor; monitors are Mrs. Charles F. Ayer, Mrs. J. Porter Brown, Mrs. Josiah Gifford and Mrs. Neil Rice. The sewing is in charge of Mrs. Raymond Rodgers; knitting, Mrs. Frank Sears; canning, Mrs. E. B. Cole.

TOPSFIELD is again going to do energetic work in canning, although on a little different plan from last year.

The club that ran so successfully last season feels that it can be more helpful in another way this year. The club has organized on the new plan with the following officers: President, Mrs. James Duncan Phillips; vice-president, Mrs. John S. Lawrence; second vice-president, Mrs. Charles Tainter; treasurer, Mrs. Thomas W. Peirce; secretary, Miss Helen Pon. The following were elected to act with the regular officers as an executive board: Mmes. Frederick Ayer, Jr., Harris Perkins, Charles Grinnell, Arthur H. Gilmore.

A commercial end of the canning will be carried on in Topsfield by Mrs. F. P. Smerage, who was supervisor of the canning last season. She will do her work in the house next to the village postoffice. Mrs. Smerage is also to teach the junior members (new this season) of the canning club. The will range from ten to eighteen years. The club is offering prizes in trift stamps for the best exhibition in the fall. Mrs. Smerage has had much experience and is especially eager for the classes of young folk.

The Topsfield Friendly club has loaned a room, where all sorts of reading on home economics and dietetics will be placed this summer. The Grange has kindly loaned their hall for all meetings of the canning club.

Last year the club was organized as a community canning club and had a membership of over one hundred. The idea was to allow the members the use of the equipment at the cannery, and the help of the supervisor, for all the canning they cared to do there, within certain regulations and rules of the club. Others who did not care to come could send products and have them put up. Among the orders coming in for canned goods put up by the place were many from New York. With an average of four workers, over 3000 jars, 500 pounds of jam and over 1800 glasses of jelly were put up.

This enormous work was done on "Gravelly Brook Farm," the John S. Lawrence estate. Mrs. Lawrence gave the use of a small bungalow, with running water (not found everywhere in Topsfield) and which had a delightful, screened-in veranda.

The work was financially successful, the committee clearing $500 after all bills for equipment and the summer's expenses had been settled in the fall. Money for starting had been loaned by various members of this committee, which included the following: Mmes. J. Duncan Phillips, John Lawrence, Thomas W. Lawrence, Frederick Ayer, Jr., Wilfred Hay and Frank Smith.

At the winter meetings lunches have been taken to eat at noon, after which a demonstration has followed.

Cookery ideas were exchanged during the lunch hour.

Cottage cheese was demonstrated at a recent meeting, the ladies all going home feeling that if cottage cheese would win the war, then cottage cheese they would eat. Portia Smith will be at the next meeting.

The club has studied the situation this spring and has decided that nearly every one prefers to do her canning at home, where she can do a few jars at a time along with other work, and that the cannery is not needed as it was carried on last year.

Monthly meetings and demonstrations will be in order, so that the housewife can carry home the best that is offered in this line.

We have been somewhat lengthy in telling of the Topsfield club. But its start, growth and evolution of thought seem to be of general interest in these days of war-time experiments.

The auxiliary service of the North Shore Garden club began its work in Manchester last Friday at the Red Cross workroom in Horticultural Hall. A large basket of vegetables, mostly lettuce, was brought (each worker brings a few) and afterwards delivered to Beverly hospital by Mrs. E. L. White, of Beverly Farm.

The Manchester Red Cross recently made a plea for sewing machines through our War Work items. There was an immediate response, but more machines are needed.

"The practice of attentive silence might be followed by people in general far more than it is."

North Shore Kitchens in War Time

"A fat kitchen maketh a lean will."
—Benjamin Franklin.

A GARDENER has said that the BREEZE has been throwing lots of bouquets at them this season. But who deserves more praise than the cook? for, as Byron says:

"All human history attests
That happiness for man—the hungry sinner!—
Since Eve ate apples, much depends on dinner."

But the cooks who come and go—their name is legion! Blessed are those who stay.

At Mrs. Francis Adams Lane's house, "Overledge," Manchester Cove, is a cook with a record of thirty years in the family. The Lanes come from St. Louis and the cook, Maggie Moore, is also a native of their state. She was raised on a farm and knows vegetables, meats and fowls as only a girl brought up on a farm can know them. The following bread she makes with much success:

Rye Bread

Three parts rye, one part wheat flour; to four quarts of flour use four table-spoons shortening, five teaspoons salt, two-thirds cup New Orleans molasses, one and one-half cakes Fleischmann's yeast. Make a sponge of a part of the flour after it has been mixed and sifted; dissolve the yeast in half cup of water; make a batter of one and one-half cups of flour and one cup of water; beat well and add yeast; let rise until light and fluffy; have flour, shortening and salt in mixing bowl, put in sponge and enough water to make rather stiff dough; knead until elastic, grease, put back in bowl to rise about two hours, then mold in loaves, let rise one hour and bake one hour in a moderate oven.

White Bread

She says this may be made the same as rye bread, using one part rice flour, one part corn flour, one part potato and barley mixed. Use one-half cup sugar or light Karo syrup.

In the gardens of Mrs. E. S. Grew and Mrs. Lester Leland green peas were picked last week. The gardeners consider it unusually early. Both of them are experts and have long been at these places in West Manchester.

That austere body in the Manchester Town government, known as the field drivers, and the individual known as the pound keeper, were called upon for a performance of their duties one day this week. It seems that a stray lot of four husky pigs wandered from their home, through the woods, to the W. D. Denègre estate at West Manchester, where caretaker Herbert Clark took care of them for several days. After he had tried in vain to find the owner, he reported the matter to the Chief of Police, who in turn notified Chairman Hugh J. Burke, of the field drivers. Mr. Burke procured a wagon, suitably constructed and capable of carrying 1000, and removed the swine to the pound, at the stone crushing plant on Pleasant street, where Pound Keeper Abbott Hoare took charge of matters. The owner was found last evening—Mr. Lawlor at Beverly Farms.

MANCHESTER

Miss Agnes Campbell, of Boston, was in Manchester over the week-end, a guest of Miss Myrtle Lethbridge.

Mrs. Nancy Porter McPherson, one of the remarkable women of Manchester, aged 92 years, is able to walk from her home on Vine street down to the Red Cross workroom in Horticultural hall. There she does her "bit" as well as knitting at home.

John P. Hart, of Derry, N. H., returns today from a short visit with his sister, Mrs. John Scott, of Norwood ave. Mrs. Scott's daughter-in-law, Mrs. George E. Scott, who has been here three weeks, returns Sunday to her home in Loantaka Way, N. J.

Jeffrey S. Reed, the Beach street restaurant keeper, believes in having flowers as well as a war garden. His handsome row of peonies on the restaurant side facing the railroad has been the subject of much favorable comment the past week. His war garden is at the Beach street crossing.

There is urgent need of women to help out in the Red Cross knitting, if Manchester is to meet its quota for the month of June. There are still 175 pairs of socks to be knit, and with the present active workers it is impossible to accomplish this amount of work. Everybody must take hold and with willing hands and hearts enter into the work.

GRADUATION EXERCISES

CLASS OF THIRTEEN RECEIVE DIPLOMAS IN MANCHESTER. DR. MURLIN SPEAKER OF EVENING

GRADUATION exercises for the Story High school, Manchester, were held in Town hall on Wednesday evening at 7.45.

The general scheme of the subjects presented by the class were apropos of the times and reflect much credit upon the English department of the school.

"The Call to Arms," the salutatory "The Call to Arms," the salutatory, was given by Margaret M. Henneberry; an essay, "The World Safe for Democracy," by Ruth A. Herrick, followed; and Helen H. Knight closed with the valedictory, "Democracy Safe for the World."

The address of the evening was given by Dr. L. H. Murlin, president of Boston university. Dr. Murlin is considered one of the best speakers in Boston, and is noted as one who always drives his points home, so that everybody in the audience can get them.

The music was especially fine. The large chorus, composed of the entire school, responded remarkably well to Prof. F. M. Findlay's excellent leadership. Miss Doris M. Knoerr made a most sympathetic accompanist at the piano. Miss Porter also assisted with the violin.

The complete program is the following:

Twelve girls, in their pretty white dresses, composed the class of 1918, who were present. They were Mary Bradley Allen, Marion Carleton Crombie, Pearl Lavinia Conant, Anna

Elizabeth Gillis, Margaret Mary Henneberry, Ruth Armstrong Herrick, Helen Hayden Knight, Annie Elsie McCormack, Florence Lee Morse, Helen Elizabeth Morley, Ruth Edna Spry and Luella Crafts Stanley.

Earl Fulton Height would have been the only boy of the class present, but he finished the work last week and has entered the U. S. Naval academy at Annapolis. He received his diploma. But there are five boys who would have graduated if they had not gone to their country's service. These boys for whom the five stars were placed above the stage with the artistic motto arrangement are Gordon Baker, Joseph B. Dodge, Walter Eicke, Alfred Needham and Royal White.

The class had the following officers: Annie Elsie McCormack, president; Margaret Mary Henneberry, vice-president; Helen Hayden Knight, secretary; Pearl Lavinia Conant, treasurer.

Class colors were blue and gold, used effectively with the motto. The front of the stage was decorated with greenery against which "1918," in mammoth figures composed of white daisies, made a striking appearance. Flags were draped on either side.

Dr. Murlin's Address

Dr. Murlin opened his address by referring in a most happy way to commencement season, the high festival on which everyone can agree, however much they might differ in such things as religion and politics. He said that the best people are at a commencement, because they believe in the highest and best for the boys and girls and the occasion is a manifestation of such belief.

In part he said: "The chief industry of America is education. It ranks as the greatest country in the world for the opportunities it gives to the boys and girls. We believe in democracy and education, and the war will not be all disaster if it leads us to think of those things more seriously. Good will come out of it all."

"We are a country that has spent eighteen hundred millions on its educational plant, in which one-fourth of the population is being reared, at an expense of six hundred million a year. The people in the plant are giving the best of their brains and heart to the running of it."

"Why all this? What is it all for?"

"Some say the purpose of education is to make life easier. This is a mistaken idea. The boy or girl must be willing to work to give back to society an equal value of the time and labor spent by society in giving his or her education."

"Some say education should appeal to the interests only. Generally the 'interests' mean to make it easy in the long run."

"If the educational program is a success it should not be easy, or appeal to interests only, but bring power, culture, self-control and influence. Your diplomas are sentences to a life of hard labor the rest of your days."

"Education in itself does not improve morals. Formerly, all the world turned to Germany as the ideal school master. Germany separated morals from education. So those that think mere education will make them moral are often mistaken, if they separate the two. College education may make one a sharp rascal. There was a certain college teacher who thought that his conduct over week-ends had no connection with his daily business life among his associates. But it did. The reaction of those who trusted him, when such conduct would eventually become known to them, would interfere in every way with the business of the school. The idea is German that you can forget morals. A thoroughly religious man in his education can be a political devil according to Germany's theory. It is natural that Germany should have waded through Belgium, because their education teaches them to do just what is good for Germany."

"I am pleading for the education that takes in the whole life. That is what the schools are for. To develop the good that is in us while giving social grace and social influence for the higher things of life."

"Some say education is to prepare for a profession. I hope no one finds out what he is going to be in life until after he graduates from High school, or even college. He will get a bigger, broader education than if he followed some particular bent and got switched off on that throughout his school life."

"If the vocational departments were just to fit for a business life, I'd say close them up. But they are to make better business people in the broader sense."

"The tendency is now in business, manufacturing and church, to say 'let the teacher do it,' let the teacher prepare the young who come into these centres. It is too expensive for them. Let the public pay the expense."

"But education is not to prepare in a machine-like way the boys and girls for offices. It is right that all should be so trained, but it is not the object of the schools to do it. We are not to sharpen machines."

"I plead for the larger, higher life, —the aim for educational development. If you find out your bent too soon, you get a lopsided education."

The vocational side should fit in, but not be the end.

"We are known by the things we do in life, as the doctor, lawyer, teacher, etc. Don't let the sordid things of life master you. There was a man who owned thousands of acres. He saw only land, dirt and grind in them. They mastered him. We should see God in our possessions and be master of the higher things gained from them. The right kind of education will make us broader and richer than the richest possessions. We will not be slaves to them. We are such little men and women that we are known for the characteristics that go with our professions. All show their earmarks.

"We don't want to be great just because we are a doctor, minister, teacher, etc. Have something back of our technical training. The educational process must put something back of man to make him great. A carpenter is a better workman if he has the big part of education back of him. So is everybody a better workman if he has his proper whole-life development.

"We shall soon see that labor and capital are each wrapped up in the other. If the humble person does not do his duty here the soldier cannot fight in France. What is it all for? Not to create the life of ease, to get into society or to make of us an expert.

"The purpose of education is to develop and bring out the noblest and finest manhood and womanhood. If we get that all the minor ends will take care of themselves. Get the bigger end first, then the vocational."

Dr. Murlin illustrated his points continually with anecdotes of a forceful nature, which brought many a laugh and helped to drive the points home.

MANCHESTER

Masconomo Council, No. 7, Degree of Pocahontas, is the newest lodge to be started in Manchester. It is an auxiliary of the Red Men. The new council was instituted on Wednesday evening by Mrs. Wyman, Great Pocahontas of the Great Council of Massachusetts, assisted by Great Keeper of Records, Miss Sarah Annis.

The degree was exemplified in splendid manner by Mrs. Lillian (Rogers) Flygare, Pocahontas of Utica Council, No. 46, of Gloucester, and staff of twenty members, some 46 taking the obligation.

Following the working of the degrees, the following officers were elected and duly installed by the Great Pocahontas:

Mrs. E. F. Preston, pocahontas; Mrs. Clifford A. Doane, prophetess; Mrs. Chas. E. Bell, winona; Harry S. Tappan, powhatan; Mrs. Levi Harvie, keeper of records; Mrs. Frank H. Crombie, collector of wampum; Mrs. Alice Holmes, keeper of wampum; Mrs. John Babcock, 1st scout; Mrs. D. Elmer Butler, 2d scout; Mrs. Charles Scott, 1st runner; Miss E. A. Lethbridge, 2d runner; Mrs. Walen, Mrs. Harry Slade, Mrs. William Roberts and Mrs. Lucinda Baker, 1st, 2d, 3d and 4th warriors; Mrs. Leonard Andrews, 1st councillor; Mrs. Nellie Smith, 2d councillor; Mrs. George E. Hildreth, guard of teepee; Philip Croteau, guard of forest.

Mrs. George E. Merchant, of Gloucester, is the deputy of the new council.

Definite arrangements as to meeting nights, place of meeting and dues have not yet been decided upon, but the next meeting will be on Wednesday evening, July 17, in Odd Fellows hall. Meetings will probably be held twice a month.

RED MEN ELECT OFFICERS

Conomo Tribe, 149, I. O. R. M., of Manchester, elected officers at their meeting Wednesday evening, for the next six months, as follows:

Byron A. Bullock, sachem; Chas. E. Bell, prophet; J. W. Andrews, senior sagamore; Wm. Roberts, junior sagamore; Chas. E. Bell and Clifford A. Doane, representatives to great council; Frank H. Crombie and Philip Croteau, alternates. The date for the raising up has not yet been decided upon.

PARTY FOR HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES

A farewell party will be given this Friday night in Price school, for all of the Manchester High school pupils and the class that enters next fall. Dancing and games will be in order. The Orpheus club will furnish the music.

The motto arrangement over the stage in Town hall, which was made this year by Charles Peart, as usual, is considered the best one ever made. It has been decided to keep it in the main hall of the High school. The five stars it contains give it an historic interest for the school.

The graduating class arranged the greenery in front of the stage. The figures "1918" were made by Mr. Peart and filled in with daisies by Miss McCormack, class president, who was assisted by her aunt, Miss Theresa D'Entremont.

The class is having no reception this year, simply the farewell party for all.

LECTURE ON CANNING

On Friday afternoon, June 21, at at 3 o'clock, Mr. Farley, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, will lecture on canning at Horticultural hall, Manchester. The public is urgently requested to attend.

ENGLISH AS WRITTEN

IN SHANGHAI, CHINA—MASTERY OF LANGUAGE NOT SO EASY

The difficulties encountered in the mastery of English, is well illustrated by a perusal of the following letter written by a Chinese to Henry F. Merrill. Mr. Merrill has been in China the last four years, since graduating from Technology, as construction engineer of the Standard Oil Co., in Shanghai. On the letter he made the notation: "My survey foreman asking me to get a job in the Standard Oil Co. for his brother." The letter follows:

Joseph H. Carey has received a 15-month appointment as House Officer, on the surgical service at St. Elizabeth's hospital, Boston, beginning last Monday. Mr. Carey will be graduated from Tufts Medical school next January.

Eight young ladies spent the last week-end and holiday enjoying camp life at Geo. E. Willmonton's camp, West Gloucester. In the party were Misses Dora and Alice Rogers and Ethel Andrews, of Manchester; Myrtle Boutwell, of Woburn; Ella Igo, of Arlington; Gladys Flagg, of Saugus; May Conlon, of Somerville; Margaret Brady, of Pride's Crossing.

The Park Commissioners have decided not to have the float placed off Singing Beach this summer owing to the excessive cost of having it towed there and of providing a new rope and corks. The estimate for the work was about $160, which together with about $60 for taking it in in the fall, would be about $220. The board has therefore decided to hitch one rope, with corks, to the buoy off the beach and get along with that this summer. The price of rope is extremely high, and the same is true of cork. Relative to the long float formerly used at Masconomo Park the board has not been able to have this placed in position this year, owing to the fact that the large mushroom anchors (three of them), weighing about 200 pounds each, were carried off by the ice the past winter, and considerable expense would be entailed in finding them. When the harbor is dredged this summer they probably will be found.

FOOD WILL DECIDE THE WAR

Manchester Troop of Boy Scouts

Among Most Active Organizations of the Kind on the North Shore

TROOP I, BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA, MANCHESTER

MANCHESTER-BY - THE - SEA is fortunate in many ways. But the boys of the town are unusually cared for. Through the generosity of one of the summer residents (F. Meredyth Whitehouse, of New York), a house for the Boy Scouts has been a part of the town life the past winter.

Rarely does a town the size of Manchester have such a thoroughly equipped clubhouse for its Scouts.

The house, situated on School st., is arranged with game rooms, library, sitting-room, assembly-room, and kitchen accommodations. All is in simple and durable furnishings suited to boy life. The library is stocked with good magazines and some books, and affords ample opportunity for study and has conveniently arranged places for writing. Good and numerous electric lights are a pleasant feature throughout the clubhouse.

The Boy Scout organization began in Manchester about six years ago. Rev. Albert G. Warner, of the Baptist church, was the originator and continued as Scoutmaster until he was called to a church in Lowell a few weeks ago. Meetings were held in the church vestry until the opening of the house last November.

To say that the house has been appreciated this winter is putting it mildly.

The summer activities are now starting under the management of the new Scoutmaster, Principal John O. Matthews, of the Story High school in Manchester. He will be assisted by Allan P. Dennis, who will be the physical director, drilling the boys in all kinds of Scout training.

A Scout staff is to be a new feature in drill work and general outside usefulness. The boys are going to earn the money for their staffs by distributing the new telephone directories.

According to a request from headquarters that Boy Scouts raise enough to "support themselves and one soldier," the boys have planted a war garden, near the house, of beans, corn and potatoes.

The usual short hikes will be a part of the summer activities.

The organization will now be limited to forty members, and a waiting list has been established. A few are already on the list. The age limit is from twelve to eighteen years. After that a boy ceases to be an active Scout and makes room for the next on the waiting list.

The house will be open daily from three to five and also on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings, when either the Scoutmaster or Mr. Dennis will be in charge. Visitors are always welcome.

War Savings Stamps help provide that "Force, force to the utmost, force without stint or limit, the righteous and triumphant force which shall make right the law of the world," which President Wilson says must be used against our enemies.

MAGNOLIA

The public library will be open every week-day from 9 a. m. to 12 m.

The W. B. Smiths, of Boston, have opened their cottage on Raymond st.

William J. Malanson and family have recently moved into the W. F. Story cottage on Magnolia ave.

Miss Charlotte Huskey, who is the manager for Rees & Rees, has opened the store on Lexington avenue for the season.

Thomas H. Hunt, of Cambridge, was here the first of the week to make arrangements for the opening of the Magnolia Inn and cottages.

Services will be held in the Village church, Sunday, at 10.45 a. m., and 7.30 p. m. The pastor will preach both morning and evening.

Bruce Chapman, who until recently has been in the merchant marine service, has been appointed an ensign in the U. S. navy,—an honor which he well deserves.

Miss Amelia Owen has arrived to resume her duties as matron of the North Shore swimming pool and she is pleasantly located for the season at the J. R. Crispin cottage on Fuller st.

Miss Edwards, the popular music teacher, will give an exhibition of her pupils' work, in the Village church, next Sunday at 3 p. m. Parents and friends of her pupils, and the public generally, are invited.

A breeze was wafted to the BREEZE writer this week. It had a message. It was rather discouraging. It breathed out: "Milady likes to make nothing but surgical dressings. Of course they are badly needed. But think of the poor soldier. You bind up his wounds with your dressings. He is healed. He wants to get up and exercise a little. But he has no pajamas. He has no convalescent robe. His clothes are often shot and cut away. He needs must wind bed-clothing around himself for his promenade."

"Now, milady can make dressings in the workroom to her heart's content. But won't she take home sewing? (Perhaps this is a special plea from workrooms that have no sewing department, but depend upon outside work for their hospital supplies.) Milady can sew in the seclusion of her home."

"Such simple sewing is required. The soldiers and the poor refugee kiddies do not require frills. Come, take home sewing. Milady can do it. Perhaps her maids will help. Perhaps the older girls in the family can help."

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT OF TRAINS ON B. & M.

The summer arrangement of trains on the Boston & Maine goes into effect next Monday, June 24. With the exception of the addition of the Saturday trains, two coming down the Branch and one going up, there is very little change, as far as the Gloucester branch stations are concerned. MY CREED

To live as gently as I can;
To be, no matter where, a man;
To take what comes of good or ill
And cling to faith and honor still;
To do my best, and let that stand
The record of my brain and hand;
And then, should failure come to me
Still work and hope for victory.

To have no secret place wherein
I stoop unseen to shame or sin;
To be the same when I'm alone
As when my every deed is known;
To live undaunted, unafraid
Of any step that I have made;
To be without pretense or sham
Exactly what men think I am.

To leave some simple mark behind
To keep my having lived in mind;
If enmity to aught I show,
To be an honest, generous foe,
To play my little part, nor whine
That greater honors are not mine.
This, I believe, is all I need
For my philosophy and creed.
—From "A Heap o' Livin'," by Edgar A. Guest.

CHILD WELFARE WORK EFFICIENTLY
CAMPAIGNED AT BEVERLY FARMS

The national Child Welfare campaign work was organized under the direction of the Central Beverly committee, in Beverly Farms, by the Beverly Farms Improvement society. The work will be divided up into three departments: the investigations, the measuring clinic and the follow-up clinic.

The census and notifications were made by a team organized for the work. The village was divided into sections, each with a leader, to list the babies and to notify the parents, of the clinics, which were held on two afternoons, Thursday and Saturday.

The measuring clinic was under the direction of Mrs. Hobart E. Warren. Over one hundred babies were examined and Dr. Hobart E. Warren re-

WHAT WILL WIN THE WAR?

The New York Tribune recently said editorially that "Victory is a question of means," and then it went on to list the means. These are:

First, the raw materials.

Second, the plants where raw materials are converted by industrial processes into sinews of war.

Third, the labor to act upon the raw materials.

Fourth, the fighting man power in uniform.

Fifth, transportation.

Labor and materials, in other words are what are necessary to win the war. What then, is the duty of all of us? Obviously what we must do is to produce all that is possible and consume as little as necessary and give the government our utmost financial support.

If we follow this creed, we shall leave for the government more labor and materials for strictly war purposes and we shall accumulate savings for investment in War Savings Stamps. Thus we shall help both the government and ourselves.

COPLEY THEATRE, BOSTON

When "Inside the Lines" was acted at the Copley theatre last winter by the Henry Jewett Players, it proved itself a war play second only in popularity to "The Man Who Stayed at Home." It ran for seven weeks to large audiences, and when it was withdrawn it was placed in its author's hands for revision. It was felt at the time, both by the author and the management, that it could be improved in many details. That revision is now completed, and it will be given in its new version at the Copley theatre next week.

The author of "Inside the Lines" is Earl Derr Biggers, who was for some years a Boston newspaper man, and who wrote that great success, "Seven Keys to Baldpate." Its action takes place at the beginning of the war in the midst of the picturesque surroundings of that great British fortress, the Rock of Gibraltar.

Nothing is fair or good alone.
I thought the sparrow's note from heaven,
Singing at dawn on the alder bough;
I brought him home, in his nest, at even;
He sings the song, but cheers not now,
For I did not bring home the river and sky;
He sang to my ear,—they sang to my eye.
—Emerson.

MAY THERE BE NONE UNENLISTED
ON THAT DAY!

President Wilson, in his statement calling upon every man, woman, and child to pledge themselves on or before June 28 to save constantly and to buy regularly the securities of the government, says, "May there be none unenlisted on that day!"

As the President points out, "This war is one of nations—not of armies—and all of our 100,000,000 people must be economically and industrially adjusted to war conditions if this nation is to play its full part in the conflict."

Our nation, not our army and navy only, is at war. And that means that all of us not actually fighting must do our part.

That part consists in giving the army and the navy all the support of which we are capable. To do that each one of us must first of all be a producer to our maximum ability and a consumer of necessities only, for

Conservation of Time

TIME was never at such a premium and the telephone is the greatest time saver the world has ever known.

Everybody is busy: many are working over-time. The effort to do two days' work in one would surely be a complete failure except for the telephone.

The business man finds speedy communication necessary in these days of fluctuating prices and uncertain delivery. Working at high pressure he often feels the necessity of being in several widely separated places at the same time. He is enabled, in effect, to do this BY A LIBERAL USE OF THE TELEPHONE.

The telephone has become an indispensable aid to merchandising and, in fact, to business of every nature.

Present conditions are indeed unusual, but telephone service is solving many problems and is thus proving to be a very important factor in the conservation of the business energy of the nation.

Conservation by telephone should, therefore, be our watchword.

Glimpses Here and There of North Shore Estates

Some Signs of Early Summer Activities Typical of the Times

VI

THE WILLIAM MADISON WOOD home at Pride's Crossing is one of the most striking looking places on the Shore. With great stateliness it stands on the high cliff between the estates of Mrs. L. M. Sargent and Henry Clay Pierce.

The picture on the front cover this week shows the side of the house facing the water.

The white structure, with its green blinds and seven big, white chimneys with black tops, can be seen far out on the water.

The end piazzas, arranged to be glass-enclosed and screen-enclosed, are balancing features which add much to the appearance of this side of the house.

The front of the house, on the roadside, is centered with a colonnaded entrance similar to the one shown in the cut.

Stone steps lead down the steep embankment, which is edged with much wild shrubbery, to the rocks below. These rocks are a great sight in their jagged and rough bed over which a long pier is built.

To stand on the end of the pier and face landward is to see, not only the Wood place, but the Sargent place equally well. It presents a beautiful view, with its long stone seawall covered with vines, some trailing down on the gray boulders beneath. Past the Sargent place may be seen "Swiftmoor," with its attractive bathhouses showing plainly.

On the other side is the landings belonging to the Pierce, Spaulding and Ayer estates.

A pretty little rose garden back of the house and rhododendrons by the doorway are noticed. The chief charm of the place, however, seems to be the great lawns and unobstructed sea view. Trees are at one side along the service avenue mostly, the other part of the place being noticeably without them.

AT the Lester Leland home in West Manchester, the large section planted in potatoes last year has been planted half in beans and half in potatoes this year. Ripe tomatoes were seen growing around the enclosure last week.

The rock garden, which was begun two years ago, and in which rare rock plants are to be planted, has been practically dropped. One section was completed, but the others are now showing annuals and anything that will grow on the rocks without much care. Labor is scarce, the gardener says. The pyrethrum (Persian daisy) is making a brilliant spot, with its gay flowers, among the gray rocks and greenery.

Only a very small part of the greenhouse was run last winter. Now that it is warm pretty blossoms are making the place bright, almost as usual, to the casual observer.

But vegetables and conservation are uppermost at the Leland home, where potatoes were never raised until last season.

The beautiful home of the Lelands is situated across the road from the gardens and quite close to the water.

The rock garden lies on the hill-top between the house and greenhouse and has delightful little paths to wander around in.

The grounds around the house are always noticeable on account of the trees, the big tennis court and the tail flagstaff.

"Old Tree House" is the name by which the estate is known.

"NETHERFIELD," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Washington B. Thomas, at Pride's Crossing, is looking so beautiful now that as one approaches it from the front under the great, tall pines, it seems as if the winter had been very kind here. These tall pines have great, long, naked trunks topped with the green limbs and resemble nothing so much as sentinels standing guard in front of the house. Oaks and elms form a sort of background to the pines.

Rhododendrons have bloomed as luxuriantly as ever along the avenue on either side of the main doorway.

Back of the house, down in the little formal garden, is, however, where some damage was done to hedges. But the box-bordered beds are still showing mostly green box. This box is only about three inches high and must have been well protected.

The garden looks very pretty now with many peonies showing. It is a little garden centered with a sundial, white seats placed across the four corners, and everything just as formal and lovely as possible.

In the basin of the big fountain are the lilies, pink and white.

The gardens are reached by stone steps from the cliff on which the house stands.

The view from the terrace on the garden side of the house is one of unsurpassed beauty out towards the sea and islands off Beverly Farms and Pride's.

The large vegetable and berry gardens are on Hale streets across the railroad from the house.

MR. AND MRS. W. HARRY BROWN, of Pittsburg, now have one of the most complete swimming pools to be found anywhere, at their place known as "Sunset Hill," Prince street, Beverly Cove. This attractive feature to the home was built last summer by Simpson Bros., of Boston, H. M. Hanson, of Gloucester, planning it with B. C. Clark, of Gloucester, as contractor. The long stucco building, with its tile roof, the whole of the Italian type, nestling under the trees on the embankment by the pretty little cove, is one that will attract all passersby in that secluded section. The main room is 60x30 feet. The pool is of graduated depth, being deep enough at one end for diving. Small rooms with tubs and showers and others for dressing-rooms are at each end of the building. There is also a steam room and hot air room, so that Turkish baths may be taken, as well as salt baths. Marble slab couches are in the bath rooms.

The heating plant for the entire place, including the garage and cottage on the estate, is in the same building as the pool.

"SWIFTMOOR," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Aksel Wichfeld at Pride's Crossing, has always had one of the most perfectly planned Italian gardens in red and green that was on the Shore. Its coloring and design have been very remarkable.

But the box that bordered it was completely frozen out this winter and cannot be replaced until after the war, when box can be shipped from Europe. The ribbons of the garden have been of English ivy trailing on the ground in long strips around the beds. This, too, was frozen, but another plant of a hardier nature is to take its place this summer.

Red flowers will, as usual, be in the beds; but if the garden ever gets back to its former beauty, it seems that it will take years to do it. Men were busily engaged, the other day, digging out the winter's wreckage.

On the terrace some shrubs and hedge were also frozen. This terrace is ever a fascinating, lingering place for visitors at "Swiftmoor." The vases, seats, old well and other ornaments on it and throughout the grounds are Egyptian and were imported by Mrs. Wichfeld's mother, the late Mrs. Edwin C. Swift, of Washington.

To stand on the terrace and look seaward over the great stretch of lawn, great flower garden (practically untouched by the winter) and tennis court beyond, is to see a picture of entrancing beauty.

This great esplanade below the terrace is bordered on either side by a straight path down to the water, and each path is shaded by trees. Not a tree is elsewhere to be seen on the esplanade. Directly under the terrace and planted in thick groups along the ledge are many kinds of trees. These make an attractive sight to look down upon from the height above.

Down by the water is a large bathhouse of pretty design. Much shrubbery is around it.

"SHARKSMOUTH," the home of Mrs. Greely S. Curtis and her daughters, is one of the old and among the first established places of the North Shore summer colony. It is hidden away in the Manchester Cove and Kettle Cove section, with its avenue opening on Summer street.

Fifty years ago the family moved into the handsome and substantially built stone house, which had taken a year in the building. Edward P. Hooper, the present caretaker of the place, took charge about fifty-one years ago. He tells in an interesting manner of the building of the house. Rocks on the place were used. They were split off the sides of the great, gray boulders and only the outside gray portions used. This gives a most harmonious coloring to the house, not always seen in stone houses. No ragged edges are seen and no drill holes either. Brick trimmings and a slate roof add to the attractiveness of the house.

A wide veranda runs around the side of the house facing the water. On this side a grassy terrace runs out to a great drop in the rock formation. To look down the acclivity from the edge of the terrace is to see a fair sight. Far down below is a little plane of marvelous smoothness, surrounded by rocks and trees. At one side of this plane and nearer the house is the hillside garden, a tiny affair of simple beauty.

Two paths lead from the Curtis house,—one down through the garden and on to the beach path, while leading off from this is one over to the home of the Charles Hopkinsons, son-in-law and daughter of Mrs. Curtis.

The water view is very lovely from the Curtis home. The library of the house fronts the water and from the long windows many delightful views are seen. This room and the big hall upstairs has mementos of the war, brought back recently by the daughter, Miss Margaret Curtis, who was doing Red Cross work in France.

The grounds are all in a natural state. A thriving vegetable garden has always been a feature.

An important part of the place is Robin, the shaggy old shepherd dog of an extra fine breed. He is the special property of Miss Isabella Curtis.

Hanging on the outside wall, by the main door of the house, are two heads, one of a moose and one of a buffalo. These have marked the entrance for years, lending a peculiar charm to the wild, wooded place. Beside them now is hung a great shield or bas-relief, representing in color the flags of various nations. This was done by an Italian sculptor in New York for a recent celebration in that city.

The Hopkinson house was built a little over twelve years ago. It is a light stucco building with white trimmings and green blinds. Very artistic porch entrances are on either side of the main doorway in the center of the house on the seaward side. Glorious water views are spread out below the cottage. Down below is the little path skirting the shore, very bold and rocky here.

It is, indeed, a cottage fit for an artist. Mr. Hopkinson is an eminent Boston artist and has lived here twelve years, often spending the entire winter.

Another smaller cottage is on the Curtis estate, sometimes occupied by one of the Curtis sons, but closed at present.

On one side of the place is "Crowhurst," the F. Meredyth Whitehouse estate, and on the other is "Rookwood," the home of the Misses Sturgis, of Boston.

"HARBOR VIEW" is the charmingly located home of Mr. and Mrs. Eben Richards, of New York. The place is far back from Hale street, Pride's Crossing, and is close to the water's edge, along which a little path skirts the upper cliff from the Spaulding estate which lies next, and runs along the Richards place to the William Madison Wood place adjoining.

The house belonging to Mrs. Richards' father, Henry Clay Pierce, also stands on this estate. It is unoccupied.

The trees on the place are trimmed very high giving a fine outlook and presenting an airy appearance to the place. A few flowers are seen here and there around the lawns and along the cliff path. Many large maples are growing near the oblong rose garden.

The garden is surrounded by an evergreen hedge and is filled with nothing but tea roses set out in formal beds.

From the brown-shingled house of the Richards home the little cliff path will lead to the pier and the peculiarly constructed bathhouse of boulders, situated down in the side of the cliff. On top of the bathhouse is a flat cement roof so that it makes a fine place to go on for a lookout. Closely adjoining the bathhouse is the stone wall separating the place from that of the William Madison Woods.

"RYE HILL," the home of Lieutenant and Mrs. Charles K. Cummings at Pride's Crossing, shows sad effects of the past winter. A big stone wall surrounds the place, which has formerly been a thing of beauty with English ivy running all over it, and along the top of the wall has always been a beautiful hedge. Now the hedge is cut down to the ground and the ivy is nearly all gone. Some of the hedge is, however, sprouting out a little from the roots.

This stone wall has an attractive bend in it which protects a great oak tree which stood in the path of the wall. So the wall curved around the tree and left it standing on the roadside.

Inside the grounds much damage from the winter is seen among the hedges and in the charming little garden so completely hidden from the road by a high stone wall.

Just back of the Cummings place is a little path winding up the hill to the home of the Misses Paine, of Boston.

"SUNSET ROCK," at Pride's Crossing, has a "glass garden" that is a desolate waste. The gardener, Ed. F. Kirby, who has been nineteen years on the place, is keeping up the beautiful grounds, but the greenhouses, with their rare and costly plants, are a thing of the past. The flowers were sold for a Red Cross benefit in the early spring.

It was thought that the 150 tons of coal consumed in the place would keep thirty families. Also that men would be released for more useful work in winning the war. The house will not be used for flowers until after the war.

The greenhouse is one of the best constructed types in the country. All parts are iron and stone, the stone-walls being made of stone blasted on the ledge where the structure stands. In all 305 cubic yards of blasting was done before building. It was built fourteen years ago, somewhat later than the Spaulding and King cottages.

About the only sign of the winter is the stone wall near the house, on which the English ivy was killed.

The great stone house, the home of the William S. Spauldings and John T. Spauldings, is one of the most artistic and handsomely constructed places, in which nothing has been left undone, that is to be found anywhere on the Shore.

Built on the edge of a cliff the great structure towers magnificently above the trees and is brought down, structurally speaking, to the water by means of the terraces and descents, some of stone, some of grass.

The terraces are places one never tires of seeing. When standing on the upper stone one it seems like being on a boat. The water is far down below and nothing is visible except the grass terraces with their stone balustrades and a mere line of tree tops, so that the balustrades carry out the idea of a deck railing, and one can imagine he is sailing along in a palatial boat.

Danvers An Interesting Side Trip for North Shore Visitors

NORTH SHORE visitors must not forget Danvers this season. If you are strangers upon the Shore, Danvers will provide a pleasant trip for a summer's day.

Danvers was formerly a part of Salem known as the Farms or Village, until 1752, when it was set off and incorporated as a town.

The thing to see in Danvers is the home of the Historical society, housed in the historic old Page house, built about 1754 by Col. Jeremiah Page. The house has an interesting history.

Long ago there was an unobstructed view of Salem harbor from the house. It was from it that Capt. Page went with his men when the alarm came from Lexington.

"And when, upon that memorable day,
When blood first flowed in fratricidal fray
At Lexington, among the first to meet
And harass Britain's troops to their retreat,
Were Danvers boys; who sixteen miles had run
To strike for freedom; and 'twas bravely done."

(Things have changed much. Now England's soldiers and ours are staunch patriots of a single cause.)

The cart containing the dead from Lexington stopped in front of the old house before they were taken to their various homes.

Our Lucy Larcom, of Beverly fame, has written a poem, "The Gambrel Roof," about an incident that took place in the house. Capt. Page was later made a lieutenant-colonel, and it is said that his wife, Sarah, once had a tea party on the roof of the house, her husband having

Under the loggia arrangement of this terraced side of the house is a little cave with an attractive fountain figure, the basin being filled with young century plants, and formerly the walls of the little grotto had rare wall plants in the rocky crevices.

It all looks beautiful,—the pocket-like floral and box gardens on either side of the terrace, and the many urns and water basins with their usual lilies,—all look the same. The only change is that the greenhouses are empty,—the once great show places of the Shore.

Mrs. Henry P. King (Alice Spaulding) is living in the house this year, while her brother's family, the W. S. Spauldings, are remaining in California through the summer and next winter. Her own beautiful home stands close to the Spaulding home. The house is of stone and brown shingles and has a tower on one end.

Perhaps her flower garden, laid out in terraces on the rocky slope down to the water, is a typical "my lady's garden" spot.

Briefly the plan is as follows: After leaving the large grass terrace fronting the house, a terrace is entered below, by a path and steps from either side. In this is a fountain, seats and tea house, and from here is another path leading down to the water. Banisters are all around the little terrace, over which views of the wild, natural state of the ridge are seen.

The second terrace below, entered by steps, is a charming little garden spot, flanked on one side by a lily pond. Banisters are also around this terrace.

The third terrace is a tiny garden room with a little stone tea table. Banisters, over which are trailing vines, also surround this, the last of the garden terraces.

We hope that Mrs. King will not mind the minuteness with which we have described her garden plan,—a pretty plan worked out skillfully with rocks and flowers.

forbade tea drinking in the house after the tea tax had been put upon the colonists.

The good wife was rather annoyed at this, because they had so much tea on hand that she thought it might as well be used. She said:

"I've asked a friend or two to sup,
And not to offer them a cup
Would be a stingy shame."

To which he replied:

"Wife, I have promised, so must you,
None shall drink tea inside my house,
Your gossips elsewhere must carouse."
The lady curtsied low;
"Husband, your word is law," she said,
But archly turned her well set head
With roguish poise toward this old roof,
Soon as she heard his martial hoof.
Along the highway go.

One day, having invited her friends to the roof of the house, there, it is said, the tea-table was spread, with Dill on hand to superintend affairs. The hostess remarked:

"A goodly prospect as I said,
You here may see before you spread
Upon a house is not within it;
But now we must not waste a minute,
Neighbors, sit down to tea!"

Miss Annie L. Page, granddaughter of Col. Page, and who was the pioneer kindergartner, lived in the house in recent years.

"Oak Knoll," on Summer street, is a place all lovers of Whittier will want to visit. The handsome old place was Whittier's summer home and some of his relatives still live there. Perhaps you may be taken into the house by one of the relatives; but, if you are not that fortunate, you may, at least, wander around through the park-like grounds and see the old-fashioned garden that the poet loved.

On the way out to the Whittier home may be seen the site of the house of John Putnam, the emigrant, with the well still to be seen.

The place is full of memories of the early Putnams. Danvers was the home of Col. Enoch Putnam, Col. Jesse Putnam, and at the corner of Newbury and Maple streets is the birthplace of Gen. Israel Putnam, born in 1718. The house is shown on postcards as are all the historic sights of the old town. Other Putnam houses are throughout the place.

Danvers has memories of witchcraft days. Scattered in among the old-time houses of the 17th century are a few houses with sad tales of that terrible delusion.

On Centre street is the First Church and parsonage (old Salem village parish), where the witchcraft craze broke out in 1692. Also in Danvers is the Rebecca Nurse house, built in 1638, and the monument nearby with witchcraft connections, the house being restored and open to visitors.

Churches and monuments of historic interest make this a profitable village to wander around in and brush up on history, which seems such a live thing here in New England.

Danvers claims the distinction of having been the site of the first shoe factory in the United States, owned by a Zerubbabel Porter. There is also an ancient Putnam shoe factory in the town.

If this little sketch leads any of our visitors this summer to while away a few hours in Danvers, it will have fulfilled its mission. It was not meant to be anything but a little bait to draw one over to the charming old town and let the visitor explore it for himself.

Gardens—For Flowers and Vegetables

Everyone on North Shore Actively Interested
This Year—They Afford a Certain Recreation

WAR-TIME extravagance in flowers is far from the purpose of this article. It is rather to prepare the way for the vegetable garden story that follows next week. However, some of our most patriotic people do not object to flowers if just a few easily cultivated ones can help brighten up and cheer the sad old world.

"There has ever been a halo of romance around 'My Lady's Garden.'

"Since the ancient days of chivalry, when brave knights and fair ladies paced in 'pleached wayes' amidst gilliflowers and rosemary throughout the centuries in which parterres were surrounded by ancient yews cut into many quaint devices—until the present time, women have not failed to love flowers, and to tend and cherish them as they knew how.

"The knowledge of horticulture has increased during the last quarter of a century with great rapidity and with it the interest which we all now take in our gardens."

So runs a few lines from "In My Lady's Garden," a book given to the Manchester public library by Miss Elizabeth D. Boardman, of "Hill Top," West Manchester.

Miss Boardman also gave "The Lure of the Garden," by Hildegard Hawthorne. From it we take the following:

"In spite of its material of green leaf and fragrant flower, a garden is the work of man. It requires human care, human companionship, human love; and yields a return that is peculiarly mingled of nature and art, bestowing upon any who enter its exquisite precincts, something of the sanitary, wholesomeness and simplicity of the world of out-of-doors, together with the better portion of the grace, interest, and social charm of the world within the house.

"There are few who do not feel at home in a garden. The roughest or most cultured, the simplest or the world-weary, the child, the woman of fashion, the energetic or the lazy, the materialist on his clod of earth, and the poet in his rainbow maze—all of us, saint and sinner, sad or gay, enter a garden as though it were our own, unoppressed by its most princely magnificence, touched and attracted by its simplest form.

"The lure of the garden! It has drawn us from the beginning of history, and draws us now.

"Since gardens and mankind have always thus belonged together, it is no more than natural to suppose that they will continue in delicious proximity as long as eternity itself. And it is the sincere conviction of most that not only mansions, but gardens, are prepared for them in their future existence.

"Like many good things, gardens improve with age.

"Let nobody misprize a garden, or think it is not worth the trouble it costs. For this is part of the enchantment, that the very trouble becomes delectable, the pulling of weeds as keen a pleasure as cutting roses, the planning of a new bed, the setting of a sundial, or the trimming of a hedge, pleasures so intense that the mind turns to them from the dominion of the city desk or the giddy center of the social whirl with a longing not to be quelled.

"Indeed it might not be amiss to inscribe over every garden the legend: 'Whosoever enters here, let him beware. For he shall never more escape, nor be free of my spell.'" (This legend is inscribed over the main entrance to the beautiful Italian garden at "Dawson Hall," the Beverly Cove home of the late Mrs. Robert D. Evans, and now the home of the Misses Hunt, of Boston).

Miss Boardman has also given to the library that interesting book, "Garden Colour," by Margaret H. Waterfield.

The North Shore has always been noted for its charming gardens and garden-lovers.

In these days of greed and covetousness which have culminated in the great war perhaps the sweet lesson of the flowers is needed as much as of yore. While space cannot be given to them, often, and labor is scarce, yet they afford a certain recreation or pleasure, needed almost as much in war times as in peace times.

Someone has written: "What a splendid peace-head-quarters is a garden! In this time of war we are all heartily recommended to turn our attention to a garden. Could anything be so delightfully impersonal? Even your enemy approves of your garden."

The North Shore Garden club is making history this season. Notwithstanding the fact that the members are all heartily endorsing and following closely the vegetable campaign they thought it best to hold the club together this year with the usual meetings, occurring every two weeks, until the middle of September.

At a meeting of the members during the winter it was considered feasible to organize the young girls of the Shore into a band of farmerettes to raise vegetables. They are doing this on the Dudley Pickman estate at Beverly Cove, and are supplying the Beverly hospital with their products. This is known as the "Service Auxiliary" to the North Shore Garden club.

As a help to the girls, Mrs. E. Lawrence White of Beverly Farms has worked out a scheme of gathering vegetables in small quantities from every worker at the Red Cross workroom along the Shore and has pledged herself as responsible for their delivery at the Beverly hospital the same day as brought to the workroom.

At the regular meetings of the Garden club proper the hostess reads a paper of about ten minutes' duration on a subject relating to gardens or horticulture. The president always has the subject of the paper submitted to her at least a fortnight before it is read. The object of the club is to promote interest in gardens, their design, management, and culture, and to exchange experiences that shall be of mutual benefit to its members.

The club is limited to thirty members and only those interested practically in their own garden are eligible to membership.

That much interest is taken in food conservation by the members is shown by the fact that they have asked Food Administrator Henry B. Endicott, of Beverly Cove, to supply them with food bulletins for each week, so that they will know exactly what is required of their kitchens.

At a recent meeting the address was read that the Archbishop of York gave to a society of women in Philadelphia on "War Work."

The club's work for the summer is not, of course, fully outlined as yet. In regard to the farmerettes, the club's "Service Auxiliary," they are doing such excellent work that it will be the subject of a future sketch.

The officers of the North Shore Garden club are Mrs. F. B. Crowninshield, president; Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby, vice-president; Mrs. Lester Leland, secretary; Mrs. Charles Hopkinson, recording secretary; Mrs. William Moore, treasurer.

The members include Mmes. Gordon Abbott, Boylston Beal, George Cabot, John Caswell, H. J. Coolidge, R. T. Crane, Jr., Eugene Crockett, S. V. R. Crosby, F. B. Crowninshield, John S. Curtis, Lincoln Davis, Walter Denégre, Philip Dexter, W. S. Fitz, Charles Hopkinson, Gardiner M. Lane, Lester Leland, W. C. Loring, Wm. Moore, F. S. Moseley, E. P. Motley, Thomas Motley, Jr., Robert Peabody, Dudley Pickman, Q. A. Shaw, Jr., Paul Snelling, H. P. King, and the Misses Mary L. Davison and I. de R. Hawley. Many of these ladies have some of the most beautiful and attractive gardens on the Shore.

The Shore is full of gardens. Everybody seeming to love gardens must have settled here.

A North Shore gardener said the other day: "T'would be a dreary world if there were no flowers in it."

Horticultural Hall in Manchester

One of Most Active Centres for War Work and Other Interests Along the North Shore

MANCHESTER-BY-THE-SEA is receiving many pleasant compliments from people who see and appreciate some of its institutions.

The Boy Scout clubhouse is considered a most unusual feature, while next door to it on School street is Manchester's Food Centre. Mr. Farley, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, who lectured last Saturday in Horticultural hall, had many warm words of praise for the Centre, the place that is doing such an important work in the community in these days of food conservation.

But something else has been thought of this week as having special interest to all the friends of Manchester.

This is our beautiful Horticultural hall standing at the foot of the hill opposite the railroad station on Summer street.

While dedicated only last season—Aug. 30, 1917—yet the activities of the community have so centered around it that it seems already to be one of the town's most important necessities; in fact the whole North Shore district is benefited by its many uses.

Here have been the "movies" of a high grade, which opened last fall and have given pleasure at a low cost to many people this winter. Of course, the summer friends will show their appreciation of Manchester's "movies" this season.

The Arbella concerts were given in the hall the past winter; also lectures, other recitals and special moving pictures.

One of the largest food conservation meetings on the Shore was held in it last fall, when a government film depicting Hoover ideas was shown.

In the basement the Food Conservation show was held, also that of the Horticultural society.

The excellent course of lectures provided by the North Shore Horticultural society has just closed. These were held in the basement, except the last one, when Mr. Farley spoke in the main room.

The basement is occupied for the season, and the women who wished to hear Mr. Farley talk had to leave their work and go upstairs.

The basement is the workroom for the Manchester Red Cross. It provides a most comfortable workroom in every respect. It is large, light, airy and has ample facilities for doing the work of the Red Cross. Surgical dressings are made on Wednesday and Friday mornings and Thursday afternoons, while sewing is done on Wednesday and Friday afternoons.

A class in surgical dressings meets at 7.30 on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, with an efficient instructor in charge.

The Girls' Knitting club, a new organization, meets on Tuesday evenings.

The Auxiliary of the North Shore Garden club has its basket ready for vegetables on Wednesday and Fridays, when Red Cross workers are asked to bring a few which help fill the basket, which, later in the day, is taken to Beverly hospital.

What would Manchester do without Horticultural hall?

RAYMOND BROWN. RESIDENT MANAGER

TICKETS for the garden party at "Highwood," the beautiful estate of Mr. and Mrs. Walker at West Manchester, on Saturday afternoon, June 29, are to be had from Mrs. Allen Curtis, Beverly Farms, and at the door, from four till seven o'clock, during the fête. The proceeds are for the benefit of the Lafayette Fund, and the tickets are $2 each. Lieutenant Morize, of the French Mission, will make a short address and national music will be played by a military band.

Mr. and Mrs. John Markle, of New York, have arrived at their cottage in West Manchester.

At "Lookout Hill," the home of the John Hays Hammonds, a guest of the week is Dr. Charles L. Lindley, of Lakewood, N. J. Mr. and Mrs. Hammond, whose wedding took place the past winter, are on from New York. Mrs. Hammond was Mrs. E. Douglas Horsey, of New York and Washington. A son, Richard P. Hammond, who is in the Naval Reserve, resumes his duties next Monday after having spent the winter at Yale.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wigglesworth are remaining at their Milton home until about the middle of July, owing to their younger daughter, Ruth, taking Red Cross nurse training. The cottage at Old Neck, Manchester, is occupied in the meanwhile by Stratford Wentworth and family, who live in Milton also.

Frank Wigglesworth has recently been commissioned as ensign in the U. S. Naval Reserves.

Caleb Loring, of Pride's Crossing, who has been in the Naval Reserve since the war, has been commissioned an ensign. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus P. Loring, of Pride's Crossing. He is a Harvard graduate, and for several years was a member of the Beverly board of aldermen. He is a brother of Augustus P. Loring, Jr., commander of F Company, Beverly State Guard.

Captain Robert Gilpin Ervin, of the regular army flying corps, paid a brief visit to the North Shore this week to see his wife and small son, who are guests of the former's mother, Mrs. Henry G. Nichols, at Kettle Cove, Manchester. He left for Washington on Thursday, accompanying Major Stedman Hanks, of the Department of Military Aeronautics, who has also been spending a short furlough at Manchester with his mother, Mrs. Chas. S. Hanks. Captain Ervin expects to remain at the capitol a few days only, pending orders for active duty.

Lieut. and Mrs. W. M. Elkins (Elizabeth Tuckerman) and their three children, of Elkins Park, Philadelphia, are new arrivals in the Pride's Crossing section. Mrs. Elkins is the daughter of the Bayard Tuckermans, of "Sunswick," Ipswich. Mr. Elkins is in the Naval Reserve. They have taken the Bartlett house at Pride's, next to the Bayard Warrens. Mrs. Elkins will also be near her sister-in-law, Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., who is in her father's home, the Herbert M. Sears house.

MANCHESTER BRANCH of the Essex County chapter of the American Red Cross will benefit from the concert to be given in Manchester Town hall Saturday of next week—July 6—by the Wodell Treble Clef club, of Boston, Frederick W. Wodell, conductor. Miss Alice Roberts, violinist, will assist. The concert will be at four o'clock. Tickets at $1.00 and 50c may be had from Mrs. Henry L. Mason, Beverly Farms, or may be purchased at the Manchester Red Cross workroom, and at Allen's drug store, Manchester village.

The Wodell Treble Clef club, of Boston, has been singing during the past season in various war work concerts in and around Boston, including appearances at Commonwealth Pier, Camp Devens, and the Naval Radio school at Harvard. Last week they gave their own concert at Bates hall, Y. M. C. A., Boston, producing for the first time in Boston a cantata, "The Sleeping Beauty," by a blind composer, Miss Frances MacCollin, of Philadelphia. Their programs include some of the best of the more "popular" numbers. The solo parts have been taken by members of the club and assisting friends. The membership includes twenty selected voices and they rehearse weekly throughout the season. All their concerts have been given for some benefit. The members feel that in this way they are able to do something helpful in "carrying on" the war.

Miss Frances Webster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Webster, of West Manchester, is now in a French military hospital, doing nursing, and also acting as an interpreter. When she first went abroad she was doing refugee work with children.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Magee, of Boston, are spending some time with Mr. Magee's sister, Miss H. M. Magee, of Beverly Cove. Miss Hawley, of Boston, is as usual, with Miss Magee.

Mrs. Constantine Hutchins, of Boston, has taken the small Vaughan cottage at Beverly Farms. Mr. Hutchins is in service.

Mrs. John Livingston Grandin, Sr., of "Elm Top," Beverly Cove, has as her house-guest, Mrs. George Paine, of Boston.

Mrs. W. B. P. Weeks, of Beverly Cove has recovered from an operation she underwent some time ago. Her mother, Mrs. Washburn, is now with her.

Miss Helen*Frick, of Pride's Crossing, is now interested in her vacation house for girls at Wenham Neck.

The vacation house for girls near Montserrat, which is maintained by Mrs. A. C. Ratchesky, of Beverly Cove, is now open.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond and family have been in New York a week or more before coming to their home in Gloucester, which is now open.

"HIGHWOOD," the West Manchester home of Mr. and Mrs. William Bentley Walker, will be opened tomorrow, Saturday afternoon, from four until seven, for a garden party and tea in aid of the Lafayette Fund. The Boston committee in charge consists of Mmes. Russell S. Codman, Allen Curtis, Allan Forbes, John Chipman Gray, Frederick S. Whitwell, Mrs. Wolcott, the Misses Alice M. Longfellow, Fanny P. Mason, and Henry F. Bigelow, Horace Binney, Herbert Browne, Vicomte P. de Fontenillat, Richard Lawrence, J. D. Henley Luce, Chas. C. Walker and F. S. Whitwell. Mrs. William C. Endicott is secretary and W. K. Richardson, chairman.

The Camp Devens military band will play and Lt. Morize will make a short address. Tea will be served at tables on the terrace. The grounds and gardens will be open for walking or riding through. A Lafayette kit will be exhibited. Each kit costs two and one-half dollars. Mrs. Allen Curtis, of Beverly Farms, has charge of the ticket sale.

The Lafayette Fund sends kits of useful articles to French soldiers at the battlefront, the name and address of the American donor being attached to each kit. The French government approves heartily of the gift; and pays all expense of distribution. The transportation is free. Practically no expense exists except for purchases of articles in the kit which are made on very favorable terms.

The most important of the articles is a waterproof raincoat and blanket, which has been received by the French soldiers with deep gratitude, expressed in letters of acknowledgement, and other ways. This small personal gift to the soldier helps to sustain his courage by the assurance in a most practical form of American sympathy and American support. The committee hopes to be able to maintain the shipment of kits through generous contributions from the public.

The second musicale will take place at the residence of Mrs. James H. Lancashire, Manchester. The artists will be Mrs. Laura C. Littlefield, soprano, and Ralph Osborne, baritone. Announcement-invitations, which will soon be received, will give particulars of the artists taking part in the musicales. Miss Allen announces that it is her intention to turn the net proceeds from her musicales over to the Red Cross.

Mrs. Charles C. Auchincloss and three children are now in the Proctor cottage, Pride's Crossing. Mr. Auchincloss comes out every week-end from their home in New York.

Miss Fanny P. Mason, who has rented her home in Beverly Cove to the Henry B. Endicotts, of Dedham, thought she would remain in Boston, but has decided to come to the Shore and has taken the Aspinwall cottage, Coolidge's Point, Manchester. This is a cottage on the estate of the Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge.

"Bee Rock," at Beverly Cove, the home of the late Guy Norman and Mrs. Norman, is now open. Mrs. Norman is still in the Newport home. Her daughter, Mrs. Elliot Cowdin Bacon (Hope Norman) and little children have come on from New York for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Chalifoux have spent a few week-ends in their Beverly Cove home this season. They are at Edgemoor, Maryland, which is conveniently near Washington, where Mr. Chalifoux is engaged in war work.

Among the guests who are registered at Tunipoo Inn, Beverly Farms, are Mrs. Walter Sturgis and children, of Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris Livermore and family, of Boston, who had one of the Luke cottages at Beverly Farms last season, will be at Manchester this year. They have just leased the Harris cottage, "Wyndhurst," Smith's Point, and will move down from town today.

Mrs. William J. Boardman is not to be at her place in Manchester this summer, but she left Washington this week for Pointe-au-Pic, P. Q., Canada.

Mrs. E. B. Haven, of Boston, will not come to Beverly Farms this season, but she started Tuesday of this week by motor for Spring Lake Beach, N. J., to spend most of the summer at The New Monmouth.

Costello C. Converse and family have opened their seashore home in Magnolia this week, to remain until September, when they will go to their mid-season place in Malden for the autumn. They have been there since closing their town residence two months ago.

Unitarian church, Masconomo street, Manchester, service Sunday morning at 10.45. Rev. Abraham M. Rihbany will preach. All seats free; you are cordially invited.

Captain Norton Wigglesworth, whose family is at Old Neck, Manchester, for the summer, is a member of the 101st Regiment, Field artillery, one of the units of the 26th Division, General Edwards commanding, and not of the famous Rainbow Division, as stated last week. The 26th has been in France nearly a year and has been on the fighting line more than any other division, according to reports.

Mrs. W. Harry Brown has been on from Pittsburg over a week ago to her home in Beverly Cove. She arranged for the opening of the place this week, but has returned to Pittsburg for a short time, where she is busily engaged in war work.

Mrs. Eliot Sumner, of Smith's Point, Manchester, is spending a week or more in Williamsport, Pa., and New York, to which place the family will probably move in the fall, as Mr. Sumner's new position will take him there.

The Gertrude Shop, or "little shop around the corner" (drug store corner), is an established institution in Manchester and is now ready for the third season. This is the kiddies' delight and here they can find any kind of a doll imaginable—ready dressed, or they can order any kind of clothes they want. The shop turns out complete doll outfits, including dresses, rompers, sweaters, bibs, etc. All are neatly made, exactly as complete in details as the children's clothing also turned out. The stuffed animals and other toys and the many gifts for all occasions, for grown-ups as well as children, make this one of the most unique places on the Shore to shop. But remember! dolly and the kiddies come first here, as you may see upon entering.

The Gertrude Shop supplies such stores as William Filene's Sons Co., Jordan Marsh Co., C. F. Hovey Co., R. H. Stearns Co., Shephard Stores, and L. P. Hollander & Co., I. R. Emerson Co., and Thread & Needle Shop, in Boston. New York stores include R. H. Macy & Co., James McCutcheon & Co., Stern Bros., and John Wanamaker. Providence, R. I.—Gladding Dry Goods Co.; Hartford, Conn.—Geo. Fox & Co., and Brown Thomson & Co.

Moritz has had a fine school record. He won first prize in the speaking contest this year, reciting "The Broken Rose," by Annie V. Chartres, a poem touching on Belgium. He also was first in French and was cited among those of excellent deportment during the year. Last year he received a medal for the highest general development for the year. He is fourteen years old. His mother, who died seven years ago, was Alice Monroe Pape, daughter of Prof. Lewis Baxter Monroe, dean and founder of the Boston university school of oratory. She was a member of the Vincent club in Boston. The godfather of Moritz is John Hays Hammond, Jr., while the godmother is Edith Wynne Mathison, the famous actress, leading lady with Sir Henry Irving and the late Herbert Beerbohm Tree. Moritz must come naturally by his gift in oratory. His mother was fond of taking part in private theatricals and was the first one who ever appeared in "Trilby," taking the part in Sherry's ballroom in New York.

Henry L. de Rham, first form student at St. Mark's school, and grandson of Richard H. Dana, of Manchester, received first prize in scholarship and in French, and was mentioned on the honor roll at the recent commencement. In his form he also received the first prize for general knowledge.

William A. Coolidge, son of Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge, Jr., of Coolidge's Point, Manchester, won first prize in debating at St. Mark's this year.

Philip Mason Sears, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip S. Sears, of Pride's Crossing, was graduated from St. Mark's school this June.

Mrs. Preston Gibson and children, who formerly spent much time with the former's grandmother, the late Mrs. James McMillan, of "Eaglehead," Manchester, will summer at Bar Harbor.

Mrs. Alexander Winsor (Hope Bancroft), who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Robert Hale Bancroft, at "Hale Farm," Beverly, is now in New Orleans, where Lieut. Winsor is stationed. Her little son is with Mr. Winsor's parents, the Robert Winsors, of Weston.

HAMILTON.—

Miss Sally Rollins, of Chestnut Hill, has been spending a few weeks at "Foxcroft," the home of her cousin, Miss Eleanor Seavey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Seavey, of Hamilton.

Mrs. George von L. Meyer and her daughter, Mrs. Raymond Rodgers, and children, of "Rock Maple Farm," Hamilton, have taken a cottage in Gloucester for two months to be near the water.

Mr. and Mrs. George von L. Meyer, Jr., are still in Washington and may not come to their Hamilton home.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Bement, of "Patch House," Hamilton, have the latter's niece, Miss Farr, of New York, with them. Mrs. Bement and Miss Farr are enjoying a motor trip and short stop at Manchester, Vt.

Mrs. Warren Johnson and daughter, Miss Dorothy, of Salem, are visiting at "Red Top Farm," the home of the Jonathan Browns, Jr., in Hamilton.

Mrs. Reginald Robbins is in Bar Harbor, as usual, while the house in Hamilton is being occupied this season by Samuel D. Mandell, of Boston. Mr. Robbins is in service.

The John Babson Thomas family is now settled in "Old Brown House," the Hamilton house on which Miss Mary Curtis, of Pride's Crossing, has a long lease. Formerly, the Thomas family lived at "Rockledge," a place which they own at West Manchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel S. Simpkins, Sr., and young son, Tudor, are now in "Birdwood," the same place in Hamilton that they occupied last season.

"Groton House," the home of the Frederic Winthrops, in Hamilton, is not open this year. Mr. Winthrop is in France and Mrs. Winthrop and children have left Boston for Lancaster.

Mrs. Abbie J. Rankins, of Hamilton, one of the remarkable ladies of the Shore that figured in the series run last fall in the BREEZE on elderly people doing war work, celebrated her 91st birthday June 19. Besides doing her usual amount of work for the Hamilton-Wenham Red Cross at present, she made two pairs of socks in four days, a sock a day, finishing the last one on her birthday.

Hamilton and Wenham will have no playground this year. Last year the usual playground money was used in gardening.

WENHAM.—

Miss Helen C. Burnham, of "Overlook," Lord's Hill, Wenham, is entertaining the Wenham Girl Scouts, at her home this Friday afternoon. Ice cream will follow the games. Miss Mabel Welch, of Boston, is in charge of the Scout movement in Wenham. About forty will be in attendance. Tomorrow the Scouts will attend Field Day exercises in Salem. They will also help in the local celebrations for the Fourth.

The Wenham Girl Scouts are proud of their home-made uniforms. So helpful are they becoming that a Junior Red Cross is being planned for the summer. This will count in Scout rating.

Miss Elizabeth Baker, of Brookline, is visiting at "Old Farm," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alanson L. Daniels. Again she is helping, as last year, with the Hamilton-Wenham Red Cross.

The Tea House in Wenham is strictly wheatless. Oceanside hotel guests were over this week and pronounced everything "as good as ever," much to the gratification of the manager, Mrs. Philip Downes, of Boston, now a member of the U. S. Food Administration. (Some of her ideas will be given next week in our Kitchen department. Among the luncheons so far has been one by Miss Rosamond Johnson, who had among her guests the Misses Polly Proctor, Eleanor Brewer and Lena Turnbull. A luncheon for seventeen members of a club of young married women of Lynn was given by the club's president, Mrs. John Kimball. Other guests have been Mrs. Joseph Williams, who gave a luncheon for Swampscott friends; Mrs. George M. Studebaker, of Little Boar's Head, N. H.; Mrs. George Binney and Mrs. Charles F. Berwind, of Magnolia; and Vittorio Orlandini, of Nahant. Miss Frances Downes is again in general charge of the tea room service and looks after the flowers as they are sent in for decoration.

"Cranleigh," at Wenham Neck, is again occupied by Mr. and Mrs. William G. Sharp, of Hotel Touraine, Boston.

Mrs. A. M. Kidder, of Englewood, N. J., is not coming to her home on Wenham Neck this year. The place is closed.

Mrs. W. M. Currier, of 29 Fairfield street, Boston, has been visiting friends in Wenham.

SALEM society is much interested in the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. John Pickering, of Broad street, of the engagement of their daughter, Rebecca, to Assistant Paymaster Phillips Bradley, U. S. N. Miss Pickering is a graduate of the Misses Allen school in West Newton and of the Brimmer school, Boston, and is a member of the 1914 Sewing Circle. Mr. Bradley is a son of Rev. and Mrs. E. E. Bradley, of Lincoln. He was graduated from Harvard with the class of 1916 and entered the Harvard Law school, leaving there to enlist in April, 1917, in the Naval Reserve. He has been commissioned in the Pay Corps of the navy.

Ralph D. Paine, the author, whose new book, "The Fighting Fleets," is just off the press, was a visitor to Salem, Monday, when he gave an illustrated talk on his experiences with the fleet in the North Sea. Mr. Paine spent many months in Salem in the past when preparing his book on old-time ship masters.

Mrs. Elizabeth White and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth, have closed their handsome home on Washington square, Salem, and have gone to Prout's Neck, Me., for the summer.

The Misses Margaret, Sarah and Mary Franks, of Hamilton street, Salem, have opened their summer home at Beverly Farms. These young women are intensely interested in Red Cross work and are affiliated with the Salem branch of this organization, where they assist in the knitting department.

Kernwood Country club is more quiet than in previous years, but the members are taking advantage of the excellence of the links and every day finds a large number of players on the course. The war relief is getting under way and through the Salem branch the ladies are doing their quota of surgical dressings, while in their free moments, knitting is taken up.

Dr. Milton J. Roseneau and family, of Boston, have arrived at one of the houses on the Kernwood Country club estate. This is the second year that the Roseneau family have spent here. Dr. Roseneau is a professor at Harvard Medical school and is now in the U. S. Medical Corps.

OCEANSIDE HOTEL

MAGNOLIA

OCEANSIDE HOTEL, Magnolia, is showing more signs of real life than any other individual spot on the North Shore. The big hotel, with its score of cottages and connections, is fast filling up for the summer. July and August will be the particular busy months as usual. Reservations have been made to such an extent that there is every reason to think the summer will be as busy as ever though, of course, there will be a dearth of young men.

One feature of the life at the Oceanside this summer is the new orchestra, which the management procured in New York, one of the Roncki orchestras. In keeping with the times dancing will not be given such a prominent place as heretofore, though there will be the occasional informal dances; and so an orchestra was selected this season for its especial merits as a concert organization. The programs to be offered this season will be largely with the idea of furnishing the very finest concert and solo music.

The many friends of Mrs. John M. Gilkeson, both at Magnolia and along the North Shore, are welcoming her back for another season. She has been coming to the Oceanside for a great many years and she is always among the first of the colony to arrive and the last to leave in the autumn. Mrs. Gilkeson now makes her winter home in Pasadena, Calif., instead of St. Louis, Mo. She plans to spend a few weeks in Boston before moving down to Magnolia, and she goes there again after the season is over for a short while.

Among the arrivals of the week are Mrs. Newcomb Carleton, of New York city, a daughter of Mrs. Henry Clarke Winslow, who is a season guest at the Oceanside. Mr. Carleton is president of the Western Union, and will come to Magnolia later to be with his family for a while.

Among the prominent southern families at the Oceanside are the Robert F. Maddoxes, of Atlanta, Ga. Mr. Maddox is president of the Atlanta National bank.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer P. Kennard and family, of New York, are of the younger people at the Oceanside, who are welcomed back by a large circle of friends along the North Shore. Mrs. Kennard was Miss Madeline White, of Lowell and Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Groves and the latter's daughter, Miss Sally Daggett, of Kansas City, are stopping at the Oceanside for a week while they are opening their cottage at Manchester for the season.

Other arrivals at the Oceanside this week, most of them for the balance of the season, include the following:

Mrs. Eads Hazard, New York City
 Mrs. Charles O. Brant, New York City
 Mr. and Mrs. E. Stauffen, New York
 Mrs. T. M. Adams and family, Annapolis, Md.
 Miss H. W. Catherwood, Philadelphia, Pa.
 Miss Julia L. Lewis, Philadelphia, Pa.
 George S. Stockwell, Boston
 Miss Mary A. Patterson, Boston
 Miss Felice Morris, New York
 Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Maddox and family, Atlanta, Ga.
 Mrs. Henry Clarke Winslow, Miss Kate Winslow, Miss Caroline J. Winslow, New York City
 David Hunter Miller, New York
 Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Crawford, New York
 Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Bates, Providence, R. I.
 Mr. and Mrs. John G. Groves, Miss Sally Daggett, Kansas, City, Mo.
 Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cunningham, Washington, D. C.
 Miss Evelyn E. C. Page, Boston
 Mr. and Mrs. Spencer P. Kennard and family, N. Y.
 Mrs. Newcomb Carleton, N. Y.
 Dr. and Mrs. Henry J. Perry, Boston
 Miss Frances S. Rogers, Boston

Rev. Charles Wadsworth and family, of Philadelphia, are among the week's arrivals at Magnolia.

The Marblehead-Swampscott Section of North Shore

by KATHERINE GAUSS

SWAMPSCOTT was alive with dentists this week. The Northeastern Massachusetts Dental society, composed of 310 members living in Suffolk, Middlesex and Essex counties met at the New Ocean House, Wednesday and Thursday. In addition to the regular business, addresses were made and an extensive exhibit of dental goods was a feature of the program. A dinner-dance formed part of the social life of the convention.

Mrs. Willard F. Spalding, of Atlantic ave., Swampscott, is one of the busiest of persons these days, as she is extremely interested in the Red Cross branch of the Phillips Beach Neighborhood association and goes three times a week to their surgical dressings meetings. Mrs. Spalding, who was before her marriage, Nancy S. Lawson, is much interested in charitable affairs in the nearby town of Salem and has served on many committees in that city during the past winter. She was an active worker in the Salem association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis.

The handsome stucco home of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Vorenberg at Puritan road, Swampscott, is decked in its summer furnishings and the wide piazzas which overlook Fisherman's Beach, are fitted with great hanging baskets of flowers, ornamental bird cages and many lounging chairs for the comfort of this large family. With them are Samuel and Fred Vorenberg, who are busy all day at the Gilchrist Co., store in Boston, coming down at night.

PHILLIPS BEACH.—

Mrs. John J. Collins, of Beach Bluff ave., Beach Bluff, entertained a group of nine ladies at luncheon at the Phillips Beach Neighborhood club, Wednesday noon. Mrs. Collins is very much interested in the club's work for the Red Cross and the ladies who attended the luncheon are all very active in the work.

Frederick Murray, of Lawrence, has bought the estate of the late Frederick L. Woods at Ocean avenue, Phillips Beach, and after minor changes and additions to the house will occupy the same this season. The property consists of a modern residence with every convenience, a stable-garage and over a half-acre of land. It is located in the immediate vicinity of the estates of A. W. Preston, Arthur F. Estabrook, of Estabrook & Co., and Maurice J. Curran, president of the Gillette Safety Razor Co.

One of the big attractions at the recent peony show held in Horticultural hall, Boston, was a new orchid, the only one of its kind, shown by Andrew W. Preston of "The Arches" of Phillips Beach, who is one of the trustees of the society. The flower is a new hybrid orchid and a beautiful gem in the world of blossoms. It is a pure chalk white with lip of deep purple.

A. W. Hagan is the new steward at the Phillips Beach Neighborhood club, having arrived with his family on Monday.

HOTEL PRESTON, at Beach Bluff, has been opened just a little over a week and although it is yet rather quiet the guest book shows several families registered for the season, while week-end parties have made things quite gay.

The balmy weather of the past week and the brilliant moon has made the Hotel Preston a most desirable place to be at, for the location on the high bluff looking over the sea, cannot be excelled.

Mrs. William Gray, of Boston, who has spent the last twelve years at the Hotel Preston, arrived this week for the season.

Miss Florence M. Taylor, of Cambridge, is at the Preston for the summer.

General, Carney, Lynn, Haverhill and Brockton hospitals and the New England hospital for women and children, has been promoted from the rank of major to that of lieutenant-colonel. He is serving overseas with a unit of orthopedic surgeons organized by himself. Advanced with him were Dr. Harvey Gushing, of Boston, and Dr. George W. Crile, of Cleveland, Ohio. Lieut.-Col. Goldthwait graduated from the Massachusetts Agricultural college in 1885, received the M. D. degree from the Harvard Medical school in 1890, and served as surgical house officer at the Children's and the Boston City hospitals.

The Brown Owl tea room at Marblehead has been opened for the season by Miss Whitney, who arrived last Saturday from Farmington, Conn. The little brown house on the quiet roadside is most attractive this season and it is expected it will be a social centre again this year, as in previous years. Owing to the Food Administrator's request, table d'hôte meals have been abandoned and all menus during the summer will also comply with the wheatless regulations.

Mr. and Mrs. B. W. R. Chase, of Marblehead, have gone to Goffstown, N. H., where they have a summer home.

The death of Elmer P. Howe at Boston the past week removes one of the best known of the summer visitors to Marblehead. He passed many summers at "Uncle Tom's Cabin," Cloutman's Point, Marblehead, being always one of the earliest of the visitors to arrive.

THE "KARINA," a handsome three-master boat which was often to be seen in Marblehead waters, has been sold to the France & Canada Steamship Co., by the estate of the late T. P. Burgess, of Dedham. The yacht will be converted into a training ship for sailors needed by the great steamship concern, said to be financed by the French government, and which is proving a factor in transport of supplies for the allied armies. The "Karina," it will be remembered, with Mr. Burgess as his own navigator, twice crossed the Atlantic on extended cruises, and when the war broke out was in Greek waters.

The man who will not save as he goes keeps his nose to the grindstone.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Barden, of Hyde Park, who have spent many seasons at the Oceanside hotel, Marblehead Neck, have arrived for the summer.

THE Richard E. Traiser estate on Ocean ave., Marblehead Neck, is one of the prettiest places imaginable, for not only is the stucco house one of the finest on the Shore, with its glassed-in piazzas running the entire length of the house, but the grounds have been laid out in a most artistic manner.

Last year the front lawn was put down to potatoes, so this season, when grass seed was again sowed, this lawn became the finest one in the whole section, for, owing to the hard winter, much of the grass on other estates was winter killed and is all dried up.

The grounds on the seaward side of the house are terraced, and one portion of the garden has been left, as usual, with the abundance of blossoms from the old-fashioned plants, but the other side of the terrace has been given over to vegetables, and a thriving lot of them are well up.

There is one person who looks eagerly forward to the summer season and the influx of the summer residents, and that is Mrs. Annie Crowley, the "oldest resident of Marblehead Neck," as she is called, as she has just rounded out her 40th year in the little house to which her husband took her as a bride. According to Mrs. Crowley, the last was the coldest and most disagreeable winter she ever experienced on the Neck and she did not once leave it during the entire winter. With her, live a daughter and a grandson, who is thirteen years old, and has gone back and forth to school every day this term. Mrs. Crowley's husband was in the employ of Mrs. Kimball, of Salem, who had one of the first summer residences on the Neck. She built their little home and Mrs. Crowley has lived in it continuously. This is to be their last season on the Neck, as the younger people are discontented because of the long winter months, and the house will be sold and they will move to the mainland this fall. When Mrs. Crowley first lived at Marblehead Neck there were not more than a handful of cottages to be seen, while today there is scarcely a vacant lot to be located the length and breadth of the Neck.

DR. HAROLD W. DANA, of Boston and Brookline, will soon be able to move his family into the attractive new summer home on Ocean ave., Marblehead Neck, as the furniture is being placed and before another week is by it is expected that the house will be open. The house, which has been built as close to the rocks as possible, is directly opposite the site of the Nanepashemet hotel, which burned a few years ago. From the verandas the entire sweep of the ocean from Boston lower light to Eastern Point, Gloucester, may be obtained.

Although Thomas Mott Shaw, the Boston architect, who designed the house, has been in the United States Signal Service in France for some time in connection with aviation construction work, the building of Dr. Dana's house has gone on under the direction of Mr. Shaw's office.

The house is of the Italian villa type in its appearance, with stucco exterior finish and red-tiled roof; also arched porch and verandas, balustrades, arched windows and like features, which give it a distinctively Italian look. It spreads over considerable ground, in its plan, which is out of the ordinary in its interior arrangement of rooms.

From the main entrance there is a modest hall, hardly larger than a vestibule, and two or three steps lead up to a landing from which the chambers with connecting baths and dressing rooms are reached. From this vestibule the main stairway, wall enclosed and panelled, leads down to a lower level, where it opens upon a very large living-room, panelled and having a heavy beamed ceiling. This room has its fireplace enclosed in a deep alcove, with seats and book shelves and little cupboards, all making a comfortable inglenook. The mantel is of old tapestry brick and the hearth is of brick tiles, with which have been used quaintly colored glazed tiles, with pleasing effect. The living-room opens upon a covered veranda and from this corner of the house, both from indoors and out, fine ocean views are obtained. The room is provided with stationary book shelves. French doors divide the living-room from the adjoining spacious dining-room, finished with beamed ceiling and having also its ample fireplace. French doors lead to the covered veranda on the water side, which shows a balustrade of artistic design. The kitchen, butler's rooms and other service parts of the house have all been most carefully planned and they combine every modern convenience for housework and service.

The bedroom floor contains several large rooms with connecting baths, and two of the rooms are provided with fireplaces of tapestry brick, flanked by little cupboards. From two of them also there are spacious covered glazed-in sleeping porches directly facing the water. One of the chambers is panelled in a quaint way by the use of old-time panelled doors which form walls out of the usual, and in keeping with the low ceiling. All doors on this floor are provided with old-time latches, instead of knobs. The house, when finished and ready for occupancy by Dr. Dana, will take its place as one of the most notably attractive of those ranged along the ocean front at the Neck. Adjoining is a garage similar in construction to the house, with red-tiled roof and stucco exterior. It provides for two cars.

A., at this handsome clubhouse. Mr. Johnson, who has been a summer resident of Nahant for many years, received a tribute from Lewis A. Someone has said: "To create a beautiful garden is a genuine gift to life. Value in every endeavor is judged largely by its capacity for service; a service enriching, refreshing, gladdening life, or awakening it to greater effort or higher ideals. A flower-crowned garden, glowing in wondrous colors, resonant in delicate perfume, vibrant with the whisperings of nature is the very embodiment of service."

The Gallery on the Moors

Community Theatre at East Gloucester to Encourage Democratic Community Spirit

LAST summer the Gallery-on-the-Moors, East Gloucester, through its successful entertainments in aid of our war sufferers, discovered much latent dramatic talent among the residents of Gloucester and the North Shore. In order to broaden the scope of its war activities, as well as to permanently develop the art of the drama, the Gallery has decided to establish a community theatre—the aims of which will be to encourage a democratic community spirit, to maintain a high standard of interpretation and to bring within the reach of all the best modern dramatic productions, enacted by its members.

The Gallery has recently been equipped with a modern ventilating plant. The lighting and stage furnishings have been installed according to the advice of Livingston Platt, dramatic director of Margaret Anglin, designer of opera settings for the Metropolitan Opera, New York, and an expert in outdoor pageantry.

Already many enthusiastic workers have volunteered their services. Miss Lucy Conant, of Boston, has been chosen as designer of costumes and stage settings. Miss Florence Cunningham, of Gloucester, is to be stage director. Ralph Adams Cram and Livingston Platt are members of the advisory board.

The success of this interesting experiment now depends on the response of the inhabitants of Gloucester and the North Shore, all of whom are cordially invited to attend a mass meeting at the Gallery-on-the-Moors, Monday, July first, at 7.30 p. m., when more definite plans will be discussed and all wishing to become members of the Community Theatre association will be enrolled.

Nothing develops more surely the democratic spirit of our people than community work of this kind. Residents of St. Louis and other cities, testify to the moral and spiritual awakening following their great outdoor pageants, which are but one branch of the Community theatre work. The bringing together of all classes and nationalities in a common cause, must create civic patriotism, especially when the immediate object is, as now, to raise money for the assistance of those who are battling for the freedom of the world.

The idea of a Community theatre, as developed by pageants and outdoor spectacles, is as old as civilization itself. Unhappily, the theatre, the natural vehicle of the people's artistic expression, has fallen into the hands of the commercial exploiters and is no longer a great democratic center where the entire community joins in a production either as actors or spectators. In order to re-establish this old ideal of community participation, members of the association will give a number of dramatic representations in the Gallery theatre during the summer. They are also planning a very beautiful outdoor Greek festival in which old and young are invited to take part.

Along the Cape Ann Shore

by ALEX. G. TUPPER

CAPE ANN.—The present week really marks the opening of the summer season on Cape Ann, for on Saturday the express and baggage men were very busy handling the large amount of trunks and boxes that arrived for hotels and cottages. The afternoon trains brought a large number of people and on Sunday it was noticeable how many of the cottages along the hills and shore, had been opened. Every day now we see appearing on the streets, people that have been coming to Cape Ann for years and the main street, lined with automobiles, shows that the summer life and recreation has started.

Interest in the Red Cross and war work increases and an event of importance is the opening of the Soldiers' and Sailors' club, at 6 Centre street, Gloucester. Through the generosity and interest of Dr. J. Henry Lancashire, a summer resident of Manchester, and the coöperation of prominent citizens of the town and representatives of the various summer colonies, this good work will be carried on in a well-selected section. This club has been formed for the recreation and rest of our boys in the service and it is hoped that any one of them may come in and enjoy and make use of its advantages. Two fairly large rooms have been fitted out with comfortable furnishings, including writing tables, a piano and Victrola. It is planned to start a canteen on a small scale, where light refreshments may be purchased. It is expected that there will be many of the boys in service in the city from time to time and impromptu entertainments will be arranged. The clubrooms are very accessible, being located near the main street and the car waiting station and around the corner of the Gloucester Times building. Mayor Stoddard, of Gloucester, G. W. Woodbury, the president of the Gloucester Red Cross, and F. T. Essig, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., have endorsed the undertaking of the Soldiers' and Sailors' club. Citizens and summer residents will be interested in this club home for our boys. Books, magazines, games and Victor records have already been donated, but more are needed. Any donations will be greatly appreciated and they may be sent directly to the club, 6 Centre street. This work is being carried on under the auspices of the following well-known representatives: Mrs. George W. Woodbury, chairman of the Navy committee of the Gloucester Red Cross; Mrs. Robert T. Babson, chairman of the Gloucester Women's Council of National Defense; Mrs. Emma P. Haskell, president of the Woman's auxiliary of the Gloucester Y. M. C. A.; Mrs. Howard F. Smith, chairman Mother's circle, Gloucester Y. M. C. A.; Mrs. Benjamin A. Smith, director of the Girls' club, of Gloucester; Mrs. William Sheafe and Mrs. Jacob L. Loose, representing Eastern Point summer colony; Mrs. L. A. Kinney and Miss Peebles, representing Rockport; Mrs. Alfred G. Mayer, representing Annisquam; Mrs. Henry R. Heard and Mrs. George Hamilton, representing Magnolia; Mrs. James Henry Lancashire, representing Manchester; Miss Lila Lancashire and Miss Elizabeth Gunn, club directors.

"When Elijah was utterly depressed in mind and ready to die of a broken heart, then God gave him a quiet desert, far from distraction, then a good sleep, then a comfortable meal, then sleep again, then more food and then a six weeks' vacation. After that he recovered his spirits, and was greatly improved in his faith in God, as well as in bodily condition."

BASS ROCKS.—The Siamese minister, Prabha Karawongse and attachés, arrived at Bass Rocks during the past week and with the exception of the first secretary, E. H. Loftus, the legation is comfortably settled in the Harding cottage, corner of Page street and Mt. Pleasant avenue, near the Bass Rocks golf links. The minister is a Siamese prince and contrary to the usual custom of changing the ambassador every two years, the present representation of the far eastern country to America has nearly doubled that term, owing to the war. Phya Karawongse, wife of the minister, who was here last summer with her child, will be absent this season, as she has returned to Siam. Edward H. EASTERN POINT.—The Hawthorne Inn, which opened on the 17th for the season, has now over fifty guests registered. An attractive party at the Inn casino last Friday evening was the strawberry festival held under the auspices of the Unity club. Proprietor Stacy, of the Inn, being interested in the welfare of the Unity club, connected with the First Parish (Unitarian) church, of Gloucester, he courteously threw open the spacious dining-room of the hotel for the serving of refreshments. The decorations of laurel greenery and blossoms were very beautiful and over 250 people were seated.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Prentiss, of New York, are comfortably located in the large cottage of Dr. J. H. Knowles, Niles' Beach boulevard, near the picturesque pond. Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss have purchased a large tract of land at Brace's Cove and they expect to build a summer home later on.

Mr. Moseley and his daughter came a little later than usual this year.

Mrs. Samuel J. Masters, of Baltimore, Md., has leased the Muir cottage on the Headlands, Rockport, for the season.

The Granite Shore Inn has been opened under the management of Mrs. A. O. Pierce.

One of Rockport's well-known pioneer summer residents, Mrs. Mary E. Perkins, died on Wednesday of last week, at her home in Salem. Her late husband, Henry W. Perkins, was one of the first to purchase land at Land's End, of the Todd estate, after it was divided into lots for summer homes. The Todd cottage was afterwards annexed to Turk's Head Inn. The late Mrs. Perkins planned to come here last Monday, when illness detained her. She was a summer resident in Rockport for over forty years and she will be greatly missed in the colony.

Mrs. George N. Macrum, who spent last season in the Rockport summer colony, has presented to the public library of the town, a copy of her book, "The Odyssey of a Torpedoed Transport," translated from the French. Mrs. Macrum writes under the pen name of Grace Fallow Norton.

"O Painter of the fruits and flowers,
We own Thy wise design,
Whereby these human hands of ours
May share the work of Thine!

"Apart from Thee we plant in vain
The root and sow the seed;
Thy early and Thy later rain,
Thy sun and dew we need.

"And still with reverent hands we cull
Thy gifts each year renewed;
The good is always beautiful,
The beautiful is good."

—"Garden" Hymn by Whittier.

Here in this sequestered close
Bloom the hyacinth and rose,
Here beside the modest stock
Flaunts the flaring hollyhock;
Here, without a pang, one sees
Ranks, conditions and degrees.

All the seasons run their race
In this quiet resting-place;
Peach and apricot and fig
Here will ripen and grow big;
Here is store and overplus,—
More had not Alcinoüs.

—From "Garden Song" by Austin Dobson.

WANT FIRE BOX AT DOCK SQUARE

There is an insistent demand for the location of a fire-alarm box at Dock square, and though twice attention has been publicly called to this matter, nothing has yet been done. There are fortunately very few fires in Rockport, and it has been a long time since Dock square or its immediate vicinity was endangered. But should a fire break out here and a hurry call be necessary, much damage would result from the delay which would be caused by having to run to the present nearest box.

The new cold storage plant at T wharf, is in itself, the best of excuses for locating a fire-alarm box nearby.

It is to be hoped that some action will be taken soon. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

PUBLIC SAFETY COMMITTEE

There was a good attendance at the meeting of the public safety committee at the selectmen's office Monday evening.

There were reports from several committees, showing them to be in good condition, and that important features are being satisfactorily followed. Edgar Knowlton, chairman of the fuel committee, which is a separate committee from the public safety committee, having been appointed at the request of Chairman Fred H. Tarr of the latter committee, made a comprehensive report of the coal situation of the town which shows that the committee has been doing a lot of work, and are still following up the coal question in the interest of Rockport people.

From his report it looks as though our town is to receive about the same quantity of anthracite coal that we had for 1916.

Town Clerk Byron G. Russell was chosen enrollment agent for the United States Public Service Reserve, and to have charge of the registration of all men between the ages of 18 and 50, who are not at work. Dr. Harold N. Baker was chosen chairman of the committee on hygiene, medicine and sanitation to fill the vacancy occasioned by Dr. Robert L. Emery removing from town.

Only the immediate families were present. The couple were attended by Miss Alice Lane, sister of the bride and by W. Lester Stevens, brother of the groom. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Reinhold L. Swan, sister of the groom.

After a reception the couple left for Asbury Grove, where they will spend the summer.

EDITORIAL

THE AEROPLANE PROGRAM is now an open secret. For some time past, the representatives of the press were in possession of information that the flights of the Atlantic would probably be tried this year. The necessities of the situation make it advisable, if not compulsory, for the government to devise means whereby the airships can reach Europe under their own power. Every ship is now needed for the transportation of troops, munitions and supplies of army and navy equipments and it is extravagant to use the valuable space needed for these materials if the aeroplanes can be constructed to go over under their own power. There are three possible courses to pursue: first, a straightaway course from Newfoundland to Europe along a predetermined lane patrolled by special government boats; second, a course to the Azores for a stop on the way over the ocean, or lastly, a flight along the lanes of travel by ocean transports and vessels. According to the latter course there could be a ship sail every hour from an American port for Europe with supplies and when the shipping program is completed permit one returning every hour, thus forming a procession of vessels plowing the seas to and from Europe. Then the aeroplanes could take the air and follow the line of travel of these vessels and never be more than half an hour's time according to a ship's speed, from help. In the case of need the aviator could alight and call for help or for gasoline or supplies and thus reduce to a minimum the expense in men, materials and supplies for the proposed operation. No one knows what American genius will be able to accomplish. One thing appears likely that before the summer is over the plans for oversea flights will have been carefully prepared.

THE DEUTSCHLAND, the German undersea merchant boat, was intended by the German government and German people as a notice to be served upon the peoples of the world of the powerful boat which they had been able to manufacture, and to arouse fear. It was a propaganda movement, pure and simple. It has proven to be, however, a boomerang. Instead of telling the American people that the freedom of the seas was to be assured for the world by the defeat of Germany's enemies, it revealed the fact that America's boasted isolation no longer existed and that freedom of the seas as Great Britain and America wished it, was an entirely different thing from the freedom of the seas as Germany was trying to impress upon the world. Freedom of the seas to America means freedom of the seas for the world. Freedom of the seas to Germany means freedom of the seas for world power and that world power Germany; and that power and freedom not liberty, but license without consent, to control or to destroy the commerce of the world. The construction of the mammoth submarine will prove to Germany the futility of her world war. This war can never be won until Germany wins the supremacy of the sea, but a ship can never leave the wharves of Germany until the sea is controlled. The sea never can be controlled by Germany, for after the attempt is made to destroy the allied fleets the submarine will remain an effective agency. Germany has been her own undoing, and the submarine, while a terrible menace now upon the high seas, spells Germany's ultimate and final defeat. The Deutschland has told the world more than words could tell how hopeless and fruitless the present German efforts are.

WHO DOES NOT REJOICE, not only because of the signal victory won over Austria by an ally of ours, but because in addition, that victory was won by the Italians! It will mean much for the years to come that the Italians in an open fight routed and put the Austrian army out of the war for a month at least in this intense and terrible year of long waits. The integrity of Italy will be maintained, and how cheering it is for the future peace of the world not in the spirit of revenge, but of the ideals of a just and honorable balance of power, that Italy has been able to administer effectively this needed and impressive victory. It means much that Italy has made these successful efforts to aid the allied program. It is now apparent that the Italians have been working diligently, intelligently and in the spirit of fair play, thorough coöperation and excellent team work with the allies. When the war was declared the Italian representative in France awakened the prime minister of France from his bed and told him that Italy would not enter the war against the entente, thus making it possible for the French to mass their troops for the battle of the Marne instead of protecting both frontiers. Now comes the completion of an operation begun before the snows fell last fall. The territory gained during the summer was sacrificed. The Italians withdrew from the mountains, forcing the Austrians to encamp in the mountains throughout a cold winter, with their lines of communication extended. Then let them in farther until their backs were to the river, and when the hour was struck the blow came with telling force, and at a time when the whole allied cause needed heartening. Viva Italia! brave republic of the Mediterranean.

"FOOD ENOUGH FOR AN ARMY" was the subject of a special article last July in the BREEZE. All of the war gardens that could possibly be seen along the Shore in a few days' time, were mentioned. They were entirely new ventures in many instances, while others were greatly enlarged gardens. Such an article would be considered as somewhat out of place this year, when the war gardens are everywhere, and it is an assumed fact that all who have land are cultivating it for Uncle Sam.

THE NATURALIZATION of 2,500 men at Camp Devens by Judge Morton is another indication of one of the benefits which accrued from this world war. The assimilation of the foreign element in America has been a problem of the first magnitude. The war has brought together the men from all of the country and has fused the masses in a way that nothing else could possibly have accomplished.

THE SEDITIOUS PROPAGANDA of the Germans still keeps cropping up in ways that are surprising even after all of the facts that have come to the public notice. Every citizen should consider himself a lookout for seditious remarks and actions and report them correctly and promptly. The information given may be trifling, but it will perhaps aid in bringing to light information really needed.

THE IRISH SITUATION does not appear in any more favorable light today than some months ago. There still appears a feeling of restraint not to use the more harsh word, opposition, on the part of certain portions of the Irish population toward the government as constituted and the policy of the nation as formulated and being sustained by the force of arms by the coöperation of every one of the colonies of the empire. Lloyd George has taken a thoroughly reliable and defensible position in insisting upon conscription. The spirit which he shows, in suggesting Ireland's opportunity to enlist the men voluntarily indicates that he entertains no animosity against Ireland, but intends to use all of the resources of the empire to win this great war with all that that means for the freedom of the world. Ireland has the opportunity that comes only once to any people to make a decision that will mean a place of honor in the world of men. Will she fail? Ireland cannot expect the allied nations to fight alone and unaided the battles of freedom. She now has the great opportunity! Will she rise to it with power? What an opportunity! No one questions the fact that Ireland has suffered injustices in many ways, but those injustices are trifling compared with the issues and sufferings of this war. This greater trouble must be overcome. Ireland should rise to the situation and put her heart and soul into the conflict and win this war, and in the reconstruction period which will follow this war it is inevitable that her rights and her liberties would be safeguarded as well as those of Belgium, Serbia, Montenegro and Cuba. Ireland has that opportunity! Will she rise to it? With conscription in America, Americans cannot understand the objections of Ireland to an enforced draft! The primary responsibilities of a nation at war must be met without delay.

THE SEVEREST WINTER that can be remembered for many years has been followed by a good spring, but adversity has continued. The unusually good early spring weather was followed by unusually cold weather for June. It is unfortunate that the frosts came with such deadly blight. However, the North Shore escaped quite remarkably. Few crops were ruined, although the margin of safety was never very great for the three or four days that the frosty grip was in the air. The cold area appears to have swept in a circle about the North Shore, doing extensive damage beyond, but not reaching close to the coast. Here and there beans were touched by the frost, but they will recover. In Wenham, Centreville and Hamilton corn, beans, potatoes and squash suffered severely. The corn will probably be saved. Squash vines have blackened and removed and new crops planted and with a good late fall the farmers may be able to obtain a good crop. The early potatoes have had a setback that will not ruin the crops, but mean that the crops will be garnered about the same time as the late crops. All things considered the North Shore came through the cold weather very well. The news from the west and even from nearer home, of crops laid low and fields laid waste are not heartening to say the least. It is evident that the farmers are not having particularly fortunate years with the high prices for fertilizers, the scarcity of labor, the high prices for labor saving devices and frosts.

MR. A. SHUMAN, OF BOSTON AND BEVERLY, has passed on after a long and useful life in business and in the directorship of his many business and philanthropic interests. His business success in Boston is a tribute not only to his personal efficiency as a business man and the profitableness of conducting a business on trustworthy lines, but a striking illustration of the opportunities America has presented for advancement. Beginning his business enterprise in a small way in rooms on Summer street, it has expanded to its present capacious quarters with its large clientele. But the business interests of Mr. Shuman did not engross all of his attentions because he was interested in the welfare of his employees, and the spirit of friendliness which existed between them is a tribute in itself. He became an active trustee of the Boston City hospital and for years he had been one of its most loyal and influential friends. He had served as a trustee of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and as a member of the Visiting committee of the School of Business Administration of Harvard university. His welfare work for the people of Boston has been shown by the beautiful summer rest home in Beverly which he maintained. He had a wide circle of friends and his memory will be honored.

THE SUCCESSES OF THE ITALIANS on their front cannot be overestimated as far as their significance is concerned even though the operations have not yet been completed. It indicates that there is a weak spot in the German lines and an offensive must be expected there. Authorities for a long while have maintained that the war cannot be won entirely on the west front because of the many factors involved. Germany, to be defeated, must not alone be whipped to a standstill in the west, but in order to prevent the execution of the pan-German ideals, a barrier must be thrown across central Europe in her path to prevent the development of the Berlin to Bagdad railroad for political reasons and to force the German powers to release their grasp upon the territories unwillingly wrested from Russia. The west front must see the continuance of mighty fighting and great victories, but across the central path of Germany a barrier must be placed. Germany has been unsuccessfully endeavoring to make a separate peace contract with various allies in order to whip them one by one and gain her ends. The allies are shrewd enough to design their enemy's plot and loyal enough to fight together until the bitter end for truth, righteousness and liberty. May not the weakness of Austria afford the opportunity? If Austria and Hungary can be convinced that the allies mean her no harm, but that they seek the establishment of principles and policies which in themselves will mean salvation politically to Austria and Hungary and freedom from the dominion of Prussia, will not a wedge have been introduced? At any cost the work must be continued! Meanwhile at least it means that Germany must release her pressure on the west front and look well to the southern lines. But that is not all. The allies now see a way to victory. May it come!

AT A MEETING OF THE ALUMNI of Harvard university last week Governor McCall expressed an opinion and a wish that was significant if not prophetic. He would like to see the Italian flag in the north of Italy have the American flag flying with it and an American army there in charge of General Leonard Wood. The suggestion was received with a storm of applause because General Leonard Wood is a Harvard man, a Massachusetts son and the one man New England honors because he warned us first of the impending war which was, as he saw it then, inevitable. His subsequent career has not been marked with favor despite the feeling latent that perhaps the administration was not dealing as harshly with him as would at first appear. He has been busy and the last year his marvellous powers of organization have been evident. He has been to France as an official representative of the government and trained a complete division and put it afieid. These are no small accomplishments in one year of service. The government has ordered him back to his cantonment to begin work with a fresh division and he will impress his marvellous powers upon these new men.

North Shore Kitchens in War Time

SOME readers may think that food conservation in a bachelor's kitchen may not amount to much. They may be surprised to know that at "The Rectory," in Beverly Farms, the Rev. Neilson Poe Carey exercises the greatest care and concern over his Hoover dishes. Of course, the friends of Rev. Mr. Carey will not be surprised.

Both his housekeeper and cook attended the lectures given in the Manchester Food Centre the past winter by Portia Smiley.

White cornmeal is a great favorite at this house. Mr. Carey says that all southerners eat it and that he was used to it in his home at Baltimore. He is trying to persuade his "Yankee" friends that it is possessed of rare virtues in the way of goodness and nourishment.

The following is a favorite of the household:

Rice Muffins

1 cup white cornmeal
1 small cup white flour
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup boiled rice (dry)
3 eggs
1 big tbsp. melted butter
2 heaping tsp. baking powder
Softened with sweet milk enough to make a drop dough. Salt to taste.

This is the original recipe, but, of course, in these days of substitutes, other things may be used in some instances. Often in place of rice she uses left-over breakfast hominy.

Wesson oil is used in both French and mayonaisse dressings in the proportions of double the amount of oil to the amount of vinegar used. It is considered as good as olive oil.

White flour was not used in the kitchen all through Lent and not until just lately, when the cook thought she must have some to "hold" her bread together.

But perhaps "The Rectory" is doing its "bit" by spreading the gospel of white cornmeal.

AGAIN we have seen Hannah Holm, the cook in the Washington B. Thomas household at Pride's Crossing. Last fall she had just finished her canning and was packing it ready to move into Boston when we saw her. Not a can spoiled, she is proud of reporting.

The winter has brought many difficulties to the kitchen and many a new lesson in thrift. She has learned to make her salad dressings with Wesson oil and treated the writer with a liberal "taste" on lettuce leaves. She says it is the consensus of opinion in the Thomas family that olive oil is no better than Wesson oil. (One thing the war has done.)

Her barley muffins are thought delicious.

Barley Muffins

1 cup barley flour
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup potato flour
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup white flour
2 tbsp. shortening
4 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. sugar
1 egg

Mix with milk to the right consistency.

Oatmeal Bread

Pour six cups boiling water over three cups oatmeal and add one cup molasses. Stand till cold. Add a yeast cake and mix like any bread using white flour and a substitute.

She says that oatmeal is better with white flour alone, if it can be used.

This cook has tried all substitutes and seems in sympathy with war ideas, especially in canning and drying.

AT the F. L. Higginson home in Pride's Crossing is a cook, Margaret Hart, who can dictate recipes in a most surprising way without any book or paper for reference. After trying various substitutes she finds Franklin Mills flour the best and easiest of flours to use with other cereals.

Franklin Mills Bread

Scald in bread bowl one-half package of H. O. (rolled oats) and let stand one hour. Add salt to taste, two tablespoons sugar (brown sugar or molasses may be used), and water or milk added to make the desired amount of bread with the Franklin Mills flour mixed in to form dough. One tablespoon shortening and one and one-half cakes Fleischmann's yeast are used. Let rise over night.

She says this makes a light, good bread.

Sponge Cake

(Potato Flour Only)

Separate six eggs
1 cup white sugar beaten into yolks of eggs
1 tsp. lemon juice
1 tbsp. boiling water

Beat very light, add three-quarters cup potato flour and one-half teaspoon baking powder. Beat the whites of eggs very stiff and fold in lightly. Bake one-half hour.

This makes a very light and wholesome cake. It is the only kind of cake in use in the family. The cook says she is fortunate in having plenty of eggs to use. She sometimes makes a chocolate dressing and serves over and between two layers of this cake and calls it chocolate pie.

The ordinary pie is not in use in the Higginson family. Fruits, in their season, are generally used. The meat has been lessened and more fish is used.

The following are specials of the cook:

Rice Flour and Franklin Mills Flour Muffins

1 egg
3 tbsp. sugar
1 tbsp. shortening
3-4 tsp. salt
1 cup milk
1 cup Franklin Mills flour
1 cup rice flour
2 tsp. baking powder
Bake twenty minutes.

Cornmeal and Franklin Mills Flour Muffins

1 cup cornmeal
1 cup Franklin Mills flour
1 egg
3 tbsp. sugar
1 tbsp. shortening
3-4 tsp. salt
2 tsp. baking powder
1 cup milk
Bake twenty minutes.

EMERGENCY BUILDING TO PROVIDE FOR SOLDIERS COSTS $1,170,619,000

The total cost for national army cantonments was $140,726,473, according to a statement by the War Department. The National Guard camps cost $38,375,272.

Emergency work to provide for soldiers in this country and to provide buildings for the manufacture and storage of material both here and abroad undertaken by the construction division of the army, which has been executed or is under way and in prospect up to June 1, will cost about $1,170,619,000. This total is exclusive of three operations costing $106,000,000, under the direct control of the Ordnance Department.

Up to June 1 the construction division had completed 53 jobs, at a total cost of $202,250,000. It has 244 operations under way, which when finished will cost about $270,369,000. Preparations are being made to start work on 117 new operations which are expected to cost $700,000,000.

The North Shore in War Work

MRS. GEORGE LEE'S garage in Beverly Farms is a busy place these days. Everything is running smoothly, but Mrs. Lee wishes to urge more workers to come, for now is the vital time to make dressings. More contributions to purchase gauze are needed, as an effort is being made to get the gauze before it advances in price.

During the first four days of the work, beginning June 18, 2804 surgical dressings were made, 700 of which made by the Hamilton-Wenham Red Cross for the Italian War Relief Fund. This was done one day when the Hamilton-Wenham branch of the Red Cross had no gauze on hand, so it was suggested and at once complied with by the chairman, Mrs. Alanson L. Daniels, that they do the work for Mrs. Lee's workroom, for which Mrs. Lee, on behalf of the committee wishes to express her gratitude.

Among those present on recent days have been Mmes. Walter J. Mitchell, R. de Wolfé Sampson, Henry G. Nichols, H. E. Warren, John Thorndike, Wallace Buell, Henry B. Sawyer, E. A. Boardman, Jr., M. G. Haughton, G. L. Cabot, F. P. Sears, E. L. White, H. P. McKean, Constantine Hutchins, E. H. Mower, Robert T. Paine, 2d, E. L. Kent, Geo. Barnard, J. H. Lancashire, Oliver Turner, Henry R. Heard, Geo. L. Hamilton, and the Misses Florence Lee, Edith Rantoul, Hannah M. Edwards, Ruth Burke, Katherine M. Evans, E. W. Perkins, and Margaret Rantoul. Mrs. Q. A. Shaw, 2d, has been appointed monitor for Wednesdays to assist Mrs. Oliver Turner.

The Beverly Farms Red Cross workroom for surgical dressings has been enlarged and now occupies two rooms in the library, the small room and the large lecture room.

All of the workrooms visited are sending out a plea for more workers, more help, more funds, more home workers, etc. At some of the workrooms where surgical dressings only are made the workers are urged to take home sewing. See our Society Notes for list of workrooms, place and time of meeting.

HAMILTON - WENHAM Red Cross workroom in the Wenham Town hall was visited by the BREEZE writer, Monday. The surgical dressings department and sewing department occupy the same room.

Present for work on dressings were the following: Mrs. Alanson L. Daniels, chairman; Mrs. Walter H. Seavey, instructor; and Mmes. Geo. W. Wilson, Georgia Lynch, Neil Rice, W. F. Lambert, R. L. Whitman, N. P. Johnson, J. Brown, Jr., Geo. A. Vickery, E. B. Trumbull, Chas. F. Ayer, W. H. Johnson, B. H. Tracy, John Thomas, Albert Tracy, Fred. Batchelder, Josiah Gifford, R. G. Knowlton, J. G. Corcoran, R. Robertson, Jr., B. W. Currier, W. M. Currier, John Heard, Jr., George S. Mandell, and the Misses Marion P. Dodge, Elizabeth Baker and Dorothy Libby.

Sewing is in charge of Mrs. E. B. Cole. Many workers were making the black pinafores to be sent to Belgian children. Layettes and jackets for aviators have also been made. Sewers include Mmes. Roswell Davis, Eugene Averell, H. G. Trefethen, C. J. Trott, T. C. Craig, M. E. R. Hale, Wm. A. Trowt, Chas. Patch, Austin Patch, S. M. Hill, Horace Caves, Mrs. Caldwell and Miss Gould.

THE Manchester Red Cross completed its quota in socks this week, having 350 pairs on hand done in less than a month, and going a little over at that. Mrs. Addie Marshall gave five pairs of hand-knitted ones done in one week; Mrs. Louis White, 17 pairs knitted on a machine; Mrs. Nancy P. McPherson, two pairs. Mrs. McPherson is a worker who is 92 years old. The Girls' Knitting club also assisted.

The sweater quota is also completed, 75 being done.

Also the society has fitted out seven boys with socks and sweaters during June.

"The worry-cow would have lived till now,
If she'd only held her breath;
But she feared the hay wouldn't last all day,

So she choked herself to death."
"Heaven is not reached at a single bound,
But we build the ladder by which we rise
From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies,
And we mount to its summit round by round."

—John G. Holland.

When freedom from her mountain height
Unfurled her standard to the air,
She tore the azure robe of night,
And set the stars of glory there.

Howard Fleming is working at the BREEZE office this summer.

Mrs. John J. Bradbury, of Freedom, N. H., has been spending the week with her daughter, Miss Bradbury, who is in charge of the Food Centre.

Manchester went "over the top" again, in the sale of War Savings Stamps and pledges. The minimum given the committee was 800 pledges, but up to last evening a total of 906 pledges were turned in and 2873 stamps were sold, which means about $12,000 in real money. Mrs. Allen S. Peabody was chairman of the large committee of women in charge, and she wants to express her thanks to the members for the very successful campaign.

If the Kaiser came to Manchester there is no question but what he would receive a warm reception. A few days ago some colored prints advertising a moving picture show for last night were put up around town, the particular feature of the advertising being a picture of the character representing the Kaiser. What was left of them yesterday morning was cleared away. We hope the eggs were of the kind that are past use, for it is too bad to use so many eggs to decorate the Kaiser's face, when they are 60c a dozen. Yes, if Kaiser Bill came to Manchester he would be royally received, may Satan take him!

TO SPEAK IN MANCHESTER ON WAR EXPERIENCES

Lieutenant Maurice Stehelin, a member of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission in Boston, in full command of recruiting of Essex County, who saw three years' of service with the French calvary in France and who is connected with the big firm of Stehelin & Co., importers and exporters with offices on Wall street, N. Y., is planning to speak in Horticultural hall, Manchester, the middle of July, under the auspices of the Essex County chapter of the American Red Cross.

Lieutenant Stehelin has accomplished wonders since he has been in charge of recruiting, having enlisted over 600 recruits in Essex County. He has spoke before nearly every lodge and social organization in Lynn, Lawrence, Haverhill and Lowell. He has been assigned to Gloucester and is doing excellent work. He is an exceptional speaker and the summer residents of Manchester will have a splendid opportunity to hear one of his famous war talks entitled "My Experience of Three Years with Germany."

CONCERT FOR BENEFIT OF MANCHESTER RED CROSS BRANCH

Manchester branch of the Essex County chapter of the American Red Cross will benefit from the concert to be given in Manchester Town hall, Saturday afternoon of next week—July 6—by the Wodell Treble Clef club, of Boston, Frederick W. Wodell, conductor. Miss Alice Roberts, violinist, will assist. The concert will be at four o'clock. Tickets at $1.00 and 50c may be had from Mrs. Henry L. Mason, Beverly Farms, or may be purchased at the Manchester Red Cross workroom, and at Allen's drug store, Manchester village.

The Wodell Treble Clef club, of Boston, has been singing during the past season in various war work concerts in and around Boston, including appearances at Commonwealth Pier, Camp Devens, and the Naval Radio school at Harvard. Last week they gave their own concert at Bates hall, Y. M. C. A., Boston, producing for the first time in Boston a cantata, "The Sleeping Beauty," by a blind composer, Miss Frances MacCollin, of Philadelphia. Their programs include some of the best of the more "popular numbers. The solo parts have been taken by members of the club and assisting friends. The membership includes twenty selected voices and they rehearse weekly throughout the season. All their concerts have been given for some benefit. The members feel that in this way they are able to do something helpful in "carrying on" the war.

SHOWERED WITH GIFTS

Last Wednesday evening Miss Mary Prince Dodge became a most surprised victim of a miscellaneous shower given by a number of her girl pupils at Quincy High school.

Miss Dodge was invited to spend the evening at the home of one of her pupils, Miss Alma Lawry, and upon her arrival there was taken completely by surprise upon finding a bevy of her girl pupils awaiting her.

A most enjoyable and pleasant evening was observed, and Miss Dodge departed for home, laden with two huge market baskets filled with cut glass, linen and other useful articles.

As soon as any information is received you will be promptly advised."

Edward Goldthwait was 19 years old on May 31. He was one of the first Manchester boys to enlist, joining the service on April 19, last year, at Newport, R. I., when only 18 years of age, going as a signal man in the navy.

Avoiding the Rush Hours

EVERYONE knows that there are "rush hours" on the trolley and steam railroads.

Very few persons know that there are also "rush hours" in telephone traffic and that calls are likely to be delayed at certain hours of the day owing to an unusual amount of traffic. The busiest period usually is from 9 to 11 A. M.

Traffic congestion on railroads can be remedied to some extent by placing additional trains or cars on the line. Not so with telephone traffic; each message must have its own exclusive "track."

If these messages could have a more even distribution throughout the day, it would assist in eliminating to a great extent the delays which sometimes occur at rush hours.

Urgent business calls cannot be deferred, but there certainly are many business and social calls that can be made outside the congested period.

By avoiding the high spots, 9 to 11 A. M., our patrons will assist us in our effort to meet the constantly increasing demands on our service caused by war conditions. This applies to toll calls as well as to purely local calls.

MANCHESTER BOY HEADS AIRPLANE SCHOOL

Frank F. Tenney, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Tenney, of Bridge street, Manchester, is one of the Manchester young men who is doing considerable to advance the airplane end of the war game. Mr. Tenney is principal of the Airplane Mechanics' school in New York city.

From a pamphlet about the school, under the heading of "The Teaching Staff," we copy the following:

"We have secured the services of Mr. Frank F. Tenney (licensed aviator) as principal of the Airplane Mechanics school. He was technically educated at the Lowell Textile school, Lowell, Mass., and holds a Certificate 'A' awarded on completion of ground school course at the University of Toronto, Canada, by the Royal Flying Corps. Before returning to the States, he completed the Military Flying at Deseronto, and Camp Borden. This training has been of great value, in the building up of our airplane school courses, as they are now in accord with the most approved studies given at the R. F. C. and U. S. Ground schools."

Mr. Tenney was in California as chauffeur for Miss Eleonora R. Sears when he first took up aviation. He took a special course at a flying school and on returning east he gave up his position and went to Canada to take up aviation. His advance from that simple beginning has been constant and he holds a most responsible position in New York today.

CHARLES H. FLEMING GOES TO FRANCE

Charles H. Fleming, the well-known life insurance agent, who formerly was a resident of Manchester, but now lives in Montserrat, goes to France, next week to engage in Y. M. C. A. work.

Just what branch of the work Mr. Fleming will be assigned to he does not himself know. In conversation with a reporter Monday night, Mr. Fleming said that he was to join a unit in New York and sail from there.

There are several departments of the work, either of which would be congenial to him. There is the "Hut" work, where the comforts of the soldiers are provided for, the athletic department which provides recreation, the religious department, and the educational department where classes in languages and mathematics are conducted.

As Mr. Fleming has had experience both in religious work and as a teacher, one of these two latter departments would seem to appeal to him most.

"But," said he, "I am ready to do anything that lies in my power to help in this great struggle for humanity and democracy, and feel proud of the opportunity afforded me, but just where I am going, except I know I am going 'over there,' or just what I am going to do I do not know myself."

Mr. Fleming is well-known in Beverly, is a deacon of the Baptist church and the teacher of the Taylor class and he has the best wishes of a large circle of friends and acquaintances as he goes over the water to do his "bit." He is a brother of Deacon William Fleming, of Manchester.

PEOPLE MUST LOOK OUT FOR THEMSELVES BY CANNING AND PRE-SERVING

THAT the world's storehouse is exhausted and that we are literally living from season to season, "hand to mouth," was forcefully brought out by Mr. Farlow, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in his lecture last Friday afternoon in Horticultural hall, Manchester, before members and friends of the North Shore Horticultural society.

Eric H. Wetterlow presided. After the address by Mr. Farlow, Miss Bradbury, of Manchester's Food Centre, gave demonstrations in the canning of fruit and vegetables.

Mr. Farlow said that a revolution is going on in the canning circles. Last year they advised the canning of nearly everything. Now the idea is to can only what you can't keep in some other way. He said that country and village people could keep roots (carrots, beets, etc.), in sand and other soils and that there was no necessity for canning in glass or tin such products that would keep otherwise. Perishable things must be put in cans or dried, however.

He made plain that people must can, everybody doing a little to conserve the surplus of products this year. He said that next year the products on hand in the country would be less than now. The government is going to take one-half the commercial products canned this summer. The stock in stores will be depleted, and the price of canned goods for next winter is not yet known, so he thought that every housekeeper would see that it was her duty to help can for the coming winter.

He explained the three known methods of canning as follows: the open kettle or hot pack method, in use for the past thirty years or more, quite successful, but involving trouble and heat; the intermittent, in which three sterilizations take place; and the cold pack, one period or one sterilization process.

FOOD WILL DECIDE THE WAR

The regulation of the United States Food Administration requiring the purchase of a pound of some other cereal for each pound of wheat flour, gives to each housewife and cook the privilege of doing her patriotic duty.

The Food Centre will cooperate with us and with the housewife by giving suggestions and recipes for the use of these wheat substitutes.

BULLOCK BROTHERS, GROCERS
POSTOFFICE BLOCK MANCHESTER

The latter, experimented with in Washington ten or more years ago, in use somewhat in our state for the past six years, but the one in general favor since last spring, when the canning campaign began, this, he said, was the easiest and most successful of all.

It was encouraging to housekeepers to hear him say the percentage of spoilage in the home canning last season was less than in the commercial canning; also that it is safe to eat canned goods, glass cans being generally safer than tin. (It was explained later by Miss Bradbury that canned vegetables should be heated before eating.)

Manchester received many flattering remarks in regard to its being a fortunate village with its up-to-date Food Centre. He said that Miss Bradbury had been asked by the government to interest the young girls of the town in canning so that a club could be formed in which the members would do their canning in their own homes and compete for prizes.

He stated that the proper place to can is in the homes and not the canneries, when possible. These should be primarily, as the Food Centre is, a place to go for information, demonstrations and bulletins. (Miss Bradbury is always ready to answer questions over the telephone, to show how to do a thing at the Centre, and to help in any food or household matter in her line.)

Miss Bradbury prefaced her demonstrations with a few remarks on "Why Foods Spoil." She said that in every case where a can of food spoiled something had not been done right. The work had not been done so as to prevent the action of the micro-organisms, such as, mold, bacteria and the yeast plants, which attack jellies, fruits and vegetables.

She told how this had been done in the olden times by smoking, salting and drying, all leading up to the present modes of canning, of which the cold pack is considered the best, especially for vegetables.

SIMPLE PARTY

GIVEN BY HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES
INSTEAD OF USUAL RECEPTION

The twelve girl graduates of Story High school, Manchester, were charming hostesses last Friday night, when they gave a farewell party to all their schoolmates in the High school and to the class that enters in September. The party was held in Price school hall. Games and dancing were enjoyed. Music was furnished by the Orpheus orchestra. Ice cream and cake were provided and served by the hostesses.

Over 100 were present, including the students, a few teachers and other guests, each graduate having the privilege of inviting a guest. Supt. and Mrs. J. C. Mackin, Principal and Mrs. John O. Matthews, Miss Porter and Miss Skinner were among the guests.

The class of '18 includes Mary Bradley Allen, Marion Carleton Crombie, Pearl Lavinia Conant, Anna Elizabeth Gillis, Margaret Mary Heneberry, Ruth Armstrong Herrick, Helen Hayden Knight, Annie Elsie McCormack, Florence Lee Morse, Helen Elizabeth Moiley, Ruth Edna Spry and Luella Crafts Stanley. The only boy in the class was Earl Fulton Height, who received his diploma, but had gone previous to commencement and the party, to the U. S. Naval academy at Annapolis. Boys in the service who would have graduated and would have been at the party are Gordon Baker, Joseph B. Dodge, Walter Eicke, Alfred Needham and Royal White.

This class, which had for its motto, "In Wisdom Is Strength," is one of the historic classes for the High school. The girls carried out the spirit of the times in having a simple, "good-time" party, without any decorations or frills, whatever.

GOVERNMENT POWDER PLANTS PLANNED IN JANUARY NOW IN OPERATION

Operation has begun in two government powder plants two months ahead of schedule. When the task of building the plants was considered by the War Department in January it was predicted that the production of powder might begin in August, barring unforeseen delays.

The $120,000,000 allotted for the plants is expected to give the government a smokeless powder production capacity equal to all other American plants combined. In construction of the plants it was found necessary to build a new town on each site to house the employees, and approximately 9,000 different buildings were erected. Streets were put down and sewerage, power plants constructed, and stores and hospitals built. Approximately 35,000 men worked on construction and about 30,000 will eventually be engaged in the actual production of powder.

GENERAL PERSHING INSISTS THAT LETTERS BE WRITTEN HOME

"Duty to one's country does not end on the parade ground, nor even on the battle field, but consists in doing everything in one's power to help win the war," says an order issued by General Pershing, a copy of which has been received by the War Department.

"To write home frequently and regularly to keep in constant touch with family and friends is one of the soldiers most important duties. Mothers and fathers will suffer if they do not hear often from sons fighting in France. In the present large companies it is not possible for officers to write letters for their men, and every man must do it for himself."

NEW "OVERSEAS CAP" ADDED TO EQUIPMENT OF AMERICAN TROOPS

The "overseas cap" now being issued to soldiers in the Expeditionary Forces matches the uniform in color, has a very low crown, and has no brim or peak. It is so made that it may be folded and carried in a pocket.

When American forces entered the trenches it was found that the brims of their campaign hats interfered with sighting through trench periscopes and that in the cases of tall men the high crowns could be seen above the parapets. The new cap is so low that it permits the men to move with practically the same freedom as when they are hatless. The trench helmet can be worn over it.

Only soldiers who have been with the Expeditionary Forces wear the cap. According to reports from France new regulations provide that officers shall wear their insignia of rank on the cap, and enlisted men place on it the button prescribed to be worn on the left side of the collar of the service coat.

COPLEY THEATRE, BOSTON

When "Inside the Lines" was acted at the Copley theatre last winter by the Henry Jewett Players, it proved itself a war play second only in popularity to "The Man Who Stayed at Home." It ran for seven weeks to large audiences, and when it was withdrawn it was placed in its author's hands for revision. It was felt at the time, both by the author and the management, that it could be improved in many details. That revision is now completed, and it will be given in its new version at the Copley theatre next week.

The author of "Inside the Lines" is Earl Derr Biggers, who was for some years a Boston newspaper man, and who wrote that great success, "Seven Keys to Baldpate." Its action takes place at the beginning of the war in the midst of the picturesque surroundings of that great British fortress, the Rock of Gibraltar.

culties in the way of obtaining a supply of aircraft is so accurate and is so general in its application to all countries that it is believed it should be given as wide a circulation as possible in America. Its application to the American aircraft situation is evident if we remember that Great Britain has been at war since August, 1914, and that every resource of the country, famous for generations as the center of mechanical developments, has been applied to the problem of the production of aircraft. This enables us to appreciate more clearly the progress made by the United States in 1917-18.

ODDLY SHAPED FEET NOW GET FITTED IN ARMY SHOES

Two out of every 1,000 men in the army have to have their shoes made to order. In several camps entire regiments have had their feet measured, and hundreds of drawings were made of odd shapes and sizes. At the present time the army uses between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 pairs of shoes a month.

Facts brought out in tests seem to prove that men in the present army are larger than those serving in previous wars. Not only is this shown by the larger sizes of shoes called for, but by the larger sizes of outer clothing that is being required. Records in the Quartermaster Corps show that a size larger, on the average, is being demanded in blouses, shirts and breeches than have ever before been used.

Guaranteed Silver Tableware FOR SUMMER HOMES

Our stock of silver tableware is one of the largest in New England. Of sterling silver, we show over twenty-five patterns and of silver plate over twelve.

The Silver Plate is what we recommend for the summer home, as it will save the wear on the more expensive sterling. Silver plate is now made in patterns which very closely follows the designs of the sterling and the quality is so good that we can guarantee it to give a lifetime of service. Teaspoons of this high quality can be bought for $6.00 a dozen and all the other pieces at a corresponding low price.

We also carry other qualities of silver plate at a lower price and although they will not give a life-time of service, they will wear for years. The teaspoons in some of these patterns can be bought for as little as $2.25 a dozen and there are others at $3.50 and $4.50 a dozen.

Should you wish to add just a few pieces to the silver you already have you are sure to find some one of our many patterns which will match it very well.

"Every Garden a Munition Plant"

By LILLIAN McCANN

MISS FRANCES WELD (ON THE HORSE) AND MISS ELEANOR HIGGINSON (AT THE HARROW)

"Early to bed and early to rise, Makes 'farmerettes' healthy, wealthy and wise."

"EVERY garden a munition plant" means just that upon the North Shore, where everybody is sowing the "seeds of victory" in backyards, front lawns, vacant lots and large community plots of land.

Especially what the feminine world is doing is of much interest just now. For they have come nobly to the service of the country in response to the nation-wide plea for war gardens. Various units in which women and girls are the laborers have been organized throughout the country. These go to a certain place and do the farm work as much as possible. Such an organization is in Hamilton this season.

The immediate region of the Shore is not a farming community, however, although it has been fortunate in having a wide awake Garden club for some time. (See last week's BREEZE for particulars of the club.)

The North Shore Garden club was very much interested in the recommendation of the Garden club of America that each branch should use its organization to accomplish some definite war work this season. A committee of three was appointed to investigate labor conditions in our little strip of rocky shore. It was found that with the war, all construction work automatically stopped, that there was enough labor available to produce perishable garden crops for immediate use and for conserving, but that the land offered no opportunity to produce staple crops in sufficient quantity to warrant taking a unit of women workers from possibly more important service.

There seemed, however, to be on the spot a latent force that might be productive, if developed,—the girls who were here and wished to devote their strength to the nation's service.

The matter was then put before the North Shore girls who live in Boston. They recognized that America has now three great needs,—men and ships and food,—and that this latter, in its production and conservation, gives to women their opportunity.

MISSSES ELLEN CURTIS, ROSAMOND JOHNSON AND RUTH PAINE

With no illusions that they have discovered a new sport, but with a real sense of undertaking patriotic and arduous work that must be systematically carried out, the girls offered their time and energy to the North Shore Garden club under the title of Service Auxiliary, if the club would make it possible for them to grow vegetables for the Beverly hospital, a well established institution.

The girls' object is to provide really fresh vegetables for the fifty patients, twenty-five nurses and twenty-five other employees, and to take the burden of supplying them off the market, as far as possible.

One member of the North Shore Garden club gave several acres of land in the Beverly Cove section. This was given to them plowed and harrowed. William Baldwin Miller, of Beverly Cove, gave several acres especially adapted for a potato field. Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge, of Pride's Crossing, loans a horse for two days a week. Cultivators, seeders and sprayers are loaned by neighbors. The American Chemical Company, in which Robert S. Bradley, of Pride's Crossing, is interested, has generously given fertilizers. The girls have supplied their own seeds and tools. Generous donations of cabbage and tomato plants have, however, come in from Mrs. Philip Dexter, of Manchester, and Col. William D. Sohler, of Beverly Cove.

Through Reginald Boardman, of West Manchester, an acre of land adjoining his property and belonging to the Hassam estate, was secured two weeks ago for an additional garden. This will be conveniently located for farmerettes in the

ROSAMOND JOHNSON, OF HAMILTON

Manchester section and will also provide a place for the Manchester girls to work who are permanent residents of the town. As an illustration of the girls' energetic work this last field was secured on a Wednesday and by Friday night it had been plowed, harrowed and planted.

The girls work in shifts, each girl designating which days she can give and the amount of time she is willing to put in, the minimum amount of labor for a week being nine hours, or three hours a day for three days. Many girls have signed agreements for much more time, some giving four and five days a week.

And the gardens are prospering, although badly nipped by the frost in the Cove section. Green peas were picked July 4.

Miss Edna Cutter, an expert gardener, consults with the girls. Miss Anna Thorndike, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Paul Thorndike, of Boston and Montserrat, who graduated from Bryn Mawr this year, is present each day and has general charge of the gardening. She has had some practical farming experience.

As a help to the girls, in the different war workrooms on the Shore are conspicuously placed market baskets and clever posters in bright colors painted by the girls, inviting the workers to contribute their surplus vegetables, in however small quantities. A worker may bring a bunch of radishes or a head of lettuce, too small an amount to pay to have sent to the hospital herself, but which, when put in the contribution basket, helps make a generous supply for that institution. These baskets are gathered up by a motor corps, and are delivered the same day to the hospital. Mrs. E. Lawrence White, of Beverly Farms, has taken the responsibility of seeing that they are delivered in good condition.

The quantity of vegetables required daily at the hospital is known and when it is supplied a day or two in advance, the produce from the girls' farms will be canned or dehydrated on the spot for the winter use in the hospital, at the Manchester Food Centre, or the Hamilton-Wenham cannery in Mrs. E. B. Cole's garage at "Brookby Farm."

Any unnecessary expenditure for goods or labor is prohibited. No new article is bought if an old one serving no purpose can be made to answer. At first it was thought that a suit would be required. But that was considered not essential, when the unit is primarily to train in the ways of avoiding waste. Any comfortable working outfit may be worn, from Vogue's latest hint for farmerettes to old clothes. Many of the girls have the national dress for farmerettes designed by Miss Gregg, a teacher in Miss Winsor's school in Boston. It consists of bloomers, leggings and a long smock, all khaki colored. Other girls have suits following this model, but developed in pink and blue cottons, while some wear simply a short skirt and middie blouse. Anything to keep cool in is what the girls really like. Simple straw hats of all descriptions are worn.

As an aid there is also an emergency corps that may be called on for rush work in the picking and pea-shelling season. No girl, however, can hire substitute labor. She shall get no man on the place to do her share if she does not feel like going. The girls make up their required time if compelled by any reason to be unable to work.

In making the energy of this group available the Garden club has the hearty endorsement of State Food Administrator Endicott, of Boston and Beverly Cove, and of Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, chairman of the Women's Committee of the Council of National Defense, and of Miss Arnold, former dean of Simmons college.

Miss Arnold has said of the work: "If the institution (hospital) is supplied with food by the work of the girls, that in itself will count for much; but it will count even more that all who are interested will become 'conscientious supporters of the government in its solution of the food problem, and that they are squarely determined to share our food' supply with our boys and the allies at the front."

"Everybody is needed and no one is excused. The more we do to help, the better we shall understand the problem, and both energy and enthusiasm will thus be renewed."

The North Shore Garden club is working out in its own way the fact that women's work on the land is of value. The club is following, in a measure, its customary form of meetings. But its auxiliary of farmerettes is very much alive to the purposes of their group. They chose their own officers at a meeting in April, consisting of the following: Miss Pauline Fenno, daughter of Mrs. L. Carteret Fenno, of Rowley, president; Miss Eleanor Abbott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Abbott, of West Manchester, vice-president; Miss Katharine Lane, daughter of Mrs. Gardiner Martin Lane, of Manchester, secretary and treasurer; Miss Katherine Crosby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby, of West Manchester, assistant secretary.

The girls come from all along the Shore within a radius of twenty-five miles. Many drive their own cars to the gardens, while others are brought and called for at the end of the work.

HELEN WALES' PONY

Children's Gardens

BEVERLY, the Garden City, has lived up to its name again.

Several years ago the Beverly Improvement society started school gardens and home gardens as a general improvement. Now that the country has called for so much gardening so that "food may follow the flag," the work has been organized on a little different plan.

Not so much stress is put upon a home garden for children. They are supposed to help their parents in the general family garden, while working in groups themselves in the school gardens under special supervision. This plan is working admirably for all concerned.

About four years ago the children's gardens were put under the supervision of Miss Helen Wales, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Rogers Wales, of 23 Washington street, Beverly. Miss Wales has done a work that is bringing her much praise and gratification these days.

The school gardens, in Beverly, are located on Cabot

War Work at Women's Educational and Industrial Union

For Forty Years This Organization Has Been Developing, in Sensitive Response to Needs of Community

Women's Educational and Industrial Union, 264 Boylston st., Boston

FOR more than forty years the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, of Boston, has been developing, in sensitive response to the needs of the community, its present organization covering so many and such diverse activities. To contribute worthily, effectively in this period of national emergency, it has not found it necessary to experiment along new, untried lines, for in the natural, logical expansion of its normal work is finding large opportunity for service.

Thus, it has been a regular function of the Law and Thrift department to encourage saving, especially among the smaller wage-earners. When the government, recognizing the importance of securing the aid of those who could not give or lend easily in larger sums, issued the twenty-five cent Thrift Stamps and War Savings Stamps, it was but natural that the Union should cooperate by offering the facilities it had already established for reaching the very people the government needed.

As was anticipated, demands upon the Appointment Bureau have multiplied rapidly with the continued withdrawal of men from civilian occupations. Investigations have been made of the resulting positions open to women, and much consideration has been given to the registration and placement of candidates for these vacancies as well as for government work. At present the Union is giving active assistance to the National Farm and Garden association in recruiting college women for farm labor.

The Vocational Training Office, too, has been instrumental in supplying war workers. Under its direction properly equipped students are being prepared through supervised practice in the Union's kitchens and lunch-rooms for work in Red Cross and Y. W. C. A. cafeterias, in canteens and hostess houses.

An especially significant piece of work is being accomplished through the food departments in connection with the problems of conservation. From the first the Union has of course scrupulously adhered to the principles laid down by the Food Administration. It has consistently featured "Liberty" foods, both in the sales and lunch rooms; it has made every effort to accustom its clientele to accept the less familiar substitutes; as the sugar and wheat stringency became more acute, producers for the Food Shop were warned that their use of these staples must be modified; and in the New England Kitchen and Food Laboratory continual experiments have been conducted to find satisfactory wheatless breads and cakes. When it became obvious that the most drastic curtailment would be necessary if we were to fulfill our national obligations, the Union went even farther, and pledged itself to eliminate entirely the use of wheat in the Boylston street building after May 1. This was done with the realization that it would undoubtedly mean a loss of income, a serious consideration when the profits of the industrial departments must be depended upon to carry a large part of the social-educational work. This year it is a particularly serious question since the School Lunch department, usually self-supporting, faces a deficit because of the prolonged vacation in the public schools necessitated by the fuel shortage. But if the measure was extreme, it was because the need was urgent and the issue clear. The Union could take no middle course.

There is not a part of the organization which has not some definite contribution to offer. Since the fall of 1916 a series of First Aid classes has been conducted by the Social Work department, and this season courses in Surgical Dressings have also been offered. An auxiliary of the Boston Metropolitan chapter of the Red Cross meets twice weekly in Perkins hall to prepare hospital supplies. Another practical form of coöperation with the Red Cross is the lunch service provided through the New England Kitchen at the headquarters and supply depot. The Re-

A HORSE SHOW, for the benefit of the Beverly Red Cross, will be given at "Round Plain Farm," Prides Crossing, on Saturday afternoon, July 20, at three o'clock. Entries may be sent to Miss Eleonora R. Sears, Beverly Farms; also applications for boxes. It is to be for saddle horses and is expected to draw a great many well-known horses.

Congratulations are being sent to Mr. and Mrs. Roger W. Cutler (Leslie Bradley), of Charles River, upon the birth of a son, the third in their family. The oldest child is "Bobby" Bradley Cutler, who is five, the second is Roger W., Jr., a two-year-old baby, while the new baby has been named Eliot C. Cutler, 2d, for Mr. Cutler's brother, Dr. E. C. Cutler, who is abroad with the Harvey Cushing unit. The baby was born June 27. Mrs. Cutler is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, of Pride's Crossing.

Lieut. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., and Mrs. Tuckerman (Phyllis Sears) are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter, their first child, on June 22. Lieut. Tuckerman is on his way to France. Mrs. Tuckerman is making her home with her father, Herbert M. Sears, at "Wood Rock," Pride's Crossing.

Mrs. A. Henry Higginson, who has been staying with Mr. Higginson at a southern camp, has returned to the bungalow on the estate of Henry L. Higginson, "Sunset Hill," Manchester, her husband's father, where she is spending the summer.

Mrs. Aksel Wichfeld, of Pride's Crossing, is a patroness of the Club de Vingt, which has been removed from New York this summer to Washington. The club will be the center of social activities when so many folks are detained there on account of war duties.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Grew's two sons are in camp. Jimmy will be missed from the French Wounded workroom near his home in West Manchester, where he did so much work last summer. He is at Camp Monadnock, N. H. His brother, Sturgis, is in a military training camp at Williamstown.

The Misses Elizabeth and Caroline Pousland, of Cambridge, are newcomers to Manchester this season. They arrived Monday at the Stanley cottage, Harbor st., West Manchester. Their brother, Lieut. Com. C. F. Pousland, U. S. A., is with them at present.

T. Jefferson Coolidge, of Coolidge's Point, Manchester. The Newbolds spent the winter in Beverly Farms. The cottage is at the corner of Hale and Valley streets.

NORTH SHORE folk are really here, as usual, it would seem, to read the list of workers who were present Monday at Mrs. Edward S. Grew's coach-house in West Manchester, the workroom for the French Wounded. They were Mmes. H. K. Caner, E. L. Kent, Walter J. Mitchell, James Means, Norton Wigglesworth, W. D. Augustus P. Loring, of Pride's Crossing, will be a candidate for the Republican nomination in the Second Essex Senatorial District, in September.

The concert benefiting the Beverly Red Cross, which was to have been given July 13, has been postponed until late in the season, when two others will also be given. Mrs. Bayard Warren will sing and Hañs Ebell, the Russian pianist, will give his services. He is now giving a series of concerts in Rochester, N. Y. The committee in charge includes Mrs. John C. Phillips, Mrs. Wm. H. Moore, Mrs. Robert W. Means, Miss Katharine Silsbee and Miss Elizabeth Caswell.

Mrs. Thomas B. Gannett, of Cambridge, has arrived at her cottage on Blossom lane, Manchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Northrup and four children, of New York, are newcomers to the Shore this season, formerly having spent the summers in France. They have the J. D. Knowlton cottage on West street, Beverly Farms.

Mr. and Mrs. James J. Phelan have closed their home at 11 Chiswick road, Brookline, and are again occupying the Wood estate on Blossom lane, Manchester.

He is a nephew of Mrs. Jere Abbott, of West Manchester, mother of Gordon Abbott and Walter Abbott, and a brother of Francis R. Bangs, of Nahant. He received his degree in honor of his work as a naturalist, having traveled extensively and gathered a large collection of birds and mammals which he has presented to the Harvard museum.

MRS. JOHN HAYS HAMMOND, of Gloucester, is busy this season with her ambulance work in Boston, where she has three that carry little crippled children, victims of infantile paralysis, to free clinics for treatment. Col. and Mrs. Cranmore N. Wallace, of Beverly Cove, have had, among recent guests, Mrs. Charles Foster, of Malden, sister of Mrs. Wallace, and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wallace, of Weymouth, the former a brother to Mr. Wallace. Col. Wallace has added two pigs to his place this year, thus helping out the call to raise pigs. Also fifty chickens have been put upon the grounds. Hector, the fine Airedale terrier, that is such a pet with every one around, will, no doubt, enjoy the company of these new friends. The peas in the Wallace garden are remarkably tall and thrifty-looking and messes have been picked since June 17. A tall flagpole stands near the house on which the flag is raised and lowered every day.

To clubs contributing, in entrance fees ($200 or more for 18-hole courses, $100 or more for 9-hole courses), official honor flags will be presented by the U. S. G. A.

The entrance fees have been as much as one wanted to give, over one dollar. Many have contributed whether they could play or not, because every dollar means more comforts for the boys at the front.

Mrs. Boylston A. Beal and daughter, Miss Betty, who have spent June at the Essex County club, left this week for Nahant, where they will be at the home of Mrs. James H. Beal, of "Lawnclyff," Nahant road. Mrs. Beal and her daughter had planned to go abroad this summer to join Mr. Beal, who is in Red Cross work, but changed their plans a few weeks ago.

THE Fourth of July golf tournament at the Essex County club, for the benefit of the Red Cross, was a big success, as far as the amount of money received for entry fees was concerned. The total was $440, ranging in amounts from $1 to $25. Thirty players started out in the tournament, but only a dozen turned in cards. It was a handicap vs. bogey competition, and was played to a tie with M. G. Haughton and A. G. Bartlett each two up. In the mixed foursomes tournament in the afternoon only two couples made the course. The tournament was won by M. G. Haughton and Miss Elaine Denègre, with a score of 96-14-82. R. P. Snelling and Miss Snelling made the round in 112-20-02.

R. S. Lovering, of Manchester, has been transferred from Camp Devens to Camp Lee in Virginia, in an officers' training school.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Coolidge, Jr. (Eleanor Cole), entertained a party of five young men from Mass. Technology last Sunday at their home in Magnolia. The students had dinner at the Essex club and spent the afternoon at the Coolidge home.

MRS. JAMES D. SAFFORD, of Norton's Point, Manchester, is anticipating a visit from her son, First Lieutenant Ralph Safford, who arrived from the front on Tuesday, after a year or more in France. He has won many honors on the firing line, and has returned to assist in the training of troops. He is at Camp Dix, L. I., awaiting orders. Mrs. Safford will come on from Springfield to join her husband when he visits in Manchester.

Birthday cakes, loaf cakes, individual cakes and old-fashioned gingerbread can be had fresh every day at the Page & Shaw Tea Room, Pride's Crossing. adv.

Manchester will be the center of attraction on the Shore tomorrow afternoon, Saturday, when the Wodell Treble Clef club, of Boston, will give a concert in the Town hall, the proceeds of which will go to the Manchester Red Cross.

Rev. Julian C. Jaynes, of First Unitarian society, Newton, will preach Sunday morning at First Unitarian church, Masconomo street, Manchester-by-the-Sea. Service at 10.45; Communion after the service. Seats free; you are cordially invited.

Through the office of T. Dennie Boardman, Reginald and R. deB. Boardman, of Boston and Manchester, the following rentals have taken place:

Mrs. Thayer Rabb, of New York, has taken the Weston cottage, Beverly Farms.

The Apron Shop on Manchester Common, July 10th, under the auspices of the Manchester Woman's club, solicits your liberal patronage. All proceeds will go to the Visiting Nurse Fund. Every sort of apron will be on sale, including Red Cross, kitchen, tea, bungalow, garden, maid's, butler's, children's, doll's, not to mention paper dolls' apron sets. Ice cream and iced drinks will also be sold. Young lady ushers will escort purchasers to the Food Centre, where war-time sweets will be sold for the benefit of the Visiting Nurse Fund. A cordial welcome awaits everyone there. The Apron Shop will be open at eleven o'clock in the morning. If rainy, the sale will be postponed to the next pleasant day. The whole community is urged to show its willingness to support such a splendid work.

THE NORTH SHORE was en fête last Saturday afternoon, when "Highwood," the beautiful estate of Mr. and Mrs. William Bentley Walker, was opened from four till seven, for a garden party, the proceeds to benefit the Lafayette Fund.

Tea was served on the terrace, Miss Miriam Sears and Miss Clara Winthrop being in charge of the tea tables. The gardens came in for much admiration and were visited by nearly every one present. Miss Elaine Denègre had general charge of the young ladies who took visitors to the garden and who also served tea. They were Mrs. C. P. Curtis, Jr., Mrs. Richard Peabody, Mrs. Bernard Carter, and the Misses Katherine Crosby, Rosamond Merrill, Agnes Means, Jessie Means, Ellen Curtis, Katherine Abbott, Betty Beal, Elizabeth Caswell, Lois Arnold, Isabel Boardman, Eleanor Bremer, Katharine Lane, Ella Snelling, Louise Littauer and Betty De Blois. All were in white, with red, white and blue ribbons hanging from the shoulder.

About 250 were present. The committee in charge says it was wonderfully successful in a financial way, as well as being the pleasant opening function of the North Shore social season.

The Salem Cadet band took the place of the Camp Devens military band, which was unable to come, and furnished a program of military music.

The Boston committee in charge of the Fund is composed of Mmes. Russell S. Codman, Allen Curtis, Allan Forbes, John Chipman Gray, Frederick S. Whitwell, Mrs. Wolcott, the Misses Alice M. Longfellow, Fanny P. Mason, and Henry F. Bigelow, Horace Binney, Herbert Browne, Vicomte P. de Fontenilliat, Richard Lawrence, J. D. Henley Luce, Chas. C. Walker and F. S. Whitwell. Mrs. William C. Endicott is secretary and W. K. Richardson, chairman.

At five o'clock the band played the French national anthem, after which Mr. Richardson introduced Lieut. Morize, of the French Mission. He gave a most enthusiastic talk on the work in France which the Fund is doing, saying that the personal gift of a kit meant much to the soldiers; also that of all the war charities this was one of the initial things that pleased the French people the most. Mr. Richardson also made a short appeal for money to carry on the work. At the close of the talks the band played "The Star Spangled Banner."

Mrs. Allen Curtis, of Beverly Farms, who had charge of the ticket sale reports that money is still coming in, many having purchased tickets or become interested who were not present. She says that the Fund is asked for about five times as many kits as they can supply. She received 500 postals this spring thanking the Fund for the kits and on many were requests for kits to be sent to soldier friends. She says that especially are the refugee soldiers grateful for them. They are costing $2.50, and cannot be duplicated for less than $5. She explains that the Lafayette Fund sends kits of useful articles to French soldiers at the battlefield, the name and address of the American donor being attached to each kit. The French government approves heartily of the gift, and pays all expense of distribution. The transportation is free. Practically no expense exists except for purchases of articles in the kit, which are made on very favorable terms.

She says the most important of the articles is a waterproof raincoat and blanket, which has been received by the French soldiers with deep gratitude, expressed in letters of acknowledgement, and other ways. This small personal gift to the soldier helps to sustain his courage by the assurance, in a most practical form, of American sympathy and American support.

Others of the French Mission present were Lieut.-

Col. Azan and Lieut.-Col. Boussavit. All of the Shore was present, Nahant being especially well represented. It is the home of the chairman, W. K. Richardson.

A kit was on exhibition during the afternoon, so that the useful contents might be noted. They consist of the following: poncho (combination raincoat and blanket), pair of socks, can of cretol ointment, combination knife and spoon, package of cigarette papers, note paper, pipe, pencil, cake of soap and postcard with donor's name and address.

Mrs. Hall McAllister, of 371 Marlboro st., Boston, has arranged her annual series of summer musicales, which will be given in North Shore homes. For the first one, on Friday afternoon, July 12, Mrs. Washington B. Thomas has offered the use of "Netherfield," her estate at Pride's Crossing; the second will be held on Friday afternoon, July 26, at Mrs. Henry F. Sears' house at Beverly, and the final one of the series on Friday afternoon, August 9, at Mrs. M. Graeme Haughton's at Pride's Crossing. The artists will be Mme. Marie Sundelius, soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera Company; Mrs. Nevil Ford, soprano, who is Mrs. McAllister's daughter; Vera Barstow, violinist; Leo Ornstein, a leader among the younger pianists; Mario Laurenti, baritone, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Vivian Gosnell, of England.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Graeme Haughton, of Pride's Crossing, who have been living at 238 Beacon street, Boston, have bought the house of Mrs. Louis Chauvenet, 13 Commonwealth ave., for their new home. The Beacon street house belonged to Mrs. Haughton's sister, Mrs. L. Carteret Fenno, of Rowley.

The beautiful rhododendrons had a quiet show of their own this season at the F. L. Higginson home in Pride's Crossing. The winter must have touched them gently for they bloomed in the usual great mass of beauty on either side of the driveway.

Nathan Hayward and family, of Wayne, Pa., arrived at Manchester Monday for the season. They have one of the Dr. Brown cottages at Old Neck.

Dr. George M. Kline and family have moved from their attractive home at Montserrat to the Prospect hill section of Beverly. Dr. Kline is an authority on mental diseases and is chairman of the State Board on Mental Diseases. He was at one time superintendent at Danvers State hospital.

Simon B. Hirsch and family, who have had a cottage at Manchester for several years, will not be visitors to the North Shore this season as Mr. Hirsch prefers to remain in Cincinnati for the remainder of the war. His son-in-law, Dr. I. H. Lemmen, is in the United States Medical service.

The Beverly Historical society will be open on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from two to five o'clock. The house was built by John Cabot in 1779. He was a great-great-uncle of the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, and a brother of George Cabot, who built the house that is now the Beverly City hall. The society has an interesting collection of autographs, models of old ships, portraits of ship masters, church records and Custom House records from 1780 to 1800 when Beverly was one of the five ports of free entry in what was then the United States. At that time custom houses were not owned by the Federal government, but were the property of the states where they were located.

Glimpses Here and There of North Shore Estates

Some Signs of Early Summer Activities Typical of the Times

VII

BEVERLY FARMS has a beach walk that everyone who visits the North Shore ought to take.

It begins at West beach at the bathing pavilion and extends down to the estate of Judge William H. Moore, at Pride's Crossing. The first estate noticed on this walk is the beautiful one of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Emlen Hutchinson, of Philadelphia (see picture on front cover this week).

The big yellow brick house with its surrounding stone walls and vine-covered fence attracts much attention. It stands next to the pavilion land, with the main entrance on West street and extensive terraces on the beach side.

The large vegetable and flower gardens and fruit garden lie on the opposite side of West street along the railroad. These are all in a flourishing condition, the flower garden showing much beauty now, notwithstanding the fact that many plants and the attractive box borders were frozen. Tall cedar poles, over which woodbine hangs gracefully, form a fence which screens the house and grounds on the West street side. Next to the pavilion a high stone wall, with a serrated top over which vines are running, separates the grounds from the public beach, while next to the sea is a stone wall of plain granite blocks with a level top on which flower pots are placed at intervals. Two rustic gateways are in this wall, affording passages up to the terraces and house.

Over the tops of the walls the cedar trees make a pretty showing. Towering up over all are big oaks and other trees.

From the water side the yellow house with its white trimmings and green blinds makes a fine showing, its terraces surrounded with white balustrades being very striking. Ivy is creeping over the terrace walls.

Down on the beach below the house is a little tent where the children have good times every summer. Here Frances and Natalie and Edward have their boats and other playthings and enjoy the long summer mornings with their little friends.

Now, if you will go walking along the beach, many interesting places will be noted. Perhaps you will see a rather queer looking double raft standing on end on the beach. You may be interested to know it is an invention of Godfrey L. Cabot, of Beverly Farms. It is a part of the aeroplane equipment which is stationed on Mystery island. The high double raft (it has the appearance of two rafts joined at one side) is placed out on the water. Gasoline is stored on it's top. The aeroplanes can fly over it and the gasoline can be grabbed without necessitating a halt in the flight. It has worked successfully between the beach and the island.

Next to the Hutchinson place is the home of Miss Elizabeth W. Perkins and Miss Sarah S. Perkins, of Boston. This is a charming, home-like house set in the midst of fine trees. An artist's little studio is seen here in which much canning was done last season and will be this season, now that the women all over the land have been admonished to can.

The next estate is "Old Tree House," the artistically built house of the Frank B. Bemis family, of Boston. Here, in surroundings most inviting, a new wing is being thrown out which will form a library of considerable dimensions. The trees which surround it and the rest of the house are some of the most beautiful on the Shore.

Here very tall Norway spruce trees have their limbs extending and drooping clear down to the earth. Some of these limbs have taken root and formed new trees six or more feet from the mother tree.

The next place belongs to Mr. and Mrs. Neal Rantoul, of Boston (see front cover of next week's BREEZE). The view from the beach up to their house is very attractive. The ivy-covered house has a pretty lawn and grass embankment back of it on the beach side. A rose hedge runs along the embankment very effectively. The little brick bathhouse is one of the most attractive-looking along the beach.

Adjoining is the home of Hon. Robert S. Rantoul and his daughters, of Salem. Stone steps lead up the embankment here to the lawn which runs up to the house. Very charming is the seaside cottage of the Rantouls with its big veranda and long windows facing seaward. Potato patches and thrifty gardens cover the lawns around both of the Rantoul homes. These two homes have large grounds facing on West street and are entered by driveways which curve gracefully up to the front doors. Many fine old trees heavily shade the lawns.

It may have been noticed in this walk that after leaving the Hutchinson place, which had a stone retaining wall, that all of the other places have simply wooden posts and palings for their sea-walls. These make an attractive edging along the beach.

Next comes "Edgewater House," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter, of Washington. This is a big brick house with white trimmings and green blinds. An attractive feature of the place is the revolving sun-parlor, situated quite close to the beach. It is glassed in and has a pretty cedar pole roof. Steps lead down from it to the beach.

The sight-seer along the beach next views a large field running down to the beach. In haying time he would see a rare sight, for then the two big oxen belonging to the Haven estate are out drawing in the loads of hay. Oxen have always been a part of this fine old place, one of the oldest on the Shore. The old Haven homestead may be seen, in which Miss M. E. Haven and her sister, Mrs. Waldo O. Ross, of Boston, are living. Farther up in the place is the home of Mrs. Franklin Haven and her brother, F. Munroe Endicott. Much could be written of the beauties of these places, but we will hasten back to our beach walk.

On past the fields you go until a wire fence abruptly stops the walk. The land is rather low and not so very inviting looking. So you better not attempt to get over the fence, but just satisfy your curiosity by gazing at the scene before you.

Up high on terraced cliffs are two great white houses with long stretches of lawns and gardens in front of them, reaching down to the water. The first is that of Judge Moore and the second is "Swiftmoor," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Aksel Wichfeld, of Washington. The Moore home is known as "Rockmarge." The places make a magnificent and somewhat startling appearance as one emerges from the low beach and gets on high grounds to view them. The Moore place shows off its hedges, willow walk and terraces quite clearly, although it is some distance over to them. The stables in which are housed Judge Moore's famous horses cannot be seen from the beach on account of the trees which surround them.

Upon the cliffs among the trees are seen a few houses, those of Mr. and Mrs. Washington B. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Bradley and Gordon Dexter, being discerned. Mr. Dexter's great flagpole looms up among the trees with its big flag flying to the winds.

Now, we'll turn around and retrace our steps. If we glance seaward Mystery island seems very close. It seems only a step to its barren banks. Ahead of us is Chubb's Point, and Smith's Point is down Manchester way. These two seem to shut off the view, really to lock themselves around the water, and no one would dream that such a pretty little harbor as Manchester has, could be penetrating the rocky shore in the near distance.

If you think this walk worth taking, just try it some day this summer.

West beach is always gay with bathers on hot summer mornings. On this sandy stretch is where Miss Eleonora Sears has often ridden in races, it seeming to be a favorite sport with the Farms horseback riders to ride on the beach for a diversion.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR TWINING HADLEY, of Yale university, and Mrs. Hadley, came up from New Haven to be with their son, Major Morris Hadley, of Camp Devens. They were holiday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Wood Blodgett, at Pride's Crossing, whose daughter, Miss Katherine C. Blodgett, is the fiancée of Major Hadley. No definite plans are, as yet, made for the wedding of the young people, whose engagement was announced in the winter. Miss Hadley also accompanied her parents.

Miss Helen Fraser, the well-known English lecturer of London, England, who is connected with the government there, has spent the week with Mr. and Mrs. John Wood Blodgett, at Pride's Crossing. Another houseguest for the present is Miss Frances P. Field, of Tuxedo Park, N. Y. Mrs. Blodgett's sister, Miss Grace Cumnock, of Lowell, is spending some time with her.

The Alexander G. Cumnock family, who spent last summer in Manchester, are remaining at their home in Lowell this year.

E. H. Bartlett and household arrived at West Manchester this week, occupying the Mansfield cottage on Harbor street.

Upland Farms at Ipswich, one of the model milk farms of New England, is making a specialty of high-class baby milk from Ayrshire cows, testing four percent. As their trucks go all over the North Shore daily, the very best of service is offered. adv.

Mrs. John W. Weeks, and Mrs. J. W. Davidge, wife and daughter of Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts, and Mrs. Sinclair Weeks, of West Newton, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Loose at Sea Rocks, Eastern Point, Gloucester, last Sunday.

PUBLIC bequests amounting to $247,500, of which $100,000 is given to the city of Boston, and private gifts amounting to nearly $2,000,000 are contained in the will of Abraham Shuman, late Boston merchant and resident of Beverly Cove.

The city of Boston is given $100,000 to erect, on land in Dorchester ave., a building for patients convalescing from acute disease, following treatment in the City hospital, except those convalescing from alcoholism. The building is to be known as the "A. Shuman Memorial Building for Convalescent Men," and in a certain contingency may be erected in West Roxbury.

The trustees of the Museum of Fine Arts are given $50,000 and are to select twelve pictures from those owned by Mr. Shuman.

The president and fellows of Harvard college are given $10,000, the income to be used each year for some worthy student in the graduate school of business administration. A like sum, to be similarly used, is given to Tufts college.

A fund of $7500 is created for the Boston Floating hospital for the purpose of that institution, "especially for the purpose of defraying the expenses of a memorial day, on July 4th of each year, in memory of my late wife, Hetty Shuman, and a memorial day on September 3d of each year, in memory of my late daughter, Lillian Gertrude Shuman."

The workshop at Radcliffe college, known as No. 47, founded by Miss Lillian G. Shuman, is given the library owned by her and additions made to it by Mr. Shuman. The workshop also is to have $1000 for the purchase of books and $250 for a period of five years annually.

Many public charities received gifts of $2000 and $1000 each. The employees of the company and his household servants were liberally remembered.

The will directs that all the household furniture and equipment at 90 Commonwealth ave., Boston, and in the house at Beverly, known as "Hetmere," be distributed among and between members of his immediate family, including the grandchildren and that within one year the Commonwealth avenue house and all real estate owned by him at Beverly shall be sold and the proceeds shall go into the residue of the estate.

OCEANSIDE HOTEL, Magnolia, is filling up with guests, as it usually does at this season of the year. The Fourth of July is always the date for a big exodus of families from the city to the seashore, and this year was no exception to the rule.

Mrs. James Longley, of Boston, has returned to the Oceanside for her third season. She has apartments in "Sea Vista" cottage.

Dr. and Mrs. W. F. O'Reilly and family, of Lynn, are at the Oceanside for the summer, this being their first season.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Anderson, of Detroit, have arrived at the Oceanside for the season. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson and family have spent the greater part of the winter at Pasadena, Calif., and have just motored through from Detroit, leaving their son, Wendell, at Plattsburg, and their daughter, Suzanne, at a girls' camp.

Mrs. Marshall Field, of Washington, widow of the late Marshall Field, of Chicago, is a season guest at the Oceanside hotel.

MMAGNOLIA has always been an alluring spot for the visitor within its precinct, calling forth the memories of the many beautiful spots with which the place abounds. It is rarely that one finds such a delightful combining of seashore and country as that which Magnolia offers to the guest. From nearly every summer place glimpses of the sea can be had, and the beauties of the shore are indescribable. Every year guests return to the Oceanside who have traveled afar since their last year's visit, and always, are they charmed anew with the scenery which has made Magnolia famous.

Although many of the young men who are yearly visitors to the Oceanside have enlisted in either of the branches of the U. S. army and navy, nevertheless, the week-ends at the hotel will be gay this summer for the reason that the boys who are within a reasonable radius of the hotel will no doubt come down for over Sunday whenever possible.

Spencer Kennard, who is so well-known along the North Shore, especially among the younger set at the Oceanside, Magnolia, in seasons past, is back this summer, and is now with the firm of Dreicer & Co. He is living at the Oceanside, with Mrs. Kennard (Madeline White) and little son.

Mrs. Maurice Joseph, of Avondale, Cincinnati, has returned to the Oceanside for the season. With her friend, Mrs. Daniel Clemson, of Pittsburgh (formerly Christine Miller), Mrs. Joseph has given much of her time to arranging concerts for the drafted men.

A RECENT WEDDING of interest to the Shore was that of Miss Barbara Gale, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Gale (Mattie Pollard) and Lieut. J. Edson Andrews, U. S. N. R. F., a graduate of Princeton, '14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilber J. Andrews, of Chicago, which took place on Wednesday, June 19, in the Church of the Holy Name, Swampscott, the Rev Edward Tillotson, the rector, officiating, assisted by the Rev. Hugh C. Burr, of Haverhill, the former home of the bride's family.

The bride wore the conventional white satin gown and her attendants, Mrs. Harold D. Walker (Corinna Searle) and Mrs. Charles G. Squibb (Adele Thayer) were in "war gowns" of blue and white checked gingham, and simple hats.

The bridegroom, who has just returned from service in France, on a short furlough, was attended by his brother, Elliot Redfield Andrews, of Chicago, as best man. The ushers were Messrs. Jean Henri Clos, of New York; Everett Pervere, Harold D. Walker and James Murray Kay, all of Boston, Mr. Kay being of the Eastern Point, Gloucester, colony.

Organist Francis Amory Snow eliminated all German music from the service and instead of the conventional bridal march from "Lohengrin" and the Mendelssohn "Wedding March," a "Wedding March," by an American composer, Dunham, was played. The vested choir sang a single verse of the hymn, "O Perfect Love," and in the service the national anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner." For the bridal recessional the choir sang "The Son of God Goes Forth to War." A reception followed the ceremony at "Greystone Hall," the summer home of the bride's parents.

THE new home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Rolfe, on Atlantic ave., Phillips Beach, is nearly completed, under the direction of Gay & Proctor, the Boston architects, and C. A. Milton, of Everett, the builder. It will be a handsome addition to this section, which boasts of several new and stately brick houses.

This house is colonial in appearance, with water-struck brick veneer exterior finish, and has a slated roof. The colonial porch with fluted Corinthian columns and leaded glass door, attractive pediment and other trimmings, in white, gives the house character, as will shutters with which the windows will be fitted. The hip roof shows dormer windows jutting out. The first floor is well planned as to rooms leading from the hall, with its stairway conveniently placed. A living-room about 32x20 feet in size, with fireplace and beamed ceiling, has a connecting sun room, with fireplace. This projects from the main part of the house and opens upon a terrace. The dining-room, with fireplace, adjoins a well-placed breakfast room, which occupies a projection corresponding with the sun room on the opposite corner. The kitchen and other service rooms and maids' rooms complete this floor. On the second floor are to be four master's bedrooms, three baths and two rooms for maids. Two of the chambers are provided with fireplaces. On the upper floor there will be two bedrooms, a bath and large storage space. The interior finish will make the house attractive in many details. It is not expected to be finished until some time in November. There is to be a garage to correspond with the house in its type. It will provide for two cars and their up-keep, with a room and bath for use of the chauffeur. The plans call for laying out formal and other gardens with planting of shrubbery, trees and flowers, when the house is completed.

New Ocean House, Swampscott

JULY bids fair to be a busy month at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, and every day new bookings are being made for the remainder of the season. The convention days are over and once more the hotel has taken on a more quiet air, the hurry and worry of big crowds forgotten.

The Red Cross work has commenced in the ball-room and sessions will be held every Wednesday and Friday morning, with Mrs. Clifford D. Sawyer in charge, as in other years. This branch of the Red Cross is working through the Lynn Red Cross, which has done such splendid work the past season.

During the winter Mrs. Sawyer was head of the Tuileries surgical dressings auxiliary of the Red Cross and many of the ladies working this summer were also present at the Boston meetings. They have received the following note, which has been posted where all can read, in the hotel:

THE TUILERIES SURGICAL DRESSINGS AUXILIARY OF THE RED CROSS

"The ladies who have been engaged in Red Cross work from November 1st to July 1st, working one-half day a week from November to February and two half days a week from February to July from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m., at The Tuileries, Boston, have made 50,851 surgical dressings, which include compresses, gauze wipes, sponges, 6x3 gauze strips, tampons, cotton pads 12x24 and 11x12, and 8x12 pads for the front-line packets. The materials have been purchased with money contributed by the ladies of The Tuileries Group.

"It is hoped very much that another season the work may go on; and we should be delighted if any of the workers will interest their friends to work with us.

"We wish to thank the ladies for their generous contributions and efficient work during the period above named.

"GERTRUDE B. SAWYER, Chairman."

The first children's party of the season will be given July 17, in the afternoon, and it is expected that a very pretty novelty party will be arranged for the young folk.

The dancing at the hotel is in order every evening from 8.30 until 10.15 during the week and from 9 until 12 on Saturday evenings. Every Tuesday night a "lucky contest" will be in order, and special prizes will be awarded the winners of the various numbers.

Already plans are under way for the Red Cross fête to be held at the New Ocean House, some time during the middle of August, the date to be announced later. Mr. Champagne has the affair under his direction and is planning for afternoon field events with possibly a pageant of the war. Prof. Elihu Thomson has a fine war garden on the estate which faces the ocean, near the beginning of the Lynn boulevard at the soldiers' monument at Swampscott. The entire lawn has been given over to raising vegetables and one of the finest crops of potatoes is in the ground, the plants being in full bloom at the present time. This is the second year that Prof. Thomson has had a garden and it is reported that never again will the grounds be put down to grass.

C. N. Brush, of Longwood, has purchased "Shingle-side," at Little's Point, Swampscott, this cottage having been his summer home for the past twenty years. Several minor changes have been made in the house, chiefly in the service part, where a new drying room has been added on, a cold storage room and a new sitting-room for the servants completing the addition.

THE new home of Miss Anna J. McAleer, just at the entrance of Tedesco Point, Swampscott, is a fine addition to the summer houses in this vicinity. It is from the plans of W. W. Dinsmore, a Boston architect, and was built by A. W. Barker, of Lynn. It is of simple design and is shingled all over for an exterior finish. The low pitched roof shows long dormer windows and, unlike most houses, this cottage is square in its outlines, with no bay windows or other projections to break the straight lines. On the first floor—there are but two stories—a living-room extends the entire end of the house. It is provided with a good fireplace, and opening into it is a stairway of modest dimensions, leading above. The dining-room, which adjoins, faces the front terrace. This room also has its fireplace. The kitchen and service rooms are conveniently planned. On the second floor there are two main bedrooms and two baths; also a guest room and maid's room. From one bedroom there is a large sleeping porch.

HOTEL PRESTON piazzas overlooking the broad Atlantic ocean have been tastefully decorated with hanging baskets, which have been filled with flowering shrubs. All around the grounds red geraniums have been set in and they make a bright spot of color.

PHILLIPS BEACH.—

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice K. Curran and family of Andover, have been at their handsome residence on Atlantic and Ocean avenues for some weeks. This house was built a year ago and is one of the show places in this vicinity. From the terrace in the rear of the house, one obtains a splendid view of the ocean, looking down over the low marsh land fronting onto King's Beach.

THE new home of Bartholomew J. Donnelly, at Phillips

Beach, is a decided addition to this handsome locality and it is not unlike an Italian villa in its general appearance, with its exterior of limestone veneer, and at the entrance fluted columns are similarly treated, in keeping with the house. A wide covered veranda marks one end of the house, across which it extends. The roof is of brightly colored green tiles and the blinds are of corresponding color. The whole appearance of the house is dignified.

On the first floor the spacious hall divides a long, wide living-room on one side from a dining-room and breakfast room on the opposite side. The breakfast room is finished in limestone. The stairway forms a feature of the hall, in the way it is planned. There has been care in the plan and equipment of the kitchen and service parts of the house. The second story provides five or six sleeping rooms and three tiled bathrooms.

BEACH BLUFF.—

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Paine, of Commonwealth ave., Boston, who occupy the attractive "Farm" at Beach Bluff, have done themselves proud this year with their war garden. The entire front of the estate has been given over to one of the finest crops of potatoes to be seen anywhere along the Shore. Farther back from the road and nearer the house, there is a truck garden, which is tenderly cared for by the family, Mrs. Paine taking especial delight in working in the field with her daughters. A small flower garden is also to be seen, but only in the immediate vicinity of the house, which sets up on the hill, quite a way back from Atlantic ave.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Robinson are at Beach Bluff for the summer, coming down from Malden last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Seth F. Low, formerly residents of Beach ave., Marblehead, have a most attractive home in Putnamville, where they now live the year round. Mrs. Low is much interested in the farm and the prize stock has already won prizes at some of the local county fairs. During the pig raising campaign this spring, the Lows did their bit by buying Berkshire pigs and starting in to raise these valuable animals as their move toward helping the government. The handsome Low house at Marblehead is now owned by Carl P. Dreyfus, of Boston.

The two sisters of Secretary of State Lansing, Misses Emma S. and Katherine F. Lansing, who spent most of last summer at the Rockmere, Marblehead, and have been all winter serving with the Red Cross in France, were recently under bombardment when the Germans bombed the little village where they were conducting a canteen, and they were forced, with others, to live for a while in a champagne cellar.

The Rosary, on Beach street, Marblehead, is one of the beauty spots of that section, for Mrs. Henry L. Foote, and her friend, Miss Schumacher, work early and late to make their roses the most beautiful to be seen. In this one garden, which gives so much pleasure to people, are 5000 plants and over 1200 varieties of roses. Commencing to bloom in May, the garden is at this time a bower of loveliness, and visitors are made most welcome. The roses will last until snow flies, under the tender care of these two ladies.

The Frederick McQuesten garden at Marblehead Neck, is in full glory now, and the rose garden, which is at the northeasterly end of the house, overlooking the sea, is in full flower, the many blossoms filling the air with fragrance. Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Williston, of Lynn, have a handsome cottage at Marblehead Neck, near the end of the Causeway. It is a splendid example of the small type of comfortable house, and it is not unlike a bungalow in its general plan, although the exterior is not of that form. It has two gabled ends, with connecting central part, all low and simple in effect and it is placed high on a ledge overlooking not only the harbor, but giving glimpses of the ocean, off toward Nahant. It is painted a gray white, with pale green roof and trimmings. The house contains the usual living-room and dining-room, each with fireplace and kitchen, service rooms and a number of bedrooms and bath.

The Frank E. Peabody estate on Marblehead Neck is one of the show places of the Shore, and this season it is made doubly interesting by the strenuous efforts which have been expended in getting the vegetable garden planted. The great rolling lawn, which slopes down from the house to the street, is no more, and every inch of space has been given over to vegetables, in which beans and potatoes play a leading part. The family plans not only to have fresh produce for the table this summer, but a campaign of canning is already planned for later in the season.

Sergt. John T. Whitmore and Mrs. Whitmore (nee Rosamond Benson), of Salem, spent the week-end at the summer home of Mrs. Whitmore's parents, Hon. and Mrs. Henry P. Benson, Marblehead Neck. Sergt. Whitmore is with the Depot Brigade at Camp Devens.

EASTERN POINT.—It is safe to predict a most successful social season, at Eastern Point, the proceeds to be given to various war needs. Aside from the good times, everyone will be busy in some way, with the knitting needle, the sewing needle and the hands. There is plenty for our hands to do, to help win this war. The Red Cross work, heretofore carried on at the Gallery-on-the-Moors, has been transferred to the Gloucester Yacht clubhouse, Rocky Neck, East Gloucester, leaving the Gallery free to hold entertainments for the benefit of the war funds. Then again, Hawthorne Inn casino will be open for workers for the French and Italian War Relief.

Splendid enthusiasm was manifested at the public mass meeting at the Gallery-on-the-Moors, on Monday evening, when a community theatre was established. Over a hundred members joined the Playhouse-on-the-Moors. Commodore John Greenough, of New York, presided at the meeting and speakers were Miss Lucy Conant, of Boston, who is to be designer of costumes and scenery; Miss Florence Cunningham, of Gloucester, the stage director; Anna Deaton Schmidt of Washington, who will direct the outdoor Greek pageant in connection with the community theatre, and William E. Atwood, whose generosity in opening the Gallery for the theatre is appreciated. The gathering had the pleasure of hearing Sam. Hume, director of the Arts and Crafts theatre, Detroit, Mich., speak of the work in the community theatre in that city. As Mr. Hume emphasized, it will be the aim to give the best production with the best talent to be "tried out," and to encourage a democratic community spirit in the arts. There will be no distinction of class nor nationality and it is hoped to secure the best results from people adapted to the particular parts in the plays. The first plays to be presented on July 25, 26 and 27, will be "Land of Heart's Desire," "The Bank Account," and "Neighbors," and the "Vegetation Greek Pageant," it is planned to hold on August 9, at some picturesque spot at Eastern Point. The executive committee for the movement of the community theatre comprises Mrs. Isaac Patch, Mrs. George W. Woodbury, Miss Lucy Conant, Miss Florence Cunningham and William E. Atwood. Applications for membership or contributions for the movement are invited to be sent to Miss E. L. Atwater, the secretary, at the Gallery-on-the-Moors.

Commodore John Greenough and Mrs. Greenough, of New York, have arrived at their summer estate, Eastern Point, for the season.

General Anson G. Mills, of Washington, D. C., has joined his family here, at Bayberry Ledge, the Mills estate, Eastern Point.

Miss Jane Peterson, a New York artist, and Miss Louise Leonard, of Boston, have taken occupancy of "Thistlecroft" cottage, on the moor, at Grape Vine Cove, for the season. Miss Peterson is securing much material in this locality for her canvas.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Lawrence Smith and the latter's mother, Mrs. Eliza Perkins, and sister, Miss Clara Crawford Perkins, all of New York city, arrived recently at the attractive Smith estate on Ledge road for the season. The Smith house was completed last year and it has a fine outlook of the moors and ocean.

Mrs. Groescke, of New York, who had one of the Taylor bungalows, on Mt. Pleasant ave., last season, has arrived again this season, in company with her young daughter, who is a prodigy as a pianist.

Lewis Niles Roberts, of Boston, who is the head of the Italian War Relief work, has taken a lease of the W. J. Little house, 5 Eastern Point road.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Damon Allen, of Clarendon street, Rocky Neck, have been entertaining their son, Donald B. Allen, of the Engineering Corps, U. S. A., Bridgewater. The latter is attending the Lehigh university engineering school, for army railroad building.

A unit for Italian War Relief work has been started in East Gloucester and meetings are now being held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings at the bungalow of Mrs. George L. Noyes, Rocky Neck, wife of the Boston artist. All workers for this great cause are invited. Garments will be made for the civilian population of Italy, as well as surgical dressings. Mrs. G. L. Noyes is president of the unit; W. Jay Little, is treasurer, and Mrs. Little is on the committee. The amount of $200 is needed for the work and contributions of any amount will be received. The Hawthorne Inn casino will be open soon for this Italian Relief work, as well as French Relief work.

BASS ROCKS.—The Bass Rocks Golf club is now open for the season. Everything is in fine condition and as usual teas will be served in the reception room or on the spacious veranda. The extensive rambler rose vines, which hang over the pergola and the veranda roof and posts, are a beautiful feature of the clubhouse surroundings, and despite the severe winter, the vines have not been noticeably killed by the frost. A large number of the club members are using the links daily.

The large Souther seashore mansion, more familiarly known as the Judge Sherman house, because it was erected by the late Judge Edgar D. Sherman, father of Mrs. Henry Souther, is being occupied this season by Mrs. George vonL. Meyer, widow of the late ex-Ambassador Meyer, to Italy. Mrs. Meyer, and her daughter, Mrs. Raymond Rodgers, are making a change from the country atmosphere at "Rock Maple Farm," the lovely Meyer estate, at Hamilton, to the environs of the seashore. The Meyers certainly have a direct change of scene, for their summer home at Bass Rocks is located on great, high boulders, directly over the surging sea, commanding a magnificent view of the beach and ocean, the three noted islands, Thatcher's, Milk and Salt islands, the former with its twin lighthouses. The house is furnished with considerable beautiful antique furniture. The Siamese legation has formerly occupied the house for several seasons.

Clive T. Bailey, attaché of the British embassy, of New York, has taken the lease of an attractive cottage on Beach road, Bass Rocks, situated near the golf links and owned by Lawyer C. B. Terry.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wurts Dundas, of New York, have arrived at their big estate on Atlantic avenue heights, near the golf links. The Dundas estate is the most pretentious at Bass Rocks. The house, of English design, is built of stone, as are also the walls and steps.

of the lawn terraces. The gardens are beautiful in the inner and outer courts of the estate. All the stone in the construction was drilled from ledges on the property.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Chauncy Brewer, of Boston, have opened their Bass Rocks estate, "Tanglemoor," on Little Good Harbor road, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Webster, of Worcester, are again occupying the Spring cottage, on Brier road, Bass Rocks, this season.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Rockwell, are situated in their cottage on Nautilus road, Bass Rocks, near Good Harbor Beach.

Good Harbor Beach Inn has been opened for the season, and a number of guests have registered. Representative E. C. McIntire, is proprietor and manager of the Inn.

The F. H. Eatons, of Lawrence, have arrived at their cottage on Souther road, Bass Rocks.

ANNISQUAM.—A merry dancing party was held at Village hall, Annisquam, on Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Girl Scouts. An orchestra of four pieces furnished music.

The play, "For One Night Only," which was presented by amateur talent during the winter, will be given in Village hall, Annisquam, on the evenings of July 18 and 19.

The Thomas H. Shepards, of Brookline, are expected to arrive at Norwood Heights, Annisquam, the latter part of the month, for the remainder of the season.

Miss Sarah Moore, of Peabody, is occupying the Dr. Houghton cottage on Squam Rock's road, during this month.

Mrs. Henry B. Carpenter and family, of Roxbury, are occupying the Ricker cottage on Leonard street, Annisquam.

The family of Frederick M. Ives is occupying the Bott cottage, on Norwood Heights, Annisquam, again this season.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Height, of Brookline, are occupying their Annisquam summer home, for the season. The house is attractively located on a hill overlooking beautiful scenery and the gardens are a feature of the surroundings.

Rev. and Mrs. Oliver Hart Bronson, of Salem, have opened their summer home in Annisquam for the season.

ROCKPORT.—The Rockport Country club has opened for the season and things of a social nature are planned for the summer, including events for war fund benefits. The usual teas and dances will be in order later and tournaments on the splendid golf course of the club will attract members and friends.

The Rockport Red Cross unit is busy these days with sewing and making of surgical dressings. Mrs. Frederick H. Tarr is the chairman and anyone wishing to join in the work or give assistance in any way may communicate with her at her residence on Broadway, Rockport.

The family of General William A. Pew is located at the Pew summer residence, Land's End, in the vicinity of Turk's Head Inn. General Pew has been in camp at Williamstown. His book on military tactics and training is considered the finest published, especially coming from the source of a splendid military disciplinarian.

The Brown family, of Providence, is expected to occupy the C. A. Cotter summer home at Land's End, again this season.

Judge Harry Dow, of North Andover, who has a fine cottage on the Headlands, Rockport, entertained a large party of friends, last Friday, Red Cross workers to the number of 120. The guests came from North Andover in automobiles, the trip to this section of the North Shore being keenly enjoyed. Judge Dow is chairman of the Red Cross of North Andover and he and his wife, who are splendid entertainers, made special effort in giving these patriotic workers a good time. A fine fish chowder, all kinds of "Hoover" cake, bread, ice-cream, strawberries, and other good things were served. The fine ocean view from the veranda was appreciated and the hospitality of Judge and Mrs. Dow will be long remembered.

The Turk's Head Inn now has many guests registered. Mrs. Stearns, of Boston, has one of the Inn cottages.

Mrs. Louise Kinney, of Cincinnati, Ohio, who has been spending the winter and spring in New York, is settled in her fine summer home, "St. Anthony," completed last season.

One of the attractions in the Cape Ann section this year will be a pretty new tea room at Land's End, Rockport. Situated in a position which commands a fine view of the far-famed and historic Thatcher's island lights, it has an environment which should be particularly alluring to North Shore visitors who delight in such functions of social relaxation. No quainter or more appropriate selection for a tea room could have been made than the McMillan house, built by one of the pioneer Cape Ann summer residents. Designed originally with much thought to the antique, its charming original scheme has been maintained, and a more attractive place could not be imagined. Miss Elsie Curtis, the proprietor, is to the manor born, her father, Jason L. Curtis, who is principal of the Dwight school, Boston, being a native of Cape Ann. Since childhood she has heard volumes of the beauties of the Cape and of the attractions of Thatcher's island lights, and the name Twin Light Tea Room was inevitable as a name for this new venture. The place will be open tomorrow (Saturday) and one of the innovations, to be continued throughout the season, will be the serving of a baked-bean and brown-bread supper each Saturday evening. To make the tea room of community interest, the ladies of the village will be invited to send in home-made preserves, etc., which will be sold on a commission basis. There will be dancing each evening on the spacious piazzas, music being furnished by a large Victrola. Miss Curtis is enthusiastic in her work and expects to furnish many hours of enjoyment for seekers of pleasure on the North Shore, who wish to enjoy the beauties of Cape Ann at one of its most delightful vantage spots.

PIGEON COVE.—The Hotel Edward, so beautifully situated on the ocean front has opened its doors for the season, under the usual management of Louis Wilson of Pittsburgh, Pa. The hotel has a large booking for the season and many distinguished guests are expected soon. The popular roof garden and grill of The Edward will be resumed again this season, as well as the splendid French cuisine as has been appreciated by North Shore society.

Miss Helen Hershey, of Mt. Washington, Md., and Miss Katherine Davis, of St. Joseph, Mo., are guests stopping at The Edward, Pigeon Cove.

Miss Ella T. Maguire, of Pittsburgh, Pa., is spending two weeks at The Edward. She will leave for Pittsburgh, to return to Pigeon Cove early in August.

If you had seen but one day of war, you would pray God you might never see another.—DUKE OF WELLINGTON.

ARE YOU A JEWEL?

When the Lord comes He will pick out his crown jewels. They will be as beautiful as blossoms, but as everlasting as stars.

They may be scarce—pebbles line every shore, but every gem is a great discovery.

Most people, like Boer children playing with white stones, do not know diamonds when they see them.

Cutting and polishing turn dull stones into flashing crystals! Rejoice in God's emery wheel.

Huge heat, ponderous pressure, and right mineral conviction, produce precious stones. These will endure that have endured.

The trouble with reconstructed jewels is that they cool too quickly, and are cracked.

Paste souls are frequently preferred to real, especially in artificial lights.

Whitewash is no aristocrat, yet corals and pearls are lime brothers of his. Amber and diamond dripped from the same prehistoric tree.

What you are is real value.

The Lord is looking for jewels.

Are you ruby, sapphire, emerald—or just mud?

—MARK WAYNE WILLIAMS.

Tell me not in mournful numbers,

Life is but an empty dream.

For the soul is dead that slumbers,

And things are not what they seem.

—Longfellow.

In all friendship one is to ask, not demand; the door must be opened from within, it must not be forced from without.—H. C. KING.

ROCKPORT TEAM RECEIVED BAD BEATING

The Rockport baseball club received a "beautiful trimming" last Saturday at the park. Gloucester High school, augmented by the Tufts star, Earl Andrews, and with "Jim" Sudbay, the former K. O. K. A. player, didn't do a thing to the home team. Charlie Carr was in the box for the Gloucester team, and while he pitched a good game, our own "Gimrod" had a lot more on the ball. But the local pitcher received the "punkiest" kind of support. The score? Rockport managed to get one. The local fans stopped counting after Arthur Thurston, of Rockport, second baseman for Gloucester High, had scored the tenth or eleventh runner.

ENTERTAIN ROCKPORT YOUNG FOLK

Some time ago the townspeople gave an entertainment to the boys of the merchant marine on the occasion of the visit of the str. Calvin Austin to Rockport harbor.

In return for this courtesy, which was greatly appreciated, the Austin's crew had the pleasure of entertaining over a hundred young people of Rockport last Saturday evening. The boat arrived in the harbor in the afternoon and anchored quite near shore.

The guests were welcomed by Mrs. Henry Howard, whose husband is in charge of the merchant marine department of the service. The boys gave a fine musical program and dancing followed. A collation was served.

"Guests desiring wine must bring it with them."

"One tires of ye sea. It is a fickle mistress, whose smiles and caresses allure us today, but repel and fill us with terror at its cruel torturings tomorrow; but ye everlasting hills, those ever faithful, ever beautiful but silent monarchs of ye earth, are ye same, yesterday, today and forever."

EDITORIAL

THE WAR HAS AROUSED a general interest not alone in the patriotic literature of our own country; but in the literature of all of our allies. How surprising it has been to us all! So subtle has been the Germanic propaganda of the past, that we have long been familiar with the martial songs of Germany, but what of our allies? These have not all been familiar. The French national song has always been appreciated by Americans, but the present situation makes it live and reveal the very soul of the French people. Americans are singing with reverence and enthusiasm. The free people of Belgium have a wonderful hymn in the "Brabanconne,"—

*"Not centuries of Slavish might
Can hold fair Belgium from the light.
Her courage wins for her the fight,
Her name, her banner, and her right.
And proudly on her ancient flag
Her sons unconquered since that day
Inscribe with joy the legend glad."*

Italy, too, has her thrilling royal music, Garibaldi's hymn, and a wealth of appropriate music that Americans will delight to learn, to sing and have played by their orchestras. The Germans can have no monopoly of musical power and genius. They have prussianized the profession; that is all. Now the music of the world is available. Let it be heard! Let Italy's music also be sung, as well as that of Great Britain and France.

*"Oh, Italia, Italia, beloved
Land of beauty; of sunlight and song.
Tho afar from thy bright skies removed,
Still our fond hearts for thee ever long.
Sweet thy blue lakes, thy groves and thy fountains,
Oh, thou dear land that gave us our birth,
How we long for thy hills and thy mountains,
Far the dearest and fairest of earth,
Of sad fate to wander,
Out in the wide world, far from home.
Oh, Italia, land of beauty,
How our hearts still burn with love for thee."*

It has been said, he who writes the songs of a people does not need to envy the men who write them philosophy. Americans may well learn the cherished songs of the allies and sing them with a sympathetic spirit.

THE SO-CALLED VACATION PERIOD—July and August—has begun; yet it is not a period of indolence and merry-making these days, but one for the hardest kind of work. There is hardly a man or woman on our Shore but spends his days in hard toil and serious labor. As to the women, they excel in good works. Every woman is investing her days in toil for the soldiers and sailors. The workrooms for the Red Cross, Italian Relief, Belgian Relief and French Wounded are attended by classes of women working patiently for long hours in the name of Christ and our Cause of Freedom. Above every workroom should be written the words, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my little ones ye have done it unto me." Making the world safe for democracy means more democracy at home,—and it is already here. There is light upon the clouds. Not only must the peoples of Europe work together for the one end, but so must the peoples of America. The most fortunate and beautiful symptom of the times is that it is now an accomplished fact. Everyone, rich and poor, trained and untrained, male and female, native born and naturalized American citizen are being fused by one great spirit—the spirit of service for the cause we hold dear, that of our country and that of our allies. Work is a tonic: it inspires, it cheers, it invigorates, it arouses latent talents and capabilities and makes life worth living. The people of our Shore are working as they never have worked before with a unity of purpose and power which is short only of the marvellous. With such a spirit the world may be made safe for democracy.

THE GARABED "FREE ENERGY" MACHINE has been tried and found wanting. The inventor has been claiming too much for his working drawings and principles, which he claims are now known. An efficient and thoroughly reliable commission, representing the scientific thinkers of our land have reported adversely: "We do not believe its principles are sound, that his device operates, or that they can result in the development or utilization of free energy." Only the fair-minded spirit of American Congressmen permitted the investigations to go so far. The promises were so alluring that they, very wisely, determined to act honorably and rightly, and if the invention were good it would have aided not hindered, the progress of science. In turning the work over to experts they acted upon the principle of division of labor according to ability and training. To the layman the claims appeared to be not only absurd, unlikely and impracticable, but that the inventor was not proceeding along the lines of reasonable and honorable publicity. If he had the principles and the drawings, the task for his mind and time was the perfection of the devices. A child does not understand the principles involved in the construction of a motor car, but it can be transported in one from one place to another and understand that experience. Our Congressmen might not have been able to have understood the principles involved in a free energy machine, but could have appreciated its value when one was set in operation in their presence. The Garabed machine should have been perfected and set in operation. Congressmen then could see and scientific men later could have made a report on the principles. It is unfortunate that the promises have not been fulfilled. It may be that such a machine is possible and practicable. There is, however, a pertinent law of physics, that of compensation, which must be obeyed. There can be transformation of power, but it cannot be initiated without compensatory expenditures of energy in other forms. In this way the power of coal is but the energy of the sun transformed and used either as steam power from a boiler or re-transformed to electricity. Can that principle be violated in the utilization of so-called "free energy?" We think not! The Garabed motor is a failure; it does not even promise to be a success. The scrap heap again, and such a waste of time, interest and good news space!

THE SUMMER ANNOUNCEMENTS of fall plans for political campaigns are being made and the political aspirations of the various men who have been serving are open secrets. Governor McCall, after his term of service for three years as governor, has announced his candidacy for the U. S. Senate to succeed Senator Weeks. His successful career in the lower national house and his success as governor has prepared him for a sphere of larger influence. That he is to strive to win the nomination is not surprising. Whether he be strong enough as a candidate to defeat the present incumbent remains to be seen. Calvin Coolidge has been a loyal Republican in spirit and service and automatically becomes candidate for the Republican nomination for governor after his service as a member of the City Council of Northampton, afterwards its mayor, later state senator and finally lieutenant governor. Pursuant to an unwritten law of the party he now becomes, automatically, a candidate for the nomination for governor. That nomination will, in all likelihood, be made. Channing Cox, the efficient representative from the Seventh Suffolk district and speaker of the House for three years, is entitled by virtue of his efficient service in the councils of the party, to the nomination for lieutenant governor. The nomination will in all probability be strongly contested. The senatorial nomination in the Beverly end of the North Shore district will in all probability fall to Augustus Peabody Loring, who, it is now understood, will accept the nomination if it be tendered to him, although he has not yet officially announced his purpose to the press, but will with all probability do so shortly. The representative to the legislature from the Manchester-Beverly Farms-Essex district is James B. Dow, and his nomination will probably be uncontested, an honor which his service during the last year entitles him.

 THE AMERICAN PEOPLE are now beginning to understand as they have never understood before the attitude of Italy to Germany and Austria and to the "Entente." On Sunday, at a public meeting at Beverly Farms, Lieut. Orlandini, official representative of the Italian government in America, made one of the most thrilling and effective speeches ever made on our Shore. He explained Italy's attitude to the complete satisfaction of every one of his auditors and the sympathetic and enthusiastic response which he received from his audience told him more than words could tell that the audience was with him. The attitude is representative of the feeling of America, one of hearty coöperation with every one of our allies. The lieutenant dramatically told of Italy's struggles for liberty and national integrity, and Germany's machinations in seeking an alliance. A defensive alliance was made and not an aggressive one. When this war broke out the testing time came and Italy refused to be intimidated because of the merely defensive alliance that had been made. Her honor, her sense of justice impelled her to choose, and Germany's oppressive conduct forced a decision. Italy made her decision as honor, not as ease or luxury compelled, and the world now honors the choice that she made. Lieut. Orlandini thanked his audience and through them the American people for the aid of the Red Cross in building up a strong Italian morale. He made a strong appeal for his people and their aims and the response of the North Shore audience was only an indication of the feeling which America shows to Italy and her cause. The North Shore appreciated Orlandini's message and he will carry back to his people the consciousness that our people are thoroughly in earnest in supporting all of the allies, Italy included.

THE RECENT MOVEMENT OF PLACING in all of our churches not only the flag of our nation and of our state, but also those of our allies, is founded upon the truest instincts of our times. The American people are now united heart and soul with the peoples of the old world in a world-wide conflict and that unity must be attained and symbolized. How better can it be symbolized than by the display of flags of the nations in the churches? Every Sabbath in Boston for months the flags of the allies have been displayed in the processional march of the choir of a leading church. One North Shore church has dedicated flags of the allies in the name of Justice, Liberty and Truth and will place them on their walls for the duration of the war. This is being done by churches all over our broad land. What does it mean? It means that the American people are giving expression in the best way they can to the feelings of sympathy and reciprocity with the nations of Europe with whom we fight. Can the morale of the home forces be inspired more intelligently? Can the allies have a more inspiring acknowledgement of the support of the people? Can the people more effectively express their feelings than in this simple way? In the name of the Most High the banners of all our allies should be set up, the visible symbol of a holy alliance under God for democracy. This union is no idle chance. Benjamin Franklin said, "I have lived, sir, a long time; and the longer I live, the more convincing proofs I see of this truth, that God governs in the affairs of men, and if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without his notice, is it possible an empire can rise without his aid. I am assured, sir, in the sacred writings that 'Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it.' I firmly believe this." It is no idle chance which has thrown the nations of the earth together in this holy cause and the churches do well to patriotically express the union of these peoples in this way.

 THE HUNS HAVE TORPEDOED another hospital ship without mercy or regard to the accepted rules of warfare or international law. They now know no law for truth and honor. There appears to be no impulse that is obeyed, but the impulse to do harm, no matter how it be attained. There are rules of warfare which civilized nations have always respected because of the principle of humanitarian interests, but the Huns know no such law. A hospital ship loaded with wounded men by all principles of good judgment of war and of humanity should be immune from attack. The ship has been sunk! It was sunk knowingly and without the slightest desire to minimize the suffering of those who were on board. Now America sees all its Hunish purpose robbed of camouflage. They are barbarians of the barbarians. Have they no impulses of the righteous? Are they inspired by no high thoughts? Are the debasing qualities of the beast to reign supreme in their dastardly, organized system of wholesale murder? They have revealed themselves now. They did it when the Lusitania was sunk. They showed it in the Mediterranean, they revealed it in the murder of Edith Cavell, they announced it in the sinking of hospital ships in the Mediterranean, and now they do it again. America now knows what their mind is, Huns of the Huns, barbarians of the barbarians! There can be no peace until such slaughter becomes again impossible and until truth, righteousness, national honor and justice are enthroned.

MANCHESTER

Miss Annabel McDiarmid, of New Bedford, is visiting Mrs. Edwin Preston, School street.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Johnson have opened their summer camp at Brier Neck, Gloucester.

Harry Broadhurst is the special police officer regulating traffic at Singing beach this summer.

Mrs. R. E. Newman and Mrs. Helen Willmonton spent the first of the week in Andover visiting their cousin, Mrs. E. O. Perley.

Complaint has been made to the police about the barbed wire fence which has been put up by a School street resident to keep the children from running on the lawn. This sort of thing is not permissible.

Preliminary announcement is made of the Chautauqua to be held in Manchester this summer. The date is set for the week of August 8-14, and the tent will be erected on Masconomo Park. A representative from the Chautauqua association was in town Tuesday and met with the committee. It was stated that Manchester will be privileged to have the $1500 program this season, though it is entitled only to the $1000 program. This change is made possible because the former organization is in this section at that time. The local guarantors have organized with George E. Willmonton as chairman, L. W. Carter as secretary and Frank Foster as treasurer. T. A. Lees and S. Albert Sinnicks will serve as grounds and lighting committee, and Daniel E. O'Brien will be chairman of hospitality committee. The price of the season ticket for the seven days will be $2. The government thinks so well of the movement that it has suspended the war tax, and gives a right of way on the railroads to move the outfit from place to place with minimum inconvenience.

Julius F. Rabardy, one of Manchester's oldest citizens, and one of the honored French patriots who came here in Civil War days, again decorated the front of his house with a patriotic motto of distinction, on July 4th. Between the folds of a large American and French flag, and edged around with red and white flowers and greenery and a few blue flowers, the following words in bold letters, easily read from the opposite side of the street, greeted the passerby on Central street, on the Fourth:

Liberty!—

BATH-HOUSES DESTROYED BY FIRE AT SINGING BEACH

A fire alarm was sounded about 12.30 on Fourth of July morning for a fire at Singing beach. The ap-paratus made a quick trip to the beach and found the large bath-house of the Masconomo hotel in flames. The fire was beyond control before the alarm was even sounded, and there was nothing the firemen could do but stop the flames spreading to the other houses. The smaller house belonging to Austin Morley was entirely de-stroyed, and a house owned by Ralph Henry Barbour was partially, though not irreparably burned. Some of the other houses were turned over and rolled upon the beach so as to save them in case the flames spread.

The house owned by the Mascono-mo hotel was old, and covered con-siderable ground, perhaps a frontage of forty or fifty feet. The alarm was sounded by Officer Thomas Sheehan.

NEW PASTOR

REV. HERBERT E. LEVOY PREACHES
FIRST SERMON AS PASTOR OF BAPTIST CHURCH

REV. HERBERT E. LEVOY

Rev. Herbert E. Levoy, of Warner, N. H., preached his initial sermon as pastor of the First Baptist church, in Manchester, last Sunday morning, June 30.

Mr. Levoy is a young man with a most pleasing personality and the gift of making friends. In his former pastorates he has been very successful with young people's work. A large audience greeted him at all of the Sunday services.

In the morning Mr. Levoy spoke on the subject, "The Life that Lifts." He said in part that we all should live lives that would lift others and make life for all sweeter, purer and happier.

We all need, at times, someone to reach out a hand of helpfulness and love. The lifting life consists of sympathy, prayer, a practical Christian life of doing deeds of helpfulness, and doing all in the name of Jesus Christ. The speaker referred to Peter and John as practical Christians, as Acts, the third chapter, pictures them.

The evening subject was, "From Glory to Glory." He said that the Christian's growth is step by step, or, as Paul says, from "glory to glory." He brought out the fact that we should take Jesus Christ as our pattern and ideal, and, more than that, as our Saviour, who will lead us to higher and better things. Also that every year should see the Christian on higher ground, nobler in character and more like the Master.

Mr. Levoy extends a most hearty welcome to all to come and worship at the Baptist church. He believes in practical preaching and there will always be good gospel singing.

At Mr. Levoy's last church in Warner many were taken into the church. He was in Warner three years.

Mr. Levoy was born in Lowville, N. Y. After attending the public schools he entered Cook's academy at Montour Falls, N. Y. From there he went to the University of Rochester, after which he attended the Gordon Bible college in Boston, and finished his school career in 1914, when he was graduated from the Newton Theological institution. He took his first charge in the fall of 1914 at Townshend, Vt. From there he went to Warner.

Mrs. Levoy was Miss Ethel Rolfe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Rolfe, of Salem. They have a little daughter about two years old.

SUCCESSFUL AND INSPIRING MISSION
AT SACRED HEART CHURCH

The Sacred Heart church, in Manchester, of which Rev. W. George Mullin is rector, had a most successful and inspiring mission last week, beginning June 23 and closing Sunday night. There were 1500 communicants during the week. The special masses at 5.30 and 7.30 brought out many, the early masses always having a packed house.

Father Stanton preached every night. Some of his subjects were on "Sin," "The Home Life," "Mixed Marriages," "Love of God," and other helpful matters.

For the final meeting on Sunday night three other priests were in attendance, all of the Oblate order. The service consisted of a renewal of baptismal vows, the sermon and solemn benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The sermon was on the ten commandments. One priest read a commandment, after which Father Stanton preached upon it, thus making a rather unique sermon form. This was a thrilling exposition of the Bible truths and fittingly closed the week's service.

The church was packed each night, many Protestants being in attendance, as well as summer friends in Manchester and its vicinity.

During the summer there is an increase of masses, one at 7, 8 and 10.30 being the order.

The mission was omitted last year in Manchester, but is usually held each year.

COMPANY I NOTES

MANCHESTER

Alarm signal to be sounded on fire whistle in emergency: "1-2-5" repeated

It is definitely announced that the 15th Regiment, Mass. State Guard, of which Co. I is a unit, will go into camp at Framingham on Sunday, July 14th, to remain until Friday. The local company will probably leave Manchester on the 10.21 train Sunday morning, though this is not definite. A truck will go over the road with part of the equipment.

Regular drill will be held on Monday evening, and it is likely that an extra drill will be held some night next week, preparatory to going into camp.

There are a few vacancies in Co. I, caused by men entering the service and others moving out of town.

About 50 members of the company were out for the Fourth of July parade and flag-raising.

The dance in aid of the State Guard company will be held in Town hall next Thursday evening, July 11. The boys are trying to raise funds to help them when they go to camp week after next. The state provides food only to the extent of 45c a day, and the object of the dance is to raise enough money to look after this feature of the week's trip, and other incidentals.

Miss Adelaide Winne, of New York, is visiting with Miss Helen Knight, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Knight. Miss Frances Jones, who has been visiting Miss Helen, returned this week to her home in Norway, Me. A cousin, Miss Madelin Hayden, also of Norway, is now here.

THE FOURTH IN MANCHESTERPATRIOTIC MEETING AND FLAG RAISING ON THE COMMON—PARADE

MANCHESTER celebrated the Fourth of July yesterday in a very sane and quiet manner, but thoroughly patriotic and befitting the times. It was a beautiful day of clear sunshine from a cloudless sky, and the first warm day for weeks. Everybody in town was out and crowds from surrounding towns came here to enjoy the afternoon and evening with us, for in addition to the official program of the presentation of a service flag in the afternoon, there was a band concert in the evening.

Incident to the patriotic meeting on the Common, with a grand patriotic address by the Hon. Judge Michael J. Murray, of Boston, there was a parade in which the various organizations were well represented, though not as generously as in previous years.

The Parade

The parade started at two o'clock at the junction of Bridge, Bennett, Pine and Central streets. Edwin P. Stanley, town treasurer, and with the honored distinction of being Com. of the Mass. Dept. of the G. A. R., was chief marshal, and he had as aids, William Hawkesworth, Bernard L. Boyle and Arthur Walker. Then in order followed a platoon of police, William H. Sullivan, chief; the Salem Cadet band, Jean M. Missud, conductor; automobile with the board of selectmen; Co. I, Mass. State Guard, Alexander Robertson, captain; Troop 1, Boy Scouts, John O. Matthews, scoutmaster, Allen P. Denins, instructor; automobiles containing veterans of Post 67, G. A. R.; Allen W. R. C.; Arbella club of girls; Red Cross; St. Mary's Drum Corps of Salem; girls of Sacred Heart parish; men of Sacred Heart parish; Magnolia lodge, I. O. O. F.; Liberty Rebekah lodge, I. O. O. F.; Conomo tribe of Red Men; Apron Sale float (District Nurse fund); North Shore Horticultural society float; Manchester fire department apparatus.

The line of march was through Central, School, Lincoln, Brook, Summer, Washington and Union streets, to the Common.

The program had it that three prizes would be awarded for the best floats, the first prize $25, 2d, $15 and 3d, $10, the prize money to be donated to the Red Cross in the name of the prize winner. The judges—Eric Pape, Ralph Henry Barbour and Mrs. George R. Dean—awarded the prizes to the only three floats in the parade, though they would like to have had the awarding based on the three best features, rather than on floats, as there were only three of the latter in line. The first prize was awarded to the North Shore Horticultural society, 2d, to Daughters of Rebekah, "Humanity" with "Liberty" at the helm, and 3d, Apron Sale float. This latter float could not make the trip along the line of march, as the large sign, which was the particular feature of it, could not pass under wires in some places. The sign was a work of art, done by Eric Pape, the artist.

The Liberty Rebekah float, filled by a group of girls all in white, with "Liberty" as a central figure, was a most attractive affair. The float bore the following inscriptions: "The Spirit of '76 still rules America"; "In God we trust," and on the opposite side: "Humanity has called us to arms," and "Though conquer we must for our cause it is just."

The service flags of the three churches were borne by girls from the respective churches. The Sacred Heart church girls carried banners saying: "35 Loyal Sons—stand ready to follow them," and "We honor today our three fallen heroes."

The Baptist Sunday school was represented by a girl carrying a banner for the school, followed by two girls carrying the service flag of 27 stars, after which came four girls of the school with an American flag, signifying that there were 27 boys of the school in service for their country's flag.

Exercises on the Common

The exercises on the Common started about three o'clock. A stand had been erected directly in front of the Cong'l church and the seats from Town hall had been placed on the Common, beneath the stately elm trees, so that about 500 people could be seated, and it is estimated that 1500 more stood and sat in the scores of automobiles lining the street and occupying every available point of vantage. Flags of the allies decorated the stand.

BULLOCK BROTHERS, GROCERS
POSTOFFICE BLOCK MANCHESTER

After prayer was offered by Rev. Frederic W. Manning of the Cong'l church, all joined in singing two stanzas of "America." Fred K. Swett lead in the singing.

Samuel L. Wheaton, chairman of the board of selectmen, addressed the gathering, speaking briefly of the occasion and referring to the large number of men Manchester had sent into the service. He alluded to the patriotism of our citizens in answering the call and for help of any kind.

Then followed the flag-raising, in charge of Co. I, Mass. State Guard. The service flag was flung out with the assistance of three girls, sisters of the three young men who have paid the supreme sacrifice in France—Joseph McNeary, Corp. Frank Amaral and Michael Coughlin. It is the new style service flag, with a white field, in a red border. On the white field is a border of 48 stars, within which are the figures indicating the number in the service, which in Manchester's case is 129. And above this are the three gold colored stars, representing those who have given their lives for the cause.

The gathering joined in singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

Selectman Wheaton paid a tribute to the three Manchester boys who have lost their lives in France. He referred to the distinct honor that had been paid to Corporal Amaral by the French government in presenting him with the war cross. This was held up before the audience by Miss Virginia Perry, a foster sister.

The first speaker of the afternoon was Edwin P. Stanley, commander of the Mass. Dept. of the G. A. R. He paid a tribute to the boys across the sea, and referred to the flag and what it stands for. He also presented to the Boy Scouts the Manchester-made flag which has been the center of so much interest the past winter. An account of this is printed in another column.

John O. Matthews accepted the flag for the Boy Scouts, and Commander Enoch Crombie, of the Post, accepted the terms of the gift on behalf of that organization.

After the singing of "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," Judge Michael J. Murray, of Boston, was introduced as the speaker of the afternoon.

We regret that the early hour on which the BREEZE goes to press Friday mornings, prevents us from giving an abstract of Judge Murray's speech. We will reserve this until next week, when we will be able to make a more complete report. That it was one of the best speeches ever made before a Manchester audience, is the verdict of all. His theme was "My Country." He spoke for an hour, and what he had to say flowed out in most eloquent terms, and was ringing with patriotism from start to finish, ending with his understanding of what "Americanism" means.

MRS. CHAS. J. ALLEN

Pallbearers are George S. Sinnicks, Henry Townsend, Alfred E. Parsons, William Judd, Neil Johnson and Alfred Cook.

The North Shore in War Work

THE workroom organized for men, especially for the bachelor element upon the Shore, has not been noted in our War Work pages so far. It is in the ball-room at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Graeme Haughton at Pride's Crossing. The men come by invitation, a certain subscription being required. Beside the large number of bachelors there are married men who may bring their wives. The meetings are held every Tuesday evening from 8.30 to 10.30 o'clock. An average of 1000 compresses and 400 folded strips are made. Hospital supplies and refugee children's dresses and underwear are also taken home by the wives to sew. These are always on hand.

Among those who are regular attendants are Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. Bryce Allan, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Caswell, Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Bement, Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Snelling, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Ahl, Mr. and Mrs. J. Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Agassiz, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Dexter, Mr. and Mrs. T. Adamowski, Dr. and Mrs. H. F. Sears, Major and Mrs. Philip Sears, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Sawyer, Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Coolidge, and Gordon Dexter.

Some of the others are Edward C. Fitz, Charles C. Walker, H. D. Chapin and J. Torrey Morse.

North Shore Kitchens in War Time

THE BREEZE is being of much interest in milady's culinary apartments this season.

The past week we called upon Mrs. Hannah McCarron, experienced cook, of North Cambridge, who, in winter time, makes a specialty of dinners and luncheons in the Back Bay district of Boston. She is a cook with a long and wide experience and has spent many summers upon the North Shore. In fact, she was married twenty-one years ago while in service at the Washington B. Thomas home at Pride's Crossing.

This summer she is in the kitchen of Mrs. Robert S. Bradley at Pride's. Many interesting facts of by-gone days can this cook tell. She even has menus of dinners given by North Shore folk when important personages were being entertained in the old times, when the tables groaned with food and the courses were many.

Can a cook like this change? Can we change our minds as we grow older? Some say we cannot. But that is a sure sign of old age. This cook tries everything with pleasure that Mrs. Bradley suggests. (She has known Mrs. Bradley many years.) She says that Mrs. Bradley's cooking is all up-to-date.

Hoover recipes she follows exactly; however, she has made some of her own.

A typical breakfast at the Bradley home is the following: fruit, coffee, muffins, an egg dish or fish cakes or creamed fish. Sometimes beans are served Sunday mornings. The favorite muffin which the cook makes, follows:

Bran Muffins

- 1½ cups flour (white and barley mixed)
- ½ cup bran
- 1 tsp. baking powder
- 1 tbsp. sugar
- 1 tbsp. shortening (any kind)
- 1 egg
- Pinch of salt

Add milk enough to make a batter and bake fifteen minutes.

No white bread is baked in the house. When the dark breads are to be baked raised muffins or biscuits are made that morning with the dough.

Luncheon consists of soup or a plain omelet, a vegetable dish, and fruit. A made dessert is seldom used; if it is, it is very simple. The muffins left from breakfast are toasted. If none were left then the dark bread is toasted.

Dinner is always three courses:

soup, meat and a sweet. A fish course has been cut out. If fish is served it is the meat for the meal. Of course the vegetables accompany the meat. Desserts consist mostly of fruit.

If afternoon tea is served it is a very simple affair.

A different kind of soup is served each night. Summer soups are a specialty with this cook. The Bradley gardens furnish fresh vegetables in abundance, from which the cook makes soup which requires no coloring, the fresh vegetable taking care of that.

Beet Soup

Put boiled beets through a sieve. Make a little thickening of butter and potato flour or cornstarch, salt, dash of cayenne, paprika and add one cup of veal stock (or any on hand) and a little cream. Strain the mixture through a fine sieve.

Carrot, pea, spinach and lettuce soups are equally good. All are made on the same plan, except with lettuce; she pounds it in place of running it through a sieve.

Mrs. McCarron is willing to have conferences with anyone who wishes to see her, in Mrs. Bradley's kitchen. Some more of her ideas will be given later.

MRS. R. S. BRADLEY, of Pride's Crossing is interested in the food bulletin boards prepared by Miss Mary Bradlee, of Boston, in connection with Special Aid work. One was taken this week to the French Wounded workroom and also to the Red Cross room in Horticultural hall, Manchester. In large letters it reads at the top: "Send wheat—send rye. Use substitutes. We must—we will." Numerous suggestions on the board are new and of value. One says that many do not understand why it is we are being deprived of wheat and rye in order to ship them abroad. It explains that the armies must have bread (raised bread). Muffins and biscuits are impossible in the field. But to have raised bread it is essential that a basis of either wheat or rye be used, for these two cereals are the only ones which contain the right gluten to make a proper yeast fermentation for raised bread. The baker needs more wheat and rye flour to make his bread because he cannot serve his customers with muffins and biscuits, while these can be made in private kitchens, thereby saving on the wheat and rye.

A suggestion is given in regard to potatoes saving wheat,—a medium-sized potato giving as much starch as two slices of bread.

Mrs. Bradley has made a bulletin board of her own to stand at the outside kitchen door of her home. On this she tacks the latest items of the day in regard to food saving. She says that the grocery men and others stop to read it as they deliver goods.

Mrs. Bradley also has a quantity of fine maple syrup to sell, the proceeds of the sale going for the War Food work carried on by the Women's Municipal League, of Boston.

AT the Sign of the Tea-Kettle and Tabby Cat, in Wenham, the manager, Mrs. Philip Downes, of Boston, greets you this year in her Hoover uniform of mornings, and in the afternoons in a white dress, wearing her Hoover cap, however. She is now a member of the U. S. Food Administration, as the badge on her cap tells. All winter she had charge of Liberty Bread Shop, No. 5, in Boston. What she serves at the tea house is absolutely wheatless.

Mrs. Downes has recently given a demonstration in Attleboro. Many North Shore cooks have been sent to her the past winter for information. Everybody has always recognized Mrs. Downes as an expert (she couldn't manage the Wenham tea house, if she were not), and now, the folk who talk with her, find her fairly bubbling over with knowledge and enthusiasm about cooking. She has a sheet of her own recipes for sale, but she kindly consented to give the BREEZE her recipe for

Barley Coffee Cake

- 1-4 cup shortening
- 1 egg
- 1 cup milk
- 2½ cups barley flour
- ½ tsp. salt
- 1 tbsp. sugar or 2 tsp. Karo
- ½ cup raisins cut in halves
- 5 even tsp. baking powder

Mix in order given and bake in a square pan. Brush with melted butter and sprinkle with two tablespoons sugar and one tablespoon cinnamon.

She will serve toast this summer made from bread coming from the Liberty Bread Shop in Boston. She likes a raised bread of rye and twenty percent cornstarch. If dark flour disagrees with children have them eat plenty of green vegetables and fruit and drink plenty of milk, and all will be well, she says.

Her ice creams will be made with half the quantity of cream formerly used.

With the Wesson oil for her salads she will use a little more seasoning.

If she makes pie (which she is trying to put out of existence), it will be with equal parts of barley and rice flour. She is making a plea for deserts other than pie.

For light sauces she uses rice flour and a little cornstarch. If a dark sauce is wanted she uses barley flour alone.

If barley causes an eruption on the face use a teaspoon of lime water or a pinch of soda to a cup of flour.

Mrs. Downes will, no doubt, be holding conferences in all her idle time this summer.

street, where there are fifteen, farmed mostly by fourth grade pupils; on Elliott street, where about fifty pupils from the N. E. Industrial school Deaf Mutes started gardens in the spring, which will be cared for during the summer vacation period by Beverly children, who will also care for their own gardens besides.

At Beverly Farms, Miss Wales looks after the thirty gardens back of the schoolhouse on the land given by Arthur Little.

At Montserrat she has 125 gardens on Mrs. Henry W. Peabody's land near the railroad. Some of the children who started gardens here in the spring have since moved to the opposite side of Beverly, near Salem, but so great is their interest that they walk the entire distance to attend to their gardens.

Miss Wales' program may be of interest: Mondays, Cabot street, 8.30, Elliott street, 10; Tuesdays, Montserrat, 8.30; Wednesdays, Beverly Farms, 8.30, Montserrat, 7.30 p. m. (for boys and girls who work during the day); Thursdays, Elliott street, 8.30; Fridays, Beverly Farms, 8.30, Cabot street, 10.30; Saturdays, Montserrat, 8.30.

Miss Wales meets the children at these hours and stays through the morning until the work is done, usually about noon. This year she is assisted by Kenneth Blanchard, the community garden supervisor, who also visits the gardens with her.

Perhaps Miss Wales and her little pony, Ned Toodles, will always be associated in childish memories with Beverly. The pony is part of the family, having grown up with them and having received its name from the hero in a child's story book that was read at the time the pony came to live with them.

He is a thoroughbred Shetland of a pure chestnut color, has a long mane and tail and has the remarkable height of thirty-seven inches. Although not very tall for his twenty-five years, yet the little fellow has done all of the furrowing for the children and is now doing the cultivating for the potatoes. One child leads the pony, while another guides the plow.

When Miss Wales goes to the gardens each morning, driving her own car, the pony is her faithful attendant along by the side of the auto.

There are four children in the state contest who have planted an eighth of an acre each, in potatoes. About seventy-five children in all are in the state contest in gardening.

The Canning club has ninety-eight members. Classes started this week in the Washington street school kitchen, where five lessons will be given so that the canning can then be done properly at home.

Miss Wales has a thriving pig club of twenty-two members, boys and girls on the outskirts of Beverly, all of whom are in the state contest.

Beverly Community Gardens

Beverly's Public Safety committee, which looked after the food conservation question this year, again organized a strong community garden plan. Kenneth Blanchard, of the state agricultural college, who had also been at the Texas Agricultural school, is in charge. He puts in much time assisting with the children of mornings, while the work with the adult gardens is in the evening. Also, as a matter of fact, he and Miss Wales put in many hours organizing and getting the work planned for the children to do. In the city of Beverly there are thirty-eight adult gardens on public land in the rear of the new bathhouse on Lothrop and Dane streets. Among the many who gave garden plots in Beverly, perhaps the eleven gardens on the Solon Lovett land occupy the largest plot. On Hale Farm, the home of Mrs. Robert Hale Bancroft, there are forty-three gardens, besides her own, a retired minister's, and one for each of the men on the place.

At Beverly Cove Mr. Blanchard looks after fifteen gardens on the Dudley L. Pickman estate; at Beverly Farms, two on the Arthur Little property and twenty-three on the Haven estate, given by Miss M. E. Haven; at Montserrat, fifteen on the estate of Mrs. Henry W. Peabody; and in North Beverly, twelve on "Moraine Farm," owned by Mrs. John C. Phillips.

In Beverly, but not under Mr. Blanchard, are 600 gardens in excellent condition belonging to the United Shoe employees.

Hamilton-Wenham Gardens

Community gardens with thriving prospects, although hurt somewhat by the frosts, are located on the land formerly used as a park and on the estate purchased last year by Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, of Pride's Crossing.

Aside from the community gardens Hamilton-Wenham will have a special interest this year from the fact that one of the units of women doing farm labor throughout the country will be located there.

Ten Smith college girls under the supervision of Miss Sarah L. Bates, teacher of home economics at Howard seminary, formed the unit. The young women live in the Kilham house on the main road in Hamilton. The house is simply and very plainly furnished, the purpose being to have a healthful and pleasant resting place without any luxuries. Showers with hot and cold water are arranged. Miss Bates will supervise the cooking of plain, appetizing food. The girls will do the work on neighboring farms as actual farm laborers, expecting no entertainments. Only on one Sunday a month can they leave town, although visitors will be received every Sunday.

They will dress in a khaki colored suit with a long blue smock, and wear coarse straw hats.

The committee in charge of the work consists of Mrs. John B. Moulton, chairman; Mrs. Frederick Winthrop, treasurer; Mrs. Ellery Sedgwick, Mrs. C. R. P. Rodgers, Mrs. William Lambert, Mrs. Francis Sears, Miss Helen Burnham, Mrs. Charles F. Ayer and Mrs. Frank P. Mitchell.

Manchester Gardens

Aside from the girl farmers in West Manchester there are large community gardens throughout the town.

Tuck's Point and land at Manchester Cove, both being town property, are in flourishing gardens.

The Smith Farm land on Smith's Point, and land given by George R. White and his sister, Mrs. Frederick T. Bradbury, all afford places for community gardens.

All of these gardens (about 120) have been allotted by Austin Morley, of the Public Safety committee.

county has been sent to the writer. The school is located at Hathorne.

Mr. Mitchell says there is often much confusion about the organizations. Besides the school, which is situated on what was formerly "Maplewood Farm, in Hathorne, there is the Essex County Agricultural society, a very old organization, which holds the Topsfield Fair."

War conditions have brought into being two other organizations: the Essex County Coöperative Farming association and the Essex County Seed Farm organization. The latter was organized to help out seed shortage by raising seed.

The Coöperative Farming association was organized to assist the agriculture of the county by owning and operating high-priced agricultural machinery, as threshers and binders for wheat, etc., harvesters and silo filling outfits, potato diggers, etc.

The Essex County Agricultural society owns a farm in Topsfield (part of it being used as the Fair grounds) which is now leased by the Farming association and is being cultivated by them, the association also using it for other activities.

This Coöperative Farming association was fortunate in having the late George vonL. Meyer for its first president. Shares in the company must be purchased in order to join. Members are limited to residents or owners of property in Essex County. The company has its headquarters in the Essex Agricultural school.

Some of the men who have been or are directors include Herbert W. Mason, Neil W. Rice and James W. Appleton, of Ipswich; Maxwell Norman, of Hamilton; John S. Lawrence, of Topsfield; John C. Phillips, of North Beverly; Wm. Bray, Georgetown; Albert Harrington, Peabody; John Shattuck, Andover; James Poor, North Andover; Lawrence Dodge, West Newbury; Fred A. devote the coming year to investigations having an immediate bearing on war conditions. The Reference Library is assembling an unusual collection of material relating to the war employment of women and the maintenance of adequate labor standards. The Bookshop for Boys and Girls, in emphasizing the right type of reading, is helping its youthful friends to a wiser understanding of other nations and a keener loyalty to our own.

Though this survey does not completely summarize the Union's war activities, perhaps to some extent it may indicate how wide the range of service is, how manifold are the possibilities for further service. With strength to maintain the old work, with the vision and power to accept the new responsibilities and opportunities, the Women's Educational and Industrial Union is giving itself abundantly, earnestly, potently in this our nation's crisis.

BUYS PROPERTY AT FRESHWATER COVE

Papers have been recorded at the Essex South Registry transferring title to the Dale estate at Freshwater Cove, Gloucester, to Annie M. Ryan, of Magnolia, owner of the stores on Lexington ave. The grantor is Mary Dale Trumbull, who sells through the office of T. Dennie Boardman, Reginald and R. deB. Boardman. Years ago this estate, which has an area of twenty acres with a broad waterfront, was one of the show places of Gloucester. That was before the mansion was destroyed by fire. It adjoins the property of John Hays Hammond.

SOCIAL REGISTER

THE present war does not seem to have created the seashore scare caused by Cervera's fleet at the time of the Spanish war. Seashore cottages quite went begging in June of that memorable year, yet the summer Social Register, just issued, indicates that the seashore occupancies this year have relatively gained on the inland residences in spite of the submarine activities.

While there is a falling off of some ten percent in country residences, doubtless because many families are keeping their city residences open during the summer for their Red Cross and canteen activities, yet this decrease falls fifteen percent on inland occupancy as against five percent on seashore residences.

There are 3695 families by the seashore compared with 3830 last year; and 6081 families residing inland compared with 7177 last year; 190 families are living abroad as compared to only 165 last year.

The arrivals and departures from Europe and the names of yachts are not mentioned this year for well-known war reasons.

The summer Social Register indicates the rank of 949 in the service

Since April 1st, 705 persons have married as compared to 956 last spring, which was a banner season in this respect, and there are noted the deaths of 245 men as compared to 211 last year and of 193 women as compared to 182 last year.

The summer Social Register, as its name implies, gives the summer addresses of the families in the following cities, where the families are not to be found at the winter address appearing in the previous issues of the year: New York, Washington, Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston, Providence, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Dayton, St. Paul, Minneapolis, San Francisco, Baltimore, Buffalo, New Orleans, Southern Cities, Seattle, Portland, Southern California and Detroit, which appeared for the first time last winter.

Fourth of July at Beverly Farms was indeed most quiet. The youngsters made more or less noise, but there was no other feature of celebration except a band concert by the U. S. Machinery Co. Field band, at the West beach pavilion, between 2 and 3 o'clock. This was a part of the celebration program furnished by the city. Beverly Farms people kept open house, however, and entertained more or less company.

COPLEY THEATRE, BOSTON

The summer season at the Copley theatre has opened most auspiciously with a special production of Earl Derr Bigger's great war comedy, "Inside the Lines." Its second week begins Monday evening, and there is every sign of its continued popularity. During the summer, there will be a special schedule of prices for matinees, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, all the seats in the orchestra being available for $1.00.

"Inside the Lines" is a play about the war, but its scenes are far away from the actual fighting. It tells a romantic and a dramatic tale in which there is not a little comedy. Its scene is the picturesque Rock of Gibraltar, England's famous fortress at the tip end of Spain, which guards the entrance to the Mediterranean sea.

Summer is coming, summer is coming,
I know it, I know it, I know it;
Light again, leaf again, life again, love again!
Yes, my wild little poet.

—Tennyson

Are never done right.

National and State Flags and Flags of Allies

Presented in Unique and Patriotic Service at Beverly Farms, Sunday—Stirring Addresses

BEVERLY FARMS Baptist church was the scene of an unique and patriotic service Sunday afternoon incident to the presentation to the church of the national and state flags, as well as the flags of the allies. The service was arranged by the minister, Rev. Clarence Strong Pond, and the members of the Young Men's Bible class.

Augustus Peabody Loring, of Pride's Crossing, the representative to the Massachusetts Constitutional Convention from this district, presided, being introduced by Willis A. Pride, superintendent of the Bible school. Mr. Loring made an admirable address, in which he spoke of the stress of the times and the need for honoring the men in the service and in the service of our gallant allies. Rev. Neilson Poe Carey, rector of St. John's church, offered the prayer. The hymn, "Lord of All Being," written by Oliver Wendell Holmes, who worshipped in the church during the summer-time, when he was a resident, was sung.

Mr. Loring introduced Howard A. Doane, chairman of the Flag Service committee, who told the minister that the class was prepared to present to the church, a silk national flag, and a silk state flag, the gift of the Young Men's class and their friends. The minister bid him admit them and proceed with the service of presentation, while the audience sang "Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord."

Mr. Doane retired and conducted Adj. Eben Day, of the Grand Army, and a procession of patriotic citizens to the front of the church with the Preston Post, G. A. R., 188, on the right of the line followed by young men from the class. The flag was borne by Seaman Herbert Cole, U. S. N. R. F. Then followed James B. Dow, representative to the General Court, Capt. Augustus Peabody Loring, Jr., M. S. G. The escort from Baker's island signal station was to have been present, but was detained on account of the mist upon the water. Then followed Victor de Bellefroid and escort with the Belgian flag; George Dupres with the French flag; William Harvey bearing a British flag, escorted by John Chapman and other men of Great Britain, and then the Italian flag borne by one of the young Italians of the village, Paul Conti. The Sons of Veterans served as guests of honor. The American flag was presented by Seaman Herbert Cole, in well chosen and effective words.

The flag was accepted in behalf of the church by the minister and in turn given into the hands of Benj. Osborn, a Grand Army man and custodian of the church. The minister read a poem, "My Flag and Your Flag."

James B. Dow presented the Massachusetts state flag. This was a particularly appropriate choice of the committee, because Mr. Dow is a member of the Bible school and the representative to the General Court from the district.

The state flag was received by the minister and given into the care of Otis N. Davis, a custodian of the church. The minister requested that the flags be placed in position. He then read the 46th Psalm, and a dedication service for the flag was read and a prayer was offered. The audience rose and sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

Just before this dedicatory service a photograph of the scene was taken with the special purpose in view of sending one to each of the boys in the service of the government.

The Belgian flag was presented by Victor de Bellefroid. It was accepted by the minister by thanking the Belgian people for the heroic stand they made for world freedom. Then was read two verses of the Belgian national hymn, "Not centuries of Slavish might can hold fair Belgium from the light."

The flag of France was presented by Paul Dupres, of the Frick estate. Two verses of the "Marseillaise," were read. William Harvey presented the British flag and Mon. Conti the Italian flag. An Italian orchestra played while the Italians sang their national anthem. The procession was formed and the colors taken to the upper platform and put in a temporary place. The audience then rose after the dedicatory prayer and sang the prayer-hymn, "God Bless Our Loyal Men," written by the minister, Rev. Mr. Pond.

An address was made by Lieut. Vittorio Orlandini, an official representative of the Italian government to this country. The audience arose and greeted Lieut. Orlandini when he was introduced. He made one of the most thrilling addresses ever given on the North Shore. It was a straightforward story of Italy's relations with Austria and Germany and the reasons for their alliance for defensive purposes only. Then, when the critical time came for the decision to be made for war with Germany or against Germany, they decided against Germany because their heart interests and their sense of national honor, and their future national independence was dependent upon the liberty of small nations to maintain their own independence and have the rights to their own government.

The moral aid which America gave through the Red Cross society even before the United States entered the war was great, said the speaker. He told a thrilling story of an old horse found in a peasant's stable. The lieutenant found the owner in the house, an old man sitting by the fire, alone. He offered a large sum of money. This was spurned because, said he, "I have given my life blood for my country in my sons and nephews, shall I accept payment for the blood of one of my beasts?"

Mr. Justice Holmes, a member of the Supreme Judicial Court of the United States, was introduced by the chairman, and when he arose to speak the audience arose and clapped him vigorously. Justice Holmes made a short address, admirably suited to the occasion, which thrilled as an old soldier of the Civil War, who had seen the Stars and Stripes against a curtain of white smoke from gunfire. He paid a glowing tribute to the noble youths who are responding to the call of the nation, today.

The audience sang "America," and the benediction was pronounced by the minister. Every one who attended the service realized that it was one of the most patriotic and notable services held on the North Shore since this war began.

The guests of honor invited were: Col. Charles L. Pierson, Com. Stanley of the Dept. of Mass., G. A. R., Neal Rantoul, Mayor James MacPherson. There were many Shore summer residents present, as well as many all the year residents. The audience room was taxed to capacity. One of the beautiful parts of the service was the reading of appropriate poems as each flag was accepted.

Vittorio Orlandini was showered with roses by the Beverly Farms Italians at the close of his talk.

The Colonnade, Magnolia, Mass.

We offer for the wardrobe or Trouseau a collection of exquisite Handkerchief-Linen Lingerie, particularly attractive and simple in design.

Several months ago we foresaw that while the demand for dainty and practical Underwear would not diminish, the supply of foreign goods would be limited, and prices would therefore advance. Accordingly, we placed our orders months in advance. Today it is our pleasure to announce that we have large stocks, and that our patrons will share in the benefit of the saving in prices effected by our foresight.

Among the stock are French and Philippine Hand-Embroidered and Lace-trimmed Underwear. Also Negligees, Jersey Silk Petticoats in tailored models; Taffeta and Wash Silk Skirts.

An Hour Spent With a Few of the More Isolated Ones Here and There—Glimpses of Their Homes

LILLIAN McCANN

I

A thing of beauty is a joy forever;
Its loveliness increases; it will never Pass into nothingness; but still will keep
A bower quiet for us, and a sleep
Full of sweet dreams and health and quiet breathing.
—John Keats.

In the elder days of Art,
Builders wrought with greatest care
Each minute and unseen part;
For the Gods see everywhere.
—Longfellow.

THE NORTH SHORE is blest in many ways. It is easy here to believe with the poet who says:

"Beauty is truth, truth beauty—that is all Ye know on earth, and all ye need to know."

The Shore has had and is still having a goodly share of the country's artists who come here to get inspiration from the natural beauties spread out with such a lavish hand, all along the rocky, tree-bedecked shores.

It has been thought that the artists and their North Shore homes would be of interest to our readers this summer. In former years Ipswich and East Gloucester artists have been written about in the BREEZE because those were naturally the art centers of the Shore, where the artists have been congregating for many seasons.

But tucked away here and there along the Shore in some isolated cottage (that is often far from a brother or sister artist) is the home of some well-known person who has a place in the art world.

A Son of the Poet Longfellow

In point of years, perhaps, the oldest artist on the Shore is Ernest Wadsworth Longfellow, of New York, who, with Mrs. Longfellow (Harriet Spelman) has long lived at "Edgecliff," Coolidge's Point, Manchester. Mr. Longfellow is the eldest of the five children of the poet Longfellow. His mother was the beautiful Frances Elizabeth Appleton, Longfellow's second wife. His brother, Charles Appleton Longfellow, was a soldier in the Civil War. His sister, Miss Alice Longfellow, still resides in her father's historic home, the Craigie house in Cambridge. Another sister, Mrs. James G. Thorpe (Annie Allegra Longfellow) lives in an adjoining place to Craigie house. A few years ago his sister, Mrs. Richard Henry Dana (Edith Longfellow) died. She had long been of the Manchester colony, at Dana's beach.

The quiet and secluded home of the Longfellows on Coolidge's Point is a most charming place for a summer retreat. Even though the grounds are small and rocky, a war garden of potatoes is flourishing between the cool, dark-looking house and the bright little studio perched upon the hill quite close to it.

The studio is of white stucco, with big, light-green doors and a red tile roof. It makes an attractive little spot and here the artist will "touch up" some of his pictures during the summer, although much of his time will be spent in rest.

Mr. Longfellow has long had a studio in New York, where he makes his winter home. He has painted nearly all of the North Shore scenes of prominence.

When Mr. Longfellow was asked recently by the BREEZE writer for an interview, he smilingly bade her go to younger artists, saying that he abhorred print and

A Beloved Haunt of Manchester Artists

"Rookwood," Summer Home of the Misses Sturgis, at Manchester View of the house from water side somehow conveyed the idea that he thought himself too old to be interviewed. She must have looked incredulously at him, for Mrs. Longfellow came to the rescue.

Graciously she brought from its place in the cottage hall a handsomely decorated wedding cake, done in gold and bearing the dates 1868-1918. She said that Miss Alice Longfellow had recently had them celebrate their golden wedding anniversary in Craigie house, just before they came to the North Shore home.

But only cold dates tell the story, in that printers' ink from which the artist shrinks.

The BREEZE writer left the home feeling that the message breathed so long ago by the illustrious father of the artist had sunk in deeply here:

*"Stay, stay at home, my heart, and rest;
Home-keeping hearts are happiest.
For they that wander, they know not where,
Are full of trouble, and full of care;
To stay at home is best."*

With the Misses Sturgis at "Rookwood"

From the quiet charm of "Edgecliff," so fittingly named, the writer withdrew and left the Point and soon found herself wandering down that attractive avenue of "Rookwood," the home of the Misses Sturgis, of Boston.

The grounds are in a natural state and the house impresses one as a most delightful abode for the sisters who have made their home in it for many seasons.

It is a cheery-looking red brick house, with white trimmings and green blinds. The large sweeping swell in the veranda makes an artistic feature on one end of the house. Out past this and down through the tiny garden, with its low brick wall enclosing gay, old-fashioned flowers, is the path leading to the studio we were seeking.

This little path, if followed out to Summer street, will be found to skirt along the Sturgis estate, separating it from the Dr. Lancashire home, the adjoining estate. The path belongs to the Philip Stocktons on the opposite side of Summer street and was retained when Dr. Lancashire bought "Graftonwood," the former Head estate. Perhaps this has nothing to do with artists, but it seemed rather novel and "artistic" to own a long, winding path down to the sea.

Miss Mabel Sturgis is the owner of the little studio.

Ideally located on the rocks down by the water, with Dana's island at the front door, also Egg Rock, and brilliantly colored rock formations near, this little brown-shingled house might well be the envy of any artist.

Here Miss Sturgis has experimented in many ways of painting water with both sunlight and shadow upon it. Her favorite idea, which is carried out in many of her paintings and which can be done so well upon the Shore around her home, is to paint the pine trees against the sky with a sunny sea behind.

Her pictures are stacked around the studio, nearly all in the process of being done, for Miss Sturgis has been in France not quite two years, engaged in refugee work.

Nevertheless she has some charming views of Dana's island, which are completed or nearly so (at low tide one can walk over to the island); of the woods in different seasons; afternoon scenes showing the pine trees and sky and water; rippling water; water showing pebbles beneath, and other bits of her shore and island.

Miss Sturgis had very little time to paint while in France, but has brought back a few pictures that will always be a joy to her. They are bits of the beauties of France that offset the terrible suffering she saw. Also she has brought back a few ocean scenes, painted on boat.

Miss Sturgis tells, in a most interesting manner, of her work with the refugees. To get them into suitable lodgings, to provide simple furniture, which they pay for on the installment plan, to provide gardens where they are delighted to grow vegetables and where they can have their chickens and rabbits (rabbits are always raised for food the same as chickens), are among some of the things done for the refugees by Red Cross workers, to put them back to normal family life again. She says some are well-to-do and start up their former occupations in new places.

Miss Sturgis says that she and Miss Margaret Curtis have been asked to return to France in September. Her sister, Miss Evelyn Sturgis, is still over there in Y. M. C. A. canteen work.

But let us turn from war to pottery! Another sister, Miss Maud Sturgis, is the only woman along the Shore who has a pottery with a kiln and complete outfit, that we know of.

This is housed in a little portable building, with

Page and Shaw Tea Room at Pride's Crossing

Handsome Little Cottage of Spanish Mission Type
Centre of Life on the North Shore This Season

NESTLING CLOSE to the rocky ledge on which it stands is a cottage of the Spanish mission type of architecture at Pride's Crossing. Not only is it a "cottage" that attracts all who pass along the North Shore drive between Beverly Farms and Pride's, but it displays a welcome sign known far and wide,—the famous sign of the lion rampant and the other characteristics of the Page & Shaw emblem, which is always seen on every article, no matter how small, that comes from their establishments.

Since this handsome little stucco cottage, with its noticeable red tile roof, was opened a year ago, on May 30, it has been known as the Page & Shaw Tea Room, a most welcome and delightful addition to the chain of tea rooms along the Shore.

People have stopped as they were motoring by just to admire the little building and have noticed the two big trees, one at each end of the piazza, around which the walls of the structure have been built so as to save them. One is an extremely large cedar, with a thick trunk. This is in the end of the porch used as an outdoor tea room. This section is partially surrounded with outside stucco walls and screened enclosures and is provided with tables and rustic furniture.

Upon entering the tea house the charm of the room attracts at once. The whole place is done in black cypress, with panels of the wood reaching from the floor to the wide, sunny frieze of Venetian design that adds so much to the effect. The large room is separated partly by the little kitchen which takes up the center of the building. In a way this gives more seclusion to the rest room and tea room proper, each occupying a side of the house.

The rest room is furnished with a pianola, palms and mission furniture, in which plenty of rockers predominate. The two large tables have such books as "Who's Who," "Blue Books" of both the North and South Shores, and among the magazines are copies of the NORTH SHORE BREEZE, dating from the early season in May. Everything seems to be arranged for the comfort and convenience of motorists.

This room makes a delightful resting place, but it can also be used for card parties, and, when the rugs are taken up, no better dancing floor can be found than here. A fireplace with Page & Shaw screens adds to the comfort as well as to the looks of the room.

In the tea room proper about fifty people can be seated. The little tables of gum wood with chairs to match seat four very comfortably. Each table always has a tiny glass vase with a few flowers in it.

In the dainty blue menu booklets the hungry motorist reads such things as various kinds of bouillon, half a dozen kinds of sandwiches, cold meats, salads, hot drinks, ice cream, all kinds of college ices, sundaes and miscellaneous drinks.

If milady drops in for tea she can take her choice of Orange Pekoe, English Breakfast, Formosa Oolong or Russian Afternoon, and with her pot of tea she can have toasts of various kinds, buns, cakes, etc. Gingerbread and cream sounds good for the kiddies.

The long onyx-marbled soda fountain is a pretty feature, also the show cases adjoining it filled with fancy articles including knitting baskets, useful boxes and other things.

Of course, in and on these show cases is displayed the Page & Shaw candy, in boxes and bulk. Such pretty boxes, too! Florists use the suggestion, "Say it with flowers." Why couldn't Page & Shaw put up a suggestive motto of, "Say it with candy?"

Home-made cakes of all descriptions are for sale; also the Women's Educational and Industrial Union cake fresh from Boston each day.

The tea house figured in several Red Cross affairs last year, the manager, Otis Emerson Dunham, of North Beverly, being ever ready to have the little Spanish bungalow do its "bit" in the way of funds, meeting place for conferences, sales, teas, and in any way in which the Shore residents can find it of value.

At the Sign of the Crane tea house, in Manchester, the same quiet and restful atmosphere is felt as of old. Patrons will find it particularly inviting in these busy days. Although just opened, a program of war-time simplicity and economy has been arranged. With a little extra care it has been found that the food can be prepared as palatable and tempting with substitutes as without. Everything is wheatless and, of course, specially patriotic, but just as appetizing as before. The same cakes will be served and sold as have been during the past four years, which are familiar to the patrons of the Educational and Industrial Union, of Boston. In addition to the cakes there will be home-made cookies of oatmeal, bran and barley.

The gift shop will have the usual pretty things. Many dainty and practical things for babies are there. Since everyone must have a knitting bag for socks these days, an assortment of small and very new bags has been added; also all sorts of accessories for making socks.

The Burnham Tea House, in Ipswich, is again open, with its quaint old-time furnishings which give such an atmosphere of the past to the dreamy old place. Its manager, Mrs. M. L. Murray, spent the winter at Miami, Fla., and has brought a stock of Nassau baskets of all descriptions, and rugs, also from the south, which she has added to the gift department. Mrs. Julian Harris, of Pride's Crossing, and Mlle. Germaine Cossini are among those who have been over to the old house recently.

Avoid overgrown military establishments, which are particularly hostile to republican liberties.—Washington's Farewell Address.

RAYMOND BROWN. RESIDENT MANAGER

ALONG the SHORE

THE NORTH SHORE COMMITTEE of the Italian War Relief Fund, of America, will benefit from the opening of "Castle Hill," the Ipswich home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Crane, Jr., on July 13 and 14, Saturday and Sunday. The beautiful rose gardens are now in full bloom and it will be a wonderful opportunity to see them in their prime. The Italian gardens are considered the greatest attraction of the place. They were designed after gardens in Italy, making it peculiarly fitting that they should be opened to help Italy at this critical time. The beautiful grounds that cover hundreds of acres, the great swimming pool, the beaches and the sand dunes on which stands the Ipswich lighthouse, are all features worth going miles to see.

The workroom of the North Shore committee is in Mrs. George Lee's garage, Beverly Farms. Mrs. Lee is chairman of the committee and Mrs. Hobart E. Warren, secretary-treasurer. Boston headquarters is 292 Boylston street. The North Shore committee is most grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Crane for their generous offer to open "Castle Hill," which they feel sure will be of such wonderful assistance to the cause.

Mrs. Gordon Abbott and Master Gordon Abbott, of West Manchester, have been spending a week or more at Windsor, N. H. Mr. Abbott joined them over the holiday.

Mrs. Thomas B. Gannett, of "Waldyn," Blossom lane, Manchester, gave a small tea at her home on Tuesday afternoon. Manchester friends and a few others were entertained informally.

Richard D. Sears, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Sears, who have "Clipston," the Boylston A. Beal house on Smith's Point, Manchester, is the chief petty officer in the experimental station at New London. Their daughter, Miss Miriam Sears, left this week to make a visit in Canada.

Mrs. Charles A. Read, Jr., and little daughter, Helen, are staying at the home of Mr. Read's parents, the Chas. A. Reads, on Read's island, Manchester. Mr. Read has returned to New York, from a short visit with his family.

Mr. and Mrs. Grange Sard and their daughter, Miss Marion Sard, of Albany, N. Y., have taken one of the J. Warren Merrill cottages on Smith's Point, Manchester, arriving Wednesday. Two years ago they had a cottage on the Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. Parker Corning, of Albany, N. Y., will come in two weeks to "Alabama," the same cottage as they occupied last year on Smith's Point, Manchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellery Sedgwick (Mabel Cabot), of "Long Hill," Essex street, Montserrat, assisted in receiving the guests at the recent garden party given in Boston for Red Cross and war relief workers by Mrs. Alexander Sedgwick.

A "CATCH ALL" sale will be held at the Page & Shaw Tea Rooms, Pride's Crossing, through the kindness of the manager, Mr. Dunham, on Friday and Saturday, July 26 and 27, from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. The proceeds will be devoted to War Food Work.

What is a "Catch All" sale? Come and see!

The committee in charge is composed of Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, chairman; Miss Frances Bradley, Mrs. Samuel Culbertson, Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mrs. Edward L. Kent, Mrs. Grafton W. Minot, Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, 2d, Mrs. William L. Putnam, Mrs. W. B. Thomas.

Lieut. Norman Read, of Manchester, who was in the Aviation Corps, in France, is now in Alaska for the summer to recuperate his health.

Mrs. Livermore Wells and her two daughters, the Misses Barbara and Dorothy, are now settled at their cottage on Smith's Point, Manchester, where they have taken the place formerly occupied by the Maynard Ladds. Her son, Bulkeley, is an ensign in the navy. The young daughters will be a welcome addition to the North Shore circles.

Mrs. Monroe Douglas Robinson, of New York, who was formerly Miss Dorothy Jordan, of Boston and Manchester, has joined her mother, Mrs. Eben D. Jordan, at "Saltair," the cottage at Bar Harbor, Me., which Mrs. Jordan has taken for the summer. Mrs. Robinson's little daughter, Dorothy Douglas Robinson, completes the small family party.

Mrs. George Lee, of Beverly Farms, has been spending the past week, partly in Boston and New Hampshire.

Miss E. M. Dennie, of Cambridge, is spending July with her cousin, Miss Elizabeth D. Boardman, of "Hill Top," West Manchester.

The North Shore will be interested in the mid-summer market for the benefit of the wounded soldiers in France, held at the home of Mrs. Clement Bernheimer, 63 High street, Newburyport, Thursday, July 18, from three to eight in the evening. If wet, it will be held the next day. There will be an old-fashioned shop, vegetable grab, baskets, aprons, preserves, pickles, war candies, cake, bread, cool drinks and an Italian Relief booth.

MISS HARRIET DEXTER, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Franklin Dexter, of "Oberland," Pride's Crossing, is one of the young women on the Shore contemplating a most useful service for wounded soldiers. Miss Dexter is interested in teaching blind people.

Last summer and autumn she attended a course of lectures in Boston given by Miss Trainer. The past winter she has had opportunities to meet the blind and has done some teaching among them, drilling in the use of a typewriter and dictophone.

Miss Dexter is taking special training this summer and feels that if there is a great need for the work with blinded soldiers, she would like to be ready to offer her services. The government has made no plans, as yet, for this work, so the exact qualifications and other requisitions for volunteer teachers are not known at present.

Miss Dexter is much interested, but is extremely modest about the new line of study and work she is following.

The Shore has another summer resident who has offered her services to the government, in case of need. This is Miss Margaret S. McGill, sister of Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of Montserrat. Miss McGill is quietly living in a snug little cottage on Brinley avenue, at Montserrat. She has spent her life in teaching the blind in a state institution in New York, from which she was retired last year on a pension.

But Miss McGill and a pension would never be associated. Now, she is willing and eager to use her years of experience in this line and to be of some help where she feels so well fitted.

Miss Charlotte Read, of Manchester, is a Shore girl who learned the mechanics of automobiles as well as the driving and who is now in France near the front. She is driving an ambulance in the Hackett-Lowther unit, a British unit connected with the French government and having canteen service as well as ambulance service.

Mrs. John Markle, of West Manchester, is busily engaged with her knitting for soldiers and the navy. During the past winter she made over fifty outfits for distribution among soldiers and sailors and has more to her credit by this time. The outfit consisted of a sweater, helmet, socks, scarf and wristlets.

When the 30th Engineers (gas and flame) left for action they carried with them the national colors and their own Engineers' flag, both the gifts of Mrs. Markle, who had them made for the occasion. A nephew, 2d Lieut. E. Moore Robinson, who is well-known upon the Shore from his having made his home with the Markles, is with the 30th Engineers.

Guests at "The Rocks," the West Manchester home of Mr. and Mrs. John N. Willys, over last week-end were Col. Joseph Tulasne, the noted chief of the French Commission on aviation, and Lieut. and Mrs. Casmir Poznanski, the former also of the aviation commission now in Washington.

Mrs. William A. Read (Edith Fabyan) and baby, William Augustus Read, 3d, will spend part of the summer at the West Manchester home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis W. Fabyan. Mr. Read is in Pensacola, Fla., at an aviation school. Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Jr. (Eleanor Fabyan), is at Hot Springs, in order to be near Mr. Frothingham's work in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Aksel Christopher Paul Wichfeld, of Washington, will join their children at "Swiftmoor," Pride's Crossing, about the middle of the month. Mr. Wichfeld is an attaché of the Danish embassy.

MANCHESTER had a rare and unusual treat last Saturday afternoon when the Wodell Treble Clef club, of Boston, gave a concert in the Town hall for the benefit of the Manchester branch of the Red Cross.

The conductor, Frederick W. Wodell, has taught music twenty-four years, in Boston. His studio is in the S. S. Pierce building on School street. A son, Dr. Wodell, sings with him and is interested in the work of the club. Mrs. Henry L. Mason, of Beverly Farms, is known by the Wodells as the "fairy godmother of the club," and it was through her efforts that they came to Manchester. Mr. Wodell says she has done and is constantly doing kind things for them. This was their first appearance on the Shore.

Mr. Wodell had a number of his pupils in the club of twenty young ladies that came to Manchester. It is, however, a concert organization trained by him. Since the war, they are giving their concerts for some helpful cause along war lines. Recent appearances have been at Commonwealth Pier, Camp Devens, Harvard Naval Radio school and at the Boston Y. M. C. A., when the funds were divided among four childrens' charities.

At the concert last Saturday the regular violinist could not appear owing to illness. Her place was taken by Miss Elinor Whittemore, an accomplished and beautiful young musician who sailed this week for France to play for the soldiers.

Girls who ushered and passed programs were Miss Ruth Bremer, Miss Hélène Ellsworth and Miss Grace Merrill. They wore Red Cross uniforms and white head-coverings. Mrs. Ellery L. Rogers took up tickets at the door. The hall was well filled with both local and summer residents. Among the latter were seen Mr. and Mrs. J. Warren Merrell, Mrs. Charles M. Cabot, Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, Miss Mary F. Bartlett, Mrs. John Chess Ellsworth, Mrs. J. L. Chalifoux, Miss Margaret L. Corlies and her protégé, Miss Helen McDonald, and Mrs. H. L. Mason.

The program consisted of the following numbers, all sweetly and skilfully rendered to a very appreciative audience:

MRS. JOHN N. WILLYS, of "The Rocks," West Manchester, has many war interests at present. She is on the committee of the National Aeronautic society that has headquarters in New York. This society was formerly with the Woman's Naval Service, Inc., but has now been taken over by the War Department to work in coöperation with the Training Camp committee. One of the main duties is to equip every squadron of aviators who go over to France, with a Spaulding athletic outfit costing $250. Mrs. Willys has just equipped fifteen squadrons personally. Associated with her on the committee are Mmes. Wm. E. Benjamin, Wm. H. Crocker, E. H. Harriman, Marshall Russell, H. N. Slater, Benjamin Thaw, French Vanderbilt and Chas. S. Whitman, and Miss Anne Hope Bennett. The chairman is Mrs. Charles A. Van Rensselaer, and the vice-chairman, Mrs. Henry A. Wise Wood.

Mrs. Willys comes from Toledo, Ohio, where she is on the State Advisory board of Camp Sherman, at Chillicothe. In Toledo she was instrumental in raising $30,000 for hostess houses at the camp.

Mr. Willys has completed his work as national chairman for the campaign which raised $3,900,000 for the welfare of the soldier outside the cantonments.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Stockton (Margaret Head) will pass a quiet summer at "Highcliffe," the Manchester cottage, instead of spending part of the summer, as usual, at "Headlands," on Lake Champlain, at Westport, the home of Mrs. Stockton's late parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Head. Mr. Stockton is too busily engaged to leave Manchester this season.

Miss Clara Winthrop, of West Manchester, gave a picnic for the twenty-four choir boys of St. Paul's Cathedral, Boston, last Saturday, at Tuck's Point. Sports and swimming and fishing were greatly enjoyed, especially the latter by the lucky ones who had good catches. A hot dinner was served at noon, sent down from Miss Winthrop's home, and ice cream and cake were indulged in before the boys left for their homes in the evening.

MRS. REGINALD H. FITZ, of "The Mountain," West Manchester, has received a cable dispatch stating that Miss Phoebe Wright, daughter of Mrs. Henry Wright, of Ottawa, Canada, and Dr. Reginald Fitz, captain, U. S. Medical Reserve Corps, of Boston, were married in Oxford, England, Monday, July 1. Dr. Fitz is a son of the late Dr. Reginald Heber Fitz, of Boston and Manchester, and Mrs. Fitz. He was graduated from Harvard in 1906, and from the Harvard Medical school in 1909. He has been connected with the Peter Bent Brigham hospital and with the Rockefeller institute in New York. He is a member of the Tavern club. Edward C. Fitz, Harvard, 1903, is a brother and Miss Edith Fitz is a sister. The bride, whose father was the late Dr. Henry Wright, of Ottawa, Canada, has of late been engaged in Canadian volunteer aid in France. The engagement was announced last April.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of a series of four moving picture performances of high class to be given at Horticultural hall, Manchester, for the benefit of the North Shore Horticultural society. Friends of the society will be glad of this opportunity to do something to show their appreciation of all the society is doing in these days of stress, such as turning the hall over to the Red Cross and surgical dressings workers, and to various causes along this and similar lines, without charge, but with an expense necessarily attached which the society meets. The four attractions selected are: "Over the Top," "Les Misérables," "Pershing's Crusaders," and "My Four Years in Germany." These are pictures that many people along the North Shore have not been privileged to see, and all have been much advertised and talked about in the cities. The first-named will be shown next Friday evening, July 19, the next on Friday, August 2, and the other two are not yet decided upon, as to date, as both are government-controlled films, and order must be obtained from Washington for their use. Tickets will be on sale at Allen's drug store, Manchester, Saturday; the price of the series will be $3, and of individual shows $1. Orders for tickets with remittance may also be sent to F. J. Merrill, checks to be made payable to John Jaffray, treasurer. The performances will commence at 8.15.

Former United States Senator and Mrs. Henry F. Lippitt are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a daughter, at Beverly Farms, June 29. The baby has not yet been named. Their other child, Frederick, is now a year and a half old and is often seen on the beach. The Lippitts occupy the "Pump Cottage," while Miss Eleonora Sears is in N. S. Simpkins' cottage, formerly occupied by the Lippitts.

Cottage rentals for the week through the office of T. Dennie Boardman, Reginald and R. deB. Boardman, are as follows:

The Austin H. Niblack family, of Boston and Chicago in the Arthur Stevens cottage on Summer street, Manchester.

The Stanwood G. Wellington family, of Brookline, have taken the Cushing cottage at Beverly Farms.

THE SEWING CIRCLE, of Beverly Farms First Baptist church, in which Rev. Clarence Strong Pond is pastor, had a sale Thursday, the proceeds of which will buy the church fuel for the winter. Tables were arranged very prettily around the church vestry. Admission was charged. Friends among the summer colony sent in some of the fancy articles and vegetables, the latter making a fine showing.

The household table was in charge of Mrs. C. F. Preston, Mrs. Alice Collamer, Mrs. John F. Wyatt and Mrs. A. J. Crowell.

Cake table: Miss Susie Bennett, Mrs. D. W. Preston and Mrs. Alice Brooks.

Fancy table: Mrs. C. S. Pond, Mrs. F. W. Varney, Mrs. W. A. Pride and Mrs. Samuel Cinnamond.

Flowers and vegetables: Mrs. Elmer Standley.

Candy: Mrs. J. A. Mayberry, Mrs. George Wyness, Mrs. H. A. Doane and Mrs. A. K. Hawkins.

Ice cream: Mrs. Addie Bennett and Miss Lizzie Collamer.

Grabs: Mrs. L. Hardy and Miss M. L. Hull.

Punch: Mrs. Annie Harlow and Mrs. Frank Cole.

An evening entertainment was given by Guy Baker, singer, and Miss McMillan, reader, the proceeds going for the heat, also.

The sale was well attended and the Circle feels well repaid for the effort when all of the members are so busily engaged with Red Cross at present.

THE W. HARRY BROWNS, of Pittsburgh, will come to their home, "Sunset Hill," Beverly Cove, July 15. Their daughter, Mrs. Charles A. Painter, and children, came this Wednesday from their Pittsburgh home. The Browns are very active in war work and are thus late in their arrival on the Shore. Mr. Brown is on the coal commission at his home, and Mrs. Brown is chairman of the largest Red Cross auxiliary in Pittsburgh,—the Preparedness auxiliary. During the last Red Cross drive this auxiliary secured $194,600, the largest amount of any group. Mrs. Brown is also on the executive committee of the War Savings campaign.

Lieut. Vasili Stoika, president of the Roumanian National League, will give a short address on the new political and military organization of his people in America, and of the 18,000 Roumanians fighting with the Italian armies. The lecture will be held in Horticultural hall, Manchester, on Thursday, July 25, at five o'clock.

TURK'S HEAD INN, at Land's End, Rockport, was visited by a serious fire last night shortly after 12.30. The centre of the hotel was badly gutted and guests were forced to flee to the lawn, where they had to dress. The fire is supposed to have started in a room on the top floor. It is doubtful if the hotel will be able to receive guests this year again, as water did much damage to the whole house.

Remember there are two shows every evening at the Larcom theatre, Beverly,—at 6.30 and 8.30; the last feature never starts until 9.30. Cool as ocean breezes. adv.

THAT PLAYGROUNDS for children are much needed these hot summer days is the verdict of all people. Mrs. Alexander Cochrane, of Pride's Crossing, has long been interested in the playground question in cities as well as small country towns, where they are often needed as badly. Not all could give a playground to a town, but Mrs. Cochrane was fortunate in this respect, while others might contribute their bit toward such causes in their respective towns.

Mrs. Cochrane (Mary Lynde Cullivan) gave a tract of land to Everett, the past winter, for which the town has made an appropriation to have it graded and put in order for a playground.

The land is on the Mystic river and it has been a common thing to dig up bullets on it from the battle of Bunker Hill. Indians remains are also found, great clam shell piles, showing, no doubt where they had clam bakes.

The property had been in the Lynde family since 1630, descending through eight generations of Lyndes, with but one break in the change of the name Lynde. It will be known as the "Nathan Lynde" playground. Nathan Lynde was Mrs. Cochrane's great-grandfather. The property at one time had been very large and this was the last remaining portion of it.

In time this will be as attractive and useful a playground as that in Somerville, which was made on very unpromising ground. The historic bit of land will thus fulfill a great mission for time to come.

Has left His hope with all!

Mrs. Warren has charge on Wednesday afternoons and all day Thursdays, while Miss Denègre is instructor on other days.

The pupils and workers include the Misses Ella Snelling, Elizabeth Caswell, Katharine Lane, Katherine Crosby, Ellen Curtis, Katherine Abbott and Nina Higginson. Other knitters are Mmes. Courtlandt Richardson,

Although no one hopes for quite as much hunting now, as in the happier times gone by, there is always a lot of riding in the fall, as even the hardest worker must relax at times; and there is found unexpectedly vacated in the very heart of the riding country, on the border of Topsfield and Hamilton, a beautiful completely furnished, small cottage. Also a large furnished farm house, with flower and well-stocked vegetable gardens, either for rent or sale. Any inquiries answered by applying to C. P., South Hamilton Postoffice. adv.

OPEN UNTIL LATE SEPTEMBER

THE NORTH SHORE was treated to a novel experience Monday afternoon—but something which has promise of becoming quite common in the days following the war—that of an aeroplane coming up from New York with a passenger to take luncheon with friends, and then returning to New York after luncheon. In this case it was Maj.-Gen. W. Brancker, of the British army, who came to Coolidge's Point, Manchester, to take luncheon with Col. E. M. House. Maj.-Gen. Brancker is a member of the British air mission. He made the trip from Mineola, L. I., in an army airplane, accompanied by Lt. J. S. Reitenbaugh, of the United States army. They went as far as Rye Beach, N. H., before it was discovered that they were beyond their destination, but the return trip from Rye to Magnolia was made in a short while.

After the General started on the return trip to New York, Col. House announced that there was no significance attached to the visit, as it was of purely personal nature.

Gen. Brancker has been in this country for several months, holding conferences with officials of the American air board and planning with them a campaign of transatlantic air flights. The General, who holds an important place on the air board of his own country, is of firm belief that transatlantic flights will open the way for flights to Berlin and consequent retaliatory tactics against the Germans.

Lieut. Reitenbaugh, who was in charge of the Curtiss machine in which the flight was made, was without maps except for an automobile road map. When he reached the New Hampshire coast line and noted that it was less densely populated than he considered the Massachusetts coast should be, he descended toward the railroad lines and flew low enough to read the name on a railroad station. After consulting his road map he was able to pick out a return route to Magnolia.

The machine was of the regular army type and a landing was made at Butler field, near the residence of Wm. H. Coolidge, and within walking distance of Col. House's home.

The whirring of the big motors was heard in Gloucester and at Manchester, and more than 1000 persons followed the flight of the machine until it landed at Magnolia. A squad of Gloucester policemen followed the machine and reached Magnolia in time for policeman Wilkinson to hold up a photographer, who made two pictures of the airplane. The plates were removed from the camera and destroyed, after which the photographer was warned away from the scene.

Gen. Brancker started to return to Mineola at 3.45 o'clock, after all of nearly two hours. Lieut. Reitenbaugh intended to fly by way of Providence and planned to alight for a supply of gasoline. He expected to arrive at his hangar at Mineola at about 7 o'clock.

Mrs. Bill's shop, so picturesquely located on the beach at Magnolia, is open for the summer as usual. Mrs. Bill expects a visit from her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Whitney, of Hartford, Ct., very soon. They will motor up to spend a few weeks. Their daughter, Polly, is already at Magnolia with her grandmother.

A daughter was born July 3, to Lieut. Oliver Ames, Jr., and Mrs. Ames, who was Miss Caroline Fessenden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sewell H. Fessenden, of Chestnut Hill and Coolidge's Point, Manchester. Mrs. Ames is now with her parents and will come with them to Manchester in a week or more. Lieut. Ames is in France.

Miss Mary Gayley, of Berkeley, Calif., is visiting at the home of Col. and Mrs. Julian Harris, at Pride's Crossing. Col. Harris is a western man, son of Bishop Harris, of Michigan, and is now located in Washington. The Harris family have one of the most attractively situated places at Pride's.

Mrs. Godfrey L. Cabot, of Beverly Farms, is opening her house, Friday, July 19, for Miss Charlotte Head Allen's first musicale, for the benefit of the Red Cross. These musicales have among the patronesses already interested, the following: Mmes. Charles H. Bond, Frank M. Boynton, Godfrey L. Cabot, Franklin Dexter, Henry B. Endicott, Ezra C. Fitch, E. Palmer Gavit, J. Livingston Grandin, Henry Grew, 2d, John Hays Hammond, Franklin Haven, James Henry Lancashire, George Lee, John R. McGinley, Robert Treat Paine, 2d, Andrew W. Preston, Robert de W. Sampson, Quincy A. Shaw, Geo. Grant Snowden, Alexander Steinert and Washington B. Thomas, and Miss Margaret L. Corlies.

"Att-Lea House," Magnolia, the home of Mrs. S. Fisher Corlies and Miss Margaret L. Corlies, had its first demonstration in war breads this Wednesday afternoon, by a competent woman, who delighted the folk that came. Six North Shore cooks turned out and it is hoped that many more will come besides others who may be interested. The demonstrations are at four o'clock, on July 17, 24 and 31. This is an opportunity for the mistress of a house as well as the cook.

Co. I of the 15th Regiment of State Guard goes into camp with the regiment at Framingham, Sunday.

The 15th Regiment of Infantry, which opens the encampment for the entire State Guard, a force estimated to number some 11,000 officers and men, will enter upon its duties a half day in advance of the official schedule, and the time saved in making camp will be of value when the camp colors go up on Monday with everything ready for immediate work.

Col. Eldredge, commanding the 15th Infantry, has about completed his arrangements. The first guard mount of the tour will be called at 5.30 p. m. Camp will be broken early on the following Friday, in time to clear the field for the 11th Infantry, Col. Pfaff.

Col. Eldredge will have an interesting and patriotic ceremony at the evening parade of his command on Tuesday, July 16. He intends to have the set of silk regimental colors presented to the command by Judge William Caleb Loring, Augustus P. Loring, Miss K. P. Loring and Miss Louisa P. Loring, officially turned over to the regiment at that time. Judge Loring, it is hoped, will make the presentation, and the colors will be received by Col. Eldredge.

A special drill will be held this Friday evening, when the last word will be said previous to going to camp, Sunday.

The boys will leave Manchester on the 10.22 train Sunday, and on arrival in Boston will board special street cars for Framingham, which they expect to reach by 1 o'clock.

The dance in Manchester Town hall last night, for the purpose of raising a fund to help meet the expenses of the trip to Framingham next week, was a grand success. The hall has seldom held such a crowd. It was the best attended dance for years. The boys appeared in their uniforms, thus adding much to the occasion.

Charles F. Gettemy, director of statistics for the state, who has been given direction of the enforcement of the "anti-loafing" law, under which men between 18 and 50 must seek employment in useful pursuits and work at least 36 hours a week, whether they are wealthy or otherwise, has announced the names of those who will have charge of registering the men who come under the provisions of the act in the various cities and towns of the state. Chief of Police Wm. H. Sullivan will be in charge at Manchester.

John Allen, of the U. S. S. Missouri, has been home on a 10-day furlough the past week.

WENHAM.—Mrs. Alanson L. Daniels entertained the Village Improvement society a week ago, at her charming country home, "Old Farm," in Wenham.

The Wenham Tea House has been sought by some of the North Shore farmerettes recently, who get up with the early birds now and find they need a "bite" between six o'clock breakfast and luncheon time. Over seventy people were in the tea house on the Fourth. A recent luncheon was given by Miss M. L. Davison, of Eastern Point, Gloucester, who had among her guests Miss T. deR. Hawley, Lady Ames and Miss Russell. "We stand for food conservation" is the motto of the tea house. It could also be for "food conversation," because everybody talks it with the manager, Mrs. Philip Downes, and among themselves.

This Monday, Miss Rosamond Johnson, of Hamilton, gave a luncheon at the tea house, followed by one on Wednesday by her mother, Mrs. Wolcott Howe Johnson.

Mrs. F. L. Higginson, Jr., Mrs. G. S. Patten, Jr., Mrs. B. W. Currier, Mrs. William C. Ivison, the latter of Cedar Hurst, L. I., have been recent patrons of the Wenham Folk Handicraft shop, in Wenham.

About eight or nine hundred of them went out on the little motor-boats, accompanied by their teachers, for a day on the beautiful beach at "Castle Hill." A band furnished music all day. The children carry their own lunches, and in the afternoon comes the treat provided by Mr. Crane. This year ice cream and cake were served. The picnic is in honor of the birthdays of the Crane children, Miss Florence, who is nine and Master Cornelius, thirteen, both coming near together at this time of year.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis R. Appleton, of "Appleton Farms," Ipswich, have two sons in the service in France. Both are captains, Francis R. Appleton, Jr., and Charles L. Their other daughter, Mrs. Clarence L. Hay, is in the Frederick J. Alley house in Hamilton.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. William G. Thayer, of Southboro, who are now at "Holiday Hill," Ipswich, have a son, Lieut. Sigourney Thayer, among the flyers in France. Another son, Lieut. Wm. G. Thayer, Jr., has been stationed at Camp Devens.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Woods, of Boston, have taken the Howard N. Doughy house on Green street, Ipswich, for a short time. Miss Eleanora Winslow, of Boston, is a house-guest at present. Their son, Joseph W. Woods, a student at Milton academy, has one of his schoolmates, Charles Pope, of Boston, out for a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sturgis, the latter the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Woods, of Ipswich, have rented their new house in Medfield and are in Albany, N. Y., where Mr. Sturgis is engaged in the steel works.

Mrs. Evans R. Dick, Jr., is staying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, of "Sunswick," Ipswich. Mr. Dick is an ensign, in command of a submarine chaser. Their son, Lieut. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., sailed for France recently. A son-in-law, W. M. Elkins, is in the Naval Reserve. Mrs. Elkins is living at Pride's Crossing.

Mr. and Mrs. Chalmers Wood, of New York, will not come to "Briar Hill," Ipswich, this year. They have taken a house at Islip, L. I. Their sons, Lieut. Francis A. Wood and Rev. William Lawrence Wood, are both in France, the latter a chaplain in the army.

Frank H. Richardson, of "Meadow View," is the designer of the attractive little Liberty Cottage on the Ipswich Common. He is a Boston artist.

Dr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Crockett, of Boston, will not be at their home on Argilla road, Ipswich, this year. Dr. Crockett has been in Europe considerable in the last few years and will soon go to do work in Italy. Their cottage is occupied by the Dr. E. F. Bradford family, of Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Huger Elliot, of Boston, have "Upwey," the Chas. Sprague cottage on Argilla road, Ipswich.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Potter, of Boston, have taken "Merula Farm," the Dr. Townsend property on Argilla road, Ipswich.

If you are in Ipswich and are looking for a place to enjoy a cool and refreshing ice-cream, college ice or soda water, meet me at Helen's Cozy Corner Parlor, Central street. adv.

HAMILTON-WENHAM had a novel parade for the Fourth. Everybody and every organization was in it. E. R. Anderson was chairman. The Salem Infantry band furnished music and the whole affair was a great success, the culmination of which was the flag-raising at the Hamilton Town hall. The parade started from the Wenham Town hall.

Captain Houston A. Thomas led the State Guards, followed by the Boy Scouts and the Girl Scouts, the latter led by Miss Welch, their deputy commissioner.

Mrs. Alanson L. Daniels led the Surgical Dressings department of the Red Cross, being accompanied by fifty or more workers and the instructor and monitors, Mrs. Walter H. Seavey, Mrs. Charles F. Ayer, Mrs. J. Porter Brown, Mrs. Josiah Gifford and Mrs. Neil Rice.

Mrs. Raymond Rodgers came over from her cottage at Bass Rocks, Gloucester, to lead the Sewing department of the Red Cross.

Mrs. E. B. Cole and members of the Cannery committee, dressed in Hoover blue and white uniforms, represented the Hamilton-Wenham cannery. (See Kitchen Department for details of work.)

Miss Helen C. Burnham led the Village Improvement society.

The ten Smith college farmerettes, who are living and working in Hamilton, marched in their uniforms. Also the school children and the Mother's club.

The Wenham Tea House was represented by Mrs. Philip Downes, manager, in her Hoover uniform, and the waitresses.

At the Hamilton hall impressive exercises were held. A service flag of eighty blue stars on a white field with a single gold star in the center was unfurled. The gold star was for the late Major Augustus P. Gardner, of "Sagamore Farm," Hamilton. He was the first from the town to volunteer for service and the first and only one to date to give up his life in the world war.

Chairman C. A. Foster, of the Hamilton Board of Selectmen, presided during the services and at the unfurling of the service flag, the members of the Hamilton and Wenham Boards of Selectmen pulled the flag to the peak.

William H. McSweeney, of Salem, former personal friend of Major Gardner, delivered the address, during which he eulogized Major Gardner, the man who foresaw the extent of the world war, then laid aside the toga of the statesman and donned the uniform of a soldier to set an example to the rest of the country.

The Rev. Ralph A. Sherwood paid tribute to Major Gardner as a townsman.

A band concert on the Myopia Polo field was given in the afternoon.

Are the Packers Profiteers?

Plain Facts About the Meat Business

The Federal Trade Commission, in its recent report on war profits, stated that the five large meat packers have been profiteering and that they have a monopoly of the market.

These conclusions, if fair and just, are matters of serious concern, not only to those engaged in the meat packing business, but to every other citizen of our country.

The figures given on profits are misleading and the statement that the packers have a monopoly is unsupported by the facts.

The packers mentioned in the report stand ready to prove their profits reasonable and necessary.

* * * *

The meat business is one of the largest American industries. Any citizen who would familiarize himself with its details must be prepared for large totals.

The report states that the aggregate profits of four large packers were $140,000,000 for the three war years.

This sum is compared with $19,000,000 as the average annual profit for the three years before the war, making it appear that the war profit was $121,000,000 greater than the pre-war profit.

This compares a three-year profit with a one-year profit—a manifestly unfair method of comparison. It is not only misleading, but the Federal Trade Commission apparently has made a mistake in the figures themselves.

* * * *

The aggregate three-year profit of $140,000,000 was earned on sales of over four and a half billion dollars. It means about three cents on each dollar of sales—or a mere fraction of a cent per pound of product.

Packers' profits are a negligible factor in prices of live stock and meats. No other large business is conducted upon such small margins of profit.

* * * *

Furthermore—and this is very important—only a small portion of this profit has been paid in dividends. The balance has been put back into the businesses. It had to be, as you realize when you consider the problems the packers have had to solve—and solve quickly—during these war years.

To conduct this business in war times, with higher costs and the necessity of paying two or three times the former prices for live stock, has required the use of two or three times the ordinary amount of working capital. The additional profit makes only a fair return on this, and as has been stated, the larger portion of the profits earned has been used to finance huge stocks of goods and to provide additions and improvements made necessary by the enormous demands of our army and navy and the Allies.

* * * *

If you are a business man you will appreciate the significance of these facts. If you are unacquainted with business, talk this matter over with some business acquaintance—with your banker, say—and ask him to compare profits of the packing industry with those of any other large industry at the present time.

* * * *

No evidence is offered by the Federal Trade Commission in support of the statement that the large packers have a monopoly. The Commission's own report shows the large number and importance of other packers.

The packers mentioned in the statement stand ready to prove to any fair minded person that they are in keen competition with each other, and that they have no power to manipulate prices.

If this were not true they would not dare to make this positive statement.

Furthermore, government figures show that the five large packers mentioned in the report account for only about one-third of the meat business of the country.

They wish it were possible to interest you in the details of their business. Of how, for instance, they can sell dressed beef for less than the cost of the live animal, owing to utilization of by-products, and of the wonderful story of the methods of distribution throughout this broad land, as well as in other countries.

The five packers mentioned feel justified in cooperating with each other to the extent of together presenting this public statement.

They have been able to do a big job for your government in its time of need; they have met all war time demands promptly and completely, and they are willing to trust their case to the fairmindedness of the American people with the facts before them.

New Ocean House, Swampscott

THE second week in July finds the New Ocean House, at Swampscott, one of the popular places along the Shore, and in addition to the large number of season's guests, the register shows many transients, some spending the week-ends and perhaps only a night, while many guests come in for one of the meals for which this hotel is justly famous.

Speaking of meals, one should visit the great dining-room of the New Ocean House, with its immaculate yellow tinted decorations and softly lighted from overhead by stained glass windows in the daytime, and soft shaded lights in the evenings. On each table this year is displayed a stucco stand of the Food Administration, with an appropriate and patriotic verse or two and surmounted by an American flag. Around the base, in raised letters, is the slogan "Saving is serving."

Sunday night a most enjoyable concert was given by the hotel orchestra led by William Capron and besides the house guests many of the cottagers were in, as guests of their friends.

July 4th some 150 people, many of whom were military and naval men, took part in the informal dance, which took a patriotic turn at intermission when the American flag was raised and all sang the Star Spangled Banner.

Tuesday evening the first "lucky" contest dance was held, this being one of the novelty parties introduced by Mr. Champlain.

Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday mornings in the ballroom, Mr. Champlain holds a class for exercises and dancing. Among those who are attending are Mrs. Arthur Race, Mrs. Edward Deal, Mrs. E. R. Hamlin, Mrs. F. L. Lavendar, Mrs. P. D. Burke, Mrs. G. M. Lougee, Mrs. George W. Edwards and Mrs. Blodgett.

The first formal ball of the season was held Saturday evening and a large crowd was present, many of the Swampscott summer cottagers coming in to enjoy the general good time. The other formal balls of the season will be held July 20, August 17, 30 and 31.

Mr. Hoffman, the florist at the New Ocean House, is a popular man, in consideration of the fact that he has the North Shore agency for the Page & Shaw candies.

Tennis is flourishing on the hotel courts which have been put in excellent condition and Miss Madeline Pierce, Miss Marion Burke, as well as George Plummer, are tennis enthusiasts and put up splendid games. Croquet is popular with those who enjoy less strenuous sport and every day there is a waiting list on the lawn.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Frazee and son, H. H. Frazee, Jr., are spending the season at the New Ocean House. Mr. Frazee is president of the Red Sox and is a theatrical manager of considerable note.

Two young women who have been most popular at the New Ocean House are Misses Julia Cutler and Carol O'Shea, who left the past week for a motor trip and will return in August for the month. Miss Cutler is an ardent motorist and drives a powerful car with considerable dexterity.

Miss Kelsey is once more in charge of the attractive shop of Jackson & Co., of Boston, which is in the New Ocean House. She is one of the best known young ladies along the Shore, for her cordial manner and ready helpfulness makes friends everywhere.

Mrs. Mary T. Sawyer, of Boston, and brother, C. D. Sawyer, and wife, are spending the season at the New Ocean House.

Mrs. W. N. McKelvy, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. J. D. McKelvy, of Albany, N. Y., are spending the season at the New Ocean House, in order to be near Lockwood C. McKelvy, who is taking a course at the Massachusetts institute of Technology.

Lieut. and Mrs. William C. O'Neil, of Worcester, who have been spending their honeymoon at the New Ocean House, left this week for their home town.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Hollander and daughter, of New York, have returned to the New Ocean House for the season. Mr. Hollander is of the firm of Bernheimer & Hollander.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Ingham and daughter, of Buffalo, N. Y., are spending the summer at the New Ocean House, so that they may visit their son, James R. Ingham, who is in training for aviation service.

Jesse B. Thomas and his sister, Miss Helen Thomas, of Boston, are at the New Ocean House for the season. Miss Thomas is very busy in Red Cross work at the Metropolitan chapter of the Red Cross.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Peck, of New York, spent the week-end at the New Ocean House, on their way to the Hotel Wentworth, Portsmouth, N. H., for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Gersienger and Miss Gloria and Samuel, of St. Louis, Mo., have returned for a season at the New Ocean House, after three years' absence.

Mrs. J. P. Walworth and her sister, Miss F. E. Aldred, of Lawrence, are spending the season at the New Ocean House.

On Saturday morning there was a handicap mixed stroke competition, two ball four-some, the lowest score being made by Dr. Jarvie and Miss Sharp.

Finals will be played this coming Saturday afternoon in a handicap match competition, 18 holes being played each day, on the Bass Rocks links. Competitions arranged for the season are for the members of the club and their guests. The entrance fees will practically all be turned in to the Red Cross fund. A handicap match competition, 18 holes each day, will be played from July 24th to the 27th and the entrance fees of $2.00 each will be given for the benefit of the fatherless children of France. The amount of $73.00, at least, is expected, as that sum will provide for one child for two years. In the events of July 4, 10 and August 7, souvenir medals will be awarded to the winners, by the American Red Cross. All cards must be properly completed and handed to the committee on the day of play, not later than 5.30 p. m.

There was a formal opening of the Bass Rocks Golf club season, by a flag raising, last Wednesday afternoon, at 4.30 o'clock. Impressive exercises were held. Guy Cunningham, of Boston and Gloucester, gave an address on "The Flag," and when the fine, big American flag was hoisted by Edward B. Sargent, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Bass Rocks, the assembly sang "The Star Spangled Banner," with piano accompaniment. Tea was served in the clubhouse, Mrs. E. B. Sargent and Mrs. William B. Campbell, of Philadelphia, presiding at the camovar.

The tennis courts of the Bass Rocks club are in good condition and are being used daily. Some interesting tournaments are being planned, with visits from professionals, as in seasons past.

Much interest is being taken in the little, new, thatched-roof tea house, which has been constructed at an artistic point near the Bass Rocks bathing beach float. A number of young ladies of the Bass Rocks colony are carrying out the idea of this tea house with the original thought of Miss Thelma Hall, of Boston, and proceeds from this interesting little venture will be given to the American Red Cross. The first money raised for the building was through the efforts of the girls, when a dance was held for students of the Massachusetts institute of Technology. Now, the workers ask contributions of edibles from anyone interested. The committee in charge includes Miss Polly Souther, of Hartford, Ct.; Katherine Remick, of Detroit; Elizabeth Eaton and Alma Eaton, of Lawrence; Miss Isabelle Dodge, Miss Nancy Stair, Detroit, Mich.; Helen Welsh and Charlotte Phillips, of New York; Miss Thelma Hall, Miss Louise Condit, Boston, and Mrs. Henry Souther, of Hartford, Ct. The tea house is located at a conspicuous point near the road and the beach, where automobiles and people stop to get a breath of the sea air or to watch the bathers, and a great success seems inevitable.

Mrs. Henry Souther and her daughter, Miss Polly Souther, of Hartford, Ct., instead of occupying one of the Souther mansions at Bass Rocks, this season, are occupying at the Hotel Moorland, for the summer.

The Howard Wicks Browns, of Boston, have arrived at their Beach road cottage, Bass Rocks, for the season.

The James L. Stuarts, of Sewickley, Pa., have arrived at their estate, "Swan Rockhouse," at Bass Rocks, near the golf green at High Popples.

ANNISQUAM.—The social season in the Annisquam colony opened at the yacht clubhouse on the holiday. Tea was served in the afternoon, the tables being very prettily decorated with flowers, and members of the colony presiding over the urn were Mrs. Harry H. Wiggin, Mrs. J. Henry Hooper and Mrs. George Andrew. A dance was held at the clubhouse in the evening, a large number of people attending.

The yachting season of the Annisquam club will be a lively one. As last year, the 15-foot, Cat, Bird and Dog classes will be scheduled. The races will be held on Saturday afternoons and there is a possibility of Sunday morning series.

Mrs. R. D. Gillett and family, of Westfield, have arrived at the Parker cottage, Hermit Ledge colony, Annisquam.

Mrs. Philip Coyle and family are located at the Smith cottage, 'Squam Rock road. Mr. Coyle, who is in the United States service, has been enjoying a furlough here with his family.

Guests registered at the By-Water Inn are: Mrs. J. H. Marshall, James H. Marshall, C. De Laskie Marshall and Miss Betty Marshall, of Boston; Mrs. R. K. Statton, of New York, and Harold Bradford, of Brookline.

Mrs. Thomas R. Nutter, of Boston, has taken occupancy of the Blair cottage, Norwood Heights, Annisquam, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Wishart and family, of Watertown, are occupying their cottage on Nashua ave., Annisquam, for the season.

ROCKPORT.—The Rockport Country club has started its summer schedule of golf events, the second Liberty Tournament being started last Wednesday, the lowest 16 net scores qualifying for the championship, including Saturday's directors' cup qualifying round; July 13, club championship elimination; July 20, directors' cup elimination; July 27, club championship elimination; August 3, driving, approaching and putting contests; August 9 and 10, Massachusetts Golf association open tournament; August 17, Red Cross tournament; August 24, team match, finals of club championship; August 31, finals directors' cup; September 2, Red Cross tournament. There will also be matches in which opposing teams will be captained by the winners of the club championship and directors' cup.

Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Skinner, of Dorchester, have arrived at their Land's End cottage, Rockport, for the season.

"The Wishing Ring" is the title of a musical fantasy to be presented in Rockport Town hall on July 27, for the war relief fund. The affair is being held under the auspices of the Rockport War Relief committee.

Mrs. Francis A. Pierce (nee Miss Carrie A. Moseley), of Boston, is spending the summer with her father, John G. Moseley, at the latter's cottage on Marmion Way, Rockport.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Rodliffe, of Lowell, are located in Haven avenue cottage, Pigeon Cove, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Todd, of Concord, are at their cottage on Phillips avenue, Pigeon Cove.

Mrs. Arthur H. Pingree, of Jamaica Plain, is spending the summer at her cottage on Point de Chene ave., Pigeon Cove.

cement floor, some distance from the home. It is up on the rocks under fine old shade trees, and for two years has been the retreat of Miss Sturgis when she wanted to create the artistic out of clay.

She became interested in pottery through the North Bennett street Industrial school in Boston, and finally thought she would indulge in a pottery herself. When firing is being done she remains in the little place from eight to twelve hours, only running to the house for a hasty meal. The iron kiln must be kept at a certain temperature all that time, and Miss Sturgis feeds it very carefully with the oil used for fuel.

Some beautiful specimens of her art line the shelves in the little place. Many show the Persian blue glaze which has been a rare thing, originated at the school in Boston. This is a transparent blue glaze that shows other colors beneath, so that various designs may be put on to show under the glaze.

Miss Sturgis likes to experiment with different colors and glazes and is always trying something new.

She has made many pieces used in their dining-room and throughout the house. A large lamp, with a white, iridescent glaze, is in the process of making. Other pieces show the clay drying, ready for firing; others represent

Meat Must Be Sold

Fresh meat is perishable. It must be sold within about two weeks for whatever it will bring

A certain amount of beef is frozen for foreign shipment, but domestic markets demand fresh, chilled, unfrozen beef.

Swift & Company cannot increase prices by withholding meat, because it will not keep fresh and salable for more than a few days after it reaches the market.

Swift & Company cannot tell at the time of purchasing cattle, what price fresh meat will bring when put on sale. If between purchase and sale, market conditions change, the price of meat must also change.

The Food Administration limits our profit to 9 percent on capital invested in the meat departments. This is about 2 cents per dollar of sales. No profit is guaranteed, and the risk of loss is not eliminated.

As a matter of fact, meat is often sold at a loss because of the need of selling it before it spoils.

the "biscuit" stage, fired but not glazed. The most of the pieces are in the finished stage.

A handsome light-colored three-part vegetable dish has been designed for Miss M. L. Davison and Miss T. deR. Hawley, of Eastern Point, East Gloucester. It is a clever arrangement in a simple and artistic style.

When Miss Evelyn Sturgis is home she, too, works a little in clay.

The writer left the Sturgis home feeling that no matter what one's station is in life, no matter how many worldly goods are your endowment, that woman is blessed who has a hobby. It is the sure cure for "nerves" (unless you run it too hard), and may open up vistas in life never dreamed of before. Hobbies and avocations sometimes rise equal to vocations, when we presume the sensible thing to do would be to take up another hobby, or else choose between the avocation and the vocation.

Other North Shore artists will be visited next week.

(NOTE:—At the home of the Misses Sturgis there may be a sale of pottery late in the summer for some charitable purpose or for the Red Cross.)

TIME TO RESIGN

A retired army officer tells of an army examiner who had before him a very dull candidate. The man proving, apparently, unable to make response to the most simple questions, the examiner finally grew impatient and, quite sarcastically, put this question:

"Let it be supposed that you are a captain in command of infantry. In your rear is an impassable abyss. On both sides of you there rise perpendicular rocks of tremendous height. In front of you lies the enemy, outnumbering you ten to one. What, sir, in such an emergency, would you do?"

"I think, sir," said the aspirant for military distinction, "I would resign."

EDITORIAL

THE EDITOR WILL BE in camp, at Framingham, the greater part of the coming week, with the Mass. State Guard, and he begs the indulgence of readers in getting out the next issue of the BREEZE. Any items of news should be sent in as early in the week as practicable, not later than Wednesday forenoon at the latest.

THERE ARE STRIKES NOW GOING ON in industries necessary for the maintenance of our efficiency in the war. This ought not to be. A man who handles a tool is as valuable as a man who handles a gun. Every man in service needs the support of five men in America. It is a disgrace to America that any workman should lay down his tools and go on a strike in war times. This does not mean that there should not be a consideration of grievances, but that during the consideration of labor difficulties the industries should not be interfered with. There is a principle involved which cannot be overlooked. It is true that every man has a right to labor or not at a wage which he may have offered to him. This is the principle of individual liberty to make private contract for his labor. Laboring men have a right to strike, which no one would gainsay,—that is, refuse to work for a given wage and simultaneously. This is a right that cannot be abridged. This principle stands. But no organization has a right to impose its will upon another organization because of its hold upon the personnel of the workers; this is coercion. Now, in a time of war, for an organization of workmen to set its will against the will of the people is a desertion of our country in the time of war. To coerce a man to do a task that is disagreeable and restrain his freedom is slavery, but in war time we draft our men, set them aside to do our national will to win freedom for the nations and for ourselves. This is an abridgement of an individual's rights because there is a higher law involved—the duty of the citizen to defend his country. We draft our men because it is their duty to go and it is the right of the country to demand their service at a wage the state or nation determines. In the case of strikes in necessary industries the principle is also present. Ordinarily the right of free contract is operative, but in war times the individual must recognize the higher law—the obedience of the individual to the demands and needs of the nation and its safety. There can be no limit to the draft age when it comes to the operation of this law. If a man has capabilities needed in a workshop it is his duty to serve his nation where he is placed to the full power of his ability. Theoretically the nation can draft its men for any service it needs. If necessary every industry can be taken over and the men enlisted in the “army.” This has not been done and the matter is left to the individual; he should exercise his patriotic instincts and privileges. These are war times and every man must do his duty where he is with the same loyalty that we demand of our soldiers and sailors, who are giving the best days of their lives for one dollar per day and a bed of uncertain softness, clothes of a uniform character and such food as the commissariat determines to be wise and the markets of the world can afford. These are times for loyalty; let every one show the character of his thought by his action. Justice stands with her scales weighing the action of men at home as well as the thought and actions of nations making war.

THERE IS A SERVICE FLAG ETIQUETTE which should be observed by every loyal American who throws one to the breeze or hangs it in-doors. The placing of the stars, while an apparently simple matter, really has back of it a meaning which should not be allowed to be lost by the careless or thoughtless use of symbols of colorings. The character of the service flag has been carefully determined and everyone should observe the rules, not for the mere purpose of observing rules, but to honor uniformly all of the men who are in service, appropriately and in a dignified manner. Inasmuch as this is “the most just and most compelling cause that ever ennobled the pursuit of victory” the star of service means much and its place and symbolism should be carefully observed. The stars should be of blue and of five points, one for each man in service in the army or navy of the United States. Each wounded man should be honored in the flag by placing on his star a Maltese cross in gold within the centre of the stars and not entering the triangles of the five points of the star. Each man honored in service should have a circle of gold which passes through each of the points of the star midway between the point and the base of the triangles formed by the points of the stars. Those who have died in service are to be honored by a gold star within the blue star of service. The entire blue star should not be covered, but a smaller star of gold should be placed within the blue star of service with the sides of the gold star parallel with the blue star. This makes the star more easily discerned. Missing men have a pentagon of red in the background of the blue service star. The first side of the pentagon being drawn across the upright point of the five pointed service star at a point midway from the base of triangles formed by the base of the service star and the point of the star. The service star is left complete and the remaining surface of the pentagon is exposed in red. Men captured and imprisoned have a narrow circle of red outside the service star, thus giving the appearance of a blue star within a circle of red. The points of the blue star should touch the inner edge of the red circle. With these simple plans it is possible to represent on the same blue star the various possibilities that may arise, wounded and decorated for distinguished service, decorated for distinguished service and died in the service, wounded, decorated for distinguished service and missing. It is optional to place a wreath of laurel around the blue star with its inner gold star for a hero who has died in the service. All those who have the care of service flags should carefully observe the arranged plan, which after all is the expression of the feeling of our people to honor the men who are in service, uniformly and appropriately. Every citizen should acquaint himself with these details and observe their requirements.

THE FAILURE OF THE EXPRESS COMPANIES to make any money during the quarter just ended indicates that there should be a very careful examination of schedules, not only of those paid by the public for service, but the expenses involved in the distribution of the goods. It does not seem possible that the immense demands of the express company service does not repay the company for the work done. A layman who does not understand the problems of the business cannot venture to make an analysis of the difficulty. It can only be said that there is no reason why the business should not be made self-supporting. That is axiomatic. Those who use the transportation service should pay an amount equal to the expense involved and a profit for the investment. One of the benefits of the war will be the careful examination of the business difficulties of the postoffice department, the railroads and the express companies.

THERE ARE FOUR GREAT FACTORS in the educational life of any community,—the churches, which care for the spiritual and social service interests of a community; the schools, which train the young the rudiments of knowledge or prepares them for higher institutions; the newspapers and magazines, which disseminate news and instruction, and our libraries, which serve the public and all of these other institutions so necessary to the broadening of civic thought and ideals. The library holds an important place in the life of any community. It is the university of the people. The first library in America, founded along the lines of community or group ownership, was established by Benjamin Franklin in Philadelphia, and from a beginning so small in the city of brotherly love the idea and need has been so evident that there is hardly a hamlet in America now that does not possess a library. There are, however, libraries and libraries. A true library is not a building of costly material with shelves within lined with books. The soul of a library is to be found in the selecting committee and the persons who determine the policy of the institution! If there be a failure at this point, valuable equipments, careful indexing and mechanical library service, and ample funds, will fail to create a library. Fortunate is the town that has a good library that does not fail at this point. Manchester is fortunate in having a good building, a reasonable appropriation each year (which could be increased or aided by gifts of money—a large endowment would not be undesirable) and has a good library of books with an intelligent selection of new books placed carefully and accessible to the public. Summer visitors have been quick to appreciate the facilities of our town library and have shown that appreciation in the best possible manner, the use of the library. Manchester's library trustees and workers are entitled to the credit and honor which intelligent and faithful service entitles them.

OUR ALLIANCE WITH THE NATIONS of Europe means more than the sending of troops into the field for battle service. War is a great game that must be played with intensity in many ways. In addition to troops the fighting forces and the civilian populations require aid and support, both physically and morally. The United States has been doing this with a steadfast purpose that cannot be gainsaid and efficiently along many lines. There is the relief work which involves not only reconstruction work in devastated regions, but direct aid in territories unaffected by gunfire or war operations. Can one ever know of the great sums of money which have been sent from this country to the old by individuals to individuals or organizations? There is the inestimably valuable work of the voluntary aid organizations which have been at work in America. The assistance which has been rendered by our technical men and our medical men will make an American feel proud of the loyal men who are serving us abroad. There are the direct loans which have been made, which represents the time, money, energy and goodwill. This last week Italy alone was given a credit of $10,000,000, making a total of $6,091,500,000 directly transferred to the credit of our allies with whom we are fighting. The work of the Red Cross, as estimable as it is, is but one factor, however important, in our military service. The Y. M. C. A. work contributes greatly to the efficiency of the army, but as great as it is, it also is but a small factor in the work of winning the war. Is our navy doing anything? It is scoring an efficiency line upon the chart as steady as could be wished! It keeps the mastery of the seas within the grasp of the allies and has kept the enemy vessels of war within port! This means freedom of the use of the seas to the allies and forbids it to the Germans. There has been no cessation of our diplomatic gains. Consider the progress which has been made in the last year in this way! Leaving out the terrific losses which come from the loss of life and the pain and sorrow which is thus entailed, more gains have been made in our international relations in the last year than in a decade past. What could have cemented the friendships of our people with greater intensity with Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy, not to mention the other allies and the republics of South America? Our military forces have reached the field to the number of over a million, but if the war is won it must be won along broader lines of which the military endeavors, as necessary and indispensable as they are, are but one contributing factor. It is difficult for us, as Americans, to lift our heads above the petty interests of our own times and see afar, but it will be well when we recognize, that war has many factors and many fields of service and if we are to win, it must be won militarily, by food conservation, by economic laws, by naval supremacy, by financial aid and organization and by the service of countless efficient war work philanthropies.

THE WAR WILL BE WON in the air, it is said, and it is repeated so often that it is necessary to give the suggestion careful consideration. Of course, in such a great war it cannot mean that supremacy in the air will win the war alone. It means that with all of our other efficient powers maintained and used effectively, efficiency in the air will give us that added efficiency to throw the balance of power into the hands of our army. To win we must have the supremacy which can be gained in the air. This means, then, not efficiency in the air, but efficiency in the air in addition to efficiency along every other necessary line of military endeavor. It is known that Germany has heavily fortified her lines of defense as far back as the Rhine, if not farther, and that an almost interminable war be continued if the policy of an attack, followed by a retreat from defence to defence be followed. Success must come not by ground attack alone, but by overhead warfare. This is what is meant by air supremacy. Word comes through to us now that an allied offensive is making progress along these lines and that "we now have several thousand American pilots in France. They have arrived after adequate training, so that they have only to put the finishing touches to the already sound instruction. . . . It is certain that America alone, within a few months, will be able to more than supply all its aviators with machines." "The hopes which public opinion founded on American aviation will soon be realized." These quotations are all from a noted Captain Herteaux of the French Aviation Corps, now in the United States on an official mission. Such inspiring information is desirable if true, and it appears true. America will build ships, send supplies, feed the civilian populations and do all the other tasks necessary, and gain the war by the way of the air.

*What matter though we seek with pain
The garden of the gods in vain,
If lured thereby we climb to greet
Some wayside blossom Eden-sweet?*

MANCHESTER

Mrs. Alexander Robertson and son, John, left Sunday for their customary summer's visit to Bath, Me.

N. P. Meldrum returned last Friday from a ten days' visit with his daughter, Mrs. Putnam, in Danvers.

The Misses Esther and Ruth Olson are visiting at the home of their sister, Mrs. John MacKenzie, in Melrose.

Miss Elsie Graham, of Cambridge, is visiting at the home of Mrs. P. G. Keighley on Washington street.

Miss Dorothy Blaisdell is leaving next week for Calais, Me., where she will spend several weeks with girl friends.

Miss Nellie Leonard, of Ashland ave., left Thursday to spend a few weeks at Lake Winnepesaukee, N. H.

Treasurer Harry W. Purington of the Manchester Trust Co., and Mrs. Purington, left last Friday for a two weeks' vacation visit in Bethel, Me.

With the return of more seasonable weather the popularity of Singing Beach is becoming evident again. The bathing is on the increase. The temperature of the water has been around sixty degrees the past week.

In a letter from Ernest A. Silva, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Silva, of Forest street, we learn that "Fornie," as he is popularly known, is with Battery C, of the 12th Field Artillery, in France, and that this unit has been in action. "We are all anxious to get a smash at the Huns," he says, "and show them that they can't rule the world. I am still driving a pair of horses and Frank Sweeney is a camoneer on the same carriage."

One of the finest private gardens anywhere along the North Shore is that owned by Daniel A. Sullivan at the old Masconomo hotel property, near Singing Beach. It is in a most thriving condition at present and vegetables are coming along in abundance, as the result of painstaking care and skill of the gardener, Augustus Burchstead, who started it as soon as the frost was out of the ground in the spring. Potatoes were dug on July 4th, that were planted in early April, as large as one's fist. This week the portion of the field that was the baseball diamond was planted to cabbages, some 2000 plants being set out. The total ground under tillage is about three acres.

HOME NURSING COURSE

NURSES! Nurses! And still more nurses! The demand is great and the supply limited. Many of those already trained have enlisted in the service of the army and the navy, and only a few are left to serve the civil population. More nurses must be trained, not only to take the places of some of those already gone, but also to be on call to serve in case of a great emergency. With this purpose the Red Cross offers a course in home nursing; and urges all persons having a few hours a week to avail themselves of the opportunity.

The course in elementary hygiene and home care of the sick consists of fifteen exercises of about one hour and a half, and usually given on two afternoons or evenings a week. A part of each exercise is devoted to theoretical instruction, but the most of it—and the most important—is spent in practical work and demonstrations. Some of the subjects taken up in these exercises are, the causes and transmission of disease, public agencies concerning health and welfare, hygiene of infancy and childhood, care of a patient, symptoms and diseases, and the household medicine closet. An examination is held at the end of the course, and all those having attended regularly and passing the examination, will be given a diploma.

Further information will be given or applications will be received by Dr. F. L. Burnett, telephone 152-W, or Mrs. Leon W. Carter, telephone 245, Manchester.

MANCHESTER

Mrs. Frank L. Floyd and daughter, Alice, are in Amesbury for a week's visit.

Miss Elizabeth B. Saben, of Winchester, N. H., is visiting Miss Helen Beaton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Beaton.

The rope and corks has been put out at Singing Beach, we are pleased to say, though the raft is very much missed. The park board did not see their way clear to put out the raft this year, the expense in connection with so doing was to be so heavy.

A series of four picture shows is being arranged for the benefit of the North Shore Horticultural society, the first of which will be given next Friday evening, July 19. The four films selected are: "Over the Top," "Les Miserables," "Pershing's Crusaders" and "My Four Years in Germany." Tickets will be on sale at Allen's drug store, at $1 for each performance, or $3 for the series. Checks may also be sent to Fred J. Merrill, made payable to John Jaffray, treasurer. The date of the second performance will be August 2, but of the other two it is not yet definitely known, as both are government-controlled films, and permission must be obtained from Washington for their use. This opportunity to help the society, which is much in need of funds, will undoubtedly be taken advantage of by the friends of the society, who appreciate the generous use to which the hall is given free of charge, to carry on all the various war work of the Red Cross, surgical dressings and the like. Everyone should respond.

The charges were made by the board of selectmen, after an opinion had been handed down by the firm of Johnson, Clapp and Underwood, the town attorneys.

The law provides that the selectmen must grant a hearing, if petitioned so to do, not less than three nor more than fourteen days after a hearing has been called for. Such a petition was presented to the board yesterday and a hearing will be held presumably within the next day or two.

Y^e Elder Brethren's Annual Reunion

Manchester's Unique Organization of Men of Over 50 Years, Gather at Tuck's Point

By JOHN D. WOODBURY

Veteran Newspaper Man of Essex County, who has been attending the gatherings for nearly 30 years

SUNNY skies and clear air favored the assembling of the Elder Brethren of Manchester at their annual reunion at Tuck's Point town picnic grounds, West Manchester, Wednesday, and although late in the afternoon, a heavy shower drenched all sections of the town, all the participants had sufficient time to reach their homes before the shower broke.

The total number that participated in the outing was 105, five less than last year, and all present enjoyed the day to the limit, including the renewal of old acquaintances and interchange or reminiscences, the chowder, the eloquent and witty addresses, and last but not least, the contribution of John Thomas, "the mayor of Fresh Water Cove," whose fine rendering of several serious poems appropriate to the occasion, as well as his intensely amusing portrayals and delineations, made an enjoyable ending to an hour of reminiscence and serious talk.

The members and their guests began to gather shortly after 10 o'clock, being conveyed from the town center by the courtesy of several auto owners, and long before the hour for dinner, most of the party were on hand, the time being pleasantly whiled away in renewing old acquaintanceship or in meeting and greeting some former resident of the town, who had for a while passed out of recollection.

Shortly before 1 o'clock, Pres. Edwin P. Stanley gave the welcome order to gather at the tables and every seat in the commodious pavilion was soon occupied. Steaming dishes of both clam and fish chowder were awaiting the filling of the bowls, this part of the ceremonies of the day being as usual under the management of Frank Crombie and John Babcock, who have officiated in this capacity since the days when the organization outgrew the primitive method of having the chowders cooked under the direction of a committee of the members; while each bowl was flanked by steaming hot coffee, crackers, pickles and the usual accompaniments.

Several young men acted as waiters under the direction of Frank L. Floyd, those serving in that capacity being Stanley Baker, Albert Peters, William Rudden, John Wade and Mark Sinnicks.

After half an hour for the enjoyment of their cigars, the afternoon exercises were opened at 1.45 o'clock by Pres. Stanley. He called on Rev. H. E. Levey for an opening prayer, which was followed by the singing of "America," under the leadership of Rev. Albert G. Warner, after which Pres. Stanley referred briefly to the fortunate action of the town in retaining the location and making it such an ideal spot, in which movement he was proud to have been identified.

Hon. David I. Robinson, county treasurer, was the first speaker called upon. He related some interesting incidents of his childhood, he having been born on Old Neck and lived there till he was six years of age, when his family removed to the west. Rev. Mr. Russell was the Baptist minister, and his sister, Mrs. Pratt, was his playmate. His father kept a shoe-maker's shop, and he remembered the book in which he made his charges, they being principally confined to three customers, John Brown, Andrew Brown and John Woodbury Allen.

He was delighted to be present again at the gathering and see so many of those present. He hoped the organization would long continue to keep up the old acquaintances, and all would go forward, as it were, hand in hand, living not for themselves alone, but for others.

Deacon Joseph A. Torrey was introduced as the old schoolmaster of many present and he gave a patriotic talk on Americanism, which he said had its birth on the North Shore when in 1624 Capt. Thos. Gardner, of Dorchester, England, under the direction of Rev. John White, established a colony on Cape Ann, now Gloucester, its object being fishing, furring and fowling. He built a fishing stage which some jealous individuals tore down and he appealed to the Plymouth colony for redress. The matter was left to Miles Standish, who was a fighter, but was not spoiling for a fight, and Roger Conant, who was a peacemaker. Not only was the trouble adjusted, but the Plymouth men came over and rebuilt the stage. Later, the settlers removed to Naumkeag, now Salem, when John Endicott tried to oust the Cape Annners under a charter, but calmer counsels prevailed and the matter was decided by popular decision, each side being generous in concessions, and this was the birthplace in America of Americanism, which means brotherhood.

Rev. Fr. W. George Mullin spoke of his pleasure at being present and the lessons to be learned from age and experience, enlivening his talk with some pertinent stories.

George L. Gould, of Topsfield, whose father was the first high school master in Manchester, discussed conservation and said that the feeling of anxiety over the coal situation was not a scarecrow, but real. New England anthracite coal wants are seventy percent more than in 1908, while the available shipping tonnage is twenty percent less. He advised the use of all wood possible, as only by strict economy would the section get through the winter. Business has been paying big profits, but expenses are bound to increase and care should be taken lest we be unable to answer the calls which will be made in the name of charity.

Rev. William H. Rider, D. D., of Essex, was next called on. He addressed the assemblage as those who are "has beens," but still are. He spoke of the spirit of relationship which characterized these gatherings and the strong personal touch which all enjoyed. While there is a seriousness in their meeting together, it was to sorrow as mist is to rain. Americanism began earlier than when the settlement was made at Cape Ann; it began in the cabin of the Mayflower when that immortal compact was signed "for the common good."

When the Kaiser is beaten, as he will be and must be, then will come the grandest realization of Americanism the world has ever known, said Dr. Rider, and America will be the Godmother of the child, which will unite all the nations of the earth in one international unity, not only in government, but a closer sympathy in differences in religion. And if there are those who forget their native or adopted country, they should be taken down to the shore and told, "If you can't swim, sink." It is the same spirit which was shown in the cabin of the Mayflower which makes our boys abroad ready to fight for England and France as well as for America. It is this spirit which enthuses us and makes us pray daily unto God for victory for the right.

The assemblage then joined in singing the chorus of "There's a Long, Long Trail," the words of the verses being read by Rev. Mr. Warner.

Francis M. Stanwood, of Brookline and Manchester, was next called upon. Mr. Stanwood spoke especially of the address made at the Harvard commencement on June 20 by the Earl of Reading, Lord Chief Justice of England, and special ambassador to this country, which he characterized as, considering the time, place and conditions, the best speech he ever heard or read. It brought to his hearers the fact not realized by many prominent men, that England in entering the war, realized that she was putting her destiny to a crucial test, but there was only one course to pursue and she must enter the war to preserve her honor and it meant not only for France, but the entire world, the upholding of that civil law which is as near perfection as human minds can invent.

Following the address of Mr. Stanwood, the business meeting was held, eight members being reported as having passed away during the year, as follows:

Charles Otis Lee, 66 years, June 20, 1917; Amos F. Bennett, 92 years, 8 months, August 4, 1917; James J. Andrews, of Beverly, 70 years, Nov. 9, 1917; Joseph W. Bingham, of Boston, 68 years, January 14, 1918; Luther Bingham, 81 years, January 23, 1918; John B. Goldsmith, of Beverly, 58 years, January 26, 1918; Henry Tuck Bingham, 78 years, February 21, 1918; Joseph Knowlton, of Wenham, 91 years, April 18, 1918.

Enoch Crombie, Wm. J. Johnson and Dr. R. T. Glendenning were appointed a committee to nominate officers for the coming year. They reported as follows: Pres., Edwin P. Stanley; vice-pres., Lyman W. Floyd; sec. and treas., Isaac M. Marshall; executive committee, Theodore C. Rowe, Jeffrey S. Reed, Frank W. Bell and Benjamin Crombie.

On motion of Francis M. Stanwood, the secretary was instructed to cast one vote for the nominees.

Rev. George H. Perkins, of Beverly, gave a very inspiring address, taking as his subject, "Unity." Unity, he said, pervades everywhere, in the sunbeams glistening on the sea and land and sky, no matter what the condition of the sea, whether terrible under the darkened heavens or calm and peaceful, the same great fact of unity is there. Because of the permanence of unity, it is possible to have peace, and without it we could have no munitions of war. Because of unity of spirit which pervades the hearts are we assured that the day of peace will come and we shall realize the glorious hope of a world peace. Our fathers came to these shores bringing a spirit of prayer, and in that spirit shall we achieve a victory, not for the American soldiery, but for righteousness and peace throughout all the world.

John Thomas, "the mayor of Fresh Water Cove," made the closing talk of the afternoon, interpolating into his address several poems and dialect recitations. He was facetious from the start, and raised a laugh from his audience by his alleged jealousy at the praise which Mr. Stanwood gave the Earl of Reading. He was pleased to be invited, and congratulated those present that they are living in the most successful and best country on earth and could enjoy the beautiful spot without being obliged to dodge a bomb or a bullet.

Taking friendship and unity as his text, he recited the poems, "Just a Friend or Two," and "Success," interjecting several humorous stories with which he convulsed his hearers with laughter, closing with a representation of a debate in a city council as to whether the telegraph wires should be put under ground, or the saloon or the school be abolished.

The exercises closed with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," under the direction of Rev. Mr. Warner.

REV. H. E. LEVOY PREACHED TWO ABLE SERMONS AT MANCHESTER
LAST SUNDAY

Rev. Herbert E. Levoy of the First Baptist church, in Manchester, took for his subject last Sunday morning, "Our Church's Purpose."

He said that the church's chief purpose was the worship of God and the service of man. The church is to lead men to worship and praise God and to show how to worship God in song, prayer and giving. He said the greatest way to serve man is to bring Jesus Christ to him and to bring him to Jesus Christ. He further stated that the church aims to help man spiritually, mentally and physically, but the church's pre-eminent purpose is the salvation of man, for we realize when man is born anew his whole life is changed in the three-fold way, spiritually, mentally and physically.

"The Christian Standard of Greatness" was the subject of the evening union service, when Rev. Levoy spoke in the Manchester Congregational church. He said in part:

"The standard of greatness as given by Jesus is opposite to that accepted by the world. Jesus' idea of greatness was to give of oneself and his possessions for the betterment of others and the extension of God's kingdom. Use your wealth for Him. Give that He may be glorified. Let service be the keynote of your life. 'Give to the world the best you have and the best will come back to you.'

"Many persons of wealth in America have caught the spirit of Jesus' teaching in regard to greatness and are giving generously and cheerfully for His work. This is commendable and the world is better for their living in it."

Rev. Levoy extends a cordial invitation to everyone to be present at the Baptist church next Sunday evening to the union service, when Rev. F. W. Manning will speak.

BAD AUTO SMASH AT MAGNOLIA

There was a serious auto accident last Friday morning opposite the Stanley cottage at Magnolia. Mrs. Gordon Northrup, of Manchester, was driving a touring car owned by I. M. Marshall towards home, having with her, her mother, Mrs. I. M. Marshall and Mrs. Otis Ward, of Brookline (Elsie Northrup). A limousine in front, going in the same direction, suddenly stopped in the middle of the road, the driver giving no warning. Mrs. Northrup states, and in attempting to turn out suddenly, her car skidded into the limousine, which was driven by John Hays Hammond, Jr. The flying glass of the broken windshield cut Mrs. Ward badly about the head, and Mrs. Marshall received a severe bruise and concussion of the forehead, but no one was thrown out. They were attended by Dr. Glendenning, at the Stanley cottage, and Mrs. Ward was removed to the Beverly hospital, where it was necessary to take 19 stitches to close her wounds.

MANCHESTER BOY FIGURES IN THRILLING AIR BATTLE

Lieut. John Mitchell, of Manchester, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Mitchell, was one of the four American aviators mentioned in the despatches from France last Friday, as being engaged in a thrilling air battle northwest of Chateau-Thierry. One German machine was shot down during the combat.

The four American aviators were patrolling the lines five or six kilometres inside the German front when they encountered six enemy machines. The battle began at an altitude of 4200 metres, and continued until the machines had dropped down to 2200 metres from the earth. It lasted twenty minutes.

Lieut. Mitchel is 22 years old. His only sister is Mrs. Quincy Adams Shaw, 2d, of Beverly Farms. He is a graduate of St. Mark's school, Southboro, and would have graduated from Harvard this year but for the fact that, as soon as it became evident a year ago last February that the United States would be forced into the war, he left college and attended the Curtiss flying school at Miami, Fla.

He remained there until June, 1917, when he was commissioned a lieutenant and sent to the Massachusetts institute of Technology to take the training there. He went to France last September, trained there and then began flying with the American aviators. He has made rapid progress under French instruction.

CHEERLESS FUTURE

"BROOKBY FARM," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Cole, at Wenham Neck, is again the centre of the community canning. The little garage is fairly alive with workers this year. Things are on a different scale than last season. Mrs. Cole, who was Adeline P. Dodge, has spent her life, practically, in Wenham. She knows the needs of a rural community and has worked out many things. Just now she is bending all of her efforts on the food conservation of the country. Her garage is central and affords a convenient place for the community work.

The canning committee is made up of both summer and local residents, including the following: Mmes. Edward B. Cole, chairman; John C. Phillips, Jr., vice-chairman; Frederick Winthrop, treasurer; John A. Tuckerman, secretary; Rodolphe L. Agassiz, Jacob D. Barnes, Alanson L. Daniels, John Heard, Jr., Francis L. Higginson, Jr., B. L. Leveque, Henry P. McKean, George H. Perkins, Neil W. Rice, Wm. G. Sharp, Frank P. Trussell, Benton Bradshaw and Miss Harriet Wilkins, who is the supervisor of the cannery.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of each week the canning is for charity. The products will be given to certain hospitals, and also sold for the benefit of the Red Cross. It is hoped to supply the hospitals so well that half the products can be given to the Red Cross that are canned on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Monday's work is by the North Shore farmerettes, who have gardens and farms for Beverly hospital. All of the products they can on Monday will go to that hospital. They have already put up early vegetables and have made strawberry and rhubarb jam. It is hoped to average 100 jars each week from the hospital gardens. It is the rule in this cannery to wear a head covering, so the girls wear white caps or mosquito netting over the hair. Some wear a Hoover costume, but Mrs. Cole says any old cotton dress is satisfactory.

The products of Tuesday and Wednesday the committee and volunteer workers will divide among three hospitals for women in Brookline and the Ipswich hospital. The Brookline hospitals have received many of the residents in this community.

The committee requests that people send in their surplus vegetables and fruit so that, no matter how small the amount, they can be canned or dried for the hospitals or sold to benefit the Red Cross. All work is being done in strict coöperation with the directions and advice of the Food Administration. Syrups are reduced from last year and only one-third the amount of sugar is used as formerly. The jams keep just the same because they undergo a new process of sterilization to preserve them instead of being heavy with sugar in the old-time way of preservation.

Mrs. Cole is always present on Mondays and much of the rest of the week. On Tuesdays Mmes. W. G. Sharp, Neil Rice, C. C. Felton (Marie Agassiz), Frank P. Trussell and Charles Bohlen (from Ipswich) will be in charge. On Wednesdays Mmes. J. A. Tuckerman, J. C. Phillips, Jr., R. L. Agassiz, F. L. Higginson, Jr., Roger W. Cutler (Leslie Bradley) and Bernard L. Leveque will be present.

The last three days of the week the canning is among those who want to do it for home use, the same as last year. Some may want to hire the cannery to put up their products for them, while others may wish to do it themselves. A nominal charge is made for this work.

SOME of the North Shore Garden club "Service Auxiliaries" girls, who do canning, meet with Miss Katharine Bradbury at the Manchester Food Centre one morning a week to can for the Beverly hospital. Not all of the farmerettes are doing canning. Some prefer just to work on the hospital farms located in the Beverly Cove section and in West Manchester on the Hassam estate, next to the Reginald Boardman place.

Miss Bradbury gave a lesson on fruits and one on vegetables to twenty of the girls early in June, taking them in groups of ten. Now, ten of the girls come weekly to work at the Centre, while the others go to the Hamilton-Wenham cannery and the Montserrat cannery.

Greens, beets, peas, beans and rhubarb have been canned. They are packed and taken by the girls to the hospital. Miss Bradbury sees that everything is done just right, but the girls do all the work themselves. Some of the products come from the surplus on their home gardens, while the rest is from the land farmed by the girls. At the Hamilton-Wenham cannery 133 jars of beets were put up last Wednesday, the week's record being over 200 jars. Mrs. E. B. Cole is always in the cannery when the girls are present.

The North Shore in War Work

THE executive committee of the Manchester Red Cross held its regular monthly meeting at the emergency rooms Monday night. After routine business was transacted, the resignation of Mrs. William H. Coolidge as chairman of the Surgical Dressings committee was accepted, her place being filled by Mrs. Allen S. Peabody. Two additional names were voted upon as members of the committee,—Mrs. J. W. Campbell and Mrs. Thomas B. Gannett, the other members being Dr. F. S. Burnett, Mmes. Raymond C. Allen, Wm. Follett, Allen S. Peabody, Wm. H. Coolidge, J. Warren Merrill, George R. Dean, John J. Connors, Ellery L. Rogers and Dr. R. T. Glendenning, D. T. Beaton and G. A. Knoerr. F. J. Merrill is chairman, with Dr. Burnett, H. W. Purington, Mrs. F. C. Rand and Miss Gladys Hildreth as other officers.

At the May meeting, Mrs. Coolidge was appointed chairman of the workroom with Mrs. E. L. Rogers as vice-chairman.

The Manchester workroom has been doing excellent work. Since organized, April 13, 1917, there has never been a piece of work returned, or a criticism on poor sewing. The workroom has been fortunate in having plenty of funds to purchase wool for the workers. In knitting, Manchester has also excelled.

Mrs. E. L. Rogers heads the sewing committee and Mrs. J. W. Campbell, the knitting. In June, the Surgical Dressings joined forces with the Red Cross. This department had done efficient work under Mrs. Peabody the past winter, and she now resumes the chairmanship of it. Thus the sewing, knitting and surgical dressings, the three departments of a Red Cross workroom are in excellent working order in Manchester. The workroom is very large and there are many details to attend to, all of which are looked after by Mrs. Coolidge, as chairman of the workroom.

Mrs. Thomas B. Gannett has just closed her classes in surgical dressings, of which she has been the instructor. Monitors for this department include Miss Annie Lane, Mrs. S. Parker Bremer and Mrs. Boylston A. Beal.

The new quota has not yet arrived.

MRS. GEORGE H. LYMAN, of Beverly Farms, has thought the following excerpts from her latest bulletin for the French Wounded work would be of interest to BREEZE readers. Mrs. Lyman is chairman of the workroom in West Manchester.

"On Saturday, June 1st, were sent out from the Alcazar to the railroad station vestiaires alone, 4,509 articles of clothing. This does not include bundles of old linen, surgical dressings, sacks of slippers, bags of soap, cases of talcum powder, nor 95 cases of supplies sent to hospitals:

"And what do these figures mean? —That every article was unpacked, counted, ticketed, put into bales, bags and baskets, loaded onto camions and dispatched to the station vestiaires that the A. F. F. W. had been asked to install. Once at the station what does it mean, Alcazar friends? There the real work commences for every garment must be given out and fitted, as well as may be, in the rush. Refugees in every conceivable condition of want and misery; dozens deep press around the tables which serve as counters, and the hastily improvised shelves made of benches. Little children with their eyes just visible above the tables cling to their mothers, often about to bear other children; children with sore feet who have walked miles across country without stockings; babies who literally have not been changed for days; rheumatic old women without sufficient clothing who have slept in the fields; old men without hats and in dirty torn shirts. One old man told me that the alarm came at six o'clock on the morning of Monday, the 27th, that "they" were advancing on his village; he didn't even have time to drink his coffee. 'To think I did not drink the last cup of coffee in my own house, where I was born,' he ended in a wail. . . . Oh you, our friends, who still have homes, bear the Alcazar and its fast emptying storehouse well in mind!

"Notes on our work in France from a letter from Mrs. Lathrop just received:

"Our work in France is now on a very big scale and I wish all of you at home could see the real benefits of your devotion. I feel so often that we are having the interesting part of the work and all of you the dull routine. Even in the French hospitals, the interest now centres largely in the fact that they have American wounded among them. They are only too ready to care for them, but, of course, it means an increase in the supplies from us. We cannot go into a French hospital because we have heard that twenty or thirty of our own wounded are there without asking the officials of that hospital if they are in need of anything. Were we to walk in and carry gifts to our own men without remembering the French, we should become unwelcome. Instead, we have grown even closer friends of the French by giving the supplies to them and in every case they have divided them with our own men. An American who enters a French hospital, is considered by them a Frenchman—one of their own, while he is there—so every time you make a hospital garment, remember the Frenchman who wears it may be your own brother or son. To know this, I feel sure will stimulate you as it has us. We have now over 100 workers in France and are thinking of opening a new depot at Chateau-Chirry—one has just been started at Bayonne with Mrs. Ralph Richmond, of New England, and Miss Herter, of New York, in charge. Our Pau depot is again open and Miss Cushing, of Boston, has been very generous. For a long time there was no need there, but now the hospitals are crowded."

French and American Wounded

"Yesterday one of the A. F. F. W. camions went to a distant suburb of Paris bearing tobacco, matches, chocolate, chewing gum, handkerchiefs, and other gifts, for French and American wounded, who were passing through in such large quantities that all supplies were falling short. This morning we sent a camion load of absolute necessities and added a consignment of electric torches for the handful of plucky women working in that desolate suburban station, in dusty fields and along the edge of railroad tracks. During the night raids, every light is out and they stumble over rails and wires as they go back and forth from train to the operation tent, in utter darkness, to the sound of the anti-aircraft guns defending Paris.

"In the last week A. F. F. W. workers alone, found in various hospitals one hundred and three Americans, and delivered their names and reports of their condition to the Home Communication Service of the American Red Cross, which took the cases in hand. Our workers often find boys awaiting evacuation, in French hospitals, where scarcely a word of English is spoken. The joy of the boy who finds someone 'from home' sitting by his bedside ready to listen to his story and to see that some special want is filled, can be imagined. We add this extract from a letter just received from close behind the lines:

"Yesterday we made our first call at the ——— hospital and visited all the American men. One poor lad had been trepanned, one young lieutenant had lost a leg, many were suffering from gas, but all with the most wonderful spirit and all wanting to get back into the lines. They gave us such a welcome, saying we were the first American women they had seen; were we here to stay? and would we come again? We found some of our own marines and I do wish you could have seen their faces when they recognized us."

SEVENTY were present at Mrs. E. S. Grew's coach-house in West Manchester, Monday. Those at work for the French Wounded, not previously noted, include Mmes. R. L. Whitman, Lowell Chapin, John Ellsworth, H. G. Nichols, F. W. Fabyan, Wm. A. Read, N. S. Simpkins, Jr., E. S. Webster, H. H. Thondike, Nathan Hayward, W. T. Lambert, L. Ahl, John W. Cutler, J. Koshland, Paul Thorndike, John Noble, W. H. Moore, James Means, A. F. Wadsworth, R. J. Monks, P. T. Jackson, W. R. Thayer, E. K. Arnold, Philip Stockton, J. L. Curtis, H. E. Warren, Henry W. Harris, and the Misses E. D. Boardman, E. M. Dennie, Evelyn E. C. Page, Abby W. Hunt, Esther Cunningham, T. Thompson, Eleanor G. Noble, M. L. Blake and M. B. Lothrop.

Mrs. Wallace Goodrich, of West Manchester, finds no difficulty in living up to present day sugar rations, because she has had it in force all winter. The present three pounds per person a month has been her rule all winter. She had the unique plan of having sugar bowls marked with the name of the various individuals in the household and in that way each one measured for himself, to a certain extent.

CAN NOW REST WHILE WAITING FOR TRAINS AT MANCHESTER

The following letter from John Rourke, superintendent of the Portland Division of the Boston & Maine R. R., to Walter L. Harris, of Manchester and Salem, is self-explanatory. It was in reply to a letter from Mr. Harris urging that a few seats be placed on the outside of the Manchester station so that the men-folk could sit and rest while awaiting their train. The letter says:

"Dear Sir:

"We have succeeded in locating two settees for Manchester, Mass.

"They are now at that station, but need some slight repairs, painting, etc., before they can be put in use.

"Labor is scarce, but we will endeavor to have the work done without delay.

Fourth of July Address at Manchester

By JUDGE M. J. MURRAY

of Boston

"WE meet on the anniversary of the birthday of our country. We meet, too, as a generation of Americans weighed down by the mightiest responsibility that has yet come to the people of this republic. Uninfluenced by any act of our own, we are now a party to the greatest war of all history; and perhaps I may not be overestimating our military worth or underestimating our noble allies when we realize the magnitude of the task that rests upon our shoulders.

"France is now fighting with the naked sword, having thrown the scabbard away. Our brave ally, England, after three years of superb battling, is necessarily sorely feeling the stress their people have passed through. Brave Italy has lent herself to the importance of the task in the great conflict. All three look longingly across the ocean to the land of Washington and Lincoln and expect us now to do our part in staying, as soon as possible, this fearful conflict which has devastated in a way never before known.

"On April 1 of last year, the President of the U. S., in an address to the Congress assembled, uttered these words: 'The time has come either to submit or conquer.'

"And then it finally dawned upon this peace loving people, representing 105,000,000 of the world's population, that we must lend ourselves to the prosecution of this war with all our force unstinted, until the Kaiser and his followers are beaten to their knees.

"We have been taught all our lives that right means might, and that Columbia was yet to remain 'The land of the free and the home of the brave.' But has it ever dawned on any of us that during the lives of most of us we have never been called upon to make a sacrifice worthy of the name?

"Has it ever dawned upon us that we had here in America one-tenth of the wealth of the world, and one-fourteenth of the world's population, and that is was for us to raise our strong right arm in defense of the freedom of the world against the oppression of that fibre-headed monster, the Kaiser, who aspired to dominate the world. That day has come to us all too soon. The world is now going to learn whether we are worthy of our forbears, and before we get through with our task every source of the nation is going to be tried. As long as there lives a man, woman or child in America who enjoys our priceless freedom, so long will that purpose be carried out."

At this point the speaker dwelt at length upon the great mistake this country has made in depending upon the volunteer system of raising an army, which system has failed in every instance, he said, from the Revolution down.

Said he: "If it wasn't for France, who stood by us in our hour of need and sent us an army and loaned us millions in money, Washington's dream of a free republic would never have been realized. The failures that have been met with in this system will never be known by the school boy or girl of today until history is written as it should be."

The same trouble was met in the War of 1812, and again in the Mexican War, and, in a measure, in the Civil War. Continuing, the speaker said:

"Far be it from me to dim the lustre on the brow of the men of '61 to '65—those men who helped swell the chorus to the call of Lincoln, 'We are coming, Father Abraham, 300,000 strong.' I see some of these men before me today, and from the depths of my heart I salute you in the name of the townspeople of Manchester. You showed that your patriotism was something beyond a vain or idle boast. I wonder how many of you realized at the time you enlisted what you were doing. Most of you were scarcely 21 years of age. Only twenty-five percent were over 25; 1,200,000 were under 20; 800,000 were under 19; 600,000 under 18; 300,000 under 17; and 15,000 got in some way or other who were under 15; so we owe a tremendous debt of gratitude for the service these men did.

"But the people seemed possessed of the idea that if we should ever need an army, it could be raised over night. Even so big a man as William Jennings Bryan said we could raise an army of a million men over night. I am not attempting to criticize our officials. It was not their fault in making this mistake, but the fault of the whole American people with a very few exceptions and one of those exceptions was right here in your own district. Essex County was fortunate to have a man in Congress who was one of those exceptions and if he had been listened to this country would not have been in the position of submitting itself to the many nasty indignities that Germany saw fit to heap upon us on land and sea at the beginning of the war.

"You know what the conditions were when we sent men to Mexico; one-third of the men absolutely without military training, one-third had never fired a musket and one-third with less than three months' training. A whole machine gun company was sent and not a machine gun to fire.

"At the beginning of the war, our entire armed force consisted of a little over 50,000 men. At that time there were 40,000,000 under arms in Europe, and 5,000,000 had been sacrificed through battle and disease. So great had been the destruction of shipping that it would take years to restore it to normal conditions.

"In addition to our 50,000 we had a national guard under 48 states of about 160,000 men. That was the national guard the present Secretary of War said could be mobilized without difficulty and in quick time. But just a year later we had under arms, 1,680,000 fairly well drilled, and our navy had 350,000 men.

"For our first Liberty Loan four million people responded, for the second ten millions and for the third seventeen millions. Now, Mr. McAdoo tells you twenty-four billions of dollars more will be needed to carry on the war another year, and you will be ready for that.

"The three golden stars on yonder flag reminds you that three noble young men have made the supreme sacrifice, and earned the plaudit, 'Well done thou good and faithful servant.' Oh! parents of these noble, chivalrous, patriotic boys of Manchester, I do not desire to open afresh the wounds that their passing has caused, but only to remind you to bless the day that gave you sons noble enough and brave enough to go forth to battle and offer their life for such principles as Washington fought for. Their names shall always stand an honored household work. We are to win the priceless heritage of liberty and we are cowards if we hesitate to accomplish this work for humanity.

"Let us not forget what England has done for us; if it had not been for her navy Germany would have had her boats off our coast long ago; she could have laid her gunboats 2000 yards beyond the range of our most powerful guns and battered the city of Boston to pieces in six hours and we would have been powerless to prevent it. Let us remember that fact.

"Americanism! There are in the United States 2,500,000 native-born Germans, and 17,000,000 born in other foreign countries, and none appreciated our civil and religious liberties more than those born in Prussia—the greatest slave country in the world.

"We recall what the Kaiser said to Ambassador Gerard before the war: 'When I get through with the war in Europe I will not take any nonsense from the United States.' 'The U. S. will not get into the war,' said the Kaiser, 'they are too busy making money, and if they should there are 500,000 Germans in the U. S. who are sworn to rise up and fight for the Fatherland.' 'And if they should,' snapped back the ambassador, 'there are 500,000 posts all ready to hang them on, just as soon as they do.'

"There is just one type of American that deserves to exist in the U. S. now, and that is the one who, right or wrong, every moment is with England, France and Italy. He is a renegade who is otherwise, no matter what his origin.

"We are proud of old Massachusetts from the sands of Cape Cod to the Berkshires. We revere Lexington, Concord and Bunker Hill, and we treasure the deeds of the men of the past. Brave, loyal, patriots. But he today is a traitor and a coward who will jeopardize the men in the trenches fighting our battles, who will stop building ships, making ammunition or any work to help on the war, for the sake of securing a few more cents an hour.

"This is our hour, our way is clear. All we have or possess has come by the sacrifice of those gone before. Let us rise in our power and secure the height of worldly achievement."

SELECTMAN WHEATON'S INTRODUCTORY REMARKS

In his introductory remarks, Chairman Samuel L. Wheaton of the board of selectmen said in part:

"We meet here today to celebrate the birthday of our republic. We are in the midst of a great war. No man knows how long it will continue. Some say seven months, some from three to five years. A very few say ten years. It makes no difference whether the war continues three months, or thirty years, we must fight until the German army is wholly destroyed and the German empire so completely dismembered that it can cause no more trouble in this world for at least 100 years.

"We can gather inspiration and courage from our past record. We have fought through five wars, occupying nineteen years of our national life. The Revolutionary War, 1775 to 1783, established our independence. In 1812-15 we were forced to fight for the principle of free trade and sailors' rights. In 1846-48 we took Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada and California from the barbarous rule of Mexico, and made them a part of our union. In 1861-65 we had our Civil War, to determine whether we were to be a government 'of the people, for the people and by the people,' one great, powerful, undivided nation, or be divided into two or more confederacies. In 1898 we freed Cuba from the savage tyranny of Spain. Now, for fifteen months we have been fighting in the great world war.

"Today we launch over 100 ships. This is a grand answer to the submarine menace.

"We have over 1,000,000 men in France. We know our men will fight as bravely, we believe our officers will be as skillful as those of the past were, and if we people who cannot fight will continue to properly support our armies, we cannot lose; we will win."

COMFORT FUND FLAG PRESENTED TO MANCHESTER BOY SCOUTS

The Equal Suffrage League, of Manchester, decided to present the "Comfort Fund" flag to the Boy Scouts on July 4, on the Common, after the parade.

Edwin P. Stanley, Dept. Com. of Mass. G. A. R., presented the flag, and Scoutmaster John O. Matthews, accepted it on behalf of the Scouts.

Mr. Stanley briefly stated the history of the flag as follows: It was made in Manchester by a descendant of Peregrine White, the first white child born in Massachusetts. It was then given into the hands of Francis Spalding, a summer resident of West Manchester, who, with the aid of the Boston Boot, Shoe and Leather club, sold it on shares, many of which were bought by the residents along the North Shore.

In this way was raised more than two thousand dollars, which money was expended in the purchase of 51 Victrolas, one for each company that did not have one at Camp Devens. Also 852 records were bought, about 300 of which were in the French language. These were distributed at the same time.

The shares on the flag were drawn at the office of Mr. Spalding, on May 12. The lucky number bore the name of the president of the local Equal Suffrage League, who had purchased ten dollars' worth of shares.

The League has given the flag to the Scouts (as future soldiers) to keep as long as they remain an organization. If they should ever disband they are to give it to the G. A. R. of the town.

Mr. Thayer of the Leather organization in Boston took the flag on the third Liberty Loan campaign, using it in making his appeals from the tank. He received more than a half million dollars in pledges, so it can be safely said that the flag really brought in more money than any flag in history. "Long may it wave" will be the wish of all Scouts.

Mr. Stanley also read the following poem:

Strong limbed, wide eyed, youth goes its way,
Impetuous as the rising wind,
The world a round toy for its play.
Fearless, untried, undisciplined;
Until life's challenge hushes thoughtless mirth,
Demanding the inevitable price of birth.
Yours was the privilege to go
In quiet lanes and goodly fields,
In safety watch the human show,
Securely reap what wisdom yields.
Yours was the gift, yours too, must be the price.
Freely and gladly given—sacrifice!

Never was such a need of men
Since Tyranny first raised its head,
Nursed in the fumes of poisonous fen,
And freedom rose and fought and bled.
To consecrate the flag of Liberty
And Truth, with blood's eternal guarantee.
Never was such a need to stand
Shoulder to shoulder for the right
To raise Democracy's strong hand
And strike with justice and with might,
For all our father's held in high esteem,
Make good their cause and animate their dream.
Stand! Stand with souls and hands on high,
And swear their cause shall never die.

COPLEY THEATRE, BOSTON

The third week of the summer season at the Copley theatre begins next Monday evening with "Inside the Lines." This war comedy by Earl Derr Biggers will then be in its tenth week, and the Henry Jewett Players are acting its exciting scenes with a skill that adds to its romantic and humorous appeal. The popular matinees, at which the schedule of prices for the entire orchestra is now $1.00, are proving especially attractive. Good seats may also be obtained in the balcony at prices ranging from 25 cents to 75 cents.

With its scenes at the Rock of Gibraltar, "Inside the Lines," in its three acts introduces the audiences to a series of picturesque incidents centering around the personality of a British officer, Capt. Woodhouse, who is masquerading as a German spy.

APRON SALE

SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR IN AID OF DISTRICT NURSE ON MANCHESTER COMMON

The Manchester Woman's club had a gala day on the Common this Wednesday. The Apron Shop brought guests from far and near. Many of the summer colony were out to buy aprons before the booth was ready to open for business at 11 o'clock.

A prettily constructed booth, with a green roof made of cedar boughs like a thatched roof, topped with a white flag bearing the words, Visiting Nurse Fund, was the centre of attraction. The booth was divided into sections by white lattice frames, over which red flowers were hung, making a very pretty effect. The groups of aprons occupied various sections on the counter around the booth and were looked after by their respective committees.

The ice cream and punch table was made attractive with potted plants.

The apron sale has been in the hands of Miss Annie Lane, who, with her various committees, has been doing much work in the preparation. In the maids' aprons many orders, often dozens in an order, have been filled for summer residents long before the sale.

The ice cream and punch table was looked after by Mmes. G. A. Knoerr, Bertram P. Floyd, Elmer Butler, George Allen, Charles Scott, A. E. Parsons, Ernest Valentine, Charles Lucas and Miss Mary Judson.

The work aprons were in charge of Mmes. D. F. Bennett, Ed. A. Lane, George S. Sinnicks, George W. Hooper, William Follett, I. M. Marshall, G. W. Blaisdell, Wm. J. Johnson, Harlan Morgan.

Maids' aprons were looked after by Mmes. Hollis Roberts, Wm. Hawkesworth, Herbert Shaw, Alfred Hersey, George Dean, John C. Mackin, Frank Cheever, W. H. Sullivan, H. W. Purington, Geo. Allen and Harry Swett. Besides maids' aprons they had Red Cross aprons, dolls' aprons and sets of collars and cuffs.

Fancy aprons were in charge of Mmes. F. P. Bullock, Benjamin Bullock, Wm. H. Coolidge, Jr., Leon Carter, R. T. Glendenning, Walter Bell, Leonard Andrews and the Misses Mary Clarke, Eva Allen and Beth Jewett.

Arbella girls who directed visitors to the Manchester Food Centre included the Misses Violet Read, Gertrude Oakes, Mary Knight, Helen Beaton, Elizabeth B. Saben, Janet Height, Bernice Lee, Ruth Bell and Margaret Cruickshank.

vertise the sale the past week. It was the work of Eric Pape, the Manchester artist.

The Food Centre sold war-time sweets and had interesting and instructive exhibits. The proceeds of their sale will also go to the Visiting Nurse Fund.

Their exhibits consisted of wheatless and sugarless foods from cake to various breads.

Canned fruits without the use of sugar were also exhibited.

A table showing a piece of meat and its equivalents was a great attraction.

LEBLANC—DESROCHES

Phillip L. LeBlanc, of Manchester, and Miss Sylvia DesRoches, of Ipswich, were married Monday morning, July 1, at 7.30 at St. Stanaulas church, Ipswich, where a mass was celebrated.

Miss Elizabeth DesRoches a niece of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Price Williams was best man. Following the wedding ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride, for which there were some fifteen guests. The wedding party left by auto for Salem and from there continued the bridal trip to Nantasket Beach. They have taken up their residence at 46 Central street, Manchester.

MAGNOLIA

Rev. Alpheus E. Tuttle, chaplain of the Gloucester Fishermen's institute, preached in the Village church last Sunday morning and evening in the absence of the pastor, who was out of town for a few days of rest.

Mrs. Alice Peart, of Boston, arrived here a few days ago to resume her duties as matron of the Women's club and those who are most deeply interested in the club feel that she is the right person in the right place.

Dr. Eaton, the pastor, will preach in the Village church next Sunday at 10.45 a. m. and at 8.15 p. m. Reception of new members and Communion will follow the morning sermon. "The Fall of the Bastille" will be the subject of the pastor's sermon in the evening.

The Men's club opened July 1st for the season. The restaurant will not be open, but arrangements have been made with houses nearby to provide our patrons with good board at the same rate as last year. Tournaments for the members will be held in tennis, pool, bowling and checkers. Membership is open to everyone at $1 for the season. Dances are held every Wednesday and Saturday and are being very well patronized.

COMMUNITY PAGEANT

PROVED A GREAT DELIGHT TO ALL THE PEOPLE OF MAGNOLIA

The Community Pageant that was held in Mrs. A. C. Thornton's field, opposite the "Little Chapel," on Magnolia ave., Thursday afternoon, July 4th, was an occasion of more than ordinary interest to the people of this little village and one that will not soon be forgotten by the large number of people that were present. The day was ideal and the program that was prepared by Mrs. Alice Foster was carried out to the great delight of those who were fortunate enough to attend the exercises.

Aside from the village folk there were a number of the summer residents and guests from the Oceanside present, and judging by the heartiness with which they applauded the actors of the pageant it is evident that they, too, greatly enjoyed what they saw and heard.

Never did our young people look more interesting and attractive in their quaint dresses, Indian gowns, and George Washington coats and hats, and each did his part well. The Pilgrims were represented by Mary Burke, Helen McEachern, Polly Whitney, Janet Brown, Mabel Malonson, Lillian Swanson and Jessie Viator. The Camp Fire Girls were Rose Nelson, Eleanor Ballou, Laura Abbott, Jean McGaughey, Nancy Thornburg, Marion Scott, Phyllis Lycett, Jennie McKay and Ella Hoysradt.

The scene representing "The Making of the Flag" was especially interesting and those who took the different parts did remarkably well. Dorothea McGaughey represented Betsey Ross; Axel Nelson was George Washington, William Hunt was Marquis Lafayette, and Doris Malonson and Ernest Howe represented the children of Betsey Ross.

Those who represented the "Days of '61" were Abby May, Eleanor Commerford, Mildred Commerford, Elizabeth Abbott, Mary Carr, Ada Hunt, Jennie Brown Cook, Elizabeth Brown Nelson, Dorothy Story and Beatrice Story.

Those who took part in the Folk Dancing were Catherine Ballou, Helen Gardner, Florence May, Ethel Pireen, Arthur Abbott, Ernest Howe, Frances Overlock and Mary Ballou.

The Jack Tar performers were Roy Nelson, Mary Ballou, Hildegard Thornburg, Arthur Abbott, Doris Malonson, Clarence Staples, Winifred Burke and Leon Nelson.

The "Soldiers of 1918" were John Burke, Jr., Abbott Howe, Lester Dunbar, Clarence Staples, Leo Nelson, Roy Nelson, Richard Newman, Ernest Howe, Arthur Abbott and Stanley French.

In the scene "America Triumphant," Dorothy McGaughey represented Columbia; soldier, Arthur Abbott; Red Cross nurse, Dolly Carr; sailor, James Dunbar.

Those who took part in the music were Edna Symonds, who presided at the piano; violinist, Ernest Lucas; cornetist, Walter Moore; soloist, Miss Charlotte Huskie, accompanied by Mrs. Helen Abbott; Miss Butler, a guest at the Oceanside, played a violin solo accompanied by Mrs. Ruia Brown.

While all this was interesting and well done, yet, perhaps, the great feature of this most delightful occasion was the timely, interesting, instructive, masterful and eloquent address that was given by the Rev. Charles L. Morgan, D. D., of Cambridge, on "The Spirit of '76."

Rev. Charles Wadsworth, D. D., president of the Presbyterian Board of Education, Philadelphia, will preach Sunday at Union chapel. Service begins at 10.45; all seats free.

GOOD NEWS FOR EXPRESS EMPLOYEES

The increase in express rates recently granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission makes it possible to immediately revise the wage schedules of the American Railway Express Co.

President Taylor of the new company in an interview in New York said that he has been in session with his chief operating officials and that they will begin immediately a readjustment of the wage schedules of the larger number of express employees throughout the entire country and that it is the intention of the new company to utilize substantially the entire revenue accruing from the increased rates that will be available to the express company in an advance in wages. It will be appreciated that with such an enormous organization throughout the entire country it will necessarily take some little time to work out the increases in a systematic and equitable manner. It is hoped this entire question can be disposed of within a period of thirty days. However, the employees will not suffer in consequence of this delay inasmuch as all increases when announced will be made to take effect from July 1, 1918. None of this money will be used to increase the salaries of the higher-paid men or the officials of the company. The additional revenue accruing from the increased rates will be distributed upon the basis of doing the greatest good to the largest number. It is hoped that the use of this money exclusively for the purpose of increasing the salaries of express workers will encourage them to do everything possible to insure an improved service to the public.

IT IS NOW AMERICAN RAILWAY EXPRESS COMPANY

All the big express companies of the country have recently merged under one head, as a war measure, and is known under the new name of American Railway Express Co.

The Collection of "Slow" Telephone Accounts

THE PURPOSE OF THIS ANNOUNCEMENT is to show that it is desirable, particularly at this time, to save the time and labor that is expended in collecting bills that remain unpaid after the lapse of a reasonable period of time.

BILLS ARE DUE when rendered on the first day of each month, and while most telephone accounts are paid promptly, there are a number of "slow" accounts that require labor, time and expense that might better be devoted to other work that is more directly in the interest of the public's telephone service.

WE BELIEVE that this method of bringing the matter to the attention of the public, this frank and open discussion of our aims, is all that is necessary to secure proper understanding and coöperation.

An Hour Spent With a Few of the More Isolated Ones Here and There—Glimpses of Their Homes

LILLIAN McCANN

II

DOWN in the Manchester Cove section, at "Sharksmouth," the Curtis estate, is where Charles Hopkinson, an eminent Boston artist, has his country studio. He has been living in Manchester twelve years, often spending the winter at the charming seaside cottage.

Mrs. Hopkinson was Elinor Curtis, daughter of Mrs. Greely S. Curtis, who, with her other daughters, occupies the large stone house on the estate. Five young daughters are in the Hopkinson family. These little girls have posed for their father all their lives and count it as part of their play and work to dress up to have their pictures painted in whatever fantastic style their artist father suggests.

Mr. Hopkinson's town studio is in the Fenway Studios, in Boston. He was born in Cambridge and received his A. B. from Harvard in 1891.

While in Manchester, he devotes much of his time to watercolors. His favorite haunts are along the shore of the Curtis estate (exceedingly beautiful and with a bold, rocky outline), on Dana's island, the wooded scenes about his home, and the red rocks along the Shore. It is in the summer time that he has all of his little girls about him free from their lessons, and with them for his subjects, some of his best work is done during the season in Manchester.

Mr. Hopkinson has exhibited at such noted galleries as the Academy of Design and the Arden Gallery in New York; the Pennsylvania Academy in Philadelphia; the Art Institute in Chicago; the Carnegie Institute at Pittsburgh; the Albright Gallery in Buffalo, and other places.

At the Guild of Boston Artists on Newbury street, Mr. Hopkinson held an exhibit, in April, of his summer pictures,—views of the North Shore. The proceeds of the sales he gave as a benefit for the Fund for French Wounded.

Portraits of children seem to be a fascinating motif with this artist. Some of those he has done are in well-known homes around Boston and New York.

Of New York people, he has painted Miss Joan Whitney, daughter of the Payne Whitneys, who once spent a summer near the artist's home in Manchester. He has also painted Nancy Hayward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Hayward, of Wayne, Pa., and Virginia, daughter of the John Newbolds, of Philadelphia, both families of the Manchester colony.

Among other portraits of interest, he has done one of Miss Frances Davison, daughter of Henry P. Davison, of

"CHILD AND MOTHER"
Painted by Charles Hopkinson

New York, now the chairman of the War Council of the American Red Cross. Of Harvard college professors, he has painted George H. Palmer, Barrett Wendell (the picture now hangs in the Harvard club, of Boston), and Pres. Eliot, the portrait being owned by Ernest B. Lane, of Brookline.

His portrait of the late Judge William L. Putnam is in the Federal courtroom in Boston.

A number of Mr. Hopkinson's pictures have been reproduced in Town & County. We take the following from their comment on his work, when a reproduction of his painting, "Piazza Door," was used:

"It is typical of the artist's determination to keep his palette fresh and clean and is expressive of his interest in allying his figures in a decorative way with his accessories. The little girl in the doorway is probably one of his young daughters of whom he has done some of his best things. His 'Portrait of An Artist's Daughter,' showing a young girl in a blue coat and an orange neckerchief, strongly silhouetted against a snow background of Scandinavian bigness, has the decorative feeling very strongly expressed and thoroughly deserves the Carl H. Beck gold medal which the Pennsylvania Academy awarded it in 1915. His narrow panel arrangement of his two daughters in green dresses against a smooth pink background, with excellent use made of their white stockings and of the light red cover of a book, makes another good picture, which was also included in the Arden Gallery collection. His portraits of older people are equally vivacious and characteristic, that of Dr. Francis S. Watson and the one of Miss E. C. Putnam being especially successful."

The beautiful painting, "Child and Mother," is now in the little studio at the Manchester home. It was painted here in the autumn two years ago and has been exhibited in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and at the Gallery-on-the-Moors, East Gloucester. The little daughter, Elinor, is shown in all the charming simplicity of her six years. The flannel petticoat has a most realistic look and seems to radiate the warmth of its texture. The mother in the background is, of course, Mrs. Hopkinson.

The studio up in the garret is one of the "workshops" on the Shore that would attract many visitors, as those of East Gloucester do, if it were not so hidden away in the seclusion of "Sharksmouth," and at the top of a private cottage at that. The soft brown tinted walls make a pleasing background to the bright pictures standing against them, some completed and others in the process of being done. A little fireplace adds to the comfort of chilly days.

Downstairs in the large living-room of the cottage and out on the piazzas facing the sea is where much of the work of Mr. Hopkinson is seen on good days. Here the views of the little girls playing and dancing in old-time costumes, or some pose typical of child life are seen to the best advantage. Low tables, with palette and brush, are at every convenient place. The great sunny pictures seem a part of the landscape, when viewed in the large open room and on the piazzas and terrace. The children at their play around the house appear to have just stepped from the pictures, with a change of dress, perhaps, but there they are, the "living pictures" of what their father creates with his brush.

The Hopkinson cottage is of light stucco, with white trimmings and green blinds. Very charming and beautiful and airy in every detail, it seems to have been planned and located at just the right spot on the Shore for an artist. The outlook over the water is nowhere more picturesque than at his doorway. Great trees, in all their natural beauty, surround the place,—the whole Curtis estate is in almost a natural condition. Little paths run through it, making short-cuts between the Hopkinson cottage and the house in which Mrs. Curtis lives and also connecting with their neighbors, the Misses Sturgis, of "Rookwood," and the F. Meredyth Whitehouse estate, "Crowhurst." These little paths also have branches leading down to the water's edge along which a narrow path skirts the entire shore in this section.

Mrs. Maynard Ladd in France This Year

The North Shore has an artist, in France, who is doing a wonderful work. This is Mrs. Maynard Ladd (Anna Coleman Watts), the sculptor, wife of Dr. Ladd, of 270 Clarendon street, Boston. Their summer home has been the Morgan cottage on Smith's Point, Manchester. Across the road from the cottage was an old barn, which Mrs. Ladd converted into a studio. Here she has worked at her beloved art for ten years or more, and held teas and received many distinguished personages, who found much pleasure in the little barn studio so charmingly situated near Manchester's harbor.

Mrs. Ladd was born in Philadelphia, but spent much of her young life abroad, owing to her father being in diplomatic service. She is an accomplished linguist, speaking the French, Italian, Spanish and German languages. She has written two books besides her regular life work.

Her early studies were in Boston, Rome and Paris. Two years ago she went to Rome and opened a studio, where she finished up things that could be done better in that atmosphere of art. She has exhibited at the National Sculpture society, Pennsylvania Academy, Corcoran Art Gallery, Washington; Chicago Art Institute and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Some of her work of particular interest to North Shore folk may be seen in the gardens on the Shore. The "Water Sprites" is a notable piece in the garden of Mrs. Edward S. Grew, at "All Oakes," West Manchester.

At "The Narrows," the Manchester home of Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, is a sundial with figures to represent the various ages in life. "St. Francis with the Birds," is also seen here and in the garden of Mrs. William Phillips, of "Highover," North Beverly.

In the "cypress room" at "Rockhurst," the home of the J. Warren Merrills, on Smith's Point, Manchester, are two bronze panels on either side of the fireplace. They represent Diana and Endymion and harmonize well with the color scheme of the room. Mrs. Merrill also has in this room a study of hands, a simple plaster study from Mrs. Ladd's studio. These hands are grasping each other, one masculine and one feminine, and have been made in bronze and otherwise, by Mrs. Ladd. They were originally made for a big fountain in San Francisco. Duse, the actress, saw the study, and had a bronze copy made to put over the door of a house in Rome designed for actors and actresses.

In the Washington home of the John Hays Hammonds is her statue, an American holding an eagle, one of her strongest pieces.

Mrs. Albert J. Beveridge, of Beverly Farms, Miss Mary Dexter, of Boston (now in the trenches abroad), and Mrs. Colville Barclay, formerly of Manchester, are among the well-known women for whom Mrs. Ladd has modeled busts.

Mrs. Barclay, the attractive English woman, wife of the counsellor in the British embassy, and Mrs. J. Warren Merrill, close neighbor and friend, have often posed for Mrs. Ladd's work.

Both Mrs. Ladd and her husband are in France, doing war work. Their little daughters, Gabriella May and Vernon Abbott, are with Mrs. Ladd's parents, in Newport.

Mrs. Ladd's work is intensely interesting and novel. She casts copper plate masks, which she silvers and then flesh colors, before fitting them to faces that have been shot away. Before she made her offer of service she experimented for several months. Her plan met with enthusiastic reception by war department heads and she went to France the past winter.

The following extract from a letter gives some idea of her work over there. It was written by Major Fletcher Steele, of Rochester, N. Y., who is in Red Cross service in France:

"I wish you could see the preparation, big and little, for what we have to meet—the Red Cross, I mean. I don't know about other things. One of the most interesting details I have chanced on is the work that Mrs. Maynard Ladd is doing. She is the Boston sculptor I used to know there. She has a studio over in the Latin quarter, high up in a quaint, crazy building, where she is making faces for French soldiers who no longer have any faces. I took pictures of two of them the other day. I would not want to describe it if I could. Mrs. Ladd is making them new faces from photographs of what they once were, modeling, painting and finishing the whole thing herself. They are almost miraculous.

"The expression does not change, of course, but they are so human and full of life, that one seems to feel no lack. She has even arranged so that they can smoke. Here is a godsend to wretched unfortunates that only a sculptor of real ability can give and no one knows how long it will be until she must begin on new faces for American boys whose own are shot away."

A friend has recently heard of Mrs. Ladd working calmly on a figure of "Peace" at an odd moment in her studio, when a fierce air raid was going on. Others were no doubt seeking shelter and refuge, while she was simply relaxing from the strenuous work on faces to do a "Peace" figure.

Mrs. Ladd has often been heard to say in her Manchester studio that she felt herself very fortunate because so many of her friends had kindly posed for her at various times. This has made the work more interesting than if all had been done by professional models. The study of

Cape Ann Is Not Downhearted

Rockport "Capitalizing Her Handicaps," Says
Staff Correspondent of the Boston Herald

"The fog has gone!" the bell hop cried:
The guests ran out the door.
One fleeting glimpse of blue they spied:
The fog had gone—for more.

CAPE ANN is Massachusetts' Brittany. And this year the comparison is holding, not only in deep tides of clean Atlantic water, in abundance of fish and in the picturesqueness of a rugged coast, but also in climate. The hospitable inns are burning firewood at a scandalous rate. The summer girls are all wearing sweaters; the sparse men are in overcoats. You hear the guests remarking to each other, "If anybody handed me a ticket for Cleveland—or Danville, as the case may be—I'd walk in my own front door tomorrow night."

Yet no one actually packs up and goes. For in some mysterious way the sombre weather accords well with the coast itself. Gray sky, grayer sea, hidden horizon, are becoming to Cape Ann's kind of beauty. From day to day the visitors grumble and keep on enjoying themselves. The dullness is all in the coloring. The perpetual mists of Brittany, her quick shiftings of clear sunshine and shrouding fog, the tides and breakers coming in from invisible distance—these all tone rightly with the tawny headlands, the jagged ledges off shore and the ceaseless dash and roaring of this outer sea.

When the fog does clear now and again, the air has that crystal quality that the English call "cloudy visibility." At this minute I can see the gulls riding on the ke-floats of fishtraps half a mile away. The guy ropes on the "Blondin" carrier towers at the Pigeon hill quarry—almost two miles on—show as sharp as the cross lines in the field of a transit glass. It's the quality that a Bewick loves and a Corot curses; for it makes landscapes look like pictures, and makes pictures look like schoolbooks.

Nor do the fog and easterly winds interfere with the every-day business on the Cape—the works that were going on before the first automobile dashed through Folly Cove or the first summer family brought the babies, the dog and the tennis set. At four o'clock this morning the power boat and her trailing dory were at the mackerel pound, whose floats make a waving hop-scotch on the water not twenty-five rods from my window. And the morning was only a little lighter when, still closer to the naked rocks below me, a doryman in oilskins, standing to his oars like a gondolier to his sweeper, was pushing from marker to marker, and separating the long lobsters from the short.

Rockport has met the war's demands with such good spirit that she deserves the heartier congratulation on a new war feature in her equipment as a fishing port. At the head of the quaint basin that has served her as an inner harbor, she has been watching the rise of a large wooden structure to be used in freezing and storing fish. Like the enormous storage house on T. wharf, Boston, this initial building is but the first unit of a larger project. But the part now ready for the ammonia pipes will take care of 3,000,000 pounds of fish. Farther up toward the head of the granite-walled pier stands the needed power house, with round stack, all of brick and granite.

The whole story of Rockport's fisheries makes, in its own way, as interesting telling as the more romantic tales of New Bedford and Nantucket. The story, too, is quick in its movement. I have hunted the whole waterfront in vain for the weedy hulk of one of those old, one-masted "pinkies," in which all the earlier fishing on Cape Ann was done. The "pinkies" were virtually double-enders. You may remember that a man on a wharf in New York called down to the master of one of these Cape Ann boats, asking if she could sail as fast with either end first, only to get the crisp reply: "Yes, and a good deal faster."

In those days Rockport had the active fishing harbor; Gloucester was in the background. But as the business grew, Rockport and Gloucester worked out the same change of roles as Cambridge and Boston, Marblehead and Salem, Randolph and Brockton. Today the big dealings in the Cape's fisheries, from bait and schooner, to storage and dry pack, are centered in Gloucester. Not one schooner leaves Rockport for the offshore banks.

But do not fancy for that reason that this old town is down and out. Just note the facts behind this new storage plant on her central wharf.

It is George W. Perkins, of New York, who got the ground rights and who gave Mr. Paulsen—the Gloucester specialist in this kind of construction—the $120,000 contract for the buildings already ordered; and not primarily as an investment, but first and foremost as a personal contribution to the war campaign for more food and more care in saving it. Mr. Perkins had sent his agents up and down the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. Out of all the possibilities he chose this outermost harbor of Cape Ann as the place where best fishing had the least chance for conserving its product.

Not every one knows that fish-freezing plants have to be fussy about the fish they accept for keeping. They would like best to get the fish actually alive. In no case do they wish to

ALONG the SHORE

THE North Shore is interested in the presentation of the state and national flags which took place at Framingham on Tuesday, the 15th Infantry, M. S. G., being the recipients. Judge William Caleb Loring, of Pride's Crossing, who was one of the donors, turned the colors over to Col. Eldredge. For the ceremony, the regiment formed in battalion line of masses as for evening parade; the officers assembled in the front and centre and the colors, as they were passed to the sergeants, were given a "present arms" by the organization. It was all over in five minutes and the regular evening parade went on. The colors, beautiful silk creations (national and state) are the gift of Judge Loring, Augustus P. Loring, Miss Katherine P. Loring and Miss Louisa P. Loring, all of Pride's Crossing.

Corporal Samuel P. White, of the Beverly company, was on the detail for escort to Justice W. C. Loring and the Misses Katherine P. Loring and Louisa P. Loring, who presented the state and regimental flags, Tuesday afternoon. In the party were Justice and Mrs. W. C. Loring, Misses Katherine P. and Louisa P. Loring and the Rev. Neilson Poe Carey, of the Farms. Capt. A. P. Loring, Jr., afterwards showed the party over the camp and paid a visit to F Co. street.

The North Shore committee of the Italian War Relief fund, of America, is planning an evening fête for the third week in August, to be held at "Graftonwood," the Manchester home of Dr. and Mrs. J. Henry Lancashire, who have offered their beautiful gardens for a Venetian fête. The exact date will be announced later.

Lieut. Com. and Mrs. Robert W. Cabaniss, of Beverly Farms, had their little year-old daughter christened at St. John's church last Sunday. Rev. Neilson Poe Carey officiated. The little one was named Martha Rebecca Motte Cabaniss. The sponsors were the grandparents on either side, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Cabaniss and Mrs. Rebecca Motte Ryan. The baby's father is in the U. S. navy.

Mrs. Godfrey L. Cabot, of Beverly Farms, gave a talk on Boston Common last week, on "Poultry Keeping for Profit," at one of the war meetings. Mrs. Cabot has had poultry for many years and speaks from experience. Her chickens and ducks at the Beverly Farms home are a great pleasure, as well as a profitable investment, for her.

Mrs. J. Conyngham Stevens, of Rydal, Pa., is again in "Brookside cottage," Beverly Farms. Mr. Stevens is in service. Mrs. Stevens is a sister of Sidney E. Hutchinson, on whose estate she is living at the Farms.

Mrs. Charles H. Dalton, of West Beach Hill, Beverly Farms, has her sister, Mrs. Frank Morison, of Boston, with her for the summer. Guests leaving this week are Mrs. Charles Deane, of Brookline, and Miss Ellen Dalton, of Boston.

ESSEX COUNTY CLUB, Manchester.—E. P. Gavit won in the golf handicap medal play last Saturday. The players included A. G. Bartlett, A. C. Moses, H. N. Spaulding, M. G. Haughton, S. Borden, Jr., J. H. Lancashire, H. H. Stevens, A. E. Lang, A. Ames and R. S. Codman.

Dr. Edgar R. McGuire and Dr. James H. Carr, of Buffalo, N. Y., have spent the past week at the Essex County club.

The first three days of August the invitation tournament at the Essex County club will draw much interest to Manchester. This will be welcome news all along the Shore and throughout this section of the state. The program calls for an 18-hole qualifying round the first day, with three 16's playing off at match play on Friday and Saturday. The low scorer on Thursday will get a gold medal and the winners of the various 16's will be awarded cups. Runners-up will be given medals, as also will the winners of the defeated eights, so everybody will get plenty of action.

The Red Cross Horse Show at "Round Plain Farm," Mrs. John Caswell's large estate at Pride's Crossing, will be the stellar social event of the mid-summer season on the Shore. It takes place tomorrow (Saturday) at three o'clock. Miss Eleonora R. Sears has received entries and also applications for boxes. Miss Alice Thorndike has assisted and also various members of the Red Cross in Beverly, for which the show is a benefit. The Boston Cadet band will play. Delicious war cake and tea will be served. The war cake comes from North Shore homes.

Mrs. William D. Polk, of New York, step-mother of Assistant Secretary Frank Polk, is a house guest at the Russell S. Codman home, Smith's Point, Manchester. Next Tuesday, Lieut. Vasile Stoica, will come to Manchester and will also spend a few days with the Codmans.

The North Shore swimming pool at Magnolia is having the first swimming contest tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon. The instructor, Jack Wallace, is planning a system of points this season for the best all-round swimming. A shield will be placed in the club and each year the best swimmer of the season will have his name put on it. Tea is served in the clubhouse on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Bridge is on each Tuesday. Last week, tables were taken by Mrs. E. Prescott Rowe, Mrs. Samuel S. Stevens and Mrs. Edward B. Richardson. Miss Helen Louise Coates, of the Oceanside, has been one who gave a tea party at the Pool this season.

Mrs. William E. Littleton, of "Lilac Lodge," Beverly Farms, had a short visit, this week, from her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Cushing, of Milton, who are spending a "geographical" summer by touring with their children to various points of interest. Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Griswold and children, another daughter's family, are at Bar Harbor. Mr. Griswold has been very successful in some naval war work he has been doing.

REV. NEILSON POE CAREY, of Beverly Farms, has started a class for children, of the summer colony, to meet at "The Rectory," at 2.30 every Thursday afternoon. Mr. Carey will tell Bible stories and give simple church teachings. At the first meeting last Thursday, twenty-four little ones gathered in his sitting-room for the story, prayer and hymn. At 5.30 the regular Thursday war service is held in St. John's church. Mr. Carey has conducted each Thursday service himself. They have been well attended, the interest seeming to grow with each meeting. The church is having a new slate roof put on. Another item of news is that St. John's is having the largest Sunday congregations it ever had, accounted for, in a measure, by the war leading all people's thoughts in a serious channel. The usual church fair will not take place, because the Auxiliary members have been too busy doing Red Cross work all winter to make the usual articles for it. Another item of news is that St. John's has not had a wedding this season. Ipswich has had the only Shore wedding of the year.

LIEUTENANT VASILE STOICA will speak at the Manchester Horticultural hall, on Thursday, July 25, at five o'clock, on the struggle for freedom of the different nationalities in Austria-Hungary. His experiences during the war have been most interesting and extraordinary. His parents are Roumanians by birth, but they settled in one of the Transylvanian provinces of Austria. He was a young professor at the University when the war broke out and he was obliged to enlist in the Austrian army. After countless risks and with a high price set upon his head he managed to make his escape and to cross the frontier into his own country. While fighting in the Roumanian army he was twice severely wounded. He was sent to America about a year ago to raise a Roumanian legion. In recognition of his untiring labors and his success in this difficult undertaking, he was recently elected president of the Roumanian National League, of America, at Cleveland, Ohio. Two regiments of Roumanians are fighting in Siberia with the Czecho-Slavs and 18,000 Roumanians are fighting on the Italian front, while thousands are waiting here to be equipped and transported to Europe. They are eager to take part in this world-wide uprising of oppressed peoples for alike to the Poles and the Czecho-Slavs, the Roumanians wish to establish their freedom on the basis of their ancient nationality. For centuries they have suffered from tyranny and injustice, but their deep feeling of nationality has never been crushed. They are now arising from the chaos of the world's war with new vigor, and they are determined to ensure, at the cost of their own lives, the emancipation of the coming generation from the Teutonic baseness and cruelty.

Tickets, $2.00, may be obtained from Mrs. Russell Codman, Manchester. The proceeds will be used for the equipment of the Roumanian legion in the United States.

The patronesses are: Mrs. T. Adamowski, Mrs. F. M. Burnham, Mrs. Russell Codman, Mrs. Harold Coolidge, Mrs. Charles P. Curtis, Jr., Mrs. Walter Denègre, Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, Mrs. J. H. Hammond, Mrs. M. G. Haughton, Mrs. F. L. Higginson, Mrs. Wm. Hooper, Mrs. Lester Leland, Miss Mary Lothrop, Mrs. George H. Lyman, Mrs. Grafton Minot, Mrs. E. P. Motley, Mrs. W. L. Putnam, Mrs. Thayer Robb, Mrs. H. F. Sears, Mrs. R. D. Sears, Mrs. H. H. Thorndike, Mrs. Edwin S. Webster, Mrs. Bernard Weld.

THE late Guy Norman left his entire estate to Mrs.

Norman, except a bequest to his daughter, Mrs. Elliott Bacon, of New York. Mrs. Norman is now sending to different institutions in Newport, in which her husband was specially interested, checks for considerable sums which she desires shall be considered as gifts from him. A few days ago the treasurers of the Y. M. C. A. and the Army and Navy association received letters from Mrs. Norman from Beverly Cove, where she is spending the summer, each containing a check for $1000, with a card indicating that the gift was made at the request of Mr. Norman.

Mrs. Charles S. Tuckerman, of "Applefield," Ipswich, has her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Leverett Tuckerman (Linda Scarritt) and baby, of Bay State road, Boston, with her for the summer.

THE christening of Leverett Saltonstall Tuckerman, Jr., took place a week ago Sunday afternoon in the Church of the Ascension in Ipswich. A large gathering of relatives and friends from New York and Boston were present at the ceremony which was conducted by the Rev. William Russell Scarritt, D. D., grandfather of the infant. The godfathers were John Appleton Tuckerman and Wm. Russell Scarritt, Jr., uncles of the child. The godmother was Miss Gwendolen Scarritt, twin sister of Mrs. Tuckerman. The alabaster baptismal font was profusely decorated with white wild flowers from the hedges about "Applefield." This was done by Mrs. Charles Tuckerman, grandmother of the baby.

After the church ceremony Mrs. Charles Tuckerman entertained at her home, "Applefield," the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. du Blois, the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. William Greenough Thayer, Randolph M. Appleton, Miss Sibyl Appleton, Mrs. Daniel Appleton, Mr. and Mrs. J. Ipswich was the centre of attraction last Saturday and Sunday when "Castle Hill," the R. T. Crane, Jr., estate was opened to the public for the benefit of the North Shore committee of the Italian War Relief fund, of America. Notwithstanding that the weather was not entirely favorable, yet it was very successful and about $1000 was made. The whole place was at its best, the rose garden and the Italian garden being in their prime of early summer beauty. On the lawn a tall standard bore an American and Italian flag. The committee is most grateful, not only to Mr. and Mrs. Crane, but to the people who kindly contributed by visiting the place.

Y^e Burnham House, in Ipswich, is ever the same quaint old place to wander around in. Out on Linebrook road, just outside of Ipswich village, this "quaintest place in all New England," is again finding that old and new friends are coming to enjoy its dinners and luncheons and tea.

The grill room, with its great fireplace filled with every possible contrivance of y^e olden time, is ever the room sought by young folk. The old furniture, the candle-light and often the big fireplace with a glowing fire give a charm that is felt in no other room. This part is reached by descending several steps from the main part of the house.

The peacock room is also lighted by candles and makes a nice private dining-room. The chauffeurs' room is beyond this.

The tea room and porch tea room are lighted by lanterns and in daytime are very light and airy, yet still have an atmosphere of the antique about them.

The great living room has its candle-light and immense fireplace and old-time furniture. Many pretty and useful gifts are for sale in this room, as well as throughout the house, besides the antiques, which are always for sale. Palmetto rugs and baskets from the south are new features this year.

The BREEZE wishes to correct a mistake it has made in its columns by saying that Lewis Niles Roberts, of Boston, is at the head of the Italian War Relief work. He is in no way connected with the Italian War Relief Fund of America. Mr. Roberts is in the Eastern Point, Gloucester colony, this season.

HAMILTON.—Mrs. Cornelius Conway Felton (Marie Dallas Agassiz) is spending the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rodolphe L. Agassiz, of "Homewood," Hamilton. Mrs. Felton is interested in the caninery at Wenham Neck and is one of the assistants there on certain days.

THE Grande Maison de Blanc at Magnolia has a charming little room in the rear that is much sought these days. Everything is so prettily appointed that chance visitors to the store must needs look within. A surprisingly large business is carried on in the little nook for here is where Miss Lois McGinley and Miss Marion Tucker, of Manchester have charge of the Navy League work. The North Shore unit of the comforts' committee of the Navy League opened its headquarters in this place last year and again this year on July 1. Wool is sold here and needles and directions for making the knitted garments for men in the U. S. navy, army and marines.

Last year over 1400 articles were made and given to the men in the service, and the committee hope to double the record this season. The prices of the wool are reasonable. Those wishing to purchase wool from the Magnolia headquarters, but not return the finished articles to the unit, are charged an additional ten cents a hank, this money going to a free wool fund to supply wool to women who wish to knit, but who cannot afford to buy the wool.

The North Shore workers at the Navy League are the following: Mmes. Norman S. Mackie, E. R. Campbell, Samuel Culbertson, E. C. Fitch, Jr., John C. Howe, Spencer Kennard, Parker Bremer and Henry R. Heard, and the Misses Lila Lancashire, Elizabeth Gunn, Marion Tucker, Pauline Croll, Katherine Blodgett, Minnie Richards, Sally Doggett and Lois McGinley.

It is earnestly requested that any finished garments for which people have no especial individual or organization to which to send them, be sent to this unit, and they will be promptly shipped to the New York headquarters of the Navy League, 405 Madison ave., and from there sent to the men in the service.

Mrs. Clement Bernheimer's beautiful home, in Newburyport, was the center of attraction for all the North Shore, Thursday, when it was opened for a mid-summer market to benefit the wounded soldiers in France. Her home is one of the places on the town's noted street, and is at 63 High street. The affair took place from three to eight o'clock in the evening. Features included an old-fashioned shop, vegetable grab, baskets, aprons, preserves, war candies, pickles, cake, bread, cool drinks, and an Italian Relief booth. Mrs. Bernheimer is one who spares no trouble and time in arranging for such affairs at her home and the success of the market was further favored by the excellent weather of yesterday.

John C. Ellsworth will join his family in Manchester Cove next week, for the remainder of the season.

A favorite place for North Shore folk to dine is at Y^e Rogers Manse, Ipswich, Mass. Tel. 85-M. adv.

Mrs. R. S. Bradley, of Pride's Crossing is interested in placing food posters in various workrooms on the Shore. This week, she put an extremely interesting one on "milk" in the Manchester Red Cross workroom in Horticultural hall. This urges the use of milk as a "perfect food," and asks that more be used, a quart a day per person being none too much, of this most economical drink and food combined. Mrs. Bradley received the latest meat bulletins from the State House on Thursday morning and had the present day rations placed in the BREEZE.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Newbold (Sarah Coolidge), of Hyde Park, N. Y., will spend August, as usual, with the latter's father, Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge, of Coolidge's Point, Manchester. Mr. Coolidge's daughter, Mrs. Lucius M. Sargent, is out from Boston for a day or more every week.

Beverly Historical Society Open to Visitors

Tuesday and Thursday Afternoons—
Rich in Historical Collections

BEVERLY'S HISTORICAL SOCIETY will keep open house this summer, from two to five each Tuesday and Thursday. Strangers on the Shore, as well as others, will want to see the dignified old mansion which so fittingly houses the society. From the cellar to the attic it is rich in the historical collections of a kind that cannot be seen elsewhere. It is known as the John Cabot house, built in 1779, by an ancestor of the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, of Nahant; and a brother of Andrew Cabot, who built the house that is now the Beverly City hall.

In the John Cabot house, Lafayette was received in 1824. In 1802 it was sold to the Beverly bank. The Andrew Cabot house was built in 1783, later sold to the Hon. Israel Thorndike, and was purchased by the town for a hall in 1841. At first it was similar to the Historical house, but has been somewhat changed. The George Cabot house was another famous old place just across from the Historical house. It was built in 1783 and torn down in 1917.

The mansion of John Cabot seems to be one of those houses made to last forever. Every inch of woodwork is of the old, hand-carved kind that we all revel in looking at. Even the banisters in the attic were made to be admired. And in those days every house in a seaport town had its outlook on the roof, so when the home-folk became anxious they stole to the outlook to watch for the loved ones at sea.

When you enter the handsome old place this summer take a sweeping glance of its stately rooms and staircase and imagine the Cabots of the long ago receiving and dining their friends within its walls. This is no little, old-fashioned cottage or shop filled with some picked-up relics. Rather it is a house of a wealthy Beverly merchant, built on the rigid colonial lines of his day. Ten cents will take you within, but don't think you will see cheap things.

The parlor, with its fine panels of wood against which hang many portraits of note, will first be noticed. Here are seen paintings of Robert Rantoul and Robert Rantoul, Jr.; Hannah Hill, founder of the first Sunday school, who lived from 1784 to 1838; Miss Joanna Quiner, 1796-1868, a self-taught artist in clay; Captain Joel Woodbury, 1796-1854; Capt. Robert Hale Ives, of Beverly, 1744-1773, a gift of the late Robt. Hale Bancroft; a portrait of Lucy Larcom, beside which hangs the original manuscript of "Hannah Binding Shoes," which Miss Lucy Baker had put in a neat little frame to hang beside Beverly's sweetest writer. An old Chickering piano and the Endicott Bible are also here.

Opposite the parlor was the dining-room of the Cabots, now the Marine room. When the Beverly bank had the house, an outside door was cut for an entrance on the side. This is still seen. Back of this room was the former kitchen, used as the director's room when the bank was installed. Nothing but simple wooden shutters were used at the windows. Evidently thieves were not feared. A vault, with thick granite walls, was, however, built down in the cellar under the bank room. Here the gold and silver was deposited. It is interesting to go down cellar to see the vault, if you are of a curious turn of mind.

The vault opening off the Marine room does not have much money or certificates lodged away in it, but holds money at the present day in another form. Here are jealously guarded the famous Nathan Dane letters, town records, and those of the Custom House from 1780 to 1800. Beverly had the distinction of being one of the five ports of free entry in the United States at that period. They were Portland, Beverly, Baltimore, Savannah and Charlestown. The Dane Letters are in four volumes and were recently purchased by the society and mounted in handsome covers. Nathan Dane's letters are now in his native town that has perpetuated his name in one of the streets.

In the former kitchen is a safe containing the records of the First Parish church, from 1717 to the present, and of the Sunday school, from 1822. These two adjoining rooms are now full of relics from overseas, brought back long ago by Beverly's sea-captains. Here are the pewter and rare old china dishes and curious knick-knacks cherished for years in some seafaring family, now given over to the society for safe keeping.

At the head of the stairs is a clock, made by a Beverly manufacturer long ago, that is still keeping the time. The upper hall has the paintings of the Revolution that were made to illustrate the historical works of the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge. These are loaned to the society. Also in the hall are specimens of the Victorian age of handiwork.

The Tablet room is the great room of the second floor. Here are Revolutionary and pre-Revolutionary tablets of great interest. The "Planters' Tablet" is thus inscribed: "The names of those who came over in the first emigration and were by the blessing of God the planters of Beverly, From the first grant, 1635, to the July is the time to buy Linens

You will be impressed with the truth of this statement when you see the values our linen section has in store for you. Equally as important as the advantage in price is the extent of selection offered—a point not always certain in these days of merchandise shortage.

The One Best Thing to Do Is to Buy Silks for Your Next Dress

And the reason for this is simple enough. The Government is commandeering wool for Our Boys "Over There." Silks are then the one fabric which most any woman can buy and wear, and if she will take time by the forelock and will purchase silk for her dress now, when costs are reasonably low, she can make up a dress for less than she anticipated. Another point, choice is probably better now than you will find for some time.

COOL White Skirts

Made of excellent materials, such as repp, gabardine, pique and other cotton fabrics that wash satisfactorily, some with panel fronts trimmed with pearl buttons and attractive pockets, others more fancy, while some are quite plain. If you want to be truly economical, you can find no better way than to have two or three of these skirts in your summer wardrobe.

MAGNOLIA, MASS.

Accommodates 750

OPEN UNTIL LATE SEPTEMBER

MRS. WILLIAM H. SCUDDER has started a project in Magnolia which will be the centre of much attraction all along the Shore. This is the "al Piave," where light refreshments will be served for the benefit of Italian crippled soldiers, and is in the Magnolia Colonnade, next to the James McCutcheon & Co. shops. An Italian flag hangs out so that all may find it easily. Money made here will be sent to the workroom on Nomentana street, Rome, to E. Guarnieri. The Magnolia association for the cause is represented by Mrs. Scudder, as president, with an honorary president, Mrs. Gustavo di Rosa, wife of the Italian consul of Boston. Mrs. di Rosa was Maud Cupples Scudder, daughter of Mrs. Scudder. Another daughter, Mrs. Henry McRee, will also assist. Her husband, Capt. McRee, is in France, and she is with her mother. Miss Lois McGinley, of Manchester, is also one of the assistants. As the season progresses other North Shore girls will be asked to help out in the rush of trade that is sure to come.

Delicious little cakes, made by Mrs. Scudder and Mrs. di Rosa and Mrs. McRee themselves, are spread out on the white counter. With these will be served ice creams, sundæes, ginger ale, orangeade, grape juice, home-made candies and other dainties. Fudge is made in an electric dish by the counter. A special is on for each day for "al Piave."

The young women will serve from behind the counter in a big, white Red Cross apron and regulation head covering on which will be displayed the Italian colors, and a tiny Italian flag and American flag.

The room has Italian colors, red, white and green, used in simple wall decorations; also two immense Italian flags are hung up. The tables and comfortable chairs and dainty flowers have a pretty effect. It is suggested that customers help wait on themselves as "help" is short.

In one corner Mrs. di Rosa has an unique exhibit.

All this is being financed by the two officers mentioned. It will, no doubt, be a much sought refreshment place, at Magnolia. Italian cards and souvenirs are also for sale.

The room opened Monday and will be open each afternoon during the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Kilpatrick, of "Stonehurst," Magnolia, have their granddaughter, Miss Elizabeth Scudder, of St. Louis, with them for the summer. Miss Elizabeth's father, Charles Scudder, Jr., has been on for a short visit. Their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and

"THE SUBJECT OF DRESS is one of importance. Our garments are not a meaningless covering; they speak loudly for us or against us, not only to our friends, but to the most casual observer. They have the power to make us look conspicuous, absurd, undignified, and to magnify our physical imperfections. They have also the power to make us feel comfortable and at ease. The consciousness of a costume which is appropriate and becoming tends to lend added charm and grace to the figure and develop an ease of manner that enhances the individual charms. . . . Garments have also the power to caricature. A really well-dressed woman is never conspicuous. . . . It is woman's duty to be as beautiful as possible, and 'fine feathers make fine birds,' if the 'feathers' have been adapted to the lines, coloring, hair, and silhouette of the individual. The costume should be considered as a beautiful painting or work of art and much thought should be given to choosing wisely in order that this added beauty may be given to friends and the world. Every girl has an individual style that should be studied and carefully developed."

NAHANT residents are busily engaged in war work and every day finds a large group of workers helping on the various quotas.

At the present time the Red Cross branch is idle, for the quotas of gauze are not coming in very fast, so knitting is being done in the homes. Mrs. Fred A. Wilson, of Valley road, Nahant, is the chairman, and the Nahant branch is meeting in the old Town hall. It is expected in a few days to have some material and then work will progress rapidly.

The Nahant branch of the French Wounded is one of the largest summer branches in the country and meets every day except Saturday, in the old Town hall, and 175 or more subscribers are registered. Many of these work at the rooms, while others contribute money to the cause. Miss Rosamond Fay, of Boston and Nahant, is chairman of the work. This branch has been open since June 1 and will continue in session until October 1.

A branch of this organization, called the Nahant club branch meets every Friday evening at the Nahant club, with Mrs. Louis Bacon, of Boston and Nahant, as chairman. At this meeting the men take a prominent part in the surgical dressings work, being eager to do their share.

There are not many war gardens to be seen in Nahant, for there really is not much extra space, but any open space which is to be found, there will be seen the American flag flying over a goodly crop. Many of the townspeople have gardens up on the heights, for the lower section of the town has practically no room.

The Light Ship tea room on Nahant street is one of the cool, comfortable places to spend a quiet hour and is in charge of Miss Margaret Dwight, of Boston, who is summering on Cliff street. The tea room this season is being run for the benefit of the Red Cross and a good season is anticipated, for it has been one of the popular places at Nahant ever since its opening. The society girls who are spending the summer at Nahant are much interested in the progress of the work and every day a group of them serve as waitresses, a group of older girls assisted by some of the younger set, taking their turns throughout the week. The list includes Misses Lena Turnbull, Dorothy Thorndike, Dolly Codman, Mary Sigourney and Madeline Beals, while the younger girls are Misses Harriet Boyden, Mabel E. Holden and Ellen Lovering. In addition to the teas and lunches, war candies are sold and Dennison House embroideries and art trays by Miss Christine Willett, who lives in Jamaica Plain.

The new home of Miss Charlotte H. Guild has been completed and is one of the fine additions to Maolis st., which overlooks the Lynn-Swampscott shore. Miss Guild spent last summer in a cottage on Apple Lane, but this year is able to occupy her new home. The house, of modified colonial type, is from the plans of Little & Browne, the Boston architects, and it was built by J. T. Wilson & Son, Inc., of Nahant.

The J. Harleston Parker cottage on Nahant road, formerly the Dabney place, has had an extension made on the second story to provide an additional chamber and on the third floor to allow for an extra maid's room.

A handsome new residence, the only new one this season, is being erected on Nahant street, for the Thomas Motley's, of Boston, who are at Spouting Horn this season. The house is quite large, made of wood, with a colonial effect, and before winter sets in, the exterior will be pretty well completed.

St. Thomas' church grounds at Nahant will be the scene of a garden fête, July 27, when a pretty entertainment is being arranged to take place on the parish grounds.

NAHANT.—One of the gold stars in Nahant's service flag is for Mortimer Robbins, son of Mrs. Dana A. Sanborn. He was killed last fall in active service in the Canadian army. Mr. and Mrs. Sanborn, who make their winter home in Lynn, are at their summer residence, Ocean street, Nahant, where Mrs. Sanborn is actively engaged in war work.

Miss Geraldine Lawrence, the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence, of Groton, who are spending the summer at the Abbott Lawrence cottage, Nahant road, Nahant, has returned from a visit with friends in Stockbridge.

Mrs. Francis S. Parker, of Commonwealth ave., Boston, who is summering in the Dr. Morton Prince cottage at Nahant, has as her guests, her daughter-in-law, Mrs. William A. Parker, whose husband is in the service, and Mr. and Mrs. John S. Parker, of Gloucester street, Boston, who have come up from their summer home at Bedford, to spend this season with Mrs. Parker.

Mrs. John Lavelle, of Marlboro street, Boston, and her daughters, are among the active members of the Nahant summer colony, being especially interested in war affairs, as Mrs. Lavelle's son, John, is a lieutenant in the Royal Flying Corps. Miss Ellen Tufts, his fiancé, is visiting Mrs. Lavelle.

Mrs. Boylston Beal and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Beal, of Boston, who have been prominent in war work and have given their services both in this country and abroad, are spending the remainder of the summer as the guests of Mrs. James Beal at Lawncliff, Nahant.

The Hotel Tudor at Nahant is quite full of guests and registered this week are Mrs. M. A. Johnson, of Syracuse, Miss Nancy J. Russell, of Cleveland, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Holt, of Hartford, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Bradlee and sons, of Boston, Professor K. H. Davis and J. J. Sheahan, of Princeton.

Water sports engross the young people and not a day passes but a large group of the younger boys and girls are swimming in the pool off the end of Nahant. They have little canvass canoes and several rubber mattresses, which make ideal sport for the swimmers who jump in and out, and dive off the mattresses without any thought of danger. The latter part of the morning finds the little beach full of bathers who come down to the sea.

The Nahant club, on Tuesday, was the scene of a talk on "Current Events," with Mrs. James T. Beal as hostess. These talks are to be continued every Tuesday at three o'clock and a large number of the summer colonists are attending.

The patriotic forum has reached Nahant and it is being conducted in the Town hall at intervals. Robert Roland, of Nahant, who has recently returned from the front, gave an outline of his experiences, at the last meeting, and Leslie W. Sprague spoke on the plain issues of the war.

MILITARY AND NAVAL MEN at Nahant are rejoicing over the arrival of the summer residents, for after a rather dull winter, they are now receiving quite a good deal of attention. In the Town hall, Thursday, a military ball was given for them, and society turned out to give the men a good time. The Town hall was tastefully decorated with red, white and blue, and every man present was in uniform, with the girls dressed in their prettiest.

Mrs. Lavelle had the affair in her charge and she was assisted by Mrs. Orlandini, Mrs. Rodman Fay, Mrs. Richard Fay, Mrs. John Lawrence and Mrs. Dana A. Sanborn. A group of young ladies assisted, including Misses Ellen Tufts, Frances Clarke, Lena Turnbull, Dolly Codman, Betty Beal and Christianna Councilman.

Frederick McQuesten and Mrs. McQuesten, of "Questenmere," Marblehead Neck, have gone on a motor trip to the Thousand Islands.

Mrs. Howard Hovey, of Montclair, N. J., has leased the Valentine cottage at Marblehead Neck for the summer. She has her four sons with her, all of whom are working in the Burgess plant in the town of Marblehead.

Derby Weston, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Weston, of Winchester, who are at their cottage, Marblehead Neck, has arrived home from England, where he has been in the British Forestry service.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Morrison, of Arlington, have had visiting them, Mrs. Morrison's mother, at the Rhoades cottage which they recently purchased. The family left this week for a trip to New York, returning soon for the remainder of the season at this delightful location.

Mrs. J. J. Sutton, of New York, and her two daughters arrived this week at the Sea Gull for the remainder of the season.

Miss Harriet E. Clarke, of "Gray Rocks," Marblehead Neck, is busily engaged in Red Cross work and early and late finds her knitting at sweaters and socks for the soldiers. Her mother, who is over 90 years of age, also knits for the soldiers.

Rev. Howard E. R. Weir, rector of the Grace church, Salem, has been visiting Salem friends who are summering at the Neck.

Paul Crocker, who is summering on Ocean avenue, Marblehead Neck, had a party of guests at his home, Tuesday evening.

The summer residents at Marblehead Neck had great excitement Tuesday, when a small whale was discovered just off the Church, spouting in great shape. Everyone hurried to the ocean side of the Neck and obtained a good view of the fish, which sported about in the water, nearly the whole morning. This is the first one to be seen in this vicinity this year.

The first musicale evening of the Eastern Yacht club season was in order Thursday, and it was a most successful affair. Tea was served from four to six o'clock and a musical program was furnished. Dinner was served at seven o'clock and during the evening dancing was enjoyed. This afternoon-tea program is meeting with popular favor.

Friday night the usual dinner dance was in order at the Corinthian Yacht club, but a smaller number of dancers were in evidence than in other years.

Major Kenneth Marlatt, of the Canadian Recruiting Mission, at Boston, who spent the week-end at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, is spending the next two weeks at the Eastern Yacht club, Marblehead Neck.

P. H. Heinde and Mrs. Heinde, of Chicago, spent the week-end at Marblehead Neck.

IN the race of the Eastern Yacht club, Saturday, the boats were sent over an entirely new course by the yachtsmen of this port, Volunteer Rock buoy being the turning mark. Sailing it the first time there was a mixup. The two "P" sloops and the Timandra of Class R sailed the course in the opposite direction from that intended, going to Eagle island bar buoy first, instead of out around the point and down the Neck shore to Volunteer Rock buoy.

In all, twenty-six sailing craft took part in the sport, the majority being of the smaller boats. The yachts had a light northeasterly breeze to start with, increasing slightly in strength, and worked much farther to the eastward before the racing was finished.

The winners were: Class P, Hayseed IV; Class R, Beta; E. Y. C. 15-foot class, Eagle; Pleon Y. C. class, Snail III; 12-foot catboats, Jump; Beachcomber Dorics, No. 9, B. S. Tutt.

After the regular racing, the two E. Y. C. 15-footers had a special race over a short course, the Eagle beating the Nutmeg.

KING UPTON's fine steam yacht, the Cachalot, is now in the local harbor with six men on board in training for the U. S. Shipping Board, they including three seamen, two firemen and one cook's apprentice. This squad will remain about a month on this boat and will then be succeeded by another.

This training is done at the suggestion of Henry Howard, director of the recruiting for the U. S. Shipping Board, made before the members of the Eastern Yacht club last spring, he suggesting that yacht owners put their boats into commission so as to help train recruits for the new mercantile marine.

While this board has some ten or more steamers in the training service, there is more chance for actual practice on a smaller boat than on a larger one and also more opportunity to become acclimated to the sea and thus overcome seasickness.

That this is a pretty expensive thing for the yacht owners is seen from the fact that they pay these men the same wages as the government, feed and lodge them, so that this auxiliary training costs the government nothing.

Some of the men on the Cachalot had never seen salt water until they went on board this boat, they hailing from Oklahoma, Michigan and North Carolina. It is anticipated that this yacht will remain off the New England coast all summer, engaged in this work so that the recruits may have thorough training. Mr. Upton's patriotism is put to a pretty good test in this way, but he is delighted to help and do his "bit."

He knoweth all our wants;
And what we blindly ask of Him
His love withholds or grants.*

EASTERN POINT, GLOUCESTER.—There is much interest being taken in the presentation of three plays, "Land of the Heart's Desire," "Two Crooks and a Lady," and "Neighbors," the initial performances of the season, of the Community Theatre association, at the Playhouse-on-the-Moors, Ledge road, Eastern Point, on the evenings of July 25 and 26 and the afternoon of July 27. The parts will be taken by local talent and summer residents and the proceeds of the entertainments will be given to war relief.

The work of the Glalery-on-the-Moors, for the Red Cross, the making of bandages and sewing for the French Wounded, is progressing finely at the Gloucester Yacht club, Rocky Neck, where the work was transferred owing to the Gallery being taken over for plays and musicals for the benefit of war relief.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Albert Davis, of Whittier Hill, Amesbury, came down over the road in their Pierce-Arrow car, on Tuesday, being the guests of Miss Emma Eastwick and Miss Angele G. Davis, the latter a niece of Mr. Davis, at "Hillcrest House," the Eastwick cottage, Mt. Pleasant avenue heights. Mr. and Mrs. Davis entertained a party at dinner at the Tavern in Gloucester, on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Horace Tinker, of New York, has taken a lease of the O'Neil colonial house, on East Main street, East Gloucester, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Hall, of Boston, have taken occupancy of their beautiful, large estate, "Stone-acre, Eastern Point, near the site of the burned Colonial Arms hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeffries Wyman and family, of Wellesley Hills, are located at one of the Wonson cottages, Eastern Point, which has been their custom for a great many years.

Frank Ferdinand, of Boston, has purchased the fine Rotan estate at Grape Vine Cove. Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand are now located at this delightful spot overlooking the bay, for the season. They are members of the Bass Rocks Golf club. Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Rotan, of Waco, Texas, who built the house at Grape Vine Cove, were former summer residents of Bass Rocks, eighteen years ago, when they erected a beautiful house now the property of Charles Scott, Jr., of Philadelphia. Owing to advancing years, Mr. and Mrs. Rotan will not come so far north. Their sons are in the war. Their daughter, Mrs. Thorndike Howe, of Lawrence, is in a cottage adjoining her parents' estate at Grape Vine Cove.

Miss Edith Weld, of Brookline, has opened her attractive stucco house, "Nestonridge," near the Eastern Point golf clubhouse, for the season.

Mrs. John Clay gave an attractive dinner party to fourteen guests at her Eastern Point summer residence, "Finisterre," last Friday night.

The Wednesday afternoons being held by Mrs. Ralph H. Booth, of Detroit, from four till 6 o'clock, at her pleasant summer home, on Atlantic road, Bass Rocks, are proving very enjoyable for the many guests. Mrs. Booth is entertaining from time to time. This week, Mrs. Booth entertained Mr. and Mrs. John Clay, of Chicago and Eastern Point, with Mrs. Stewart, who is the house guest of the Clays, from Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Green, of Washington and Magnolia; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith, of Detroit and Magnolia; Mr. and Mrs. William E. Atwood, of Eastern Point; Mrs. Dupré, of Worcester and Bass Rocks; Miss Aileen McDonald, of Detroit. Miss Taylor, of Bass Rocks, who returned from Europe last November, was a guest of interest. Tea was served. At the Wednesday afternoon of last week, Mrs. Clark Salmon was an interesting guest, she having been over across seas five times since war was declared.

PIGEON COVE.—The Hotel Edward at Pigeon Cove has a great many prominent guests registered for the season, and several luncheon and dinner parties have been held during the past week. Miss Mary F. Hayware, of Boston, gave a tea recently at the Edward, the guests being Evelyn B. Madden, of Taiping, Federated Malay States; Mrs. Sarah A. Blake, of Boston, Mrs. G. A. Aitken, of Orange, N. J.

Mrs. T. Harrison Garrett, of Baltimore, a summer resident at Land's End, Rockport, gave a luncheon at the Edward, the guests being Mrs. Hollins McKim and Miss Price, of Baltimore.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Wigton have motored here from Philadelphia, for a short stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Daboll and Mrs. Drayton, of Philadelphia, are at the Edward for a sojourn.

Mr. and Mrs. Alban Evaenson, of Philadelphia, are spending several days at the Edward, Pigeon Cove.

Mrs. E. R. Moseley, of Highhurst Studio, Westfield, has arrived at Pigeon Cove for the season and has opened her attractive gift shop, "The Lantern Shop," on Green ave., near Hotel Edward. This unique shop will be more attractive than ever, the opening to be this Saturday.

The Ocean View hotel has been opened by George P. Chick, the real estate agent, and the hostelry at Pigeon Cove is having a very successful season.

ROCKPORT.—Right Rev. James DeWolf Perry, D. D., bishop of the Episcopal diocese, of Rhode Island, an annual summer resident of Land's End, Rockport, will leave soon for France. Bishop Perry, who is chairman of the executive committee of the Episcopal War Commission, will substitute for Right Rev. John Newton McCormick, bishop of Western Michigan, who has just returned from France, on a brief furlough for recuperation and to attend to diocesan duties.

Mme. Botchkarova, commander of Russia's far-heralded "Battalion of Death," takes a pessimistic view of the warrior attributes of her sex. "Women will never make soldiers," she says. "They are too undisciplined. They cannot be organized. And they show the white feather."

Unflattering as it is, the Russian woman commander's disparagement of her sex as unmilitary, is no doubt true. Yet women have no occasion to feel ashamed on that account. Their record of war service is glorious enough. Fighting is not their mission, and no man desires it to be. But in all the remedial work of war and in whole-hearted devotion to the cause for which their sons and brothers and husbands are fighting they have shown a heroism and self-sacrifice unmatched in the history of warfare.—New York World.

CAPE ANN.—Activities in all the colonies of the Cape, in a social and business way, have started in earnest. There are many cottages which are not yet occupied, but the hotels are filling rapidly now and interest in war relief work increases. In every colony there is something going on for the pleasure of the people, as well as for the good cause for which these attractions are being held. Rehearsals are going along nicely for the three plays to be presented by the Community Theatre association at the Playhouse-on-the-Moors, East Gloucester, July 25, 26 and 27 and the Greek Pageant on August 9, for the benefit of war relief. Practically all fees taken at the various golf tournaments at the Bass Rocks and Rockport Country clubs, are given to the Red Cross and war relief funds. The little tea house at Good Harbor Beach, Bass Rocks, has opened for patronage each day, the proceeds to be given to the Red Cross. Women are working constantly, sewing, knitting and making bandages. It isn't labor for our patriotic women—it is pleasant pastime and a joy to be of some value towards winning a victory in this great world war—a victory for true democracy, liberty and justice. Every effort put into pleasure now-a-days makes that pleasure more complete, because it is imbued with patriotism. And the younger generation is alert and eager to do its part—for instance the charming little Persian play, given last week and repeated the present week, by children of the Annisquam colony. Hundreds of young folk are giving of their time in rehearsing for the Greek Pageant to be presented in East Gloucester. Then again, it is the young women of the late teens and twenties, who are the promoters of the Red Cross tea cottage at Bass Rocks.

Much interest is being taken in the Judith Sargent tea house, located on old Middle street, Gloucester. The house is that familiarly known as the Sargent-Murray-Gilman House, or the Revolutionary House, which has been a point of interest for summer visitors for a great many years. The builders of the house was the grandfather of John Singer Sargent, the noted American artist, who, it is said, will contribute some paintings for a special room in the house, when it is restored and furnished appropriately. The wonderful hand-carved staircase is considered one of the finest pieces of colonial work in the country. All kinds of money has been offered for its removal, as a part of interior work for private homes. There are now some pieces of colonial furniture in the house, loaned by individuals. The rooms of the lower floor are attractively arranged for teas, card parties and luncheons. One room, particularly, has soft gray mission furniture, the tables, each containing a dainty bouquet of flowers and the window draperies of harmonizing cretonne, gives an effect very pleasing to the eye of the artistic. The reception room of the old house, on the other side of the spacious hall, with its tone of yellow and white woodwork, contains a large round table, suitable for a good-sized luncheon party. The open fireplaces are also attractions. Mrs. Addison P. Burnham is the matron in charge. The hours are from 11 a. m. till 6 p. m. The proceeds of the undertaking of the tea house will be devoted to the Sargent-Murray-Gilman fund and lovers of antiquity, from all along the North Shore, will undoubtedly patronize this tea room. The house has recently been bought by the Universalist General Convention and the trustees who will eventually hold the property, will represent members of the Sargent family, the Harvard Alumni, the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, and various bodies of Universalists. The house is of particular interest to Universalists, because John Murray, the founder of the Universalist church (the first being in Gloucester), lived here.

BASS ROCKS.—

There is considerable activity at the Bass Rocks Golf club. On Tuesday night, a large bridge tournament was held for the benefit of the Gloucester branch of the American Red Cross. On Monday afternoon, Mrs. Lawrence Brown entertained friends to two tables of bridge and tea, at the clubhouse. Miss Harrie Ellis, also gave a tea at the clubhouse on Monday afternoon.

The Woman's tournament on July 9, at the Bass Rocks links, was won by Miss Kate Ellis, gross score 58, net score 54. The fees, amounting to $20.27, were turned in to the Red Cross fund, Bass Rocks unit. In the four-day tournament, from the 10th to the 14th inclusive, the match play was won by Dr. W. Godell, who beat his competitor, J. S. Sykes.

On Tuesday, many players entered the "five cents a hole against bogie."

The opening of the little, new tea house, with its thatched roof, on Tuesday afternoon, attracted a great deal of attention in the Bass Rocks colony. Several young ladies of the colony, assisted by Mrs. Henry Souther, are the promoters. The little tea house is situated near the bathing beach. The furnishings are in pale blue and white, the tables and chairs being blue. The spot selected for this undertaking for the American Red Cross benefit, is an admirable one, overlooking the ocean and stretch of sand. It is likely that every day, patrons will visit this unique place to have a pleasant chat over the tea cups, or to partake of the dainties which may be ordered and set before them. It is for a very worthy cause and the opening days are certainly busy ones.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Mundy, of Montclair, N. J., have taken the Dr. Ayer cottage on Atlantic road, for the season. They have three lovely children.

The Farnsworths, of Memphis, Tenn., will arrive at their estate, corner of Little Good Harbor and Nautilus roads, near the beach, the last of the month. Sidney Farnsworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Farnsworth, is in France, with the American forces, and a cousin, Marcus Farnsworth is also "over across."

A musical event of great interest, the present week, was the piano recital given at the Moorland casino on Thursday evening, at 8.30 o'clock, by Aline van Barentzen, the noted young pianist, for the benefit of the American Red Cross. The young artist, of only 21 years, ranks high in the musical world, her playing being excelled, perhaps, by the far-famed Paderewski. Aline van Barentzen played at the Bass Rocks club one evening last season, for a benefit, when she was entertained by Mrs. Winthrop Sargent, at the latter's estate on Nautilus road, Bass Rocks. A large and representative audience enjoyed a splendid program, Thursday evening. Mrs. Winthrop Sargent was instrumental in securing Aline van Barentzen to play at Bass Rocks, the young artist, who is a friend of Mrs. Sargent, playing at Mrs. Cabot's at Beverly Farms, on Friday of this week, for a benefit. Mrs. William B. Campbell, who is president of the Bass Rocks unit of the Gloucester branch, American Red Cross, and Mrs. Winthrop Sargent, were the committee which arranged a rare musical treat for this section of the North Shore and the proceeds were devoted to the Bass Rocks unit fund for the Red Cross.

directed the laying of the mines in Boston harbor during the Spanish-American War, is spending the summer at the Thorwald. His wife, and son, Dr. Wright, of Boston, are with him.

Editor Rideing, of The Youth's Companion, and Mrs. Rideing, of Boston, are stopping at Hotel Thorwald, Bass Rocks. Mr. Rideing is in ill health and it is hoped that the fine air and environment of this locality will improve his condition.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Cooper, of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, have been delayed in their coming to their Bass Rocks estate, owing to Mr. Cooper receiving a stroke of paralysis some time ago. They will arrive here, however, the first of August. Miss Louise Cooper and Charles G. Cooper, Jr., are now at Bass Rocks.

The Careys, of Baltimore, Md., are occupying one of the Conant cottages on Beach road, Bass Rocks, this season.

Mrs. Henry Carter, of New York, has arrived at her cottage on Atlantic road, Bass Rocks. She has her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Timms, with her, as usual.

The Hotel Thorwald is having a very successful season, about 150 guests now being registered permanently. The regular weekly dances are being held on Tuesday and Friday nights, Sewall's orchestra, the hotel musicians, rendering music regularly.

The Thom family, of Baltimore, Md., is occupying the small cottage of Dr. Jarvie, located on Atlantic road, beyond the Thorwald, again this season.

Detroit people who are annual guests at the Thorwald again domiciled at this select resort, are Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Jenks and daughter, G. A. Worden and son.

Prof. William G. McGuckin, retired instructor of ancient history in New York City college, is spending his annual vacation at the Hotel Thorwald, Bass Rocks. Benjamin McGuckin, is in the U. S. service in France, and the wife and little son of the former, are spending the season with Mrs. E. Bradley Currier, of Page street, Bass Rocks.

EAST GLOUCESTER.—

Mr. and Mrs. John Clay, of "Finisterre," Eastern Point, have the latter's sister, Mrs. J. D. Stuart, and Mrs. Dorothy Crosby, of Chicago, with them at present. This week, their son, John, Jr., entertained his young friends with a dinner-dance at his home. "Finisterre" is one of the most attractive places on the Point. It is situated at the extreme end next to the lighthouse.

Mrs. Newbold Le Roy Edgar, of New York, who has been spending a few weeks in Washington, will arrive next week in Gloucester for the remainder of the summer.

ANNISQUAM.—A number of children of the Annisquam summer colony presented a one-act Persian play, "Ahmed, the Cobbler," in Village hall, on Friday afternoon and evening, for the benefit of the French Wounded. There was a hearty response on the part of the cottagers and hotel guests and a neat sum will be realized. The play was repeated. Esther Williams took the part of "Ahmed," the cobbler; Phyllis Richardson, "Sittari," his mother; Suzanne Richardson, "Nazami," Shah of Persia; Barbara Mayer, "Sadi," his servant; Charlotte Whiting, "Magara," daughter of the shah; Emily Laurence Coyle, attendant to Magara; Hollis French, high executioner; Edward Coyle, Alexander McNutt, Brantz Mayer, Bobby Booth and Donald Meiklejohn, the "Five Brothers"; Rue French, Betty Bradley, Bettina Booth, Edward Coyle and Kenneth Meiklejohn, "Townspeople."

The play, "For One Night Only," was presented on Thursday and Friday evening, of this week, by amateur talent, at Village hall, and the proceeds were for the benefit of the Universalist church, of Annisquam.

Eugene Dunton, of Goshen, N. Y., is located at the Brundage cottage, on River road, for the season.

Rev. Percy G. Kemmerer and family, of Providence, R. I., are occupying the Houghton cottage on Chester square.

Mrs. Whitman Ware and Miss Effie Whitman, of Boston, are occupying a cottage at Annisquam, for the season.

William Stone Booth, of Cambridge, with his family, is located in the summer home of Roger W. Babson, of Wellesley, which commands a pleasant view of Annisquam.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Jelly, of Salem, have arrived in Annisquam, for the summer, occupying their cottage, on Norwood Heights.

Annisquam exceeded the amount, as her quota, in the recent campaign for the selling of Thrift Stamps, $5000 of these certificates being sold. Miss Olga Lingard, of "The Pines," had charge of the subscriptions and two of her hustling representatives for selling were Sergt. Brantz Mayer and Sergt. Peggy Norton. Sergt. Mayer, who is the grand-son of the late Prof. Alfred G. Mayer is at present spending the summer with his mother at the Hyatt cottage, "Seven Acres," Annisquam. He is in the junior militia at Princeton university. Miss Norton is the daughter of Professor and Mrs. Charles L. Norton, of Chestnut street, Boston, summer residents of the Annisquam colony. Miss Norton is a sergeant in the military company of a private school in Boston.

The Hyatt summer home, "Seven Acres," on Hyatt's Point, Annisquam, has been opened for the season. Mrs. Alpheus Hyatt and her two daughters, Mrs. Alfred G. Mayer and Miss Anna Vaughn Hyatt, the latter the noted sculptor, of New York, are located at the cottage for the season. The family has been coming to Annisquam for a great many years.

Philip A. Davis, of Concord, has taken a lease of the Artist Hardwick cottage, on River road, Annisquam, for the season. The Davis family will arrive the first of August to stay into September.

Fisher H. Nesmith and family, of Cambridge, have arrived at the Ames cottage, at Bay View, for the remainder of the season.

At the tea, held last Saturday at the Annisquam Yacht club, Mrs. Henry Hooper poured; Mrs. Samuel Gordon and Mrs. William Rice served toast. At the dance, held in the evening, Mrs. Walter O. Adams and Mrs. Henry E. Worcester, were the matrons.

Community sings are being held in the Annisquam colony and the studio of Miss Constance Rulison is being used for this purpose.

ROCKPORT.—The Turk's Head Inn, after its serious midnight fire on Thursday, at Land's End, will resume its business. The fire was confined to the middle section of the house and repairs are being made immediately. The fire will not interfere with the business of the house, to any great degree. The blaze started about 12.15 o'clock and with the high wind blowing at the time, it seemed that the Land's End hostelry was doomed. The splendid work of the Rockport fire department and especially the Pigeon Cove motor apparatus, saved the building. Manager Brackett was warm in his praises for the work of the department and the assistance of his employees, who led a line of hose from the hydrant at the front of the hotel. There were about fifty guests stopping at the Inn and all left the building, in order.

Rockport Country club entertained some twenty-five members of the Old Newburyport Golf club last Saturday afternoon and evening. In the party was also included several ladies. Rockport was the winner in the afternoon golf matches, taking 11 out of 15. This is the Country club's second win, the first one being on the Newburyport links a few weeks ago. The visitors were entertained at luncheon after the golf and the hours directly following the game were most pleasantly spent in the beautiful, spacious dining-room of the club. An excellent buffet lunch was served. In the evening dancing was enjoyed. Charles F. Adams, chairman of the golf committee, has charge of the arrangements for the matches, while the house committee, consisting of Fred Morgan, Frederick H. Tarr and Charles Evans had charge of the lunch and entertainment. They were assisted by a number of the ladies of the club. The winners of the golf matches were Hotchkiss, Evans, McKenzie, York, Pratt, Marshall, Tarr, Quimby, Harvey and Mills, for Rockport, and Pearson, Toppan, Stowell and Gray, for Newburyport.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan, of Brookline, are occupying their Marmion Way cottage, Rockport.

Mr. and Mrs. George Sweetser, of Wellesley Hills, have joined the Marmion Way cottage colony, Rockport, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Dillaway, Jr., of Melrose, have recently arrived at their cottage, Marmion Way, Rockport. The Dillaways came later than usual. They are pioneer summer residents of this picturesque section of Cape Ann. Mr. Dillaway is recognized as the champion tautaug fisherman of the Cape.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Ruston and family, of Medford, are annual Marmion Way cottage residents, located here for the season.

CAPE ANN IS NOT DOWNHEARTED

buy fares brought in by the long-run schooners. Their best chance is with the fish that are taken from the weirs and traps along shore; for with quick work in modern boats they can have the fish not more than three or four hours out of water. Here at Rockport all the conditions are right. The skilled fishermen with power boats are here; the traps are numerous and near at hand; the fish—mackerel, "Old England" hake, butterfish and all the rest—are abundant. Last summer the fishermen brought in their boats burdened to the gunwale with beautiful whiting—and for lack of the facilities that Mr. Perkins plant will give, carted them to a rendering establishment to be handled as so much dead horse. The Rockport boys speak of Mr. Perkins as "the guy with the kazuma." Their fathers add—"and with the public spirit."

Another industry that is keeping Rockport cheerful, fog or no fog, war or no war, is her long-established quarrying of granite. Of course, the country through, ordinary building has been postponed. Public works have been deferred or cut to the lowest figure. But even so, Rockport quarrymen are reasonably busy. And they do not keep carpenters' hours. Their knock-off whistles for the week start the echoes at 4 p. m., Saturday.

No self-respecting summer visitor should leave town before he has learned the secret of handling this mottled granite. At first sight, and second, a block of it looks as uniform as a tapioca pudding. But it has a grain of its own. In certain planes it will split true as a Welsh slate; in others it will only "tear" or run. And this very grain is manifold—there is one kind of grain in the "rift," another in the "lift," and still another in the "cut-off." Just because the grain of Rockport granite minds its own laws, it has found a profitable market from Cape Ann to Key West and beyond. If Rockport were to send a piper or an Orpheus all along shore through Salem and Boston, New York, Norfolk, New Orleans, the West Indies and even beyond the line, calling back her granite to its native beds, you would see miles of central streets stripped of their pavements and curbs, you would see forts and breakwaters, dry docks, courthouses, postoffices, a thousand buildings of all sorts and sizes, vanishing northward at the sound of the magic notes.

In this patient business with hard stone lies another reason why the whole commonwealth holds Rockport in respect. Most of our towns have earned praise for growing by their natural advantages. But Rockport has grown by turning to good account the very rock that spoils her farms, her woods and her pastures. She has had her disappointments to be sure. She sees her isinglass factories running but a few weeks of the year, and that in winter. She has seen quarry companies fail, only to be picked up and reorganized. She asked the Federal government for a great breakwater that would make Sandy Bay one of the world's best harbors of refuge; and instead she received an artificial reef of broken granite, awash at low water, and a menace to her shipping. But the old town has "carried on."

If there are really sermons in stones, as Shakespeare hints, then the sound word of counsel in Rockport granite is—"Capitalize your handicaps."

COPLEY THEATRE, BOSTON

The eleventh week of Earl Derr Biggers' successful war comedy, "Inside the Lines," begins at the Copley theatre, Monday. It is proving itself the most popular of summer entertainments, and being the only play at present acted in Boston, it is drawing multitudes who are fond of that form of dramatic diversion. In writing "Inside the Lines," the dramatist sought not only to amuse the audience, but also to provide a series of romantic stage pictures of life at Gibraltar just after the outbreak of the war, when the place was thronged with American tourists, and the German spies were in the midst of their nefarious work. The most thrilling situations of the play come through the development of the scheme to blow up the British warships in the harbor, and through its thwarting by the British officers and the summary punishment of the German spies.

During the run of "Inside the Lines," soldiers and sailors in the service of the United States will be admitted to any performance at half price.

MILITARY WEDDING AT LOBLOLLY

Naomi Melissa Haskell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Haskell, and First Sergt. George Walter Gardner, of Gloucester, attached to the Fifth Pioneer Regiment, at Spartansburg, S. C., were united in marriage last Thursday evening at the famous Loblolly camp, owned by the bride's father, at Land's End. The place is noted over the North Shore for its fish dinners and has been visited by such distinguished men as ex-President Taft, John Hays Hammond and others.

Scores of townspeople and summer residents were present to witness the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. G. Edward Allyn, of the M. E. church, Gloucester. Wm. H. Moody, of Gloucester, was the best man, and Mrs. John Wickey (nee Bertha Snow), a cousin of the bride, whose husband is also in the service, was maid of honor. The unique annex of the café made in the shape of a boat, with a ship's wheel at the end, was decorated with the national colors and here the bride and groom took their positions. The night was ideal and as the couple faced the historic Thatcher's island twin lights, with a mellow summer moon contributing its radiance to the scene, the words of the minister, making the couple man and wife, under the beauty of the evening and the protection of the Stars and Stripes, lent a significance and solemnity to the ceremony to all who were privileged to witness it.

After the ceremony the couple took their places under a canopy made of a large American flag and received the guests.

Sergt. Gardner has left to resume his duties in the government service, and Mrs. Gardner will reside with her parents until the close of the war.

Mrs. Melville C. Poole and daughter, Eva, are enjoying a week at Asbury Grove, Hamilton.

Mrs. Arthur Victor Wilson and daughter are visiting Mrs. Wilbur B. Clark, at Assonet.

WILL RETURN TO CAPE ANN

Mr. and Mrs. J. Winthrop Thurston, who have resided in Topeka, Kansas, for over 40 years, are soon to return to Cape Ann, to spend the remainder of their days in their native place. Mr. Thurston has severed his connection with the National Bank, of which he has been president since its institution five years ago. He has been prominent in Topeka banking circles for nearly 40 years. Mrs. Thurston is a native of West Gloucester, and here Mr. and Mrs. Thurston will make their future home.

MAIN STREET SIDEWALK NEEDS THE STONECRUSHER

Main street from the corner of Beach street to Railroad avenue is a very much traveled locality and the piece of roadway which forms the hill is one of the best stretches in town, in fact the citizens are boastful of it. Up to a week or so ago, the sidewalk was in fair condition, too. But someone, by the authority of someone else or upon his own initiative, had the temerity to dump a mess of crushed stone on it. Now pedestrians who like to wear tennis shoes or footwear of the thin sole variety must walk in the street. Maybe the stonecrusher is to be used here. At any rate those who like to perambulate up and down Main street are unanimous in their opinion that at present the walk is in a mighty poor condition.

GETS CALL TO LARGER FIELD

Rev. James J. G. Tarr, Ph. D., a native of Rockport, who has been pastor of the Immanuel Congregational church, of Rial Side, Beverly, for the past four years, has been called to the Courtland street Congregational church, of Everett.

The church to which Rev. Mr. Tarr goes is entirely modern. The rooms on the main floor are so constructed that by the use of sliding doors, the large vestry can be used in connection with the main auditorium. On the lower floor is the boiler room, a fine kitchen connected with the banquet hall, and even a gymnasium. The church has Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts and a paid attendant to do church calling.

Everett has a population of about 40,000 and the field of endeavor is much larger.

REAL YANKEE LANGUAGE

A French soldier who came proudly up to an American in a certain headquarters town the other day asked:

"You spik French?"

"Nope," answered the American, "not yet."

The Frenchman smiled complacently.

"Aye spik Eengleesh," he said. The American grinned and the Frenchman looked about for some means to show his prowess in the foreign tongue. At that moment a French girl, very neat and trim in her peaked hat, long coat, and high laced boots, came along. The Frenchman jerked his head toward her, looked knowingly at the American, and said triumphantly: "Chicken."

The American roared.

"Shake," he said, extending his hand. "You don't speak English; you speak American."—London Opinion.

QUARRYMEN GET $3.80 A DAY

On July 1 the Quarry Workers' Union presented a written request to the Rockport Granite Co. for 50 cents per hour, an increase of 10 cents per hour for an eight-hour day.

On July 9 the directors of the company notified the men that they could not pay that price. They made the offer, however, that the men would be allowed to work nine hours per day for three or four months, with time-and-a-half, for the last hour, which will amount to $3.80 per day.

A number of the men were opposed to the offer. About 40 percent of the men loafed half of last week rather than accept the offer. At a joint meeting in the Finn hall in Rockport, however, on Sunday afternoon, the Quarry Workers' Union decided that all the men return to work on Monday. This they have done, and they are working the extra hour. The men are now getting the highest wages ever paid to Cape Ann quarry workers.

GIVEN SURPRISE

Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Mattson, who recently moved here from Bay View, having purchased the Sophronia Lowe house, Broadway, were given a surprise by their friends Saturday evening, and were the recipients of several fine presents, including a mahogany library table and flower vase of colonial style. The party comprising friends from all round the Cape, met at the corner of Railroad ave., and Main street, and proceeded to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mattson. The house proving inadequate to accommodate the throng of friends, the committee of arrangements proposed going to Spiran hall, only a few yards distant, and this was done.

The whole affair was ably managed and was greatly enjoyed. The committee consisted of Mrs. Albert Sellman, Mrs. Andrew Johnson, Mrs. Andrew Thorgren, Miss Bertha Lilja, Miss Ethel Lilja.

EDITORIAL

THE WOMEN'S MUNICIPAL LEAGUE, of Boston, has won national fame for the efficient way in which it has met the needs of Boston in its chosen field of service. Its varied departments have afforded opportunity for valuable service for many people of ability and enthusiasm and with surprising results. The authorities have welcomed the coöperation of the organization and in appreciation of the good work which they have done and are doing, have always been quick to further the work of the organization, both by laws and moral support. The war, however, has presented problems at once acute and commanding, but the League, with such a broad organization, was ready for the situation which has arisen. In fact, the League had anticipated the very departments of work which the national government is now emphasizing so much in these days. It is fortunate that Boston had such an organization, working efficiently, along the lines of Americanization, food values education and good housing. The financial obligation of the war have made it imperative for the League to intensify its work and so the decks have been cleared and the departments which are directly in line with the demands of the government are being maintained economically, with the added impetus which the war situation impels. The world war will be won by food as well as by cannon and ships, and everything that can be done to conserve food and educate the people to the values and importance of varied foods should be done. Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, of our Shore, is the efficient chairman of this important war food department and under her leadership success should be assured. The unique affair arranged for this month under the auspices of her department should have the loyal support of every one on the North Shore, those who live here permanently and those who come for the summer. Nothing should be left undone that will help solve the food problems of the hour. The war food fund "Catch All" sale deserves the loyal support of everyone. Here is an opportunity for practical coöperation in an important war work.

IN WHO'S WHO ALONG THE NORTH SHORE, this year, the publishers print a Roll of Honor. This Roll contains the names of members of North Shore families, who are in the army, navy or Red Cross service. It makes an interesting study, indeed. Scattered all over the world they are—in the air, on the land, on the ocean, and under the oceans. The equitable system adopted by General Crowder for the selective draft, perhaps makes it impossible to claim much credit for such a full representation of these "sons of the rich." But it is surprising to count up the number who entered enlistment voluntarily long before the imminence of the draft made enlistment a matter of policy or anticipation. It is refreshing, inspiring, to see such a showing of the finest families in our land, all entered upon the great movement for world democracy which is now swaying the universe.

THE ENTHUSIASM AND UNANIMITY with which Bastille Day was celebrated by Americans in America and in France ought to cheer the heart of every Frenchman. It should go a long way toward cementing the ties which already bind the peoples of these two republics. France paid to America a great tribute upon the Fourth of July and now America has reciprocated the courtesy by the observation of Bastille Day. The cause of freedom, righteousness and liberty must be preserved and America must in every way sustain, inspire and pray for the success of the allies. Of France may it be said:

*God bless our Ally's stand,
For truth and native land,
Our Ally true;
While cruel battles roar,
Guard her on sea and shore,
Honored evermore—
Our Ally true.*

THE TWO SUMMER MONTHS and early September presents problems of municipal cleanliness which are trying to those who are in authority. The general tidiness of the North Shore towns in early spring is commendable, but when summer season opens, and through traffic increases, the problem of street cleaning presents itself. The unfortunate part of the whole problem is that the offenders are beyond the influence of personal persuasion or compulsion because the picnic parties are transients and the throwing of waste by one party by the side of the road does not appear to be particularly heinous, nor is it! But when picnic parties go through, and day after day litter is thrown from the cars to the side of the road the problem becomes a difficult one. Picnic parties will come and with them comes the waste and litter. The only thing left to do is to arouse a public spirit within the North Shore towns, which in no small degree already exists, and overcome the failings of the itinerants, by the careful collection of the waste. In Magnolia there has always been a strong spirit of town cleanliness. The town authorities of Manchester have always been keen to meet the problems that arise. In Beverly Farms the municipal authorities have coöperated willingly. The Improvement society has put out waste barrels for collections and this year, as in other years, are likely to place a man on the road one or two days a week with a vehicle to clean up waste paper. It is apparent that despite the strong desire of the residents of the three towns to keep the streets clean that there is no way to overcome the waste thrown from passing automobiles. All that can be done is to provide for a systematic cleaning of the streets and through roads, of paper and rubbish.

SECRETARY DANIELS WAS STRONG in his position against the workers of a certain New England industry when the workers went out on a strike. Many of the strikers were men who had been granted exemption because of their work in specially favored industries and then violated their parole from the army, for that is practically what an exemption is, by going on a strike. Secretary Daniels has made it clear for all time to come that the Navy Department does not intend to deal softly with these men who are granted special privileges and then seize the opportunities to gain a point to advantage by a strike. The conditions of war call for strong actions and the government will take such action when the needs are evident.

THE OLD STATE MILITIA has been called to service abroad and is now in service. This presented a problem to the authorities. What should be done to protect the home states in the case of need. In the last ten years the militia has been called for home service and rendered great help. Locally, the service of the militia at the time of the Salem fire is remembered to their credit. To provide against the exigencies of the state, a military organization was required that would take in men who are over the draft age and who would not be drawn upon for foreign service. The organization of military force in Massachusetts was thus made necessary. The present State Guard was the result of the planning. The organization is made up largely of men above the draft age and the personnel is of a very high order. For a year now, the State Guard has been drilling carefully and regularly under competent men and has acquired a proficiency which is altogether commendable, considering the limited number of hours that could be given to drill. The organization has been of service, as was recently evident when called for in an emergency to search for a missing woman in Marblehead. The Guard has been called to camp and are now at Framingham for a week of training. This arrangement is a good one, for more can be accomplished by the week in camp together than by many weeks of training with only evening hours given up to the service. Fortunately the State Guard organization has not been called upon for any serious duty, but it is comforting to have the knowledge that we have an organization competent to meet an emergency when it arises!

THERE ARE SPIES ABROAD and they are a menace, but competent work can be done by the humblest of citizens, as is made evident by the acumen of a boy in a lumber camp "somewhere in America." An attempt was made by a stranger to place poison in a chowder to poison a gang of workmen in government service getting out lumber for ships. The boy reported his suspicions to the officer in charge of the gang and he prepared against the attempt by carrying to the mess tent a keen axe hidden in a mackintosh. The stranger was presented and invited to partake of the chowder with them and he declined. The uplifted axe gave him the choice of eating chowder or the keen axe would do its work. The quarry was at bay; he took the spoon and ate of the chowder slowly and without interest, and in ten minutes he lay dead. It was a narrow escape for the camp and only indicates the thoroughness and the dastardliness of the enemy against whom we are at war. Shall America forget we are at war?

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION is in session again and is working industriously upon the problems which are being presented to it. The convention has had a long and successful period of labor. All last summer the convention toiled and now it is again in service. The question of biennial elections will come up for consideration and strong influences are being brought to bear upon the members of the organization in the interest of governmental efficiency and economy. Massachusetts has for a long while been a laggard in the reforms of elections. The annual election of our officers involves an uncertainty on the part of the candidate so that he cannot hope to develop a policy of office work as can be done in a business. In this way a government is robbed of the active use of the best talent. The annual election imposes uncalled for expenditure of time in electioneering and money for publicity material on the part of the candidate. It subjects the voters annually to the task of voting and selecting men for office. The state, of course, has an added expenditure because of the requirements of election day. The annual election works to no advantage. It does not aid anyone. It is a pronounced handicap and the sooner the state can be relieved of the burdens involved, the better. As to the advantage of recalling an incompetent office holder, that can be done by making a recall provision. The necessity of such recalls are so infrequent that it does not present an argument against the plan for biennial elections.

THE HOME FIRES MUST BE KEPT BURNING. It is absolutely essential that the armies and the navies abroad should be supplied with every need and requirement of the situation. This is axiomatic. It must also be remembered that the morale at home has a strong determining power over the men abroad. Men who are conscious that all things are well at home are able to do their work better abroad. There are philanthropic interests in the home-field that are having heavier responsibilities laid upon them, because of the war, than ever before. There is not an organization for home work that has not felt the increased cost of living and the consequent lessening of funds available from the giving public. Here is the problem. Will it be a wise or patriotic thing for the givers at home to cut back upon the home philanthropies? The effects of such a false economy will not be evident immediately. Such failures are not always apparent at once. But it will not be difficult for one to imagine the results that would inevitably follow if churches were forced to retrench or even close, hospitals harassed for funds, societies for the prevention of cruelty to children obliged to retrench and home nursing organizations forced to withdraw visiting nurses! That is painting the possible situation in its blackest hues, but the situation must be faced. A garden must be cleared of weeds early in the season. The public must see the futility and folly of neglecting home philanthropic organizations. The work abroad must be supported constantly and generously, but every home enterprise must be maintained with the highest degree of efficiency possible.

THE TIME HAS NOW COME for an accounting of the capabilities of our Liberty Motor. Much has been said about its success and its failure and the delay in its manufacture. The motor has reached the continent and has been tried out thoroughly in competition with the best motors which the mechanics of Europe have been able to make, and the answer is that in every test, climbing, development of speed, speeding, flexibility and protective power, point for point, the new motor excels the tested foreign motors and is superior in every way to the fondest hopes of the designers. The plans on paper have been realized in the machine and the machine has proven of value in the air. Now that the motor is a success as the days go by the results of the months of planning and work will be realized and the motors will be turned out. It was a great problem for the mechanics of America, but it has been met. Now that America knows what is wanted the mechanics of the land may be depended upon to rise to the situation. The aeroplanes no longer exist as phantom possible hopes upon paper. They are now real things, alive and flying, victory-sweepers in the skies. It is said this war will be won by the morale of the people, by the navies and fleets upon the seas, and the aircraft in the skies, as well as by armies. Let the nation be thankful that the inventive genius of America has constructed successfully a "Liberty" motor!

THE LOYAL SUPPORT given the apron sale in aid of the District Nurse fund was a tangible expression of appreciation of the valuable work done in our town.

ALL ROADS TOMORROW will lead to the Red Cross Horse Show on "Round Plain Farm," Beverly Farms.

Mrs. Charles Hooper, Friend's ct., has been entertaining relatives, this week, from Bradentown, Fla.

Miss Doris Pinkham, of Gloucester, has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Allen, Lincoln st., this week.

Some little differences which developed Wednesday between the caddy boys and the management of the Essex County club resulted in the boys (about 30 in number) going out on a strike, the chief cause of which was a re-adjustment of the hourly pay of the boys while caddying. After a conference with the caddy-master, a satisfactory agreement was apparently reached, with some of the smaller boys crossed off the list as caddies. However, some little hitch in the agreement, which was unnoticed at the time of the boys going back on the job, was soon brought to their attention, and resulted in their going out again yesterday morning with the fixed intention of staying out until things are fixed up to their liking. It was reported that all sorts of offers were put up to the boys yesterday for their services, but they were firm in their stand not to go to work under the present plan.

Notes About Manchester Boys at Home and Abroad

In a letter received from Sergt. Harry Baker, he says in part:

"All O. K. and feeling fine. We have moved again, being on the same work with a good bunk to sleep in. Gee, I hope my mattress isn't already occupied, as some of them I've run across, 'comprenez vous,' with those uncomfortable little animals known as 'cooties.' Today has been one of those extra fine ones and very warm so that I had a fine nap in the grass under a pear tree. Everything is in full bloom with insects humming about. Further up, the planes soar, looking like gigantic birds. Mother Nature certainly, at times, helps us to forget our real mission here.

"I saw Lieut. M— again last night as he was moving out and he told me of several other fellows from Wentworth institute whom I also have seen.

"Let me tell you of a little treat we expect to have tonight. One of the Signal Corps fellows located some eggs in a town to the rear of us; also a can of milk (evaporated). We are going to try to make a custard. We have split open an old bacon can and bent it so that a deep French mess kit will just fit it, making a double-boiler. From our kitchen we 'ballooned' some sugar, salt, a dash of cinnamon and about four drops of lemon extract. As luck will have it our billet has a large fireplace—the rest is easy and the result,—oh well, I can tell you better after 'c'est finis.' You see even when we are 'in' we have our little treats and good times.

WALTER CAMP TO DIRECT TRAINING OF ADVERTISING CLUB MEN

Early in the war, Walter Camp, father of football at Yale and author of "Danny the Freshman" and several other football stories published by D. Appleton & Co., decided that he would be ready to do his part when the time came, despite the handicap of a few years over military age and three extra inches at the waist line. Accordingly, he organized the senior service corps at New Haven, where men past the military age received training for home defense. Success was immediate. The story of Mr. Camp's work flew like gossip and now he has been selected to take charge of camp athletic activities in connection with the $50,000. war exposition which will be staged by Uncle Sam this month at San Francisco.

The war has produced some news, but nothing like as important as a girl thinks her engagement announcement will be when she finally consents to spring it on a palpitating public.

MONSIEUR POILU MEETS CHEWING GUM

One of the struggles in which the French soldiers became involved when the Germans swept across the Aisne between Soissons and Rheims was with chewing gum. I refer to Chicle Americanus, the—to us—well-known vegetable product which may be found adhering to the under side of desks, to shoe soles, and to trouser seats, throughout the United States. The self-same article that at once solves the weary shopgirl and the tired business man who endeavors therewith to conceal the fume of the drinks that cheer.

An American ambulance train was operating in the general region of the drive, and the army post exchanges established and operated for it by the Y. M. C. A. were well supplied with the things which are necessary to the comfort—physical and mental—of the American soldier. The Red Triangle officials had established a storehouse to supply these exchanges, and a car load of supplies had been shipped to just before the Germans started their drive. The car load carried—besides chocolate, tobacco, canned goods, cookies, etc.,—a considerable quantity of chewing gum.

When the drive started the Red Triangle workers available started out with what they could carry to serve the men to whom they were attached.

The storehouse was left deserted. As the French retired they foraged, to keep supplies from falling into enemy hands, using what they could and destroying the rest.

The poilus who came upon the chewing gum—like most Frenchmen—were totally unfamiliar with it. They knew only that it looked like food, was wrapped like food, and was stored with other things they knew to be food. They ventured further and tried it, stuffing the entire contents of a package into their mouths at one time. It tasted like food, so after a brief period of mastication they assayed to swallow it. Too many of them succeeded. While no serious casualties resulted the poilus were inspired with a remarkable regard for considerable awe for American edibles.

PROTEIN AND ITS VALUE

Every farmer knows that nitrogen is one of the chemical elements which neither his crops nor his stock can do without. The same is true of nitrogen in human food. It is absolutely necessary for the building and repair of body tissues and can be obtained only from the food substance or nutrient known as protein.

The foods usually classed as rich in protein are milk, cheese, eggs, meat, poultry and fish; dried legumes, such as peas, beans, cowpeas, soy beans and peanuts; and almonds and some other nuts. Wheat, oats and some other cereals also furnish considerable protein.

A man at moderate muscular work is believed to need about three and one-half ounces of protein a day, and a family consisting of father, mother and three small children needs about twelve ounces a day. Real economy in the use of protein foods lies not in leaving them out of the diet, but in choosing and combining kinds which will supply the total amount needed as cheaply as circumstances permit.

CO. I WILL RETURN HOME FROM CAMP THIS AFTERNOON

The members of Co. I, M. S. G., will return from their week in camp at Framingham this afternoon, on the 3.19 train—possibly on the 1.30. The company has the distinction of receiving more honors than any other company in the regiment. Captain Robertson was appointed officer of the day, for Thursday—Governor's day—and Lieut. Raymond C. Allen was appointed the guard for Thursday. Lieut. Corley was junior officer of the guard on Monday and Privates William Allen and Adam Chalk were appointed orderlies yesterday, an honor which comes to very few men in the regiment.

Last night was pay day for the regiment and while the men were waiting to go to the adjutant's office for their money sports were indulged in and an impromptu entertainment was given in the company street. Sergt. Abbott Hoare led in the singing and Sergt. Dennis rendered a solo. In a wrestling match, Private Ora Brown won in a match against a member of the Gloucester company. In a one hundred yard dash for a two hundred pound weight Private Lodge defeated a member of the Rockport company by ten yards.

CATTLE AFTER THE WAR

The United States at present probably has more pure-bred cattle, of beef and dairy types than is possessed by any other nation or combination of nations, according to the Department of Agriculture. At the close of the war, European countries will require the different types of pure-bred animals to rebuild their depleted herds.

Study of present and future world conditions leads to the conclusion that continental Europe will bid high for the dairy type, while Russia will require both types, especially the beef types. It seems certain that importing countries will require cattle free from disease.

Disease eradication in our cattle is therefore a matter of the highest importance not only for the benefit of our own consumers, but to facilitate after-the-war trade.

MRS. BARR DOING HER "BIT"

Mrs. Amelia E. Barr's latest novel, "An Orkney Maid," is enjoying a splendid sale, so the publishers report. Mrs. Barr just now is busily engaged on her new story, "The Paper Cap," which Appleton will publish shortly. The writing of books, Mrs. Barr feels, is a better way for her to acquire means to contribute to the Red Cross and other worthy objects to help win the war than by attempting to make what might turn out to be unwearable sweaters and impossible socks that really ought to be taken out of the hands of society folk and turned over to a few professional knitters. Mrs. Barr is nothing if not practical, and when she was told that many of the knitting bags that held the aforementioned sweaters and socks often cost as much as twenty dollars apiece, it is no wonder she declared that it might be a good idea to turn the money spent for these accessories over to the Red Cross and tuck the knitting into a paper bag. Mrs. Barr knows how to knit, cook and sew, but she believes in being a specialist. She believes she will be better able to serve her country by doing the thing she can do so well, than by playing with something she can do only indifferently. Mrs. Barr also knows a lot about farming, but she is willing to let all the others buy expensive garden tools, or knitting bags to match their gowns while she sticks to her chosen field and does her bit for the allies.

When gossips get together their slogan is not, "do your bit," but "tell your bit."

The board of selectmen of Manchester are to give a hearing in their room at the Town hall next Tuesday afternoon on petition of the four night patrolmen who were suspended last week, for a period of seven days without pay. The hearing will be given to Sergt. Leonard Andrews at two o'clock, followed by officers Thomas Sheehan at three, Jacob W. Lee at four and Robert Stoops at five. The public is privileged to attend the hearings.

The latest Food Administration bulletin from the State House for voluntary honor rations for householders says: "Meat: Beef—one and one quarter pounds per person per week, not including bone; and one and one half pounds, bone included." No other specific rules on meat are given for householders at present, but they are asked to be economical in the use of pork products.

COSTLY FOOD NOT ALWAYS BEST

The nutritive value of an article of food and its price seldom have any relation to each other. An expensive cut of beef is not necessarily any more sustaining than a cheap one. It usually tastes better or can be cooked by easier methods. But care in cooking and seasoning will make inexpensive meats attractive and much better than costly ones poorly prepared.

CAPTAIN ROBERTSON

Great Ovation in Starting Off

Members of Co. I assembled at headquarters shortly before 10 o'clock, Sunday morning, ready to march to the railroad station in time to take the 10.22 train.

Captain Robertson took the men through the centre of town to the residence of Julius F. Rabardy, corner Central and Bridge streets, where was displayed a French flag, side by side with the American flag, in recognition of the great French holiday, "The Fall of the Bastille." Here the company came to "present arms," while Musician Cook played to the colors, and a general recognition of the holiday was made by the large number of citizens present.

Arriving at the station, a crowd of about 200 people had gathered to give the boys a royal send-off. In fact, all along the way people lined the streets and gave a great reception with hand-clapping, vociferous applause and auto horn tooting. The boys must have felt they held a warm place in the hearts of Manchester people.

The trip to Boston by train was uneventful. At the North Station electric cars were waiting to take the company over the fast Boston-Worcester line to Framingham, where they arrived at 1 o'clock.

Though not the last company to arrive on the field, Co. I was very nearly the last. But this does not mean no preparations had been made, for at 7 o'clock in the morning Supply Sergeant Walter R. Bell and a small detail had started over the road, and the cooks, in a large auto truck, had also started about the same time. These were on the grounds moderately early, and much of the very essential work toward opening camp had been done by them.

The tents had been distributed in their staked-out positions, the tent poles, pins, etc., had been assorted and when Capt. Robertson marched his men up the main street at 1 o'clock much of the preliminary work had been done.

Co. I immediately started in to do things. In the first place, after arms had been stacked and the men had stripped down to working equipment, the squads (four men in a squad) tackled the job of erecting the 19 tents. The first thing Co. I "showed" the other companies, was when Capt. Robertson gave the order to raise tents,—when with uniformity and despatch every tent on the street went up—the whole street of tents in one operation. This, in spite of the fact the men had never had any training along this particular line, other than verbal instruction by the officers. Most of the other companies, were yet erecting their tents, one at a time, and with no regularity. In less than an hour after reaching the grounds Co. I tents had been erected, and the men were at mess.

The first meal was necessarily not a sample of what was to follow, for it was prepared for the most part before leaving home. Ham sandwiches, doughnuts and cheese constituted the meal.

Plenty of Eats for Co. I

The eats! There is no disputing the fact that a man's stomach is the channel through which he must be approached to get the best out of him in the line of hard work. Thanks to the foresight of the officers and the gallant support given by the public last week in the dance run for the purpose of securing a working fund, there was nothing lacking in the way of providing for the wants of the inner man.

Cooks C. L. Crafts and Edward Baker certainly have given Co. I great eats. Plenty of it, good assortment and the best of service.

On Monday, for instance, breakfast consisted of bacon and eggs, fried potatoes, bread and coffee. For the company of 62 men, 12 dozen eggs were used, 19½ lbs. bacon and two pails of potatoes. This allowed of 4 pieces of bacon to a man and 2 eggs, with a little to spare for the especially hearty eaters.

For dinner a cut of 40 lbs. of beef was ground up for hamburger steak—two balls to a man; also boiled potatoes, coffee, bread, an orange and a cake of chocolate.

For the evening meal scrambled eggs were served, with macaroni and cheese, prunes, bread and lemonade.

For Tuesday's breakfast a big dish of oatmeal was provided; also two boiled eggs, bread and coffee.

And that is the way it went—plenty of good, wholesome food for everybody; never a chance for anybody to complain as to the quantity or quality of what was served. The cooks were alright, and everybody had a good word for them. They had a different detail of assistants for every day.

Drills Twice a Day

The service calls were arranged with something on the docket from 5.30 in the morning until 11 at night. But that doesn't mean as much as it sounds. The real drilling was only an hour and a half in the morning and an hour in the afternoon.

The hours of service and calls established by the Post Commander were as follows: Reveille, 1st call 5.30 a. m., march 5.40 a. m., reveille 5.45 a. m.; assembly, setting up exercises, 10 minutes, immediately after reveille roll call; mess call, 6.30 a. m.; sick call, 7.15 a. m.; fatigue call (cleaning up camp), 7.30 a. m.; camp inspection, 8.00 a. m.; drill, 1st call 8.30 a. m., assembly 8.40 a. m., adjutant's call 8.45 a. m.; recall from drill, 10.15 a. m.; first sergeant's call, 10.30 a. m.; officers' call, 10.45 a. m.; mess call, 12.15 p. m.; drill, 1st call 1.45 p. m., assembly 1.55 p. m., adjutant's call 2.00 p. m.; recall from drill, 3.00 p. m.; parade, 1st call 4.15 p. m., assembly 4.25 p. m., adjutant's call 4.30 p. m.; guard mounting, immediately after parade; mess call, 6.30 p. m.; tattoo, 10.00 p. m.; call to quarters, 10.45 p. m.; taps, 11.00 p. m.

Co. I the Model Company

Manchester has especial reason to be proud of Co. I. The company was selected by Col. Eldredge as the model one of the regiment.

The Colonel made his official inspection of the fourteen companies, in quarters, Tuesday morning. Accompanied by Lt.-Col. Sleeper, of the Inspector General's Dept. of Mass., Maj. Chas. H. Farnham of the 3d Battalion, Maj. Hutchinson of the 2d and Maj. Ropes of the 1st, and Captain Robertson, he walked down the camp street and inspected every tent and was greatly impressed with everything, more especially the manner in which the clothing and guns were hung, neatly and systematically. Also the small trenches around the tents and everything else was most pleasing to the Colonel. He expressed his pleasure and delight after reaching the last tent and commented to the other officers as to the model of perfection. Nothing further could be done, he said; the company quarters were one hundred percent perfect.

He then visited the cook's tent. The inspection was complete. He was immensely well pleased with what he found here and was free in his compliments. He was especially impressed with the decorations in front of the street, and the ash box and swill barrel. All the other companies had to rearrange their's to conform with Co. I.

Captain Robertson was the proudest man in camp, Tuesday, after inspection. He expressed his pleasure at the interest shown by the personnel of his command. The men have taken pains to carry out the verbal instructions of the officers previous to going to camp, and have had plenty of initiative to do things for themselves, one evidence of which was the wooden floors which were placed in every tent. Despite the fact all the other companies, with one or possibly two exceptions, were on the grounds ahead of Manchester, none of them had the initiative to hunt around and find something to serve as floors on which to place their bed-sacks (filled with hay from an adjoining field. No other company had these comforts. Another example was the canvas-covered shelter arranged by Capt. Robertson and some of the men to serve as a mess tent. The large canvas from the auto truck served as the cover.

Lieut. Allen was honored by being made officer of the guard for Thursday—Governor's Day at the camp. Lieut. Corley was junior officer of the guard Monday.

Musician Cook was detailed for bugler of the guard on Governor's Day.

Sergt. Abbott Hoare was in charge of the company street, Monday, Sergt. Preston on Tuesday and Corp. W. W. Hoare on Wednesday.

Top Sergt. Dennis was the busiest man in camp with all his varied duties.

Corp. W. W. Hoare, Mechanic Hersey and a detail from Co. I built a shower bath, Tuesday, that was the biggest hit of the week with the 3d Battalion.

Camp will be broken Friday and the boys will reach home either on the 1.30 or the 3.19 train.

North Shore Kitchens in War Time

CANNING in a little studio is now being indulged in by Miss Sarah S. Perkins, at her home in Beverly Farms. The studio belongs to her aunt, Miss E. W. Perkins, but has always been used in common.

Last year Miss Perkins put up 700 jars, which lasted until April. She has improvised a section to do the canning in, where she has her two blue-flame stoves and other necessities, around which stands a tall screen.

Products will be canned as they come along on the market. These will be kept separate from the products of the tiny garden on the place.

The Perkinses are fortunate in having many large trees on their grounds which shade the place so much that one would not think a vegetable garden would pay in the limited sunny spots. But lying between the cottages (Miss S. S. Perkins' house being occupied by the Gerald A. Bramwell family) are little open spaces which are yielding prolifically, so much so that Miss Perkins hopes to get 100 jars this summer out of her surplus, now having some of French carrots, beets and greens, etc.

The little garden is being planted on the intensive plan and is cared for by Miss Perkins. It looks like mere patches of flower beds and will prove an interesting experiment in seeing what can be raised and canned from such a piece of ground.

Miss Perkins is planning a sale of surplus vegetables and fruits late in the season as a benefit for the Red Cross.

MRS. ROBERT S. BRADLEY's cook, Mrs. Hannah McCarron, at Pride's Crossing, gave so many helpful hints when we saw her a few weeks ago that all could not get in the BREEZE on July 5, so we give them now.

She sifts all meals except graham, saying that cornmeal, barley and oatmeal are much nicer after having the chaff sifted out.

Made-over meat dishes are a favorite. She buys no soup meat, but saves the bones for stock, occasionally buying a little for clearing beef. Nothing goes to waste with her. Entrées are served now, where before the war roasts were used. All left-over meats are made into a supper salad for the help or the family table.

In winter she makes heavy soups, in summer she has special hot-weather er soups made of vegetables. (See BREEZE of July 5 for summer soups.)

A three and one-half course dinner with her consists of soup or chowder, meat, salad, dessert and coffee.

Mazola and Wesson oils are good in cooking in place of butter. With Wesson oil she uses lemon juice or vinegar, while with Mazola she uses cream in her salads.

Potato and barley flour mix well, the former being strong and the latter weak. Potato flour is good for cake. Rice flour is good for gingerbread. When potato flour is used its strength makes it unnecessary to use quite as much of it as of white flour as called for in a recipe. Rice flour is about the same in value as white flour.

Puff Paste

1 lb. barley and potato flour mixed

1 lb. beef drippings

Take half the beef and rub into the flour; wet with ice-water (no salt used), roll out dough in little pieces, spread rest of drippings on them, roll again, repeating process three or four times. Sprinkle a little flour on dough and set in cool place.

Mrs. McCarron says this is an excellent crust, although pie is rather going out of fashion in this day of fruit and simple desserts and frozen creams and ices.

She is willing to have conferences with anyone who wishes to see her this summer in Mrs. Bradley's kitchen.

"My salad days,
When I was green in judgment."
—Shakespeare.

IN "Miss Salad and Her Trousseau," a neat little collection of salad recipes, it says: "If properly made, there is no dish that is more wholesome or more appetizing than a salad. Any person can make a good luncheon off of a salad, bread and butter. A salad is but little trouble to make if a supply of salad dressing is on hand and is a good way of using up odds and ends." Just the thing these days.

Mary Saltonstall Parker (Mrs. W. P. Parker, of 8 Chestnut street, Salem) long ago wrote a most delightful booklet on salads, telling her directions in rhyme. It is called Tempt Ye Appetite With Salads.

Mrs. Parker has many relatives and friends on the North Shore, who, no doubt, have tasted some of these salad dishes in the fine old house of by-gone days on Chestnut street. She kindly consented that the BREEZE could use some of the rhymes in her little book.

"Milton has said 'Neat-handed Phillis dresses

Green herbs and sundry other country messes,'

And I, in humble mood, shall now display
Some modes of dressing learned since
Phillis' day,

And prove that modern wit can e'en enhance

'The powerful grace that lies in herbs and plants.' "

FRENCH DRESSING

"Oft housewives in these busy days
Can find no time for mayonaise;
Then need they offer no excuse,
But simply this French dressing use,
Which, to my mind (if rightly made),
Puts richer dressing in the shade.
Five tablespoons of oil we pour,
Just one of vinegar,—no more;
Now salt and pepper with their bite,
A salt-spoonful of each is right;
With salt, however, those who know
Say 'Let the salt-spoon overflow.'
And if preferred more sharp and vicious,
A shake of cayenne is delicious."

ANOTHER DRESSING

Slightly Sweet

"This dressing I have found is best
On lettuce served alone;
Our first ingredient is an egg,
Hard-boiled and cold as stone.

First carefully remove its shell;
The outside white then peel
From off the yolk, and lay aside;
The yolk we crush to meal.

Next one salt-spoonful each of salt
And mustard dry we take;
Then adding one large spoon of oil,
A mixture smooth we make.

One teaspoon small of sugar add;
The (chopped-up) white of egg;
And don't forget a tablespoon
Of vinegar, I beg.

5
Stir well. Now dress your lettuce leaves,
(Be sure they're washed and dried);
And oft I venture you'll repeat
This rule when once 'tis tried."

MAYONAISE DRESSING

For this, a hard-boiled egg, the yolk crushed up
To powder, with a spoon in bowl or cup,
One salt-spoonful of mustard, one of salt,
(A little more of each won't prove a fault).

Mix very well, not making too much haste,
Then with a raw yolk blend it into paste.
To stir the oil in slowly is the trick
Which always makes a dressing smooth and thick;

By tablespoonsful add it, six in all
(Or four spoons if your family is small),
Now one of vinegar. You'll find it pays
To follow close this rule for mayonaise.

POTATO SALAD

"This salad with approval meets.
Slice five potatoes with three well-cooked beets;
Or if one likes, they may be chopped in dice;
But have them cold, if you would have them nice.

Next rub your bowl with garlic; (or in mine
I put a scrap of onion minced quite fine);
Chopped parsley add; when all is in the bowl,
A good French dressing pour upon the whole."

SARDINE SALAD

"The young wife often worries lest
Her husband bring her home a guest,
When cook is ill and larder low
(As husbands sometimes do, you know).
Now she right quick could make a dish
Such as in summer people wish
For tea, that will no toil require
Nor lingering over kitchen fire.
Take carefully from out their tin
A few sardines; remove the skin;
Of nice, crisp lettuce choose a head,
And with the leaves prepare a bed
On platter, or a deeper dish,
And on it lay the little fish.
Two hard eggs sliced and laid around
Add both to looks and taste, I've found.
On this, French dressing; and observe
This salad must be cool to serve."

FRUIT SALAD

"For pies and for puddings a good substitute
Is found in a salad concocted of fruit;

Made of various fruits, the best of each season,
Who'd call it not good would be guilty of treason.
Slice two good bananas (not red ones, but yellow),
Be sure that they're spotless and perfectly mellow.
Then next in the bowl cut-up oranges lay,—
About three of moderate size, I should say.
One pint of ripe strawberries then you can take,
(If in strawberry season this salad you make),
With some pineapple, juicy, in shredded condition;
You'll find your fruit salad defies competition.
As a finishing touch over all you can use
Just enough of fine sugar and fresh lemon juice;
But have you a nature convivial and merry,
In place of the lemon you'd like port or sherry;
Now close to your ear just allow me to come,
And whisper, 'Far better than all these is rum!'
"A cauliflower, boiled and allowed to grow cold,

Is delicious with mayonaise dressing, I'm told;
Asparagus also (this I can endorse),
Boil, treat with French dressing, and serve as a course."

The pretty little idyl on making water-cress sandwiches we do not give. Readers will have to get the booklet to know how Sylvia and Jack did that.

"Of one kind of sandwiches now I will speak,
(There are many more kinds than are days in the week),
Cut slices of bread and lay them in pairs,
Precisely as Sylvia and Jack did with theirs,
But instead of the cresses which they put within,
Try some cucumbers shaven exceedingly thin.

Fresh grated horse-radish, though strange it may seem,
Is a wonderful relish, mixed nicely with cream,
And a few drops of vinegar. Have it next Sunday Upon your roast beef; you'll repeat it on

The North Shore in War Work

MAGNOLIA has opened up the newest workroom on the Shore. Fifty were present this Monday when the Oceanside Hotel annex opened its spacious rooms for the workroom for the American Fund for French Wounded. The hotel guests and the cottage colony are taking hold with a vim and will make this the centre of community work every Monday and Thursday from 9.30 to 1. Subscriptions are urgently requested for the purchase of gauze. Checks for this purpose should be made payable to Miss Abbie Covel, treasurer of the committee, Magnolia postoffice. Mrs. Henry R. Heard, of "Briarsea," Norman's Woe road, is chairman, and Mrs. George L. Hamilton, also of Norman's Woe road, is vice-chairman. Monitors are Miss Helen Louise Coates, of the Oceanside, and Mrs. Charles S. Penhallow and Mrs. Samuel S. Stevens, of the cottage colonies.

Among others present last Monday were Mmes. Costello C. Converse, Wm. H. Coolidge, Pierpont E. Dutcher, Mahlon R. Bryan, Chester Guild, Lee McMillan, David Loring and the Misses Eleanor H. Jones, Florence Baldwin, Frances Rogers and Miss Wilder.

The French Wounded work has a large workroom at Mrs. E. S. Grew's coach-house in West Manchester and a workroom for bachelors and married men (who have the privilege of bringing their wives) at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Graeme Haughton at Pride's Crossing, where the meetings are on Tuesday evenings from 8.30 to 10.30. The men attend by invitation.

Manchester's quota for July has come, and everybody along the Shore is urged to attend this workroom, one of the largest and coolest places for work on the Shore. It is situated in the basement of Horticultural hall and is open all day Wednesdays and Fridays and Thursday afternoons. Sewing is done Wednesday and Friday afternoons, the rest of the time being devoted to surgical dressings. The mid-summer influx of visitors has come and many new arrivals from the Magnolia, Manchester and other sections may not know of this large and active workroom so conveniently located in Manchester.

The Manchester Red Cross profited by $102 at the recent concert given in the Town hall by the Wodell Treble Clef club, of Boston.

The July quota in sewing and knitting for the Manchester Red Cross is expected daily. The workers have been busy sewing the new tags on finished articles this week. Two hundred tags were used for shirts and seven hundred for socks, each sock requiring a tag. The 75 sweaters are still to be tagged. The new tags read: "Compliments of the American Red Cross. Essex County Chapter."

The North Shore committee of the Italian War Relief fund of America is very grateful for all the workers who are coming so faithfully to Mrs. George Lee's garage in Beverly Farms. The workroom is a success and the committee appreciates the help, to say nothing of the great good the dressings will bring the poor, wounded soldiers, when they finally reach their destination.

Among the Beverly Farms Red Cross workers in the library workroom are Mmes. H. A. Doane, J. Conyngham Stevens, Mary V. Morgan, Mary A. Wood, F. W. Varney, Jane Davey, Q. A. Shaw, F. R. Galacar, A. O. Demmons, F. A. Preston, E. F. Campbell, Robert Means, F. I. Lamasney, Philip S. Sears, W. E. Lewis, C. H. Trowt, G. Mercer, T. D. Connolly, Albert J. Beveridge, Mrs. Allen, Mrs. Gorman and the Misses Edith Rantoul, Jane Bolam, Mary E. Murray, Fannie McDewitt, Helen and Mary Gilmarten, May Hallisey, Louise Brady, Dorothy Walsh, Mary McQuillan, Miss Barton and others. Mrs. Charles M. Cabot is chairman.

FANNING THE FLAME

SUBJECT OF INTERESTING SERMON AT MANCHESTER BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. H. E. Levoy preached last Sunday morning in the First Baptist church, Manchester, to a large congregation, on the subject, "Fanning the Flame." He said in part:

"Our enthusiasm for Jesus Christ should be so real that the world must realize that we have been with Jesus. Fan into a flame all our gifts for the Master, as Paul says to Timothy, 'Stir up the gift of God which is in you or fan into a flame the gift of God which is in you.' Your wealth, position, power, gift of speech and song, in short your very life, fan into a flame for Christ and His cause. Let us make our religion energetic and enthusiastic that one may be of largest value to God and His kingdom. Use your God-given gift to glorify Him. The chief end of man is to glorify God."

FERTILIZERS FROM WASTES

Industrial wastes furnished about 40 percent of the potash, 8 percent of the phosphoric acid, and 85 percent of the nitrogen used in this country in 1916, according to a recent United States Department of Agriculture publication, "Fertilizers from Industrial Wastes."

The potash was obtained from such wastes as tobacco stems, cottonseed hulls, hardwood ashes, wool washings, blast-furnace flue dust, cement flue dust and sugar residues; the phosphoric acid from bones, shells, fish scrap, basic slag and other materials; and the nitrogen from wastes in the manufacture of castor, linseed and fish oils; from animal wastes, as blood, hair, horns, hoofs and hides; from leather and wool wastes, coke, and many other substances.

BE A WEED DETECTIVE

If the first appearance in this country of weeds, such as Russian thistle, field hawkweed, and Canada thistle, had been reported, much of the loss and trouble they are causing might have been prevented. It is important to report to Federal or state authori-

DOING NOT TALKING

By Mrs. Robert S. Bradley*

WE are becoming very tired of some of our war words. Coöperation is a very much over-worked word. Coördination is another and Food Conservation is getting on everyone's nerves.

The other day, standing with a group of friends, one said, "I wish people would stop talking about Food Conservation"; another said "I wish people would stop talking about the war." My answer to both was, "The trouble is we talk too much. Too much talking and too little doing. If everyone would do all the things they talk about doing for food work, then, as the slogan goes, 'Food conservation may win the war,' and we would have no war to talk about."

Of course, that hits some people pretty hard, for many are trying to do their best, but we all hear and know of others who are not trying and as yet do not seem to take in the situation.

About a year ago we first began to talk about food conservation, and we all remember the potato troubles. We were asked to have potatoes twice a week instead of twice a day, seven days in the week. There were households where this made war, but would it have caused so much trouble had all been told what it meant? The men and boys were giving their lives for us and we were asked to give a potato. Put to anyone that way they would have choked had they eaten what they were asked not to—

A Life! A Potato!

Our boys were not "over there" then and the brave trench boys did not mean so much to us as they do now. Now everyone has somebody at the front even if that front is for the moment one of the nearby training camps—that may mean a trench in France very soon. Owing to the great work that was done on the farms we have now nine million extra bushels of potatoes to be used in place of wheat. Now we are told to eat potatoes and save the wheat flour. Probably the same people who made such a fuss last year will not wish to eat potatoes this year, when they are told to. That is human nature. What you can have you don't want. What you want you cannot have.

This over abundance of potatoes is a most fortunate situation for ninety million bushels of wheat must be sent over to the allies before November.

If anyone feels any doubt about his duty in the bread line, read what Harry Lauder says:

"Eat one pound of bread less a week. Slice the bread and slice it thinner and think what you are doing to help win the war. A pound of bread may save a soldier's life."

"Why eat corn bread?" someone asks. "There is no economy in substituting corn for wheat with corn-meal at its present price," and there is just one answer to that and many similar remarks.

The food campaign is not being made for our own sake, but for the sake of the allies. If we eat more corn bread, we leave more wheat and flour to be sent to England, France and Italy, where they are so sorely needed.

That is what we are trying to do—eat less of the things our allies need.

One other way to help win the war, is the slogan:

"Every little helps."

So many say the butter, or sugar, that I would save would amount to so little, but each one must save his pound of bread a week, his bit of butter for the fat so essential "over there," his lump of sugar. A lump or two from your coffee and tea two or three times a day will soon grow to a pound as the child's penny saving bank soon turns out five or ten dollars. One man said, "I never knew what the real taste of coffee or tea was until I stopped putting in sugar."

The waste in our American households has been something unbelievable. Teach the children, and the grownups too, to take smaller portions and be helped a second time if needed.

These are a few of the things we can do without talking.

*(From a talk given in Boca Grande, Fla., where Mrs. Bradley spent part of the winter.)

THE NORTH SHORE ARTIST COLONY

hands mentioned above was modelled from Mrs. J. Warren Merrill's. Mrs. Handasyd Cabot, of Boston, is another friend who posed for the charming bronze, the "Lady with the Chain." So we might numerate many others among her friends who have enjoyed the pleasure and novelty of being a model now and then.

Mrs. Stanley Cunningham (Esther Lowell Burnett), sister to Dr. Francis L. Burnett, of Manchester, is again in the Churchman house on Proctor street, Manchester.

The Cunninghams have been coming here from Milton for several summers, and over in this delightful region of Smith's Point, the children, Esther, Joseph, Charles and little Polly, have the happiest times imaginable. Boat-making and sailing seem to be their chief occupation. And Mrs. Cunningham, when asked about her "artistic" tendencies, replied, "I'm a mother first."

Before her marriage, however, Mrs. Cunningham was a professional artist. Southboro was her early home. She studied in the Boston Art Museum under E. C. Tarbell. Portraiture has always been her specialty, children's heads taking the lead. Also before her marriage, she did miniatures on ivory. Weak eyes have compelled her to give up the latter work of late.

Crayon portraits and oil sketches of Manchester scenes and some Essex boats have been her recent products.

She has exhibited during the winter at her home in Milton, and last summer had work at the Gallery-on-the-Moors, East Gloucester. At present, some of Mrs. Cunningham's sketches in oil, of Singing beach, various water views and other Manchester scenes, are on exhibition in the Copley Gallery, in Boston.

Miss Elizabeth W. Perkins and Miss Sarah S. Perkins have a little studio on their place at Beverly Farms. Both have painted many scenes along the Shore, especially in the Gloucester section.

With Miss S. S. Perkins, roses and landscapes have been the principal subjects. She has not exhibited for years, and now is devoting her time to canning in the studio, having two blue-flame stoves and the other paraphernalia for the cold-pack method of canning. She is a sister of Mrs. Charles M. Cabot, of Beverly Farms. Her pretty stucco cottage, with its red tile roof, has been a landmark on West street, standing close to the roadside for about twenty-two years. Miss Perkins has always lived in it herself until the last two years, when it has been rented to the Gerald A. Bramwells, of Boston. With her garden and canning, Miss Perkins is well occupied now while making her home with her aunt, Miss E. W. Perkins.

The latter has a charming big stucco house about half a dozen years older than the other cottage belonging to her niece. This is set on the high ridge facing the water and is beautifully surrounded with trees, the whole place being suggestive of an artist's home. Miss E. W. Perkins has exhibited her pictures of trees and landscapes more or less, but not in public exhibits. The little studio has been a pleasant workshop for the two women for many years. Now, in these days of war-time activities, it presents one of the typical scenes of the times, such as libraries, ball-rooms, laundries and garages being turned into workrooms and canneries. Here the little brown studio has its canvas frames pushed back, and its cupboards and shelves filled with fruit jars. The pretty pictures on the wall look down upon the vegetables and seem to smile their approval,—at least for war times.

incorporation of the town, 1668, or thereabouts, occupiers of freeholds, and continuing to abide thereon, their children inheriting the land and the names of their wives and the number of their children."

The Tablet room also has relics, and the other rooms on the second floor, furnished by the late Charles Galoupe, of Beverly, are interesting, with their books and church relics, a tiny "church" room being full of such things.

The third floor has collections of clothes, looms, kitchen utensils and the like. Then there is a Grand Army room.

Among the interesting things in the house is a tablecloth woven in 1794 for Israel Thorndike, of Beverly, given by his grand-daughter, Mary Greeley Loring, to the Misses Loring, of Pride's Crossing, who gave it to the society.

The diaries, 1834-1853, of Robert Rantoul, Senator, Beverly's only U. S. Senator, are here. Robert Hale's account book of 1723 is also among the many things.

The house has descended to the society from the Cabot family as a gift. The poet, Prof. George E. Woodberry, was president for twenty-five years. The present officers include Miss Katharine P. Loring, president; Miss Annie Kilham, secretary; Roland W. Boyden, treasurer; and the directors, who are Mrs. John C. Phillips, James A. Marsters, Miss Ann Lovett, Miss Margaret Whitney and Rev. Pemberton Hale Cressey.

If we permit the crimes of the enemy to sting us to reprisal, "eye for eye, tooth for tooth," if in blind fury we wrong one German woman or maim one helpless child, if we commit a single act of wanton destruction upon German works of art or upon their homes and fields and forests; or if, on the other hand, we show any tenderness towards those who persist in this campaign of frightfulness and brutality, or accept any terms of peace that leave the smallest root or branch of Prussianism undestroyed, even though it takes our last man, our last dollar and our last loaf, we shall prove to the world that our wrath was not inspired by the spirit of God, but was merely a reversion to primal brutality?

“The Most Interesting Store on the North Shore”

When we say this, we are merely repeating what many customers say about our store.

They say it is different than other stores—that it is a store of surprises, where they are constantly finding new things which cannot be found elsewhere.

They also speak of the homey appearance and how different it is from other stores in this respect. Everything is arranged where it can be easily seen and our customers don't have to ask a whole lot of questions unless they want to, but when they do want to, there is always someone to answer them and give them all the information they desire.

We believe you will greatly enjoy a visit to our store and we want you to feel at liberty to look around without feeling any obligation to buy.

An Hour Spent With a Few of the More Isolated Ones Here and There—Glimpses of Their Homes

LILLIAN McCANN

III

GEORGE LEE—artist and sportsman—had the honor of being born at the Lee homestead in Beverly Farms—years ago. He is a son of the late Henry Lee, who was the head of the firm, Lee, Higginson & Co., of Boston, at one time.

Mr. Lee seems to have had two special and distinct lines in his lifetime, sometimes overlapping and at times one suggesting the other. His liking for yachting and horse racing led him to paint yachts and horses, and his desire to study marine life in every detail of color and action only took him into this form of pleasure the more.

Since this is a part of our artist series, we will discuss that phase of his life first.

As a boy he was always scribbling pictures in school when he ought to have been attending to his lessons. Sports became uppermost then, and only in later years did he seriously enter the profession of an artist. He says it is about forty years ago that he became a student at the Boston Art Museum. After studying there he spent three years in study at Munich. His elder brother, Henry, was also an artist.

Mr. Lee formerly had a studio at Beverly Farms, on the grounds of the Lee homestead, situated on the point near West Beach. Also while spending three summers in Italy he had a studio in Venice. For several years the town studio was at the Brookline home, but now he is at 304 Boylston street, Boston.

The restoration of old pictures has always been a favorite with this artist. He has an excellent workman in his studio who does much of the work, while Mr. Lee does the retouching. Restoring of many old pictures for Arthur Williams, of Boston, has been done in his studio.

Just now Mr. Lee is painting the yacht that won in a race to Bermuda, for Henry A. Morss, of Marblehead Neck. Mr. Morss is chairman of the Eastern Yacht club's regatta committee. When Mr. Lee comes out to his summer home now for the week-ends, he is still drawn to the Marblehead shores, where he spent so much of his early life in studying yachts and their surroundings. As a result of this all of his water colors were fancy pictures of yachts. These were painted in the winter time, the summers having been spent in studying and making notes of color effects. No special yachts were attempted in these fancy pictures. The water colors were exhibited in the Chase gallery in Boston, but he has not exhibited for the past thirty years.

Fresco painting has also been indulged in. The Brookline home and the summer home both have specimens of his work. The music room at the Farms has beautiful figures on the ceiling suggestive of the Muses. Mr. Lee does not care much for this line, seemingly. While in Venice he restored the fresco work in the George Curtis palace on the Grand Canal.

His horse pictures are all in oil. The R. C. Hooper race horses and those of Francis W. Sargent have been among his subjects. Mr. Lee has been guilty of a failing that comes to an artist occasionally, showing that there is no positive grounds for always being able to tell an artist's work. He was dining one time at the home of Mrs. Henry M. Whitney, of Boston, and while looking at a picture of a horse asked who painted it. She told him a French artist of note. Seeing that he believed her, she then said that he surely must recognize the picture as one of his own productions, which he had painted ten years before. Mr. Lee could not recall it and saw none of his characteristics of painting at the time of the incident, showing that a painter's style changes continually.

He is a disciple of the old school of painting, believing in small and painstaking beginnings, which lead to the bold stroke of the artist in mature life. He speaks of Sargent as being one of the painters of the minutest kind who developed boldness later. He thinks the new school which teaches the "cut-short" bold-method stroke will never bring out the artists who started in the long, slow, and careful-attention-to-detail method.

Mr. Lee has not only painted for pleasure, but he has had an artist's highest joy—to be able to sell his products. Although never feeling anxious about his financial success in this line, as many a painter does, yet, he says, the feeling of true success comes only if the picture sells.

As a sportsman he has been prominent in riding, sailing, rowing, and boxing. When a small boy he began his boxing career. The R. C. Hooper horses in West Manchester were trained by him at one time. In earlier years Mr. Lee had his own horses. Now he is content with his yacht "Bernice."

Single-scutt racing was a great art with him once, taking him to England to row. In this he also won the New England championships in May and October of 1876, in October of 1877, and in June and July of 1880.

As a rider, he won first prize in the Myopia steeplechase on Dungeon long ago in Brookline, on the site of the present Country club.

When twenty-five he was in a boxing tie in New York for the championship of America.

While in Venice, Mr. Lee met his future wife. He was married there at the age of thirty. She was Miss Eva Ballerina, daughter of the custodian of the palace, who served thirty years under the former king and also under the present king. Mrs. Lee's uncle was a tutor of the latter.

The beautiful summer home, "Villa al Mare," at Beverly Farms, was built about twenty years ago. William Rantoul, of Salem, was the architect, who carried out many of Mr. Lee's plans. The house is delightfully done in every detail, and the grounds seem a part of the house and the house a part of them. So secluded is it from the road that the many thousand autoists who pass it each summer scarcely realize as they whizz around the curve on Hale street, where a high stone wall covered with vines and surmounted by a barberry hedge, marks the way, that within is a house of the most exquisite and Venetian-like workmanship on the Shore.

It really stands very close to the road, but the stone wall and the thick shrubbery are almost a complete screen. The red tiled roof shows above the tree tops, however.

The stucco house is built on a slight elevation of ground, with terraces at one side, an open space of lawn on the opposite side, and gravel paths leading up from the street entrances. These gateways are very charming and artistic openings in the wall, quite suggestive of the whole place.

Back of the house is Dalton's hill, a wall of greenery for the Lee place.

The wall, which forms a terrace by the house, has its thick ivy covering. A little garden strip is also a feature here, while below it is a fountain-centered garden and lawn space. All is so prettily done that it would take an artist to describe it.

How fitting it seems that the workroom of the North Shore committee of the Italian War Relief Fund of America should have been opened in the little white garage on these Venetian-like grounds. In it Mrs. Lee and her sympathetic friends and neighbors are working for her beloved countrymen.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee have a daughter, Miss Florence Lee, who is the only one of their children to take up painting as a study.

IN the Manchester colony is an artist who has also been a journalist the past winter. This is Mrs. Charles Albert Read, Jr., who, with her attractive little three-year old daughter, Helen, is spending the summer with Mr. Read's parents at Read's "Island," Manchester. Mrs. Read wrote the art criticism for the Brooklyn Eagle last winter, closing her work in June. She writes under her own name, Helen Appleton Read. Mrs. Read is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Ross Appleton, of 146 Joralemon street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Later in the season she and her little daughter will sail for South America, with Mr. Read, to be gone for several years. Mr. Read has a position with Grace & Co., exporters, of New York, at Lima, Peru, where they will live in a suburban part.

Mrs. Read says that she always intended to be an artist and, after finishing Smith college, took up the work seriously by studying at the Art Students' League, New York, four years under Frank Vincent Dumon, Louis Mora and Robert Henri. She then went to Paris as a student of Richard Miller. For several years she had a studio at 51 West Tenth street, New York, in one of the oldest studio buildings in New York, where noted artists have had their rooms from time to time. In the summer of 1913 she had a studio at Woodstock, N. Y., the largest art colony in the country.

Mrs. Read has shown pictures at the Gallery-on-the-Moors, in East Gloucester, in small exhibits in New York, and always at the yearly exhibit in New York of the Independent Society of Artists, with which she is closely allied. This is an organization of the younger artists formed several years ago, where they can show their work without a jury. It is similar to the Salon des Independents in Paris, where pictures too extreme for the conservative Salon are shown and in which noted painters have thus come to the front by the impartial criticism of the public. Cezanne and Gauguin are examples of this.

Sunlight studies are her favorite motifs. Posing figures in the sunlight out of doors was what she learned mostly from her Paris studies with Richard Miller. She has done some work while in Manchester with a few of the village children posing on the attractive grounds about the Read home. Since her marriage she has not been so actively engaged except the past winter, when she was art critic for one of the oldest and best known papers in the country.

Mrs. Read went to all the exhibits in New York, criticised the pictures from an artistic standpoint, and also interviewed artists of note. Her two columns or more appeared each week in the Sunday edition. It was not all smooth sailing, because some artists took offense at her criticisms. Their letters and her answers only made the Eagle the more interesting for its art readers. She realizes as never before the busy life of newspaper folk.

Horse Show at Round Plain Farm for Red Cross Benefit

BEVERLY'S RED CROSS horse show brought out all society last Saturday afternoon, when it was held at "Round Plain Farm," the Beverly Farms home of Mrs. John Caswell. The large field back of the house made an ideal ring with the boxes placed on either side and the trees surrounding it like a natural wall. The big house on slightly elevated ground, overlooking the field, made an attractive sight, much commented upon. In front of it were spread out the thirty or more tea tables, each with a basket of flowers, and over which hung two great flags, American and Red Cross, with a small service flag between.

Judge Wm. Caleb Loring opened the show by announcing its purpose,—to help the Red Cross and our allies,—after which Miss Elizabeth Caswell, Mrs. Caswell's attractive young daughter, rang a bell that was hung on a tree by the flags. This was an old bell from France. As soon as the "victory chimes" ceased, the band (Boston Cadet) struck up "Star Spangled Banner." It was an effective opening and interesting sight to see all the people on the hillside and in the boxes standing at attention, and the riders out in the ring holding their horses at attention, also.

The entries came in from all over the Shore, and had been in charge of Miss Eleonora Sears. Class I was for ponies to be ridden by children under fifteen. Entries were as follows: Midget, Miss Adelaide Frick; Caramel, Johnny and Punch, Mrs. H. J. Coolidge; Liberty Boy and Grass Hopper, Victor de Bellefroid; Jolly Boy, Miss K. Lane; Lady Fifi, Miss Pauline Fenno; The Pippin, J. Henry Coulter; Merrylegs, Amory Lawrence; Playful and Queenie, James P. Mandell; Ribinhood and Maid Marion, Mrs. Julian Harris; and Jack Sprat, Miss Marjorie Linehan. The winners were: First, Johnny; second, Punch; third, Merrylegs; and fourth, Robinhood.

An extra class for pony jumping was then made up. Samuel Mandell, who is so far away in France, will be glad to hear that his polo pony took one of the prizes in this class.

Class II was for road hacks. Entries were made by Victor de Bellefroid, Miss Lysbeth Miller, Miss Pauline Fenno, George Chipchase, J. H. Coulter, Miss Alice Thorndike, Miss E. R. Sears, J. P. Mandell, Mrs. W. C. Loring, Miss Anna Agassiz and John Lawrence. Winners: First and second, George Chipchase; third, John Lawrence; and fourth, Miss Alice Thorndike with her Handy Andy.

Class III included light-weight hunters. Entries were by Miss Helen Frick, Mrs. Lyon Weyburn, Victor de Bellefroid, Mrs. H. C. Clark, Dennis Upson, George Chipchase, the Weld Farm, Miss Thorndike, Miss Sears, J. P. Mandell, Miss E. Milton, and Mrs. Francis P. Sears. Winners: First, Robinhood, ridden by Miss Sears; second, Handy Andy, Miss Thorndike; third, Col. O'Bannon, Dennis Upson; fourth, First Mate, James Mandell.

Class IV was park hacks. Entries were by Miss Helen Frick, Miss Eleanor Whitney, Miss Joan Whitney, Jock Whitney, W. B. Miller, Miss Elizabeth Caswell, Miss Pauline Fenno, George Chipchase, J. H. Coulter, Miss Sears, and Mrs. Loring. Winners: Coral, George Chipchase; Sally Baldwin, W. B. Miller; Me Too, Miss Sears; and Brookdale, Miss Joan Whitney.

Class V, heavy-weight hunters, had winners as follows: Nightgown, George Chipchase; Milch, James P. Mandell; Kilkee, Miss Sears; and Westbury, Dennis Upson.

Class VI was interesting with its pairs of hunters shown together over jumps. Winners included Miss Chance and Nightgown, George Chipchase; Westbury and Col. O'Bannon, Dennis Upson; and third to J. P. Mandell.

Class VII for road hacks had an entry by Miss K. S. Crosby, who showed Firefly. Others were by those previously mentioned. Winners were: Play Boy, Miss Thorndike; Brookdale, Miss Joan Whitney; Mee Too, Miss Sears; and J. H. Coulter.

The last class of hunters, shown over five-foot jumps, had the following winners: Revello, Dennis Upson; Kilkee, Miss Sears; and Robinhood, Miss Sears. Edwin S. Webster, Jr., entered his handsome decoration in this class and also in Class V.

The judges were Rodolphe L. Agassiz and Gerard Bement—impartial, patient judges who worked till 6:30 over their hard task.

Patronesses of the show included the following: Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Mrs. Timothée Adamowski, Mrs. Charles C. Auchincloss, Mrs. Charles F. Ayer, Mrs. Boylston Beal, Mrs. John A. Blake, Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, Mrs. Harry Brown, Mrs. Harrison K. Caner, Mrs. William W. Caswell, Mrs. Harold T. Coolidge, Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge, Miss Margaret L. Corlies, Mrs. Charles P. Curtis, Mrs. John S. Curtis, Mrs. Walter Denègre, Mrs. Philip Dexter, Mrs. Francis L. Higginson, Mrs. Francis L. Higginson, Jr., Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane, Mrs. Lester Leland, Mrs. William W. Thorndike, Mrs. William B. Walker, Mrs. Bayard Warren, Mrs. Samuel D. Warren, and Mrs. Edwin Webster.

Among box-holders other than the above were noticed Mrs. Geo. L. De Blois, Mrs. Griswold Flagg, Miss E. H. Jones, Miss White, Mrs. Dennis Upson, Miss Frick, Mrs. W. B. P. Weeks, Miss Edwards, Mrs. C. C. Felton, Mrs. Nathan Hayward, Mrs. Payne Whitney, Mrs. F. Gray Griswold, Mrs. Wm. B. Miller, Mrs. Eliot Sumner, Mrs. L. C. Fenno, Col. Chas. L. Pierson, Mrs. N. S. Simpkins, Mrs. A. J. Sharp, Mrs. Bartlett, Mrs. S. P. Blake, Mrs. J. H. Proctor, Mrs. J. W. Russell, Mrs. F. J. Alley, Mrs. Stuart, Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, 2nd, Mrs. J. S. Curtis, and S. V. R. Crosby, T. J. Coolidge, F. E. Peabody, J. W. Blodgett, S. P. Mandell, Dudley Pickman, Dr. Warren, Frederick F. Rhodes and J. M. Mitchell. Many of these had guests in their boxes.

The Misses Dorothy Wells and Dorothy Caswell sold programs near the gate. Others of the farmerettes busied themselves generally with programs and assisted around the tea tables, where the war cake that was donated by friends drew much patronage.

Officers in uniform were sprinkled among the guests. Maj. Littauer was an interested spectator. He is the officer in charge of all the horses and mules at Camp Devens.

It was a sight like "olden times," as some one expressed it, even if the young men of the Shore were conspicuously absent. Everybody was in gay attire and made a pretty sight under the sunshades that had to come up all along the boxes, where it beat down mercilessly part of the afternoon, until the clouds took pity.

Mrs. Caswell wore a thin lace dress over a short black skirt. She was here, there, and everywhere on the grounds attending to the comfort of all. Her daughter wore a natty white riding outfit with a white sweater, tan boots and little straw hat.

Miss Eleonora Sears had a long, tan, tight-fitting coat over her white riding suit. Black boots and a soft gray hat completed her smart appearance.

Miss Alice Thorndike wore brown throughout, and a straw hat to match. In place of the customary riding breeches she had a riding skirt of the same brown cloth as her coat.

Much credit is due Miss Sears and Miss Thorndike for managing such an important affair for the Red Cross.

MUSIC LOVERS TO HAVE A FEAST

This season's Chautauqua will furnish a real feast for all lovers of good music. Aside from the programs furnished by concert troupes, a big operatic company of thirty-five people will give that famous opera, "Robin Hood," that has delighted so many thousands of people. Think of a solid week of entertainment like this for $2.00; can you afford to miss it?

Glimpses Here and There of North Shore Estates

Some Signs of Early Summer Activities Typical of the Times

VIII

MMAGNOLIA, with its sunny rocks, is becoming noted for its gardens, laid out in the open, where the rare sunshine and ozone from old ocean combined can do wonders for them.

This is only the sixth summer for the garden at the Costello C. Converse place on the Shore road and Fuller avenue. Yet nature has been remarkably beautified on the stretch of rocky slope running down to the road back of the house. With the great stucco house at one end and the sea wall at the opposite end, a bit of rare beauty has been gathered into the intervening space.

Here are such roses as the Silver Moon, Paradise, Los Angeles, Grus and Teplitz, and Killarneys by the hundreds. It is hard to tell in this little sea of roses which is the most beautiful, although the Los Angeles has many points in its favor. The roses are offset by beds of Japanese iris, yellow day lilies, and a few other flowers,—just enough to emphasize the beauty of the garden of roses. The roses are doing remarkably well, considering they were all killed off last winter and that these are newly planted this spring. The pretty wild rose is allowed to feature in this garden, a row of them being a sort of boundary on the lawn side. In the middle of the garden are some high rocks, made more picturesque by woodbine trailing over some of them, while the others have flowers growing against their hard, gray surfaces. Heather is growing here also. A bird bath is also on these high rocks. Coming down from the house is a walk and steps made of stones and grass. This is attractively bordered with pansies and other flowers and shrubs. This border, beginning at the entrance to the grounds, is really a garden in itself. All along the walls, which edge the two street sides of the garden, are nasturtiums.

Leaving the flowers is rather hard to do. It is all so bright and sunny and is such a different garden spot from those on the wooded estates. At one side of it, however, is a large lawn with trees, and a few flowers here and there. Birds seem to haunt every tree. After leaving the paths which run between each bed of roses and other flowers here, is found an abundance of lawn space to wander on. From either the garden or lawn a magnificent view is spread out. It is said the sunsets from this vicinity are the most beautiful on the Shore. Coolidge's Point seems just a step across the water, and beyond Kettle island lies Marblehead and Salem shores, with the Beverly and Manchester shores between.

The house stands on the site of the first house in Magnolia. Its cream stucco finish, white trimmings, red roof and green blinds make it especially noticeable from both streets. From the water side its sun-parlor and porches are seen, while the semi-circular shape is marked from the main side.

A garden gate leads from the rose garden out through the wall to the road. A sea wall is also on the opposite side of the road, each estate along this part of the road running down to the water's edge.

If the early settlers in Magnolia could see it now, would it be at all recognizable to them?

THE GORDON DEXTER place, at Beverly Farms, is showing potatoes and vegetables everywhere. Potatoes cover the lawn on two sides, by the house. If one did not know the war was the cause and had seen such a sight a few years ago, he would have thought Mr. Dexter must be exceedingly fond of potato vines for ornaments or rather eccentric in his tastes. To see a tiny house surrounded by potatoes has always been common with some thrifty folk, but only the war and patriotism could cause a beautiful lawn to be planted in this way, by a North Shore resident. (And many, if not all, have all the ground that the rocks will permit them to plant, turned into vegetables.)

The Japanese ducks near the house, in their enclosed pond, are interesting. Indeed, the Dexter place has so many points of interest a little different from other places that we will enumerate a few.

The ancestral home of Lucy Larcom's family was here. Of which our North Shore writer has written: "I used sometimes to feel a little resentment at my fate in not having been born at the old Beverly Farms home-place, as my father and uncles and aunts and some of my cousins had been." It is said that the Dexter house somewhat resembles the Larcom home.

A tool house, made of logs and a little log cabin built up on a high point of land on the place, seem to indicate that this style of architecture is a favorite.

By the cottage is an old Scotch figurehead of a boat, directing auto drivers which way to turn. At the entrance to the estate, which is by a common driveway leading to the Haven estate, the R. S. Bradley place and Mr. Dexter's, is an old Salem sign dated 1684, the quaint Revolutionary figure on it arresting attention at once. The sign shows the way to take to the Dexter home.

The house is a low, light-brown, shingled structure, with dark trimmings and dark blinds, with porches and a sun-parlor to add to its comfortable and cosy appearance. Here, too, is one of the different features, not seen on many houses, in the shape of a great eagle shield on the house, with a flagstaff directly over it. Bird houses are seen in several of the trees around the place.

I stand amid ye summer flowers
To tell ye passing of ye hours.

SO reads the inscription on the sundial in the garden at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Cochrane, of Pride's Crossing. It also bears the date, 1640. The pretty little rose garden and formal garden lie on either side of it and from this point extends the long row of rhododendrons running down to the water. These were all killed out the past winter and have just been replaced.

The big, brown-shingled house of the Cochranes is one of the most beautiful along the Shore. Very English-looking is its appearance, with its wealth of ivy covering. There seems to be more ivy on this house than on any other yet seen, the ampelopsis predominating, with its handsome foliage and in the fall with its ornamental berries. The stone wall or terrace wall is also covered with vines, the trumpet vine and bitter sweet being seen. The barn, which resembles the house in structure, has a wild grapevine over its brown-shingled sides.

Terraces of great sweeping lawns, edged with flowers, are the main features of the place on the seaward side, while trees, hedges and vines seem to contrast on the opposite side with the sunny open spaces. A remarkable white birch, the largest and most uniform tree in that section, of its kind, is noticeable among the trees. A Russian oak hedge is another peculiarity. This is said to be the only one on the Shore. Years ago, when it was planted, one other was set out on the Lee property at Beverly Farms, but it has since died out.

The Cochrane place is one of the Pride's Crossing homes sharing in common that magnificent avenue which is like a tunnel of elms to pass through. These great elms, fifteen or more on either side, were brought from Danvers over seventy years ago, by Charles G. Loring, who bought one hundred acres of the beautiful North Shore in 1845 and built his house in 1846, which is still standing and is occupied by the Jacksons, his grandchildren.

This avenue is used by the P. T. Jackson family from two houses, the Quincy A. Shaws, of "Pompey's Garden," the Cochranes and eventually by the John W. Blodgetts, who bought a point of land off the Jackson place last year and will build their permanent summer home on it, after the war is over.

"Beautiful garden of roses, Kissed by the morning dew."

HAVE you peeped through the tall cedar-pole fence to see Miss Mary F. Bartlett's rose garden? If you have not, do take a walk down Sea street towards the Brownlands, Old Neck, Manchester. Stop at the corner of Sea and Masconomo streets and satisfy your curiosity by looking through the cracks between the poles.

Such a garden spot is performing a real service, not only for Miss Bartlett, but for everyone who passes and gets a feeling of uplift from the sweet scent that is wafted out to the roadside.

The garden lies down on ground much lower than on which the house stands. It is circular in shape and presents a mass of pink and white bloom. Roses will blossom here until frost kills them next November. Centering this lovely little garden of roses is a fountain, and at one side are some roses on trellises, all the others, being small rose bushes.

From the garden runs a path with stepping stones the entire distance of the grounds, and from which other paths and steps lead up to the house. Low growing spruce trees are seen here and there on the fine lawn; also maple and beech trees. Land on the opposite side of Sea street is where Miss Bartlett raises her vegetables and cutting flowers. Bird houses are seen in some of her trees.

The tall cedar pole fence runs all around the sides of the place. From the inside the fence is hardly discernible it is so banked with hedges, trees and ornamental shrubbery, but on the outside it is an attractive feature in itself. The big, light-brown shingled house rises above it very noticeably.

"GLASS HEAD," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Abbott and family, in West Manchester, has an unique little flower garden and bird garden combined, that will unite beauty and utility in a most charming manner. The flowers in the secluded spot are all yellow. In its centre is a most unusual stone bird-bath and feeder, the latter part with arrangements for grains to be spread out on flat hollowed-out surfaces and with an upper part for tallow to be hung on.

Another garden is there, so hidden by trees and shrubbery that when you come upon it, unawares, it takes you by surprise. As you view the lovely little blue-garden watched over by the pure, white marble statue, so suggestive of Diana's hunting days, you feel almost envious of this marble creature who stands with her bow and arrows and dog ready to seek her prey, evidently in the woods around her or in the garden she watches.

Opposite the statue, at the other end, is a table with a seat and two chairs,—just the place to have tea and look across the flowers at the Benzon statue.

The heavy lines of the garden are blue, and in their season such flowers as violas, delphiniums, the anchusa (it has spikes now as tall as seven feet), the ageratum, the veronica, iris, echinops, campanula, lupines and others of various blue tints are seen. Continuous bloom is the object. The plants are all perennials. Other than the blue flowers which predominate, are the bulbs which show soft yellows, the flowers of the Newport pink colors and the old-fashioned foxgloves, with their white and mauve hues. Annuals formerly took the place of the fine collection of perennials of which there are over a hundred varieties. An added color to those mentioned above comes from the roses that climb over rocks on either side of the garden.

Terraces, rocky paths, stone steps, stone seats and wide, grassy paths or openings through the semi-wild grounds are characteristics of the place. In various nooks terraces down near the water have secluded places for tea or afford delightful places to rest in and look seaward.

Smith's Point has a most charming appearance from "Glass Head." It is said the place receives its name from the rocks which have a glassy, brilliant look. The bank on which the house stands is exceedingly high and rocky, and when looking over the edge far down to the water below, the effect is all that could be desired of a seaside home.

French hydrangeas fringe the terraces near the house and also outline the piazzas.

But vegetables are what the Abbott place is excelling in. The large vegetable garden is across the road from the house and is a mass of eatables. Flowers are only incidentals, but they are so beautifully arranged that we could not resist writing of them. The blue-garden was designed by Miss Shipman, a landscape gardener, of New Hampshire.

THE pretty fountain under the pines, with the two big iron storks standing beside it, is always the refreshing sight that greets visitors to "Lookout Hill," the home of the John Hays Hammonds, in French Water Cove, Gloucester. Lily basins and urns are also typical of the place, from the one on the porch to the ponds and cascades out in the rocky grounds. Mrs. Hammond and Arthur A. Shurtleff, the landscape gardener, of Boston and Ipswich, designed the grounds where these lily pools are such a natural looking feature.

The statue of Pan, by Gail Hamilton Sherman, stands guard among the cascades, and everything has been done that is possible to bring the realistic to the waterfalls. A stranger walking through the grounds would think that the Hammonds had chosen their home on this site on account of the magnificent sea view, the beautiful trees and the pools that fall in about six distinct cascades. But they are artificial; so cunningly planned that no one would think it.

There is ever an air of charm and dignity about the house, standing so securely sheltered and screened by great trees from the busy thoroughfare on which it is situated. All the North Shore traffic passes the front door, while all the Boston and Gloucester traffic by boat, is spread out on the seaward side.

This picture of the sea is no better seen from any point than from the main hall of the house, where a mammoth window takes up all of one end. A long divan runs across the window, making this one of the most desired places about the house, where the outlook is all that the name "Lookout Hill" suggests.

Higginson, of West Manchester.

THE Beverly Red Cross will have a red letter day, Saturday, August 17. Judge Wm. H. Moore, of Pride's Crossing, will show his famous horses on his private track at "Rockmarge." Last year this was the biggest social event on the Shore for the Red Cross.

The horse show held at Mrs. John Caswell's, Beverly Farms, last Saturday, netted a little over $1,400 for the Beverly Red Cross.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Holmes, of Boston, are now with the former's mother, Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, of "The Narrows," Manchester.

Mrs. Clement Bernheimer, of 63 High street, Newburyport, recently opened her place for a mid-summer market for the benefit of the wounded soldiers in France. An old-fashioned shop was among the features of the market. She will still keep the shop open on Wednesday afternoons this summer. Mrs. Bernheimer is very much interested in war relief. An Italian Relief booth was also a feature of her recent market.

NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue at 46th Street

NEXT Thursday, August 1, at Manchester-by-the-Sea, between 10 A. M. and 7 P. M., a sale will be held at 28 Central street (next door to the Knight coal office), under the auspices of the Executive Committee of the Tide Over League. The sale will include articles made by persons—mainly the relatives of soldiers and sailors, convalescing from illnesses (non-infectious), which had thrown them out of work. These articles will be distributed between two principal departments; one for baby-clothes, Afghans, etc., one for house-furnishing goods and knitting bags.

This sale should be of special interest to those who wish to help on the war, since the League, for the general purposes of which the funds obtained will be used, is now devoting itself almost exclusively to war matters. The money will be mainly spent in one of two ways:

I. For the payment of the sick relatives of soldiers and sailors by whom most of the articles have been made.

II. For the teaching of rehabilitation students (see circular).

Please remember that perhaps the best outcome of all the thought and effort that this sale represents is that it provides interests and occupation for women—themselves sick—who are waiting anxiously to hear news of those who have left them for the front.

The personnel of the Executive Committee of the Tide Over League is as follows: Mrs. Freeman Allen, acting chairman; Joseph W. Lund, treasurer; Mrs. Thomas Motley, Jr., assistant treasurer and secretary; James M. Jackson, M. D., Miss M. M. Brackett, Miss Eugenia B. Frothingham, Mrs. A. L. Hopkins, Mrs. Harry C. Low, Elliott G. Brackett, M. D., Miss Katherine Motley, Mrs. Wm. S. Spaulding, Mrs. Geo. E. Warren, and Mrs. C. G. Winslow.

“ATT-LEA HOUSE,” Magnolia, has been having very pleasant and instructive food conferences and demonstrations during July. Miss Margaret L. Corlies has been intensely interested in the subject, and opened her library for the work. The instructor is Mrs. J. J. McDonald, of 14 Bellevue avenue, Gloucester. At the meeting this Wednesday many interesting points were brought out. The recipes will appear in the Kitchen department. The ladies sat around the room and took notes and recipes as the demonstrator worked. A maid carried the products to the oven below stairs, where the cook attended to them. When done, Miss Corlies passed them around. Delicious and dainty concoctions were made of wheat substitutes. Cooks and mistresses alike attended from all along the Shore. The last meeting occurs next Wednesday at 4 o'clock. One lady was heard to say she had never learned so much about cooking before. Cooking lessons in this attractive setting have been a novelty for the Shore that has been much appreciated.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Allyn, of Boston, spent last week-end with their daughter, Miss Phyllis Allyn, who is spending the summer, as usual, with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Allyn, of Magnolia avenue, Magnolia.

Mrs. J. Hood Wright, of New York, is with her daughter, Mrs. John Markle, in West Manchester.

THE OLD HOMESTEAD A BIG FEATURE IN THIS SEASON'S CHAUTAUQUA

LIEUT. VASILIE STOICA brought out an interested audience in Horticultural hall in Manchester Thursday at 5 o'clock when he talked upon the struggles of the Roumanians and the attempt and purpose of founding a legion of Roumanians in the United States. Mrs. Russell Codman, of Manchester, had had the sale of tickets in hand. Dr. Dynely Prince of Columbia University introduced the speaker, who is a house-guest at the Codman home.

He is one of the best modern Roumanian authors and historians, and is the president of the Roumanian National League in this country, as well as vice president of the Roumanian National Council of Paris. He is prominent in the Transylvanian political organizations in the Allied countries. In 1913 he was a professor of the Roumanian Young Ladies' High school at Hermanstadt, Transylvania. At the outbreak of the war he became the editor of the newspaper, "Romanul," published at Arad, Hungary. Threatened to be shot by the Hungarian military command at Arad because of the attitude of the paper on the war, he escaped to Roumania across the Carpathian border after two weeks of wandering and many adventures. In Roumania he continued his work of showing up Transylvanian conditions. Because of this he was condemned to death, during his absence, in June, 1916, by the Hungarian court-martial of Klausenburg. When Roumania entered the war he enlisted in the army, and while fighting in the Carpathians was twice wounded. His left lung was pierced by a splinter of shell, which is still lodged in the flesh. He is the author of "The Hapsburgs, the Hungarians, and Roumanians," and also "The Martyrdom of Transylvania." So runs a note in "The Periscope," in which Prof. Stoica has an article in the current issue on "Hungarian Politics and the World War."

He said there are 180,000 Roumanians in this country, and that 10,000 volunteers can easily be got together to form a legion, but 20,000 will go into it if the government helps.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Goodman Waters, of Springfield, are spending some time at the John N. Stevens home, Manchester Cove.

Mrs. Louis Chapin (Julia Tuckerman) and her children, of New York, are with Mrs. Chapin's mother, Mrs. Charles S. Tuckerman, at Ipswich.

The Lowestoft Shop, 10 Bridge street, Manchester, has opened its front parlor for the Vanity Fair Shop, a branch of the main shop at 718 Madison avenue, New York. This is the first season for a Vanity Fair Shop on the Shore. Milady may wonder what she can get in this exclusive little place. She will find the smartest of sport clothes, linen, muslin, and voile dresses, shirt waists, tea gowns, negligees, bathing suits, sport hats, smocks, golf and silk sleeveless sweaters (new and very dressy), children's dresses and beach hats; babies' clothes, baby blankets and carriage robes; lamp shades, pincushions, porch cushions, linen luncheon sets, silk covers for beds or for blankets, and other dainty creations designed for milady's boudoir.

Oh, the strawberry days! how vividly they come back to me! The smell of the clover in the fields, of blooming rye on the hills, of the wild grape beside the woods, and of the sweet honeysuckle above the house. The first hot, moist days. The daisies and the buttercups; the songs of the birds, their first reckless jollity and lovemaking over; the full tender foliage of the trees; the bees swarming, and the air strung with resonant musical chords; the time of the sweetest and most succulent grass. Indeed, the strawberry belongs to the juiciest time of the year.—BURROUGHS (abridged).

MRS. GODFREY L. CABOT of Beverly Farms opened her home last Friday for the first musicale of the season that has been given in a private house. It was in charge of Miss Charlotte Head Allen, who is giving the net proceeds to the Red Cross. The artists were Aline Van Barentzen, pianist; Mrs. Laura C. Littlefield, soprano; and Mrs. Dudley Fitts, accompanist. The accomplished young pianist, Aline Van Barentzen, played selections from Chopin, Debussy, Cyril Scott, Schumann and Liszt. Mrs. Littlefield pleased all with her selections from "Old Revolutionary Melodies," a set of children's songs and various others, which were beautifully rendered.

As the concert was nearing a finish the bells of "victory" were rung in Beverly Farms. Mrs. Littlefield responded to an encore at the close by singing John Alden Carpenter's "Khaki Sammy."

Mrs. Cabot's house is always an attractive place for a musicale, with its large music room, its living rooms and large hall and upper balcony affording ample room for the guests to be seated comfortably, and hear as well as see the performers. The patronesses and friends were present from all along the Shore.

Additional patronesses, other than those previously published, are: Mrs. John A. Burnham, Mrs. Warren B. P. Weeks, Mrs. James H. Proctor, Mrs. Charles P. Blinn, Jr., Mrs. Randolph Frothingham, Mrs. Samuel W. Mixer, Mrs. Albert J. Beveridge, Mrs. John Markle, Mrs. Charles B. Price, Mrs. Charles Edmund Longley, Mrs. D. Herbert Hostetter, Mrs. Thornton K. Lothrop, Mrs. John G. Forrest, Mrs. William R. Thayer, Miss Eleonora Sears, and Mrs. Richard T. Crane.

Mrs. John W. Blodgett, of Pride's Crossing, has taken hotel reservations in Newport for the horse show, which takes place the last of August.

Interesting news reaches us concerning Ensign John Merrill, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Warren Merrill, of Manchester and Boston. Ensign Merrill is in foreign waters, commanding an American destroyer. Not long ago a British ship was torpedoed, and by chance the American destroyer was in the immediate vicinity. With despatch Ensign Merrill brought his ship to the scene and effected a 100 percent rescue. We are not permitted to go more fully into details, though such may be looked for at any time through the daily press.

Rev. William L. Sullivan, of All Souls' church, New York city, will preach at First Unitarian church, Masconomo street, Manchester-by-the-Sea, Sunday, July 28. Service at 10.45 A. M.; all seats free; you are cordially invited.

Mme. Henry Marquisan (Frances Moore), of Washington and Pride's Crossing, entertains on Thursdays at Camp Dix, N. J., where her husband, Lieut. Marquisan, is stationed. Her guests are afforded an opportunity to witness the latter experiment with earth mines, and listen to his explanations, so that they obtain an idea of modern warfare in miniature. Afterwards luncheon is served. The Marquisans spend much of their time in New York, but while in Washington they occupy the big mansion on Massachusetts avenue which is owned by Mrs. Aksel Wichfield, Mme. Marquisan's step-mother, who is at Pride's Crossing for the summer. Lieut. Marquisan has been in America for more than a year, but it is understood that he will shortly be recalled to France.

Mrs. Augustus P. Gardner will spend part of the summer with her father, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, at Nahant, and part with her daughter, Mrs. Grafton W. Minot, at Mingo Beach, Pride's Crossing.

NORTH SHORE SWIMMING POOL, Magnolia.—Last Saturday's swimming contest was a sample of the fine work that will be an attraction there every two weeks the rest of the season. About one hundred guests were in the gallery for last week's events. The point system is used, one point meaning fifth place and on up to five points indicating first place. Henry Rowe received 15 points; Phyllis Allyn, 14; Freddy Ellsworth, 13; Jim Snowden, 7; George Snowden, 6; Bill Campbell, 5; Hélène Ellsworth, 10; and in the midget class were Leila May Stevens, 5 points; Betty Richardson, 4; Phyllis Ellsworth, 3; Hilda Hibben, 2; and Betty Snowden, 1. Prizes will be announced later. Mr. Wallace gives all of his pupils extra class instruction one afternoon each week in racing starts, turns, etc.

The Pool is one of the favorite places on the Shore for the young folk to congregate these hot days. Its parlors and big porches are always delightfully cool.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Gray (Edith Deacon), of Southampton, L. I., received word recently of the death of Mrs. Gray's mother, Mrs. Florence Baldwin, in Rome, Italy. The Grays had been visiting on the Shore before going to their summer home.

OCEANSIDE HOTEL

MAGNOLIA

MMAGNOLIA is having a good season as far as the big Oceanside hotel is concerned. Day by day the house-count of guests at the hotel is ahead of last year, and that tells a whole lot when the general conditions are considered. The hotel season up through the White Mountains and along the New Hampshire and Maine resorts is far from being satisfactory. Not so at the Oceanside; the season is as good as last year, and only a little behind normal conditions.

"Al Piave"—Refreshments and ices served for the benefit of the Italian crippled soldiers, in the Magnolia Colonnade, week days, 3 to 6.30.

This new form of war relief work has started off with an overwhelming success for those concerned. Mrs. William H. Scudder and her daughter, Mrs. Gustavo di Rosa, wife of the Italian Consul, of Boston, are very much pleased with the appreciation the North Shore people are showing for their undertaking. Last Monday a week ago was the opening. Saturday night they were also open by request, although night work is not in the schedule. The patronage kept up until nearly midnight. Assisting last week were Miss Lois McGinley, Mrs. E. R. Campbell, Mrs. Spencer Kennard, Mrs. Lawrence White, Mrs. Norman Mackie, Mrs. William H. Coolidge, Jr., and Mrs. Henry McRee. The young women do all the work themselves, only one maid being employed to attend to matters in the little kitchen. The cakes are made at Mrs. Scudder's home in Magnolia. With these are served ices, ice cream, candies, and other dainty things. Italian cards and souvenirs also are for sale. All money made here is sent to Rome, the headquarters for the work.

MARBLEHEAD.—

Ezra Eaton, son of the late Charles S. Eaton, who summered for many years at Marblehead Neck, has been made a second lieutenant in the quartermaster's department.

Services are being held at the little chapel at Marblehead Neck every Sunday, and there is a good-sized attendance of cottagers. The list of visiting ministers are as follows: July 28, Rev. H. H. French of Nashua, N. H.; Aug. 4, Rev. Alfred V. Bliss, Taunton; Aug. 11, Rev. George Edward Martin, Auburndale; Aug. 25, Rev. James S. Williamson, East Gloucester.

Henry W. Belknap of Warren street, Salem, spent the week-end at the Eastern Yacht club, Marblehead Neck. Mr. Belknap and mother formerly summered on the Neck.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Beals of Boston have leased the Claflin house, corner Ferry lane and Harbor avenue, Marblehead Neck. Mr. Beals is on his way home from New Zealand, where he has been on business.

John S. Lawrence and family of Boston have leased the Percival house, at Marblehead Neck, for the season. The Lawrences have a handsome home at Topsfield, and last year Mrs. Lawrence was among the prime movers in the Topsfield Community Canning club.

Miss Carrie Van Brunt of Brooklyn, N. Y., has taken the Gooch house on Ocean avenue, Marblehead Neck, and will arrive about the first of August for the season. Miss Van Brunt, an ardent admirer of Marblehead, has just presented to the Marblehead Neck hall a beautiful leaded window of colored glass, to be placed in the opening above the speaker's head. In presenting the window, Miss Van Brunt writes as follows to Gen. Elbert Wheeler, the President of the Marblehead Neck Hall Association:

"With this I am leaving the window, which, last summer, I offered to make for Marblehead Neck Hall, and which you accepted. Should anyone ask why I made the window or what it means or something of the kind, please let me say that all outdoors is so beautiful in Marblehead that it seemed to be that even when indoors, in the hall, it would be pleasant to have a glimpse of the sky and a couple of sea gulls—hence the window, to be placed over the speaker's head.

"It has no especial meaning, except an effort to express my admiration for nature. In the border the four colors used,—creamy yellow, soft green, coral and violet of iron,—all appear frequently in Marblehead landscape. They are here combined with black and white in Egyptian fashion. The main constructive line in the center is that found in the Monad—a form occurring in the early decoration of many countries. By it the circle is divided into two parts suggesting Land and Sea, Man and Woman, Day and Night, Work and Prayer—what you will—but each complements the other and together they form a perfect sphere.

"While making the window, I have been thinking of Marblehead, and so I have been very happy, for I dearly love Marblehead, and this window is just a little token of my affection."

This window will greatly improve the interior of the hall and will be highly appreciated by the people congregating there. Services are held at this hall each Sunday during July and August, at 11 o'clock, to which the public is cordially welcomed.

George P. Morrill and Mrs. Morrill of Salem, have opened their little bungalow at Marblehead Neck for the summer.

Paul Crocker entertained a party of gentlemen friends at his attractive summer home on Ocean avenue, last Friday.

Mrs. Max Friedman of Ocean avenue, Marblehead Neck, was the hostess at a quiet dinner party, held at her home, Friday evening.

The R. E. Traiser house on Ocean avenue, Marblehead Neck, is made unusually attractive by the huge window boxes filled with bright pink and lavender petunias, which grow to a great size. The windows in the second story have these flowers which hang picturesquely over the doorway and balcony. The gardens of this estate are in splendid condition, the crops proving to be winners, and as fast as one plot is cleaned of its harvest, a new lot of seeds is planted.

The moonlight nights of the past week have brought out the strollers and automobile parties at the Neck, and every evening finds numerous picnic parties all the way from Devereux beach to the Churn and Castle Rock.

The cottagers, anxious to keep the grounds about the houses in good condition, have posted signs asking the picnickers to do their share about removing all debris when they leave. So far the spirit of the picnickers has been very good and there has been little trouble.

The Marblehead Transportation company, now that business is so dull, and as they do not carry the mails, have announced that after seven in the evening the ferry will not run. This is a source of annoyance to some of the Neck people, as the help has always patronized the boats quite liberally on their evening pleasures. Now in order to reach town they either hike across the causeway or a jitney comes over from the local picture house to gather in prospective patrons.

Frank H. Russell, president and general manager, of the Burgess Co., and who lives in an attractive stone house on the Marblehead water front, was last week re-elected president of the National Aircraft Manufacturers' association. The annual meeting was held aboard a large yacht in New York harbor. Mr. Russell is the head of the main dependence of the government in winning this war, as the Aircraft Manufacturers' association is the only national organization of its kind.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Pope of Marblehead have returned from a week's cruise along the Maine shore in their yacht. Mrs. Pope is active in Marblehead War relief and is chairman of the Special Aid society.

George D. Haskell and family of Concord, Mass., are occupying the Lieut.-Comm. W. Starling Burgess cottage, in Marblehead. Mr. Haskell has just returned from Europe, where he has been on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Leland Caulver, of Boston, have returned to their attractive home at Marblehead. Mrs. Caulver is a well known artist, and the interior of their home is decorated with handsome specimens of her work.

MRS. EDWARD HAMLIN, a season guest at the New Ocean House, and who is one of the cheeriest members of this large household, is greatly interested in war work, busily engaged in Red Cross knitting and the making of surgical dressings at the hotel. She is a great friend of the children at the hotel and has written a poem called "Two Houses," especially dedicated to the young people who play all day long in the sand in front of the hotel.

TWO HOUSES

Two happy children, at play on the sands,
Built a fort with brown chubby hands,
Then shouted with laughter and innocent glee,
For all their playmates to come and see
The wonderful building they thought so grand,
A house like "Daddy's" in the far-away land.

One dear little fellow, with big brown eyes,
Gazed at the fort, then exclaimed in surprise:
"My Daddy's house is a hut or a trench,
'Cause he's fighting Germans with the English and French.
He marches and fights and sleeps where he can,
And eats all his dinners out of a pan."

"Oh, dear," sighed Bobby, "I s'pose it's true.
But our Daddy's different; I thought you knew.
He sailed in a ship as big as can be,
And guards all the coast from sea to sea.
So when he reaches a far-away port,
We now our Daddy will live in a fort."

THE following bit of personal connection of one of Manchester's summer residents with the Beverly Historical society is given below: The Tablet room mentioned is in the home of the society in Beverly. (See BREEZE of July 19 for account of the place, which is open to visitors every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon.)

In the Tablet room one of the bronzes is thus inscribed: "In memory of Captain William Rayment's company who served in the expedition to Canada and to the Eastward at Fort St. Mary and Cape Breton in 1690."

Capt. Rayment, who had been in 1683 appointed by the General Court lieutenant commander of the Beverly and Wenham troops; was a prominent citizen, a deputy from Beverly to the General Court and Legislature, and one of the founders of Beverly. He came from Essex, England, of a fine English family. His name and that of his brother, John Rayment, are on the tablet to the right of the Planters' tablet.

The change in spelling is interesting—the old spelling, Rayment, changed to Raymond. These changes frequently occurred in early English times.

A direct lineal descendant of Capt. William Raymond is Mrs. J. Warren Merrill, whose maiden name was Raymond and whose homes—in Manchester and Hamilton—are so near Beverly, where her ancestor played so prominent a part in the military and legislative life of the town.

There is a tradition in the Raymond family that Capt. Raymond kept a pack of hounds and perhaps hunted the country about Hamilton and Wenham, where now is the Myopia Hunt club. An interesting account of these times can be found in the histories of Essex county. To read and think about the hardships and the wars those men overcame is a help to their descendants to bear bravely the danger and difficulty which all our young are now so gloriously facing.

The "History of Essex County" says: "From generation to generation and from century to century the Herricks and Raymonds have kept up their military prestige." One of Capt. Raymond's direct descendants, the son of Mrs. Merrill, is now in the successful work of the American destroyers overseas.

AT "The Oaks," the Beverly Farms home of the Godfrey L. Cabots, three pictures, skillfully done by Frank Benson, the Salem artist, have been hung in the music room recently. One of Mr. Cabot shows him in his navy uniform. He is an aid to Admiral Wood in aviation work. The other pictures are of the sons, James Jackson Cabot and Thos. D. Cabot. The former is fighting overseas, while the latter is in Texas. Both are aviators. The son in Texas is teaching advanced flying and has just been giving an exhibition of formation and stunt flying with four others in aid of the Red Cross. These interesting pictures have a dignified and delightful setting in this large new room that was added to the Cabot home last year. Only two other paintings are in the room—a large marine view by Richards and a wood scene by Enneking.

Along the Cape Ann Shore

by ALEX. G. TUPPER

CAPE ANN.—The season is well under way and every day the arrivals at the various hotels increase. It is interesting to note how many more of the summer people who now come to this section bring their automobiles. The visitors are finding out what pleasant and interesting drives can be taken on Cape Ann and the North Shore. Perhaps at no resort is there more to interest the tourist as he motors along the quaint streets, or the wooded and open roads. The Cape drive is a popular one, for the large island of Gloucester and Rockport can be circled, with good roads and the scenery is delightful, taking in the coast and ocean, old houses, the quarries, and the green fields and hills. By turning off at Dock Square, Rockport, one may travel the roads of Marmion Way and Land's End. Then again, what lovelier drive can one take than the coast boulevard of East Gloucester, starting at Bass Rocks, skirting the shore at Grapevine Cove, Brace's Cove, to Eastern Point lighthouse, or turning down the Eastern Point golf links road to the Niles Beach, one may connect with Eastern Point road to the city proper again. The city of Gloucester has taken this shore boulevard and has started to improve it, a portion of it being completed. Now that private individuals are endeavoring to shut off the beautiful Brace's Cove road, a petition is being presented to the municipal council, by Bass Rocks summer residents and citizens, to have this road, for so many years used by the citizens, saved from the privacy of one property holder. The road, skirting the rocks and ocean, one of Gloucester's noted points of interest, leads to the lighthouse. The hauling off of the old Gloucester steam ferry has been regretted by the average summer visitor traveling over this interesting route, where a splendid view of the water front and shipping was obtained. However, interest is growing in the ferry "Wonasquam," which plies between the Wheeler landing, at East Gloucester, and the Annisquam river, the landing at the latter place being near the Yacht club. This sail is one which the tourist should take before leaving Cape Ann.

Mr. and Mrs. George Atherton have come on from Washington and are comfortably installed at the Hawthorne Inn.

Percy Lee Atherton of Boston has arrived at the Hawthorne Inn, East Gloucester, for the season. He is chairman of the music committee, which has in charge the arrangement of music for the pageant which is to be given in East Gloucester the middle of August.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Engel of Park Drive, Brookline, and Mr. Engel's mother and sister of New York were the guests of East Gloucester friends on Sunday, coming down by motor. Mr. Engle is the well known composer and musical editor.

AN attractive military wedding of interest on Tuesday, particularly to people of the Bass Rocks colony, was that held in St. John's Episcopal church, Gloucester, when Miss Louise Perry Cooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Cooper, of Mt. Vernon, O., summer residents of Atlantic road, Bass Rocks, became the bride of Ensign Montgomery Harley Talbot, who is stationed for the present at Charlestown Navy Yard. The wedding took place sooner than was at first planned, for Ensign Talbot will leave shortly for overseas. The church, which was prettily decorated with white lilies and palms, was filled with relatives and friends, many prominent society people of the North Shore being present. The wedding march was played by Dustin Russell, the church organist, and the marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Joseph H. C. Cooper, rector of St. Johns. The bridesmaid was Miss Irene Cooper, sister of the bride; the matron-of-honor, Mrs. Fletcher Reed Andrews, of Cleveland, O., and the two maids-of-honor, Mrs. Stanley M. Cox, of Philadelphia and Bass Rocks, and Mrs. Nelson Black, of Columbus, O.

The bride was most attractive in her gown of white satin, cut en-traine, and she wore a cap veil and carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and roses. Miss Cooper, the bridesmaid; wore pale green organdie, with white sash and white hat, and she carried pink roses, as did all the other bride's attendants.

Mrs. Andrews, the matron-of-honor, wore pink organdie and pink and white hat, and the two maids-of-honor, Mrs. Cox and Mrs. Black, wore white organdie, with pink and white hats, the contrast with the bouquets of roses being most pleasing. Hyde Cox, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley M. Cox and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Hyde, of Philadelphia and Bass Rocks, was the ring bearer. Both the groom and his best man, Ensign Paul Day, of Commonwealth Pier, Boston, were in naval attire.

Following the ceremony at the church, the wedding party was driven to the Bass Rocks Golf clubhouse, where a reception was held. The young couple were assisted in receiving by Mrs. C. G. Cooper, mother of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Max Talbot, parents of the groom, and the bride's four attendants. Guests were present from along the Shore, Boston, New York, and Mt. Vernon, O. Sewall's orchestra, of Gloucester, rendered music, and Cooke, of Boston, catered. The artistic interior of the clubhouse presented a charming picture during the reception, and the large veranda, with its thick growth of pink rambler roses, added to the beauty of the scene. The day was a typical summer one, and the cool breezes from the sea, sweeping over the expanse of green golf links, were refreshing in the extreme heat of the day. After a brief wedding tour in the White Mountains, Mr. Talbot will report for duty, and his charming young wife will reside with her parents at Bass Rocks. Mr. and Mrs. Max Talbot, the former a prominent men's clothing dealer having stores in various cities, are summer residents of Bass Rocks. Mr. Cooper, father of the bride, is a manufacturer of the Corliss gasoline engine, in Mt. Vernon, O. As he is just rallying from a critical illness of the past winter and spring, he was unable to receive at the wedding reception with Mrs. Cooper. The bride is a graduate of Vassar college, class of '16, and she prepared herself for Vassar at Bradford Academy, Bradford, Mass. She is popular in the Bass Rocks colony, where she is a member of the younger social set, a good golfer and tennis player, and a member of the Bass Rocks club.

BASS ROCKS. "Vive la France!" This is the attractive heading on notices, with the American and French flags accompanying it, placed in conspicuous places at Bass Rocks hotels, at the Golf clubhouse, and other spots, announcing the Handicap Match competition at the Bass Rocks Golf club links, July 24 to 27. The finals, it is anticipated, will be played this Saturday afternoon. And this tournament, which has created such interest, is for the benefit of the fatherless children of France. The entrance fee was $2.00, or as much over that amount as any player chose to give.

The number of bathers has been quite unusual at Good Harbor beach during the hot spell, and each day hundreds of people visited the beautiful stretch of sand. The big bathhouse had an excellent patronage. Visitors are not forgetting that the little Red Cross Tea House is nearby, managed by attractive young ladies. The place is very inviting.

An improvement along the Bass Rocks, Shore boulevard, or that part of Atlantic road between Nautilus road and the Southgate cottage, is the widening of the road and the placing of huge stones in rustic fashion to separate the foot path from the driveway.

A fine poster, advertising the little Red Cross Tea Room, was drawn and colored by Thomas W. Mills, of Atlantic road. An attractive model is sitting, partaking of a cup of tea, with a large red cross behind her.

Mr. Hassam is stopping at Hotel Moorland, Bass Rocks.

Bishop J. G. Murray and family, of Baltimore, are located at the Moorland for the summer.

Pittsburgh parties stopping at the Moorland include D. L. Gillispie and wife; H. L. Ferguson and family; W. B. Ramsay.

ROCKPORT.—Despite the hot weather for a number of days, the large number of golf enthusiasts went over the fine course of the Rockport Country club, Land's End, daily, in the tournaments. The links are showing the improvements and care taken of the course during the spring and early summer. A new fourth hole has been placed at the edge of the wood, several bunkers also being arranged in the advance. The old fourth and fifth holes have been combined in the new fifth. The tennis court has been put into splendid condition by experts secured by the club treasurer, George H. Corey. A great many wielders of the racquet, among them clever players, are taking advantage of the court. The regular dance last Saturday evening was especially largely attended. The proceeds from the play and the sale of flowers and refreshments were turned into the Red Cross fund.

COUNTRY CLUB NOTES

The course has been greatly improved at the Rockport Country club, by the construction of a new fourth hole, situated on the edge of the wood, with several bunkers in the foreground. Carefully played short mashie puts one safely on the green, but a careless player has no chance, for it is almost impossible to make a good score unless one is exactly on the green. The Massachusetts rating for this hole is three. Everybody admires it for its beauty, and its sportiveness. The old fourth and fifth holes have been combined into the new fifth, making a fine three drive hole. The fairways and the greens are in fine condition, due to the recent rains and the fine upkeep. Ouimet remarked that he had never seen the course in better condition.

The tennis court has just been put in commission by several experts procured by the treasurer, George H. Corey. This is the first year that the court has been put in commission so early in the season. It is being taken advantage of by many players, and is becoming very popular, especially among the younger set.

The regular Saturday evening dance was held and was attended by the largest crowd of the season, the Imperial orchestra furnishing excellent music, which was repeatedly encored. Refreshments were served.

MRS. LYDIA GOTT TARR

Mrs. Lydia Gott Tarr, widow of Asa F. Tarr, passed away last Friday, at the age of 80 years, 3 months, 28 days. She was the daughter of Ebenezer and Lydia (Gott) Pool, and was born in Rockport (then Sandy Bay) on March 21, 1838. She was a descendant of Ebenezer Poole, Rockport's early historian, and has been much interested in local history, leaving many records which may prove of value.

On July 1, 1869, she was united in marriage to Asa F. Tarr, who passed on, January 15, 1917. Since then her health has failed, especially so during the last few months.

Since the death of her husband she has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel H. Babson. Her only son, Rev. James J. G. Tarr, Ph.D., of Beverley, has been here passing his vacation at the homestead with his family, before assuming charge of a large church in Everett, to which he has recently been called.

Mrs. Tarr was a member of the First Congregational church, and for years was secretary of the sewing circle. She was interested in the building of Memorial hall and was secretary of the circle organized to carry on the work.

LEST WE FORGET

Don't forget the great conflict that's raging,
The worst the world ever knew;
For justice and right we are fighting.
Stop! think what defeat means to you!

Don't forget the brave boys that are giving their lives
In the trenches for you and for me;
Dying like heroes their country to save,
On land, in the air, and on sea.

Remember what this war means to your child,
Remember what it means to you,
Your dollars must help win the Victory—
Get him before he gets you.

Remember it's no time to falter—
It's only just one chance in two—
If you dodge your part the Victory to win,
Your country is down, out and through.

Don't forget the flag our your country—
What it has done and is doing for you—
Stand by it, the grandest the world ever knew,
Old Glory, the Red, White and Blue.

Don't forget the birds will sing sweeter,
And the stars will shine brighter by night,
With Victory our's, the boys marching home
And the world safe for justice and right.

EDITORIAL

THE LABOR PROBLEM IN AMERICA has ceased now to be a question which involves the interests merely of the employer and of the employees, but involves the interests of the government and of the people. In days of oppression by organized industries, labor had a right to assert its normal rights, to obtain reasonable hours of service, and to safe-guard the interests of their homes and their families. Such an interest is genuine and no one will question it. Laboring interests command the respect and the attention of every one, but the rights of labor are circumscribed by the rights of invested funds, the community welfare, and now by the interests of this great war. Beginning with a small power, laboring organizations have become a great power. This increased power makes for the good of the country as a whole or against it. If men of high minds and noble instincts are in command they but if swayed by the demagogue and the unscrupulous they may easily become a menace and a harm. Here lays the crux of the problem, not the gaining of labor union power, but in its misuse. When the power is used honorably for righteousness and good government, it is a power for good; but when used otherwise, it is subversive of the very liberty and freedom for which they were organized. Neither must labor exert petty tyranny over workmen or consumers of materials produced by labor. Should any organization restrain the rights of any individual to work or not to work? And in the time of war should not there be some provision made to assure a complete coöperation with the government in its great work? The period which we are now going through will tax the best minds of our labor leaders, and they will remain true and patriotic and avoid the eddies which will mean the ruin of the best interests of labor.

THE ALIEN ENEMIES in our country are being carefully canvassed. The women aliens have also been forced to register for the sake of our country. America was a little slow about rounding up aliens of the enemy country, but her hesitancy was not due to inefficiency but to America's cautious determination to give every man his freedom and to wrong no man. No man, alien or otherwise, who is loyal in this country will be molested.

THE NORTH SHORE HAS BEEN an attractive place these last two weeks. The change in weather conditions is most welcome after the cold and dampness of the late spring and early summer. The waters of the beaches have been warm, enticing the workers from work to recreation in the refreshing waters on our shore.

THE CROWN PRINCE WAS just stupid enough to begin the drive he planned upon Bastille Day, the day of all days when the French are thrilled with the spirit of love for their native land.

THE BUSY HOURS of self-sacrificing labor put into the many workrooms along our Shore are a blessing. The North Shore is doing its part royally and with a good spirit.

THE SUBMARINE EVIDENTLY has learned to avoid our sea lanes across to Europe.

LAST WEEK WILD RUMORS were afloat about the victory which our men won in the war zone in France. That news was exhilarating and significant, but with the news of the good drive made came conflicting rumors concerning the capture of one of the Kaiser's sons. Someone in the intoxication of the hour ordered bells to be rung, and they were rung very generally in this part of New England. It had one great advantage: that the news of our rejoicing would be carried overseas and the men in the trenches would be cheered by news from home, and that at home we were following their successes with satisfaction and delight. For this reason the bell-ringing was commendable. There are other sides to the question, and while no one would criticize with any intensity the well-meaning individuals who started the celebration, it does appear to many the better part of discretion to postpone rejoicing and bell-ringing until some decisive advance has been made that has a direct bearing upon the issues of the war. It is well that everyone rejoiced and were made glad by last week's drive, but in the future those who are in positions of authority should weigh news carefully and order bells to be rung only for victory news that is of first-class merit and permanent value. Last week's drive was significant because it was the beginning of what we all now know will bring victory and success, and for this reason the bell-ringing may have been a good way to express the rejoicing of the people and their determination to see this war through to the end and Germany defeated. Then we will ring the bells that will be heard in Berlin.

QUENTIN ROOSEVELT HAS EARNED his reward, the esteem and honor of a great nation. A young man in years, a strong man in bravery, and a worthy son of a worthy father, he has given his life valiantly and honorably in the defense of his native land and for Freedom the world over. Theodore Roosevelt showed the strength of his own personality with his usual power. A man who could stand and finish a speech with a bullet shot at him could be depended upon to bear with fortitude and true courage the news of the tragedy which had befallen his home. Roosevelt is proud of his noble son. He knows the keen edge of sorrow and the grasp of grief, but he also knows how to live and if need be die for his own country. It was to be expected that when the death of his son was announced the very sorrow of his heart would make him a man proud of his sons and their noble work.

THE GERMAN SUBMARINES have been operating off the American shore recently, but with no appreciable results. The attacks made Sunday upon a tug and barges can hardly have been termed a submarine triumph. It does indicate the effectiveness of the submarine in crossing from overseas to America, and the effective capacities of a submarine after so long a journey. The days of the German submarine are numbered!

WHAT AN ENCOURAGEMENT it is to realize that after all the forty years of preparations, our soldier men have been able to meet the foe and drive him back and retain 17,000 prisoners! It has been done once now. It can be done again.

Fresh Beef Travels on a Rapid Schedule

Fresh beef for domestic markets goes from stockyards to retail stores within a period of about two weeks. Although chilled, this meat is not frozen; hence it cannot be stored for a rise in price.

A steer is dressed usually within twenty-four hours after purchase by the packer. The beef is held in a cooler at the packing house, at a temperature a little above freezing, for about three days.

It is then loaded into a refrigerator car where a similar temperature is maintained, and is in transit to market on an average of about six days.

Upon arrival at the branch distributing house, it is unloaded into a "cooler", and placed on sale.

Swift & Company requires all beef to be sold during the week of arrival, and the average of sales is within five days.

Any delay along the above journey means deterioration in the meat and loss to the packer.

A Passing Glimpse of History of Some of the North Shore Resorts

THE following excerpts from "Historical Collections," by John Warner Barber, published in 1839, may be of interest to our readers who care for a passing glimpse of history of some of the inland resorts:

"The Indian name of Ipswich was Agawam, a word, it is said, which denoted a place where fish of passage resorted; it was applied to several places in Massachusetts. This is said to have been the first place in Essex County known to have been visited by Europeans. In 1611, Capt. Edward Hardie and Nicholas Hobson sailed for North Virginia; they touched at this place and were kindly received. In 1614, Capt. John Smith, in his description of North Virginia, or New England, thus speaks of Agawam:

"Here are many rising hills, and on their tops and descents are many corne fields and delightful groues. On the east is an isle of two or three leagues in length, the one halfe plaine marish ground, fit for pasture, or salt ponds, with many faire high groues of mulberry trees. There are also okes, pines, walnuts, and other wood, to make this place an excellent habitation.' The first permanent settlement was commenced in March, 1633, by Mr. John Winthrop, Jr., and twelve others. In 1634, Agawam was incorporated by the name of Ipswich.

"Johnson remarks of Ipswich dwellings about 1646, 'Their houses are many of them very faire built, with pleasant gardens.'

"In 1638, Masconnohent, the sagamore of Agawam, sold his right to Ipswich for £20. This chief appears to have died about 1658. He lived to see his people become almost extinct. He was buried on Sagamore Hill, now within the bounds of Hamilton. As late as 1726, there were three families, each having a wigwam back of Wigwam Hill, at the Hamlet. It is probable that not long after this year the tribe became entirely extinct."

(NOTE—"Sagamore Farm," the Hamilton home of the late Major Augustus P. Gardner and Mrs. Gardner, is near the Ipswich line.)

"Hamilton was formerly a part of Ipswich, and was called Ipswich Hamlet until 1793, when it was incorporated a separate town. Agriculture is the principal employment of the inhabitants, though shoes are made to a considerable extent annually. In 1837, boots and shoes were manufactured to the value of $14,702. Population, 827. Distance from Boston, 26 miles.

"The town is pleasantly located, and the soil good; but the inhabitants are so much scattered that there is no compact village. Chebacco river takes its rise here, from Chebacco pond, and several other smaller ponds near the southeast boundary of the town. Wenham swamp extends into the southern part of the town. Ipswich river runs along the western border.

"Hamilton has only one religious society; this is Congregational, and was organized in 1714, as the third of Ipswich. The Rev. Samuel Wigglesworth, the first pastor, was settled in 1714, died in 1768. He was succeeded by the Rev. Manasseh Cutler, in 1771, who died in 1823. His successor was the Rev. Joseph B. Felt, who was installed in 1824, resigned in 1833."

Mr. Felt is author of "Annals of Salem, History of Ipswich, Hamilton and Essex."

"Wenham's first regular settlement appears to have been made about the year 1639. It was then called Enon, and was within the limits of Salem. It was incorporated a town in 1643. The first sermon ever preached in the town was by the celebrated Hugh Peters, then minister of Salem, about the year 1636. It was on a small conical hill, on the bank of the pond, and the text was, 'At Enon, near Salem, because there was much water there.' The first church was gathered here in 1644, and the first pastor, Rev. John Fisk.

"Topsfield was at the time of its settlement called New Meadows. It was settled about 1639, but was not incorporated till 1650. The first settlers were from Salem and Ipswich. The names of some of the principal inhabitants were Bradstreet, Clark, Cummings, Smith, Town, Wildes and Easty."

ALICE MORSE EARLE, in "Child Life in Colonial Days," says: "If the paradise of the Orientals is a garden, so was a garden of old-fashioned flowers the earthly paradise for a child: the long sunny days brought into life so many delightful playthings to be made through the exercise of that keen instinct of all children, destructiveness. Each year saw the fresh re-telling and teaching of child to child, of happy flower customs almost intuitively, or through the 'knowledge never learned at schools,' that curious subtle system of transmission which everywhere exists among children who are blessed enough to spend their summer days in the woods or in a garden. The sober teachings of science in later years can never make up the loss to those who have lived their youth in great cities, and have grown up debarred from this inheritance, knowing not when

'The summer comes with flower and bee.'
* * * * *

There is no sense of caste among children when in a field or garden—all are equally well dressed when 'bedizened and brocaded' with garden finery. Green leaves can be pinned with their stems into fantastic caps and bonnets; foxglove fingers can be used as gloves; the blossoms of the jewelweed make pretty earrings; and the dandelion and daisy chains are not the only necklaces,—the lilac and larkspur chains and pretty little circlets of phlox are proudly worn; and strings of rose-hips end the summer. The old England herbalist says 'children with delight make chains and pretty gewgaws of the fruit of roses.' Truly the garden-bred child walks in gay attire from May to October."

You remember the story of Apollo and Daphne, don't you? How the beautiful maiden was followed by the sun-god, begging her to wander with him. How she flew from him frightened, and after a long flight, sank down exhausted near a great woods. Apollo was fast approaching, when Daphne was changed into a tree. Apollo now saw his mistake. He knew that he had lost the fair maiden forever. He could never see her wandering on the hillsides again in the early mornings. To show how he loved her, he said that she should be honored by the bravest in the land. He took a wreath from her branches and said that the laurel wreath should ever be the token of victory and a remembrance of her beauty.

So now we have the shrub Daphne, Daphne Mezereum, which still enjoys the shade, as Daphne, the wood nymph, did. It is seen in many gardens on the Shore.

*Prayers of love like rain-drops fall,
Tears of pity are cooling dew,
And dear to the heart of Our Lord are all
Who suffer like Him in the good they do!*

The caddies are back to work at the Essex County club. Incidentally it may be of interest to know that there is only one other club in the country paying as much as is paid the caddies here. This fact was learned after a careful canvass by wire a few days ago.

Chairman Edward S. Knight, of the Board of Assessors, yesterday announced Manchester's tax rate for 1918 as $10 on $1,000 of valuation, which is $3.50 less than last year. A summary of the figures compiled by the board will be found in detail on page 44.

Singing beach has been the most popular spot in Manchester during the hot days of the past week. Bathing has been at high water mark this week, starting with last Sunday, when there were hundreds of people in the water all day long. The temperature of the water had averaged around 65°.

The sinking of some coal barges off Cape Cod the first of the week by a German U-boat was of distinct interest to Manchester people, because one of the barges—the steel barge No. 740—was in Manchester harbor twice during May, and was here several times last year. Barge No. 766, also sunk, was a sister ship to the one in Manchester the first of this week, No. 767. The Perth Amboy was the best and newest ocean-going tug owned by the Lehigh Valley Co.

The Home Service Committee of the Manchester branch of the Red Cross has opened an office for consultation in the gallery of the Horticultural Hall.

Anyone wishing to obtain information concerning their allotment, allowance, state aid, or Red Cross aid will find a member of the committee ready to give the necessary information Thursday afternoons, from 3 to 5.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Knight are in Washington visiting their son, Samuel Knight, who is in camp at the Washington barracks.

The war has been brought nearer home to the BREEZE this week by troubles incident to one of its chief workmen going to war. The man who sets most of the type for these pages is now at Camp Devens, and to break a new man into the job in the middle of the busiest month of the year is no small matter. Part of the type has been set in Boston, part in Salem, and a good deal has not been set at all. We are glad to say, however, that the BREEZE is out pretty nearly on time this morning after one of the most severe weeks, as regards strenuous labors, long hours, etc., in our fifteen years of existence.

The coming films are "Pershing's Crusaders" and "My Four Years in Germany."

FOOD CENTRE NOTES

The allowance of 25 pounds of sugar for canning to each family has been withdrawn so that more than the three pounds per person per month cannot be obtained. This leaves no margin for canning.

The Food Centre urges that, in spite of this, the canning of fruit be continued without sugar. No sugar has been used in canning fruit at the Food Centre since July 1. The product is eatable and worth while. The process is the same as when a sugar syrup is used.

The float has been put in the water at Masconomo park again. The board was a little skeptical about putting it overboard this year, because, it is alleged, its privileges were abused last year. Instead of leaving the float free to the public, a few owners of boats monopolized the whole of it for their private use.

Drill will be held next Monday evening as usual. The drill was not held last Monday, but, in its place, an auction was held of the goods left over from the recent tour of duty at Camp Augustus P. Gardner, Framingham. Daniel E. O'Brien was the auctioneer, and some $17 was realized from the auction. As "part of the game," though everybody didn't know it at the time, one member of the company disputed Corp. O'Brien's right to serve as an auctioneer, and was not in favor of an auction anyway.

The boys are still talking about their good time at camp last week. Co. I to a man had the best time of their lives. Everybody hated to break camp last Friday. Like unto everything else in camp last week, Co. I was at the head of the regiment when it came to getting away. The Manchester truck was the first to get loaded and start upon its homeward journey.

royal a welcome home as was their departure the previous Sunday. The bells were ringing joyously, but because of the great victory in France, may we explain. We must add, however, that it was a member of Co. I that did the ringing, with all the honors that accompany such a thing. Alfred E. Hersey had come home on the truck and it was he who rang the joy bells.

One of the pleasant incidents of the last Monday evening meeting was the presentation to Musician Cook of a bank book for $20 made out in the name of the little ten-pound daughter who arrived at Mr. Cook's Pleasant street home while he was in camp. She was named Augusta Gardner Cook, in honor of the camp, named after our late Congressman Gardner.

One cannot always believe what they see in the papers. For instance, in the report of doings at Camp Gardner, Framingham, Tuesday, it said: "Today a detail from L company of Winchester, in charge of Lieut. R. C. Allen, laid out the camp for the 16th regiment of infantry, which comes here tomorrow for a five-days' tour of duty." This was Lieut. R. C. Allen of I Co., of Manchester.

GERMAN CONSUL ARRESTED IN MANCHESTER AS ALIEN ENEMY

Oswald Kunhardt, consul-general at Boston for the German and Austrian governments up to the declaration of war by the United States, was arrested in Manchester as a German enemy alien Wednesday afternoon. The arrest was made by Chief of Police William H. Sullivan, of Manchester-by-the-Sea, under orders of Asst. U. S. Dist. Atty. Judd Dewey, following the arrival of Kunhardt at Manchester, his summer home, aboard a train from Boston.

Kunhardt went directly to the beach after leaving the train at 3.19 p. m. and joined two women and another Boston man. The officers called Kunhardt away from his friends and informed him that he was wanted by the department of justice. He returned to his friends and shook their hands and bade them good-by.

Kunhardt, who is 42 years old, is the Boston representative of the Berlin Aniline Works, a New York corporation with offices at 124 Pearl street. He is a bachelor and has made his summer residence at Manchester for about sixteen years. Of late he has rented a room in a house on School street. Before the United States entered the war he maintained his winter residence at the Tennis and Racquet club, on Boylston street, Boston, and was a prominent member of that organization until he resigned in 1915.

He has been in the United States nineteen years and never became naturalized or declared his intention of becoming a citizen. He did register as enemy alien when the orders of the President were put into effect.

No other arrests were made, though it is understood others are likely to follow.

SELECTMEN GIVE HEARING TO SUSPENDED PATROLMAN

The board of selectmen of Manchester held a special meeting last evening to take action on the hearing given to the suspended patrolmen on Tuesday, and make known their findings. The BREEZE is not able to print the result of their finding this morning because the board desire to notify the men by letter, which would of necessity reach the men at a later hour than the BREEZE would reach them.

We are not able to devote the space to an account of the hearing because of a break-down of one of our machines this week, and shortage of help due to one of our men going to war. Suffice it to say there was nothing of a startling nature brought out at the hearing. The four men claimed they had no intention of showing insubordination, and that they were acting in good faith when they asked to be excused from duty on the afternoon in question. One had promised to go fishing with his brother-in-law, another was to attend church, another wanted to work in his garden, and the fourth didn't care for these "special" jobs, anyway. There certainly was no attempt to conspire together, and none of the officers knew that the others had asked to be excused.

The officers were represented by Attorney Fred Tarr, of Gloucester, who handled their cases well. The hearings were given one each hour, beginning at 2 o'clock.

A. P. LORING WILL BE A CANDIDATE FOR REPUBLICAN SENATORIAL NOMINATION

Augustus P. Loring, of Pride's Crossing, whose possible candidacy for the Republican senatorial nomination in the Second Essex District was originally mentioned in these columns, writes to the BREEZE as follows:

In your issue of recent date you were kind enough to suggest my becoming a candidate for the state senatorship in the Second Essex District, and having been requested by several prominent gentlemen in my own city to do so, I have decided to put my name before the public. In doing so, I wish to thank all those who have been so kind as to favor my candidacy, and say that I cannot expect to offer them any expert legislative or political skill, but at this critical time I should be glad to put my experience as a business man and a man of affairs at their service.

The North Shore in War Work

BEVERLY'S Red Cross has not been mentioned in our War Work department this season. The Beverly Red Cross seems to figure in the society columns in reference to horse shows, however. See list of Workrooms for the time and days of meeting. Mrs. C. O. Hood is chairman of the sewing which is done every morning and afternoon daily at the large workroom in the Mason block. This is the headquarters for the county chapter. Wool is given out from the office, which is open from 9 till 5. Mrs. Everett Dodge is in charge of surgical dressings, the work being done in the public library and in St. Peter's Parish house.

The summer colony has been helping at these workrooms all season, and now, with the mid-summer coming of new arrivals, everybody along the Beverly shores is invited to come to these comfortable workrooms to help out Beverly.

A LIBERTY SHOP is a novelty for the North Shore. It opened last Tuesday in a snug little room on Railroad avenue, near the Hamilton-Wenham station, and is under the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense, of which Mrs. E. B. Cole, of Wenham, is chairman. Mrs. Houston A. Thomas, of Hamilton, is chairman of the Child Welfare committee. It is through the efforts of Mrs. Cole and Mrs. Thomas that the shop has been opened. They have planned to keep it open a month as an experiment, and may extend the time much longer, if necessary. It was thought that the war activities of the community could be pulled together in this little clearing-house of general relief work.

Mrs. Alanson L. Daniels opened the work with a demonstration of the making of surgical dressings—the oldest war activity of the community. Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy showed dressings this Tuesday. Miss Wilkins, of the Cannery, demonstrated the canning of fruits and vegetables last week. This is centrally located in the village and is convenient for people to drop in that could not get out to the Cannery on Wenham Neck in Mrs. Cole's garage. From 15 to 30 people, men as well as women, went into the demonstrations on food. Mrs. Philip Downes, of the Wenham Tea House and a member of the U. S. Food Administration, showed the possibilities of maize last Friday. Whale meat was also exhibited. In the audience were eight Shore cooks, besides interested housekeepers. To-day Miss

North Shore Kitchens in War Time

MRS. GODFREY L. CABOT, of Beverly Farms is interested in all phases of the conservation problem, not only in food, but in clothing. She has had much experience with the food question and has done much practical work along the lines of economical experiments and also has raised poultry, both at her summer home and in Cambridge. At the latter place she is interested in a little store and cafeteria where demonstrations are given each Tuesday and Friday, at three o'clock.

Mrs. Cabot recently had a small tea at her cottage in Beverly Farms for Rear Admiral and Mrs. Spencer S. Wood, of Boston. Some of the things she served were original with her and she has kindly given them to the BREEZE:

Cakes

- 1 cup sugar
- 1-4 cup butter or a substitute
- 1 egg, unbeaten
- 2 squares unsweetened chocolate
- 1-4 tsp. vanilla
- 1-4 cup potato flour or 1-2 cup barley
- 1-2 cup English walnuts, chopped

Bake on waxed paper in large cake pan, making cake one-half inch thick. Cut in squares after baked. Or it can be put in individual pans and make the little cakes as served at her tea.

If Karo is used in place of sugar use less.

At tea she also served "cheese dreams," made of oatmeal bread.

Another favorite at the Cabot home is Marguerites

- 2 eggs
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 1-4 cup potato flour or 1-2 cup barley
- 1-4 tsp. baking powder
- 1-3 tsp. salt
- 1 cup pecan meats

These are served when very little or no meat is planned.

Mrs. Cabot has many suggestions which she tells from actual experience. Some of these are the following:

Bread for invalids can be made with $\frac{1}{3}$ cornstarch and $\frac{2}{3}$ white flour, made in the usual way and thus saving $\frac{1}{3}$ as much flour. Mashed potatoes, if on hand, can be used in place of cornstarch.

Sponge cake can be made in the usual way, substituting one-half as much potato flour as one would usually use of wheat flour.

A quart of soup can be made from a pair of chicken feet. Pour boiling water over them and scrub. Cook slowly on back of stove in a quart of water.

Use up all odds and ends in pick-up dishes. An example of which is a salad made from dried, preserved or fresh fruit that is left over and can be served on lettuce with or without chopped nuts. Fruit juice she uses with gelatin for desserts, so that no left-over juice goes begging. Another pick-up dish with her is made from a bit of rice or cooked chicken, a few olives, cheese and pimento, all put in a pudding dish and baked, making a delicious luncheon dish. Keep the water that rice has been boiled in to thicken or start soup for next day. Mrs. Cabot believes in the dehydration of fruit and vegetables. A mixture of different substitute flours is best in cakes. In using potato flour alone use half as much as wheat flour called for in the recipe.

Her cook, Ellen, says it is a pleasure to have a mistress who knows so much about cooking and who is able to direct her at every step.

The Community Cannery of Hamilton-Wenham put up 616 jars last week. Many vegetables are being sent in but more are urged for hospital and Red Cross work. See BREEZE of July 12 for account of the great amount of work doing at this place—Mrs. Edward B. Cole's garage on "Brookby Farm," Wenham Neck.

THE MANCHESTER FOOD CENTRE had an exhibit of much interest last week, when the Apron Shop was in operation on the Common. Miss Bradbury arranged a table, with a piece of round lean steak measuring 4x3x1 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches, which had 100 calories, the food standard in protein value. Surrounding it were dishes of equivalents as follows: 2 small eggs; piece of cod fish, 3x2 $\frac{1}{4}$ x1 inch; $\frac{1}{2}$ a cream cheese; 1 inch cube ordinary cheese; $\frac{1}{3}$ cup baked beans cooked and 2 tbsp. uncooked; $\frac{5}{8}$ cup milk; walnuts, 8 to 16 halves, depending on size. All of these equal 100 calories.

Products according to the following recipes were shown:

Puffed Rice Puffs

- White of one egg
- 1 tbsp. sugar
- 3 tbsp. Karo
- Few drops vanilla
- As much puffed rice as can be folded in
- Drop from a teaspoon onto a well-greased cookie sheet. Bake slowly until firm.

Oatmeal Cookies

- 1 1-2 cups rolled oats
- 1 1-2 cups barley flour
- 1 cup Karo
- 1 tsp. soda
- 1 egg
- 1-2 tsp. cinnamon
- 1-2 cup raisins
- 1-2 cup butter or
- 1-3 cup oil
- Soaks oats in milk until soft, add beaten egg, then dry ingredients and raisins. Drop by teaspoonsful far apart in a tin. Bake in moderate oven.

Brownies

- 1 cup Karo
- 1-4 cup Wesson oil
- 1 egg, unbeaten

TIRE WASTE

BIG ITEM IN EXPENSE OF RUNNING AN AUTOMOBILE, SAYS LOCAL GARAGE MAN

IT'S up to 1,500 motorists to save fully $30,000 on their 1918 tire bill simply by being more cautious in the care of tires, and not scrap them until they have delivered their full quota of mileage. This statement was made by John F. Perkins of Perkins & Corliss, Gloucester and Manchester.

"On June 1st there were 1,500 automobiles registered on the North Shore—representing 6,000 tires. From close observation locally I can safely say that the average needless expenditure by motorists per tire is very close to five dollars," said Mr. Perkins. "This waste can be avoided by car owners heeding the following tire-care rules: Never run on underinflated tires; see that your front wheels are properly aligned; make certain that both brakes take hold simultaneously; do not run in car tracks or ruts; do not allow your rims to get rusty; and examine your tires regularly for small cuts and bruises which should be repaired before they become larger with wear and cause serious damage.

"We owe it to ourselves and to our country during this time when all patriotic citizens are conserving necessities," continued Mr. Perkins, "to constantly avoid unnecessary tire expense. And tires and care are a necessity. Loss of your car for even a day or so quickly convinces you of its absolute necessity as a means of transportation. Then why neglect and ignore your tires?"

"There's another important factor car owners must not overlook," declared Mr. Perkins. "The scarcity of ships has greatly hampered tire manufacturers from getting rubber from the East Indian Islands and South America. In fact, rubber importation has been cut down by the government to just half the amount brought into this country last year. The great demands of the government for cotton to be used for war supplies has curtailed the available supply of long-staple cotton used in tire fabric. England has decided that she needs all of the Egyptian cotton.

"While there are no visible signs of a tire shortage, we can never tell what the war will bring forth. As a precaution motorists should conserve their tires and buy wisely. We find that many of the tires consigned to the scrap heap are good for from 500 to 2,000 more miles.

"Even with materials and labor constantly mounting in cost, very few people realize that tire prices to-day are nearly half again lower than in 1910," said Mr. Perkins. "Then, a 34x4 Diamond sold for $46.55, while now the price for the same sized tire is approximately $34. And the Diamond of to-day is a better tire."

The Perkins & Corliss Co. has been unusually successful in the local tire field. Striking proof of the popularity of Diamonds on the North Shore is evinced by recent investigation or poll of tires taken. More than double the number of Diamonds were in use on local cars than of any other brand of tire not sold to automobile manufacturers for original equipment.

MAGNOLIA

Services will be held in the Village church Sunday at 10.45 a. m. and at 8.15 p. m. Dr. Eaton will preach.

The local farmers are busy these days harvesting their hay, and they welcome this hot weather, if others do not.

Rev. Charles Francis Carter, pastor of the Immanuel Congregational church, Hartford, Conn., will preach in the Union chapel Sunday morning at 10.45 o'clock.

The "Little Chapel Workers" have recently sent to the New England Branch, American Fund for French Wounded, the following articles: 16 bed jackets, 18 surgical shirts, 24 pillow slips, 23 pairs comfort slippers, 4 sets of pajamas, 30 over-dressing socks, 66 towels, 2 silk afghans, and 1492 surgical dressings.

Frederick W. Eaton, the elder son of Dr. and Mrs. Walter S. Eaton, and an ensign in the U. S. N. R. F. on submarine duty, is spending his furlough of a few days at the parsonage before reporting for active service. Mr. Eaton is a graduate of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute, and is by profession an electrical engineer. At the time of his enlistment he was the assistant electrical engineer of the Shore Line Electric Railway Co., Norwich and Westerly Traction Co., and Eastern Conn. Power Co. Thus another of tens of thousands of our young men is making great sacrifices to make the world safe for democracy.

There was great jubilation in Magnolia last Friday afternoon over the Allied success in France. The bells of the Village church, the Union chapel, and hose house were rung from 5.30 to 5.45 p. m. When Dr. Eaton called for volunteers to ring the Village church bell, four young fellows—John Burke, Jr., William Edmunds, John Viator, and Ernest Lucas—responded quickly, and if the Kaiser did not hear the sound of the bell it certainly was no fault of theirs. It was a proud moment for these young lads, and one that they will not forget. Our young boys also are fast learning the lessons of patriotism, and their respect for the Huns is not increasing with the passing days, for already there is bitterness and hatred in their hearts for their cruelties and barbarities to the older brothers "over there."

Beverly Order of Eagles, of which Dr. Daniel F. Murphy was the physician, have sent a handsome wrist watch to the doctor. Dr. Murphy has a commission as lieutenant and is now with the Army Reserve Medical corps.

Douglas Eggleston, superintendent of the Burrage gardens on Greenwood avenue, was taken to the Beverly hospital the first part of the week and operated upon for appendicitis. He is, however, reported to be improving as rapidly as can be expected.

The BREEZE man is in receipt of a most interesting souvenir number, "Treat 'Em Rough," published by the Tank corps at Camp Colt, Gettysburg, Pa. The copy was sent by Russell Younger, a member of that branch of the service which is stationed at Camp Colt.

Bradbury, of Manchester's Food Centre, is demonstrating.

Wednesday is Visiting Nurse day, when Miss Barter will consult with mothers about children, and show something of interest to them. Last week she showed the correct bathing of a baby.

Thursday is knitting day, and the time for the dispensing of wool. Machine knitting of socks will be taught by Mrs. Ready.

The Liberty Shop will be the Red Cross headquarters. It will be open on the days mentioned from 2.30 to 5 o'clock. The little room has received a fresh coating of brown and cream paint, has cream hangings, the simplest of furniture, and an air of immaculateness about it. Food bulletins are piled on an old-fashioned what-not in one corner. The furnishings came from the homes of the two ladies who opened it.

MITZI RETURNS TO BOSTON THIS WEEK. OH, JOY!

Saturday night, July 27, all roads will lead to the Tremont Theatre, Boston, where Joy will register with laughter and song, for Mitzi, America's favorite star of musical comedy, will return at the head of "Head Over Heels" company to continue their season of gay summer operetta after the brief vacation of four weeks.

Henry W. Savage established a precedent in theatrical history by interrupting one of the most highly successful engagements enjoyed by a modern production, and after a few weeks' rest bringing it back to the same treat to display its amusing wares of song and story again. The more than five weeks of Mitzi in "Head Over Heels" at the Tremont only whetted the appetite of theatre-goers for a play continuously funny, with its music in Jerome Kern's famous style that lingered in the mind to whistle and hum.

Famous for his lavishness in expenditure and his care in choosing players and singers for his productions, Henry W. Savage has perhaps given more thought and time to the selection of the cast for "Head Over Heels" than for any of his organizations in recent years. His determination that the cast shall approach perfection, even to its smallest role, has brought important changes in the company, and an ensemble of increased numbers, in addition to Mitzi herself and other favorites that Boston has taken to its collective hearts.

COPLEY THEATRE, BOSTON

A special production of "Brewster's Millions" will be given by the Henry Jewett Players at the Copley Theatre next week.

"Brewster's Millions" is a rollicking farce especially adapted to summer amusement. Its central idea revolves around a young man named Montgomery Brewster. He has been left a fortune by his grandfather, but before he has had time to spend it he finds unexpectedly that a long-lost uncle has bequeathed him several millions upon the strange condition that he must spend the first legacy before coming into the second. He must not give it away, he must spend it legitimately before his twenty-sixth birthday, which comes at the end of a year.

Instructive District Nursing Association

Undergoing Transition from Private Charity to Municipal Activity

THE Instructive District Nursing Association of Boston is to-day undergoing a transition from private charity to municipal activity, and while change is the law of life, transformation is difficult for organism or organization.

Established as a private charity, with a staff of two nurses, the association has grown to so great a size that it now actually performs a municipal service, doing family health work, disease prevention teaching, prenatal and child welfare work in ten sections of Greater Boston. It receives no municipal aid, however, but is still financed like a private charity, deriving its support almost entirely from voluntary subscriptions and contributions from a public which, though generous, yet regards it casually as a local affair of no importance outside its own district. A fee is always collected when in the judgment of the nurse it can be paid, either the full estimated cost of the visit, 55 cents, or some part of it. During 1917 the fee collected were the largest ever known, $9,095, but the expenses were $90,634.

Last year the Association staff of 105 nurses made nearly 200,000 visits to more than 20,000 patients, of which visits 9,912 were prenatal; 2,768 new-born babies were cared for; 5,155 sick children nursed. And while, in the first six months of 1917, 1,937 visits were made to the little victims of the 1916 epidemic of infantile paralysis, only 719 visits were made in the same period, 1918, because of recovery and improvement of the patients. One thousand one hundred and eight supervising visits were made to 85 stations during the recent Baby Weighing campaign, from which 367 cases were turned over to the Association for follow-up work. Of these 123 children were under weight and 50 had rickets, all due to under or malnutrition, the result not of poverty but to ignorance of right feeding.

In connection with the Hyde Park Health Center, two dental hygienists, graduates of the Forsythe Training School for Dental Hygienists, were placed by the Association, in March, 1918, in the first and second grades of the Hyde Park schools. Up to July 1st the hygienists have examined and cleaned 485 children's mouths, finding a total of 3,885 cavities; 316 children have attended the 26 dental clinics which, in charge of a graduate of the Harvard Dental School, have been held at the Health Center since April for the benefit of those children whose parents cannot afford a private dentist; 188 teeth have been filled and 216 extracted, effort being concentrated on saving the 6-year molar.

A maternity service was established in the Charlestown district in February, which has doubled the prenatal calls.

A Community Health Center has just been opened in Brighton under an active local committee.

The most effective assistant of the public health official is the visiting or public-health nurse, who explains the real meaning of his orders and shows how they must be carried out. And never was this assistant more needed than to-day, when the danger of disease has been increased by the great shift and change of workers and when populations are congested around industrial plants. (One such plant alone has brought 7,500 new workers into Dorchester, increasing pressure on housing, sewers, water supply, etc. One Greater Boston district to-day carries its water in pails from hydrants, because the local water mains were frozen last winter.)

Community or public health nursing has no dramatic appeal.

The individual family with which it works seems insignificant beside world tragedies and nation-wide patriotic movements. Yet the climax of the great tragedies across the water is the shattering, family by family, of local communities and city blocks, and the object of the nation-wide patriotic movements is the health and happiness of our soldiers, sailors, and industrial workers—each of whom has an individual family—on whom the safety of our country rests. Two hundred and thirteen soldiers' families have already been visited by the Association since January.

Surgeon-Gen. Gorgas and Surgeon-Gen. Blue have recently endorsed a separate enrollment of Public Health Nurses for Home Defense. By the emphasis it placed on the national importance and value of community health, this action will, it is hoped, enlighten the public as to the true relation to the national welfare of visiting or public health nursing and of the associations with which the great majority of public health nurses are connected, and by this enlightenment win for them the local understanding and support which are necessary if they are to meet the increasing demands which are made upon them.

ARMY MAKES RECORD MEAT PURCHASE

The largest single order for bacon and canned meats in the history of the world—99,560,000 pounds of bacon and 134,000,000 pounds of canned meat—has just been placed by the Quartermaster's Department, U. S. A., for the American Army overseas.

Louis F. Swift, in commenting on this, said the order will take the bacon from approximately 1,900,000 hogs, and if other work were dropped to produce it would be equivalent to the total bacon production of the five largest Chicago packers for nearly five weeks. However, six months will elapse before delivery is to be completed. Mr. Swift said: "At the current prices on the day, last week, when the purchase was made, the packers would pay the live stock producers about $80,000,000 for the necessary hogs and over $50,000,000 for about 900,000 cattle required.

"The cattle will cost us twice as much, and the hogs two and one-half times as much as in the pre-war period.

"The whole order will be made up before the first of the year, despite the fact that, even before this purchase, one-fourth of the packers' facilities have been devoted to filling military demands.

"In order to get out the canned goods the packers will find it necessary to employ night and day shifts of canners. Notwithstanding the fact that the products are being rushed forward thus hurriedly, not a single complaint has been received on meats delivered to the armies abroad.

"The five packers are now killing about 360,000 hogs weekly to keep abreast of martial and domestic needs."

BEACON THEATRE, BOSTON

Elsie Ferguson, the brilliant artiste, who left the stage when she was at the zenith of her popularity as a star, and who upon entering the motion picture studio leaped immediately into even greater fame and popularity, comes again to the screen in her new photoplay, "The Danger Mark," which will be shown for the first time in Boston throughout the coming week at the Beacon Theatre. The companion photoplay will be "Back to the Woods," with Mabel Normand as the featured star.

NEW COMBINATION BUOY

John A. Bagley, chairman of the Maritime Affairs committee of the Salem Chamber of Commerce, has received the following advice for U. S. Lighthouse Bureau at Washington:

"Cape Ann Gas and Whistling Buoy, PS, to be established about August 15, 1918, in place of Cape Ann Whistling buoy, PS, which will then be discontinued. The combination buoy will show a flashing white light every 3 seconds, flash 0.3 seconds duration, of 390 candlepower, 16 feet above water."

This is of interest to mariners along the coast especially from Marblehead to Gloucester because in these times coasters are skirting the shore to avoid the dangers of the lurking submarines of the enemy.
